IRIS AND DOLLY III WIN IN RACES SAILED IN GALE

First Two Races of Boston Yacht Club Series For Atlantic Seaboard Championship

Northeast Gale With Heavy Rains Prevailed

Although the northeast gale, accompanied by heavy rain, made yacht racing anything but a pleasure Thursday, nine catboats took part in the first two races of the Boston yacht club series for the championship of the Atlantic seaboard. In the morning event nine boats raced, but for the afternoon contest two fewer appeared at the line.

This series is composed of six races; two more will be sailed today two Saturday. The boats in the six contests are to score by the point system, one point for a start, one point for a finish and one point for every boat defeated. A ship's bell clock and gold stop watches, presented by the commodore, vice commodore and rear commodore of the B. Y. C., will be awarded as first, second and third prizes to the boats making the highest scores.

In Thursday's contest seven of the local catboats, Arawak, Busy Bee, Dartwell, Dolly III, Emeline, Iris and Mudjekeewis, the Clara from Narragansett bay and the I. O. U. of Monument beach, Buzzards bay, represented the racing fleet. The latter boat arrived at Hull only this morning at 2 o'clock.

She started from Buzzards bay last Monday in tow of an auxiliary catboat and had proceeded as far as Chatham early Wednesday morning. Owing to a heavy head sea the crew put back into Monomoy, but made a new start under sail late in the afternoon. She was off Chatham again Wednesday afternoon at 5. With a fine favoring breeze the run to Hull was then made in a little more than nine hours.

Yet this boat, with a tired crew and under conditions that were very hard for catboats, led the others across the finish in both of the races. The I O. U. looks to be the smallest boat of the class, as she sits very low in the water, yet every other pacer receives time from her. This is because the I. O. U. is 29 feet on deck the races being sailed on over-all length with an allowance of seven seconds per foot to the mile.

When the boats were sent off in the morning there was a young gale blowing from the northeast, with rain falling in sheets, but the water was comparatively smooth. This called for reefs on all but the Iris, which lugged full sail. After luncheon the skippers and crews for the afternoon race found considerable more breeze and just as much rain. All tucked in at least another reef, and so all raced with from two to three reefs tied down.

AFTERNOON RACE.

Of those that took part in the morning race all but the Mudjekeewis appeared at the line for the second contest, although the summary shows only seven boats racing. This was due to the fact that the Busy Bee was over too soon, but did not hear the recall signal and was withdrawn from the race at the completion of the first round.

For this race the boats were sent twice around the small triangle. This, with the starting line off the clubhouse, gave them a run to the Peddocks Island mark, a reach to the Sheep island mark, a beat to Strawberry hill and a run to the line repeated, a total distance of 9 1-4 miles.

As they came down for the line with sheets eased off for the start, the Busy Bee, Iris, Arawak and Dolly III were timed a little ahead of the signal. This gave the start to the Emeline, Clara, I. O. U. and Dartwell in order. The Iris, Dolly III and Arawak made a new start, but the crew of the Busy Bee as has been said, did not hear the recall.

On the short run to the Peddocks island mark both the Clara and the I. O. U. passed the Emeline and were one-two at the turn. Reaching over to Sheep island the skippers of the boats had hard work to keep their boats in hand and the I. O. U. passed the Clara.

Leading at the leeward mark, the I. O. U. increased its margin all the way worked the Bumkin island shore, nosed out the Clara for second place just before reaching the buoy.

They rounded the windward mark as follows: I. O. U., with about 54 seconds on the Iris; Clara, Arawak, Dolly III, Dartwell, Emeline, Busy Bee. Just before the boats passed the committee boat for the finish of the first round the Dolly III passed the Arawak. They were timed there as follows: I. O. U. 4:54:43, Iris 4:56:00, Clara 4:56:15, Dolly 4:57:26, Arawak 4:57:34, Dartwell 4:58:05, Emeline 4:58:45.

The second round of the course did not change the order of the boats, except between the tailenders, where the Emeline got by the Dartwell. Although the I. O. U. increased her lead from 1m 17s to 2m 2s, the Buzzards bay boat could not overcome the allowance given to the Iris, which took first prize on corrected time.

MORNING RACE.

The morning race was sailed in slightly better weather than that of the afternoon, as the breeze was not quite so heavy. The morning's contest, like that of the afternoon, was a stern chase after the I. O. U. after the boats had covered the windward leg, only her margin at the finish was smaller.

On corrected time the Dolly III won, with the I. O. U. second. The Iris, which finished third was disqualified on the statement of her skipper, Commodore Frank F. Crane, that he fouled the Strawberry hill mark. Today the same boats will race in the morning and afternoon.

DAMAGE AT SQUANTUM

By Wind and Rain on Aviation Field

HANGAR WRECKED

The terrific wind and rain of yesterday created havoc at the Harvard Aviation Grounds, Squantum. The east hangar, a temporary tent, within which were housed the flying machines of Arthur Stone and Earle Ovington, was blown to the ground early last night, and it was only quick work on the part of mechanicians who sleep on the grounds that thousands of dollars in damage to the frail flying machines was prevented.

Once again the aviation meet had to be called off. Jupiter Pluvius in his heavier than air machine fell to the ground in torrents. The field early last evening bore more semblance of a lake than the grounds from which the world's greatest fliers were to show Bostonians their first glimpse of a race through the air.

NOT A CHANCE.

Unlike the previous rainy days there was no chance for the aviators to try out their machines yesterday. Practically all of the airmen called at the field during some part of the day to see that the aeroplanes were properly cared for in the storm.

The tents that had been erected as hangars for the airmen did not withstand the heavy rain and in consequence some of the flying machines were drenched. Arthur Stone's machine suffered more damage from the leaking tents, than any of the others. Two of his machines were so drenched that he said last night that he had lost at least one pair of wings. The water had warped them so he feared trying them in the air.

Had it not been for the fact that the aviators' mechanicians were sleeping in the hangars at the field, many of the birdmen would have no machines to fly with today. The wind swept across the grounds at a furious rate and carried with it the east hangar. The machines were pulled out and rushed either across the way to the other tent or into the wooden buildings used to house Grahame-White's pet Nieuport and the Burgess Company and Curtis machines.

These buildings are permanent structures on the field. None of the machines were damaged save for the wetting they received while being taken to a safer place.

CHANGES IN PROGRAMME.

The bad weather of the past few days has caused the contest committee to change the programme of the succeeding days of the aero meet. As its result, there will be more flying on each day. If weather conditions permit flying today, the first Boston Light race will be held and if the rain holds back for the remaining days, a long aeroplane race will be witnessed each day. Four races to Boston Light are on the programme.

It is probable that President Taft will attend the meeting today to witness the first race between heavier than air machines that has been held over New England.

Although the route of the tri-State cross-country race has been planned for several weeks, some of the aviators who journeyed over a part of the territory on Wednesday, stated yesterday that it was a difficult one to follow, because of the very few landing places available, in case anything on their machines go wrong.

The committee, however, has not decided as yet to change the route.

FLIGHT TO LIGHT.

In conjunction with the special race for the biplanes on Saturday, the race which was to have been held yesterday another flight to the Boston light, will be held. Because of the extra numbers on the programme the meet will open a half hour earlier than usual, to be continued through Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

The aviators who came here to contest in this meet have their own opinions on Boston weather. Those who claim they have no guarantees and who are waiting for the contests to win their money say they will lose on having come to Boston unless some flying weather appears soon.

Many of the birdmen have contracts following close upon the finish of the Harvard-Boston meet. The contest committee stated yesterday that all would stay through until the final day which is scheduled for next Wednesday.

ALLEGED SLAYER BREAKS DOWN FOR FIRST TIME

Henry C. Beattie, Jr., Sobs Aloud During the Testimony of His Father

Defense Hits Testimony of Paul Beattie

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept. 1.—Henry C. Beattie, Jr., indicted for the murder of his wife, sobbed like a child when his gray-haired father, in a low, tremulous voice, told of the domestic felicity of his son and the slain woman, Louise Owen Beattie. It was the first time that the stoical calm of the prisoner's countenance had given way during the trial.

The father of the accused was interrogated for an hour just before court adjourned. As he stepped to the witness stand the prisoner's face flushed. The white-haired man, his face deeply wrinkled and pale, spoke in a voice scarcely above a whisper.

Talking with great effort, he told of how his life had been saddened by the death of his children, how Henry in his infancy had been neglected because twins came into the family during his boyhood and described how, on this account and the death of his wife, he had grown closely attached to his son.

He described the strong love that existed between Henry and the ill-fated wife, testifying that he himself grew to love his daughter-in-law as one of his own children.

"When her baby was born," said Beattie, speaking of the dead woman, "it was like starting life over for me to see the grandchild. It drew us all together very much."

The father spoke highly of his son's character and controverted the testimony of many witnesses for the prosecution that Henry showed no signs of grief after his wife's murder. He declared that he sobbed and moaned almost all night after the tragedy.

The testimony of the father in behalf of his son came as the dramatic close of a long day's battle by the defense against the evidence heaped up by the prosecution.

Battering constantly against the testimony of Paul Beattie, cousin of the prisoner, as to the purchase of the gun, his delivery of it to Henry and his subsequent conversations with the accused, the defense introduced several witnesses to cast doubt upon the veracity of Paul.

It emphasized that point when it produced David D. Beattie, Paul's grandfather, and the uncle of Henry, who testified that Paul's character was not good. It was another intense period in the trial, for, with apparent regret, the aged man told of his grandson's shortcomings.

The most surprising refutation of the day against Paul's testimony come when Ernest H. Neblitt said that on Sunday, July 16, he saw Paul Beattie on the bridge where he worked, handling a single-barrelled shotgun. Paul had maintained ever since the coroner's inquest that he disposed of the shotgun the same day he bought it, Saturday, July 15, by giving it to Henry.

E. H. Lewis, an employe of the Beattie store in South Richmond, declared that people spoke of Paul Beattie "as the biggest liar in town."

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Reports from New York say that Col. Astor left home without an umbrella and got wet. Must have been raining down that way.

Mr. Taft goes West Sept. 16, and of course no one will distract his mind from the momentous problems of statesmanship by mentioning the subject of politics.

Kaiser William is going to review 140 German war vessels Sept. 5 but only about 14 of them would be really necessary to protect German ports and property from hostile neighbors.

Champ Clark says he is not a candidate for president, but no doubt the door bell will be found in perfect working order if the people happened to call on him some day.

Annexation is figuring in the Canadian election, though no one around here wants Canada. Congress would have to get up at 10 A. M. to legislate for so many new states, and that could not be brought about.

EXPLANATION NEEDED.

It is surely in order for the company furnishing the coal for the city schools to explain the reason for supplying an inferior article, or substitute something that is up to the standard. The excuse offered that the contract did not call for an article containing a specified number of heat units is childish and is "pretty business" for a large business concern to give out. What the company did was to come here and bid against the local merchants, knowing well what was desired and the quality of coal that should be supplied. It is only fair to the taxpayers and the unsuccessful bidders that the matter be thoroughly sifted and quickly adjusted.

NEWSPAPER TRUTH TELLING.

One hears a great deal said about our inaccurate newspapers. While all newspaper work is done so hurriedly that some errors must creep in, yet the fact should be pointed out that the most serious fault lies at the door of the great metropolitan journals.

The influence of a journal having a nation wide circulation often gives a false impression of the fidelity with which its methods of news collection are carried out. In actual practice, the paper serving a single town, a single county, or a single section, requires a far higher standing of truth telling.

The writer for a home newspaper is compelled by his very accessibility to tell the truth. If he fakes a story, if he produces a highly colored concoction of half truth twisted to the needs of dramatic effect, he soon suffers. The aggrieved parties know just where to go to get at him. The results are unpleasant all around, and it is soon made apparent to a writer of that character that he should remove himself to less responsible spheres of influence, where he is protected by distance when the irate public gets out with its gun.

The home newspaper man depends for his success on keeping faith with the public. One good story twisted out of proportion to the facts may make his paper more interesting for one day. But it may kill his reputation among the people without whose backing he can not perform his functions.

The metropolitan newspaper is not in a position to give its facts that close scrutiny. When it prints a fake about people living at a distance, its very remoteness gives it protection. The aggrieved party commonly feels it is not worth his while to undertake a journey to a distant city to ferret out and punish the faker. The metropolitan journal is compelled to accept a great many stories from correspondents whose habits of truth telling it is not in a position to scrutinize.

A responsible home newspaper is the most faithful approach to a truthful record of the life of its community that it is possible to make under hurried conditions. People who value a truthful journalism owe it to themselves to support the newspaper published at home, which depends for its very life on its reputation for day by day truth telling.

MOORE ON WATERWAYS.

Representative G. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia, president of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, one of the originators of the scheme for an inland passage from Maine to Florida and a "live wire" in Congress, said recently:

"In the rivers and harbors act of March 3, 1909, Congress authorized a survey for a continuous inland waterway along the Atlantic seaboard from New England to Key West, and thence along the Gulf to the Mississippi river. That survey has since been going on under the direction of the United States Army engineers, and ought to be reported upon when Congress convenes in regular session.

The territory through which the proposed Atlantic inland waterway runs is inhabited by approximately 30,000,000 of people. There is no section of the country so prolific in manufacturing industries and interstate commerce. This vast business which began when canals were the principal means of communication, was speedily absorbed by the railroads, with the result that today the best canals remaining along the Atlantic coast are the Chesapeake & Delaware which unite the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays and the Delaware and Raritan which connects New York with Philadelphia and points south. Neither of these canals has been much improved since their construction three-quarters of a century ago. They are doing business but they are in no sense competitors of modern transportation companies, and as leveler of rates they are practically useless. That they are capable of enormous service has been demonstrated time and time again through the effects of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association which revived in 1897 the agitation for relief, through waterways, of the congested freight conditions then prevailing. At largely attended conventions held first at Philadelphia, and then in regular annual order at Baltimore, Norfolk, and Providence, resolutions were adopted which leave no room for doubt as to the value of and the necessity for inland-waterway improvements along the coast."

THE CORPORATION.

Edgar H. Farrar of Louisiana, president of the American Bar association addressing the annual meeting of that organization in Boston recently, said, "the burning question that now agitates the mind of the American people is how to control the corporation; how to break up these great aggregations which seem to be almost as powerful as the government itself and how to prevent their formation in the future."

He declared that the agitation for the recall of judges as shown in the Arizona constitution vetoed by the president was only one of the symptoms of the political, social and economic unrest that now pervades the whole nation.

"The radicals," he continued, "propose to destroy things generally, while the conservatives, reading the signs of the time, realize the danger of the growing excitement among the masses of the people and are seeking an exit from the situation that will conserve political liberty and industrial prosperity.

"During the last 10 years there has been competition between the states to invent and adopt the most unrestricted corporation laws. The spur has been greed for revenue; the encouragement—the success of New Jersey. Out of the latter's bosom have come the great trusts, the holding companies and the gigantic monopolies, all with their water-logged capital stocks.

"How will it stand with the republic in a generation from now if the estates of all the millionaires and multimillionaires are perpetually incorporated as is being done in New York and copied elsewhere? In the agricultural states great corporations are absorbing and combining the farmers. How can that firmest of foundations of free government, a land-owning yeomanry, exist under such conditions?

"Under the lax state and national laws great aggregations of capital have seized upon specific industries and driven everybody out of them. They stand like armed colusses astride the gateways of commerce and destroy every entrant who presumes to compete with them. They have no legal grant of monopoly, but monopoly comes to them by virtue of their size, organization and strength." They are a nest of wasps, a swarm of vermin which have overcrept the land."

THE USE OF TOBACCO.

Cut It Out One Day Each Week Is the Advice of a Doctor.

If a man who uses tobacco will give it up for one day each week he will keep himself from becoming a "tobacco fiend." This is the advice of a well known doctor, who says that quite a number of men, including himself, have adopted this plan.

"By leaving off tobacco for one day a week you give your system time to get rid of the effects of the drug," he said.

"You will then enjoy your tobacco far more, too, because you have become unaccustomed to the flavor, and it is therefore more enjoyable when you resume smoking.

"The effect of tobacco is a general sedative action on the nervous system, which diminishes the power of taste and smell. That is why tea tasters seldom or never smoke.

"Leave it off for a day, and the sense of taste recovers. Not only that, but leaving off tobacco for one day voluntarily breaks the tobacco habit, exercises the self control and prevents one from becoming a slave to the habit.

"Slaves to the tobacco habit suffer from irritable hearts, loss of appetite for breakfast, eye trouble, sometimes going as far as blindness, chronic catarrh of the throat and nervous depression."—New York American.

Deepest Lake In the World.

The Great Sunken lake in the Cascade mountains, about seventy-five miles northeast of Jacksonville, Ore., is thought to be the deepest lake in the world. Its shores slope abruptly down an average of 200 feet on all sides before the water is reached. The depth of the water is unknown, and its surface is always smooth and unruffled, being so far below the mountain rim that winds cannot reach it.

HOW TO CLEAN LEATHER.

Furniture Upholstered With It Requires Frequent Attention.

The cleaning of leather upholstered furniture is a question that concerns almost every housewife, for those who do not possess one or more pieces of the padded leather kind have at least the leather seated diners that require refurbishing three or four times a year.

In preparing to clean such a piece it is best to have the necessary materials at hand, so that the work can be finished at once and without risk of injuring the furniture, as there would be a liability if the different operations of the work were not done in rapid sequence.

Procure three large size cheesecloths, a basinful of tepid or nearly warm water, to which has been added a little vinegar, say a tablespoonful, and a mixture of the whites of two eggs and a half pint of turpentine. The mixture is best made by first beating the eggs to a froth and placing it in a bottle before the turpentine, and then before each application it is well shaken in the bottle.

Large pieces of leather furniture are gone over in sections, first with the cheesecloth which has been dipped in the warm water to which has been added the vinegar, and then after being carefully wiped with a dry cheesecloth it is polished with a cheesecloth or chamois slightly saturated with the egg white and turpentine mixture. After this the article is carefully wiped dry with other cloths.

Seats of the dining chairs can be done one at a time with ease.

Any leather covered article, such as seat pads and even goearts, not leaving out the dull calf or gun metal shoe, can be renovated after a fashion by the same process, and shiny leather thus treated will admit of a polish more readily than before it is applied.

JUDGES ARE UNDERPAID

Unable to Live Decently on Present Salaries, Says the President

Boston, Sept. 1.—President Taft, speaking before the American Bar association in this city, came out squarely in favor of doubling the salaries of the justices of the United States supreme court.

The president declared that the justices should get $25,000 a year so that they could live decently without having to lecture to law students and do other work outside of their offices. At present the chief justice of the United States supreme court gets $13,000, while his associates draw $12,000 a year.

The salaries of federal judges should be also raised, the president said. He declared that there was great room for improvement in law procedure and that lawyers and judges should lead in reforming the laws.

COLOR LINE IN THEATRE

Negro to Sue Management For Alleged Discrimination

Chicago, Sept. 1.—The Evanston theatre, the first playhouse the suburb has ever had, has run against a snag. Josna Guy, a negro butler, presented a ticket for a ground floor seat. He was told that it was occupied and was offered a seat in the top gallery. He refused to go upstairs and refused also a return of his money.

Then the manager endeavored to explain that at the suggestion of some of Evanston's families he had promised he would put the white maids, butlers, chauffeurs, gardeners and cooks upstairs, and all negroes in the second or 10-cent gallery.

Guy declared that he would bring suit against the management, as he had been discriminated against in violation of the fourteenth amendment.

BIG AVIATION FIELD IN GRANITE STATE

New Company Said to Have $1,000,000 Capital Stock

Boston, Sept. 1.—Papers have been passed transferring the trotting park at Salem, N. H., from the New England Breeders' club that had owned it to a new company organized by Boston men. It is said that the new owners will use the place as an aviation field.

The property at Salem is said to be valued at about $750,000. It comprises a one-mile trotting track, an immense tract of land and several buildings.

It is understood that the New England Aviation company—for that is the name selected by the promoters—will have $1,000,000 capital stock, and that the intention is to develop one of the finest aviation fields in the world at Salem. It is possible that the manufacture of aeroplanes may be undertaken also.

JOHN LODGE WEDS NURSE

Quiet Ceremony In Rectory of a Boston Cathedral

Boston, Sept. 1.—John E. Lodge, son of Senator Lodge, was married yesterday afternoon in the rectory of the cathedral of the Holy Cross to Miss Mary C. Connolly, a nurse whom he met while he lay very ill in the private hospital of Dr. Bigelow in this city.

The wedding was a very quiet one. No announcements had been sent out and there were present only immediate relatives of the bride and groom. Lodge being a non-Catholic the wedding in the rectory of the cathedral was in deference to the wishes of the bride.

The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Finnegan.

SUIT FOR $5,200,000

New York, Sept. 1.—An amended complaint in a damage suit for $5,200,000—one of the largest amounts claimed in recent litigation in New York state—was filed in the supreme court by Walter M. Jackson against Horace E. Hooper.

Alleged failure on the part of Hooper to purchase the stock of the Hooper & Jackson Co., Limited, of England, and the Encyclopedia Britanica, is given by Jackson as the basis of the action.

CONDUCTING WATER TESTS

Department Working at Night From 11 P. M. to 2 A. M.

SECTION LOCATED

The tests that are being made by the water department, in an effort to find the location of the leaks in the water mains, that are known to exist are being carried on every night between the hours of 11 P. M. and 2 A. M. The tests are being made under the direction of Ralph Austin, a student at the Institute of Technology. The tests have been very satisfactory and it is now said that the section of the city in which the great leak exists, has been located. The particular part in the section, however, has not been found but it will be a short time only before the exact street is located. Now that the section where the leak is has been found, the next step is to test that out by streets, so that eventually the exact one will be located.

DISTINGUISHED BODY OF MEN IN ATTENDANCE

The members of the City Council and their ladies, who have been waiting for a pleasant day in order to visit the aviation field, will be much in evidence in the grand stand this afternoon. Visitors to the field today, noticing a distinguished body of men in the grand stand, will recognize them to be the members of the City Council. They will be the guests of the Harvard Aviation association.

FEMININE FANCIES

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day receipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

Cut them and paste in scrap book for reference.

FALL DINNER GOWN.

White voile of the finest texture is the material used for the dinner gown designed for informal wear during the early fall. The tops of the peasant sleeve and bodice are laid in groups of fine pin tucks, a band of one-inch Irish insertion extending almost the entire length of the sleeve from shoulder to elbow. The collarless yoke is made of black chiffon finished at the neck with a fine cording of white silk and embroidered French knots. The voile is hand scalloped about the edge of the yoke and trimmed with hand-embroidered dots. Bands of Irish crochet are set in across the front of the bodice, this same lace joining bodice and skirt outlining the black chiffon cuff and finishing the top of the 15-inch tucked flounce. Hand-embroidered dots decorate the skirt above the hem and flounce. A distinctive note is gained by the introduction of Helen pink chiffon beneath the lower part of the bodice and cuff.—Harper's Bazar.

LATEST FASHIONS.

White voile and marquisette are made into very pretty little waists with colored bead ornamentations.

Little coats or jackets of changable taffeta are worn with voile or mull frocks. They show the high line and the plaited frill at the lower edge.

Rosettes of ribbon of the same color as the gown are being worn on black patent leather shoes.

There is a decided preference for evening gowns of gray, the shades being, of course, those that are at their best under artificial light.

Double revers are promised considerable popularity, and meantime revers continue very large and long.—Washington Herald.

BRIEFLETS.

The empire coiffure is now strongly favored, carrying out the period mode.

There is a strong tendency to favor white and white and black veils of all kinds.

New colored embroideries are very attractive many embodying East Indian effects.

Foundation gowns of eyelet lace are veiled with chiffon and vice versa tunics and overdress of embroidery are worn over dark and light-colored satins and chiffons.

The side drapery effect on both corsage and skirt of evening gowns is immensely favored and lends a certain originality which would be difficult otherwise to achieve.

RECIPES.

CREAM CHEESE SALAD.

Mash two cream cheeses with a little cream or oil till smooth; add salt and cayenne to taste and a small cupful of chopped pimentoes; press into a small mold and set away till firm; slice and lay on lettuce; serve with French dressing.

STRING BEAN SALAD.

Choose one quart of young string beans, strip and cut them into halves and boil in salted water until tender; when done drain them in a colander, and when cold mix them with pepper, two or three tablespoons oil, one cup vinegar mixed with a little sugar and half a cup water and one finely cut onion. Set the salad one hour before serving on ice. Butter-bean salad is made the same as string bean salad, or it can be dressed with salad cream.

LEMONADE WITH GRAPE FRUIT.

A most refreshing beverage on a very warm day is a lemonade made from the juice of two lemons, a half cupful of sugar and six glasses of water, to which is added the pulp of a small grape fruit that has been removed with a sharp-edged teaspoon. Fill up glasses with shaved ice.

GRIDDLE CAKES.

Three cups of whole wheat flour, one teaspoon of sugar, two eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix with milk, or milk and water. Have griddle hot.

ANOTHER RAISE IN WAR RISKS

Due to Belligerent Attitude of France and Germany

OTHER POWERS ARE NERVOUS

Indications That Peaceful Settlement of Moroccan Situation Is Near, but Negotiations Can Be Easily Broken —Germans Do Not Like Attitude of England—American Banker Sees Bluff on Part of Germany

London, Sept. 1.—London was was again stirred when Lloyd's announced another increase in war risks from 5 to 7 percent.

It is believed this action was caused by the activity in the Belgian government in increasing its frontier garrisons and making the military preparations to insure neutrality of Belgian territory in case of war between France and Germany.

War clouds ominously cover continental Europe and military preparations are openly going forward upon an immense scale.

The belligerent attitude of France and Germany over Morocco has caused intense nervousness among the other powers. The warlike preparations started in Belgium are adding to the pessimistic hue of international conditions.

Conversations between France and Germany have reopened in Berlin and reports from the German capital indicate that a peaceful settlement of the Moroccan situation is near. However, so uncertain is the course of the diplomatic negotiations that official circles know full well how easily the negotiations come to naught at the final moment.

From Berlin dispatches state that the feeling against England as a result of that country's attitude on the Moroccan situation has reached a tense point. At an enthusiastic meeting of the Pan-German union, held in Berlin, resolutions were adopted condemning intervention in the dispute by "a third power." This "third power," of course, is Great Britain. The Berlin dispatch continued:

The resolutions also demanded either France's complete recognition of the Algeciras act or Germany's acquisition of similar rights in western Morocco in those which France claims elsewhere in that country.

The belligerent action of Germany, and her preparations for war, caused a prominent New York banker, who has been in close touch with the leaders of the German financial world for the past fortnight, to declare that "Germany is putting up one of the most gigantic bluffs on record."

"There will be no war over Morocco," declared this man, whose name for obvious reasons cannot be used. "German financiers assure me that war cannot possibly eventuate from the Moroccan crisis, unless, of course, some sudden and wholly unexpected 'volcanic eruption' should lead to it.

"German diplomacy is maintaining an ostensibly stiff-necked and uncompromising attitude in dealing with France, but the German government knows very well that the Fatherland was never less ready than at the present moment to court the incalculable risks of a great international conflagration. Her financial and industrial situation simply will not permit it."

THE "MONA LISA" THEFT

It Results In Suspension of Director of the Louvre

Paris, Sept. 1.—Theophile Homolle, director of the national museums, was suspended by the French cabinet in consequence of the disappearance of Leonardo Da Vinci's painting, "Mona Lisa," from the Louvre. It was the opinion of the members of the ministry that Homolle took insufficient precautions to guard the treasures of the museums.

M. Homolle was, before coming to the Louvre, director of the French school of archaeology at Athens, and conducted a number of very important excavations in Greece, from which a large mass of very important information has been secured. His administration of the Louvre has been up to this time regarded as very successful.

PLOT TO REGAIN MEXICO

Former Diaz Leaders Said to Be Hatching One In New York

New York, Sept. 1.—Serious attempts, it is asserted, are being made here to engineer a successful movement to oust from power the government installed as a result of the revolution in Mexico.

According to a prominent member of the Madero government, the presence here of former Diaz leaders is extremely significant.

"Not only do these men, headed by Limantour, hope to come back into power, but they are planning to resort to extreme measures," he said. "Rifles have recently been purchased here in New York to ship down to Mexico."

ENGLAND IS FACING ANOTHER BIG STRIKE

Railroad Employes Charge That Agreement Has Been Violated

London, Sept. 1.—The prospects of trouble with the men of the Great Eastern railway appear worse today. The men complain that the company is not fulfilling the agreement of Aug. 19, and is reinstating strikers only to inferior posts.

The local committee insists that the men be fully resored immediately or there will be a strike. They say also that they have appealed to the joint unions and that the executives will order again a general strike in support of their demands.

The company says it cannot dispossess the loyal men who were promoted during the strike, but that the strikers will be reinstated at the first chance.

MAKE A HASTY ESCAPE

Mormon Elders In Iowa Town Travel to Dishpan Music

Kamrar, Ia., Sept. 1.—Two elders of the Mormon church left this city afoot with the din of many dishpans echoing in their ears. The elders were making proselyting speeches when a crowd of women, beating vigorously on kitchen tinware, created such pandemonium that the speakers could not be heard.

Mormon sympathizers sought to repel the assault of noise by throwing water on the women, but at this point husbands and brothers took a hand and after lively fisticuffs the meeting was broken up.

Members of the dishpan brigade later turned out, beating quickstep time to the departure of the missionaries.

NO NEW POLICY PLANNED

Traditional Lines Will Be Followed by Japanese Government

Tokio, Sept. 1.—Marquis Saionja, the new premier of Japan, authorizes the statement that the change in administration does not portend a fundamental or material change of any policy.

The government will, in all essentials, follow the traditional policy, devoting itself especially to the enhancement of the national credit and to the development of industrial resources. In no less a degree will the cause of international peace receive the attention of the premier, who positively asserts that the government will continue to cultivate the closest amity with all the powers.

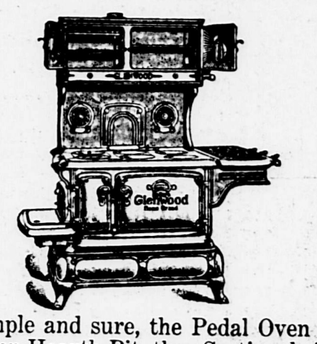

Tug Loses Two Barges

Narragansett Pier, Sept. 1.—The tug Lizzie D. lost the Rye of New York, one of her tow of two barges, in a heavy gale off Point Judith and was forced to abandon the other barge off Whale rock and proceed to Providence. So far as can be learned, the crews of both barges were saved.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 1.—Jennie Powell, an 8-year-old girl of Edwardsville, near here, died yesterday from a mosquito bite. She was bitten on the arm a week ago and frequently scratched the bite with her fingernails.

This caused additional poisoning, the arm swelled to twice its normal size and the poison gradually spread through the child's body.

How to Wash Pongee.

Never use hot water in washing pongee. Instead use a suds made from lukewarm water with pure white soap. Never rub it on the board, but in the hands, as the board draws the threads. Rinse in several waters of the same temperature, hang out in the air until it is dry, then iron. Do not sprinkle or dampen it. Any moisture, even of a damp cloth, will spoil all the good results of the careful washing. If treated in this way it will look like new.—Housekeeper.

How to Hang a Skirt.

Slip on the skirt you are making, then slip on another skirt which hangs. Stand on a chair and have some one put common pins in the new skirt at bottom of the old skirt, and when you have pins all round the bottom turn up for hem at row of pins, and you will find your skirt will hang perfectly even, without waste of time or labor.

How to Wash Egg Cups.

If the breakfast egg cups are put into cold water while waiting for the regular dish washing they will rinse out quite easily, but hot water has the effect of cooking the egg to the side of the china and makes them very hard to wash.

To clean grease spots from wall paper make a dough ball of flour and water and rub over the spot very gently until it disappears.

BRIEFS

William Hogan of Eliot street has gone to Durham, New Hampshire, for a fortnight.

Joseph M. Dwyer of Hancock street has gone to Montreal, Canada, where he will remain for the next two weeks.

Wendell Taylor of Upland Road has returned home after a two weeks' sojourn in Montpelier, Vermont.

Box cars on the street railway during the past few days have been appreciated by the patrons.

Rufus B. Colby of Lincoln avenue, is expected home next week, after an extended tour through the middle and western states.

The July Fourth celebration committee promise to make their report tomorrow of the receipts and expenditures incident to the celebration.

Charles E. Decker, a prospective candidate for the City Council from Ward one, has moved from the Houghs Neck section and has assumed residence on Euclid avenue.

The many friends of Mrs. Michael Pitts of Hancock street, will be glad to learn that she is recovering from a severe illness of sore throat and will soon be able to be out again.

The west side of Hancock street between Saville street and Dimmock street is about ready for the paving layers. If the weather gets pleasant it is expected that the paving will be commenced next week.

According to the weather reports, the storm that has prevailed for the past few days, is the tail end of the storm that did so much damage in the south. Thursday night the wind blew almost a gale and made it very disagreeable to be out. The only people that seem to be pleased with the rain are the farmers.

BUDDHIST CREMATION.

The Funeral Pyre and the Disposition of the Ashes.

A Buddhist cremation is a strange nd uncanny event, and it is not often that a foreigner is given to witness one. I saw some of the preliminary ceremonies at a temple in south China, but found myself apparently becoming persona non grata as the time for the cremation proper approached and did not care enough about seeing it to intrude. I have since heard and read several descriptions of the grewsome ceremony.

The priests are dressed in white sackcloth, similar to that worn by the mourners at the funerals of the laymen, and their brows are bound with white bandages. The corpse, dressed in a cowl and with the hands fixed in an attitude of prayer, is placed in a sitting position in a bamboo chair and carried to the funeral pyre by some of his fellow monks, all the other monks of the monastery following in a double line. As the procession advances the walls of the monastery echo with the chanting of prayers and the tinkling of cymbals.

When the pyre is reached the bearers place the corpse upon it, and the fagots are kindled by the head priest, and while the flames are mounting the others prostrate themselves in obeisance to the ashes of their departed brother. When the fire is burned out the attendants collect the charred bones and place them in a cinerary urn, which is often deposited in a small shrine within the precincts of the monastery, to remain there until the ninth day of the ninth month, when the ashes are sewed up in a bag of red cloth and thrown into a sort of ossuary or monastery mausoleum.—Lewis R. Freeman in Los Angeles Times.

JUSTICE DISPENSED BY UNCLE SAM'S FLOATING COURT FROM PORT TO PORT

Revenue Cutter Carries Officials to Try Alaskan Transgressors.

Juries Chosen Wherever Sessions of the Court Are Held.

SOMEWHERE off the Alaskan coast at this very moment a vessel flying the stars and stripes is working her way from port to port dealing out justice to those accused of breaking the laws of the United States. This ship is the United States revenue cutter Thetis, and her mission is hers alone, for nowhere else on any of the seven seas can her counterpart be found. In her Uncle Sam possesses the only floating court in the world.

Less than a quarter of a century ago it was the wild beast of the bold spirits who tempted fortune in the Alaskan ice fields, where "there's never a law of God or man runs north to fifty-three!" But today the law reaches that far—and beyond—and spares no villages or waste places in so doing. And this is due in general to the strong arm of the government and in particular to this floating court that recently set out on her unique cruise.

Once every year, though this is only the second trip made, a ship of the revenue cutter service visits the principal ports of Alaska, carrying on board the court officials from Valdez, who enforce laws and administer justice over a territory so scattered that, but for them, lawlessness might reign as supreme as in the old days. At the various points touched rude buildings or schoolhouses are turned into impromptu courthouses and justice meted out. Not infrequently the deck of the vessel becomes the scene of the trials of the offenders. In many instances those to be tried have been brought more than a hundred miles to answer their accusers.

Territory Covered.

The territory covered by this floating court is known as the third district of Alaska and embraces the southwestern portion of the country and the Aleutian islands. Courts in the other sections are maintained much as they are in the states. All cases of a grave nature are tried at Valdez, the headquarters of the district, and there, too, are the best equipped jail and the waiting court officials. And so it was that from Valdez the Thetis set sail on her cruise of justice, which will last nearly two months. According to orders, Unalaska was the first port, then Nushagak, Unga and Kodiak.

The presiding officer of the court this year is Judge Thomas R. Lyons, and the Thetis is commanded by Captain S. O. Cochran. A prosecuting attorney for the government and counsel for the defense are also carried. Four of the junior officers of the vessel are sworn in as commissioners and four special United States deputy marshals. The former on the current cruise are Lieutenant Michael Ryan, Lieutenant Thaddeus G. Crapester, Lieutenant Archibald H. Scally and Lieutenant Edward D. Jones, and the latter Lieutenant William Williams, Lieutenant Joseph B. Befee, Lieutenant Roy P. Munio and Lieutenant John S. Baylis. Trial is by jury chosen at the places where the court is held.

The Procedure.

The dates of the court sessions are of necessity published beforehand. When the boat arrives an entire day may be spent in arranging a building wherein the sessions may be held and sometimes two or three more in getting jurors. Finally court convenes, and the treadmill of the law runs its slow but certain course. The law itself naturally is the law of all other places over which the stars and stripes wave.

In Unalaska, where the longer sessions are held, there is a girl who acts as court interpreter. She is a half breed in our reckoning. Though separated by several thousand miles, a strange similarity of taste in breaking the law seems to exist between Alaska and Kentucky, for the making of what in the latter is called "moonshine" and in the former "bootchnahoo" (more commonly "hootch") is one of the offenses that consume a goodly share of the court's time. And this year, perhaps for the last time, Japanese seal poachers will have to be taught the meaning of Uncle Sam's word "obey." So there is a variety of the unusual to be dealt with by the court.

When the little revenue cutter starts on her cruise she must be prepared to meet almost any exigency, for, aside from carrying the court, assisting in court proceedings and several lesser details, she will have to bring back to Valdez for trial all Japanese seal poachers and other offenders condemned to spend terms in either a federal prison in the states or in the one at Valdez.

Some Experiences.

Lieutenant Frank Austin while serving once as a deputy marshal was conveying a large party of Japanese, alleged seal poachers, to Valdez for trial. By never relaxing his authority he managed to avoid serious trouble with them. At some of the stops they even so far forgot their arrest as to indulge in their favorite pastime of wrestling with each other on the beach. But one night when the ship was tied up in port one of them disappeared. Whether he had jumped overboard and was drowned or had succeeded in reaching the shore and secreting himself in the interior of the country was never ascertained. He had literally vanished overnight.

In another instance, Lieutenant Allen relates, a party of revenue cutter men had captured a seal poaching vessel, but were unable to get conclusive evidence, though they felt quite sure of the justice of their charge. The Japs objected to being placed on their ship and being towed to the three mile line, as is customary. So they were loaded into small boats and literally driven to their vessel with clubbed rifles as extra inducements to obey.

Ordinarily, though, the Japanese seal poacher is not combative. A jail sentence is usually more of a pleasure than a punishment to him. The food in the jails is far more inviting than that served on their own ships and the work much lighter. In nine cases out of ten a blank shell discharged or shot across the bow of a suspected seal poacher brings it to in a jiffy. If not a solid shot works wonders. Then the revenue officers board the boat and search for evidence.

Whatever trouble the Japanese seal poachers have given this country in the past, the future holds promise of relief. A treaty passed congress by which England, Russia and the Japanese agreed to join this country in not hunting seal within a six mile limit instead of a three mile one. And in addition Japan and Russia have consented to hunt seal along their own respective coast lines.

Their Crimes.

The natives are but rarely accused of theft. Assembled in a store, they will help themselves to pocketknives and other trinkets that appeal to them. These will be passed from one to the other with enthusiasm. But the storekeeper never bothers to keep tab on them, for he well knows that every article will be returned to the identical place from which it was taken. Theft, if any, exists among the lower class of white men.

Murder, however, is less infrequent. It is a custom among the natives, if a white man kills one of them, to kill not the murderer, but the first white man encountered. This state of affairs often brings peculiar cases before the court.

Judge James Wickersham, delegate to congress from Alaska, has often sat in judgment upon the natives.

"Although they are beginning to realize the significance of our law," he says, "they find that they conflict at every turn with their own customs. What to them has always been right is suddenly changed to wrong. Their marriage custom is by no means a barter. The prospective husband does not bid for her in a business fashion, but comes with presents and pays her real court. She takes pride in the size of the 'price' offered for her. She is the center of interest in her village and is proud of being wooed in that manner."

The floating court came out of a trip that Judge Wickersham made some ten years ago. He held court then at Unalaska and recalls one decidedly unusual incident of the work.

A Murder Case.

"It was a murder case," he said, "and one of the most dastardly I ever ran across. The man who committed the deed was an American who had served during the Spanish-American war in a Tennessee regiment. While in the Philippines he shot a man for no other reason, apparently, than for the fun of seeing him die.

"At the expiration of his prison sentence he boarded a fishing boat bound for the Aleutian country. At Unimak island the boat stopped for water, and he, with several others, went ashore. Upon landing they discovered three tents pitched well back from the beach and in them mining implements of value. When the water had been obtained he remained on the island.

"The fishing boat sailed away without him. He returned to the tents and, taking rifles and ammunition, made his way to some nearby hills. There he awaited the return of the prospectors who owned the tents. As they came within range he opened fire on them, killing three out of four of them.

"Thirty days later other prospectors landed on the island and found the surviving one of the four lying beneath an overturned boat, half crazed and starving. They took him with them to Unalaska, where he told his terrible story to the commanding officer of the Manning, and that vessel set out immediately for the island. They found the skeletons of the three men killed and after searching discovered two men attired in the dead men's clothes. Both were arrested. One was the American. The other proved at the trial that he had come to the island after the murder had been committed by the testimony of the three head men of an Eskimo village, who presented a convincing alibi for him. The American was convicted and hanged."

OBEYS ORDER OF HIGH COURT

Standard Oil Is No Longer One Vast Organization

PASSING OF THE OLD REGIME

Control of Thirty Subsidiaries Relinquished and Transfer Books Containing List of Stockholders Closed—Readjustment to Be Complete by December—No Opportunity For Gauging Value of Business

New York, Sept. 1.—The Standard Oil company of New Jersey, the corporation which has been the storm centre of anti-trust agitation throughout the country for years, passed out of existence last evening, so far as its past form and functions are concerned. This famous corporation ceases to carry on its operations as the head of a vast organization whose activities extend into almost every part of the world.

In obedience to the decree of dissolution of the supreme court, it relinquished its control of the subsidiary concerns, yesterday being the date set for the ending of the old regime. With the end of the business day the company's transfer books containing the list of stockholders closed and the stock of its subsidiaries will be distributed among the stockholders in the parent organization on record at that time.

The work of apportioning the company's holdings of the stock of more than thirty subsidiaries affected will occupy at least three months, it is expected, so that the readjustment will not be complete prior to Dec. 1.

Standard Oil stock was traded in yesterday at about $625 per share, transactions being restricted to cash dealings on account of the necessity of effecting transfers before the market closed. A bid of $310 per share for Standard Oil "ex-subsidiaries," or without rights to participation in the distribution of the subsidiaries was made by a venturesome trader on the "curb," but as no intelligent appraisal can yet be made of the worth of the stock when divested of its outside holdings, the offer was not accepted.

The New Jersey company, in addition to acting as the holding corporation, conducts a large oil business and has extensive property holdings. The company, however, has never made a public report, and no opportunity has been afforded for gauging the value of its business and of its tangible assets.

LEYDEN DIES OF INJURIES

Attendant In Insane Asylum Faces Charge of Manslaughter

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 1.—The death of Michael Leyden of Somerville, an inmate in the state hospital for the insane in this city, resulted in a charge of manslaughter being laid against George B. Finlay, an attendant at the institution.

Upon complaint of Dr. Quinby, superintendent of the hospital, Finlay was arrested last Sunday, charged with assault and battery on Leyden. Quinby charged that Finlay used unnecessary force in handling Leyden, who had been committed to the hospital only a few days previously.

When Finlay was taken into the district court Monday, his case was continued until Saturday next, to await the outcome of the injuries to Leyden, whose jaw and several ribs were broken.

CENTRE OF POPULATION

It Has Moved Thirty-Nine Miles Westward In Past Ten Years

Washington, Sept. 1.—The centre of population of the United States is announced by Director of Census Durand to be in the western part of the city of Bloomington, Ind. This is eight miles farther west than the location announced July 17, when Durand placed it four and one-quarter miles south of Unionville, Ind.

The change in the location of the centre of population since July 17 is due to the discovery of an error made in the census office.

Bloomington is in southern Indiana. Ten years ago the census of population was six miles southwest of Columbia, Ind., thirty-nine miles east of its new location.

O'Brien Given Great Sendoff

Tokio, Sept. 1.—Thomas J. O'Brien, for four years American ambassador to Japan, sailed from Yokohama to take up his new duties as ambassador at Rome. The departing ambassador was given an unprecedented send-off at Tokio.

Fire Destroys $250,000 Church

Akron, O., Sept. 1.—Hot solder spilled by tinners ignited the roof of the First Methodist Episcopal church and in an hour the building, which cost $250,000, was destroyed.

Ball Games Sidetracked

Boston, Sept. 1.—Rain yesterday put a stop to all the scheduled games in the American, National and New England leagues, an unusual occurrence in baseball history.

Blood Thicker Than Some Water.

"Blood is thicker than water"—though not much thicker—and not so thick as sea water. The water of the ocean contains thirty-five parts of saline material a thousand, while the vital fluid of the human body contains but seven parts a thousand or one-fifth as much. In the human body each of its myriads of cells is bathed with this seven-tenths per cent saline fluid.—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

The Comeback.

"You used to say," she complained, "that you counted that day lost when you did not hear the sound of my voice."

"Yes, I know," he replied, "and I shall never cease to long for those dear lost days."—London Answers.

Identification.

"I shall try to leave footprints on the sands of time," said the man who is earnest, but not original.

"Very good," replied the absentminded criminologist, "but thumb prints are now considered more reliable."—Exchange.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson relieves Flemister has the stolen engine.

"Flemister," said the president reflectively—"he's a character. Know him personally, Howard?"

"A little," the superintendent admitted.

"A little is a-plenty. It wouldn't pay you to know him very well," laughed the big man good naturedly. "He has a somewhat paralyzing way of getting next to you financially. I knew him in the old Leadville days—a born gentleman in manner and also a born buccaneer. If the men he has held up and robbed were to stand in a row they'd fill a Denver street. Is he alone in the mine?"

"I don't know that he has any partners. Somebody told me when I first came over here that Gridley, our master mechanic, was in with him, but Gridley says that is a mistake—that he thinks too much of his reputation to be Flemister's partner."

"Hank Gridley," mused the president—"Hank Gridley and his reputation." It would certainly be a pity if that were to get corroded in any way. There is a man who properly belongs to the stone age, what you might call an elemental scoundrel.

"Ever hear of the story of his marriage? No? Remind me of it some time and I'll tell you. But we were speaking of Flemister. You say the Wire Silver has turned out pretty well?"

"Very well, indeed, I believe. Flemister seems to have money to burn."

"He always has—his own or somebody else's. It makes little difference to him. The way he got the Wire Silver would have made Black Beard, the pirate, turn green with envy. Know anything about the history of the mine?"

Lidgerwood shook his head.

"Well, I do; just happen to. You know how it lies—on the western slope of Little Butte ridge?"

"Yes."

"That is where it lies now. But the original openings were made on the eastern slope of the butte. They didn't pan out very well, and Flemister began to look for a victim to whom he could sell. About that time a man whose name I can never recall took up a claim on the western slope of the ridge directly opposite Flemister. This man struck it pretty rich, and Flemister began to bully him on the plea that the new discovery was only a continuation of his own vein straight through the hill. You can guess what happened."

"Fairly well," said Lidgerwood. "Flemister lawed the other man out."

"He did worse than that. He drove straight into the hill, past his own lines and actually took the money out of the other man's mine to use as a fighting fund. Flemister put the other man to the wall in the end. There was some domestic tragedy involved, too, in which Flemister played the devil with the other man's family, but I don't know any of the details."

Just then the waiter opened the door a second time to say that luncheon was served.

"Don't forget to remind me that I'm to tell you Gridley's story, Howard," said the president, rising out of the depths of his lounging chair and stripping off the dust coat. "Reads like a romance, only I fancy it was anything but a romance for poor Lizzie Gridley. Let's go and see what the cook has done for us."

At luncheon Lidgerwood was made known to the other members of the private car party. The white haired old man who had been dozing in his chair was Judge Holcombe, Van Lew's uncle and the father of the prettier of the two young women who had been entertaining Jefferis, the curly headed collegian. Jefferis laughingly disclaimed relationship with anybody. But Miss Carolyn Doty, the less pretty but more talkative of the two young women, confessed that she was a cousin twice removed of Mrs. Brewster.

Quite naturally Lidgerwood sought to pair the younger people when the table gathering was complete and was not entirely certain of his prefiguring. Eleanor Brewster and Van Lew sat together and were apparently absorbed in each other to the exclusion of all things extraneous. Jefferis had Miss Doty for a companion, and the affliction of her well balanced tongue seemed to affect neither his appetite nor his enjoyment of what the young woman had to say.

Miriam Holcombe had fallen to Lidgerwood's lot, and at first he thought that her silence was due to the fact that young Jefferis had got upon the wrong side of the table. But after she began to talk he changed his mind.

"Tell me about the wrecked train we passed a little while ago, Mr. Lidgerwood," she began, almost abruptly. "Was any one killed?"

"No. It was a freight, and the crew escaped. It was a rather narrow escape, though, for the engineer and fireman."

"We saw you go down to speak to two of your men, one who wore his hat pulled down over his eyes and made dreadful faces at you as he talked"—

"That was McCloskey, our trainmaster," he cut in.

"And the other?"

"Was wrecking boss No. 2," he told her, "my latest apprentice and a very promising young subject. This was his first time out under my administration, and he put McCloskey and me out of the running at once."

"What did he do?" she asked. He saw a wistfulness in her eyes and wondered at it.

"I couldn't explain it without being unpardonably technical. But perhaps it can best be summed up in saying that he is a fine mechanical engineer, with the added gift of knowing how to handle men."

"You are generous, Mr. Lidgerwood, to—to a subordinate. He ought to be very loyal to you."

"He is. And I don't think of him as a subordinate. I am glad to be able to call him my friend, Miss Holcombe."

"His college, Mr. Lidgerwood—do you chance to know where he was graduated?"

At another moment Lidgerwood might have wondered at the young woman's persistence, but now Benson's story of Dawson's terrible misfortune was crowding all purely speculative thoughts out of his mind.

"He took his engineering course in Carnegie, but I believe he did not stay through the four years," he said gravely.

Miss Holcombe was looking down the table, down and across to where her father was sitting at Mr. Brewster's right. When she spoke again the personal note was gone, and after that the talk, what there was of it, was of the sort that is meant to bridge discomforting gaps.

CHAPTER XIV.

"THE OTHER MAN."

IN the dispersal after the meal Lidgerwood attached himself to Miss Doty, this in sheer self defense lest Eleanor Brewster should seek to reopen a certain spring of bitterness at which he had been constrained to drink deeply and miserably in the past.

The self defensive expedient served its purpose admirably. While the others were occupied in various ways, Miss Brewster and Van Lew were absorbed in a book of plays, and their corner of the large open compartment was the one farthest removed from the double divan which Lidgerwood had chosen for Miss Carolyn and himself.

Later Van Lew rolled a cigarette and went to the smoking compartment, which was in the forward end of the car, and when next Lidgerwood broke Miss Doty's eye hold upon him Miss Brewster had also disappeared—into her stateroom, as he supposed. Taking this as a sign of his release, he gently broke the thread of Miss Carolyn's inquisitiveness and went out to the rear platform for a breath of fresh air and surcease from the fashery of a neatly balanced tongue.

When it was quite too late to retreat he found the deep recessed observation platform of the Nadia occupied. Miss Brewster was not in her stateroom, as he had mistakenly persuaded himself. She was sitting in one of the two platform camp chairs, and she was alone.

"I thought you would come if I only gave you time enough," she said quite coolly. "Did you find Carolyn very persuasive?"

"I thought you had gone to your stateroom. I hadn't the slightest idea that you were out here."

"Otherwise you would not have come? How magnificently churlish you can be upon occasion, Howard!"

She pushed the other chair toward him. "Sit down and tell me how you have been enduring the interval. It is more than a year, isn't it?"

"I THOUGHT YOU WOULD COME."

"Yes; a year, three months and eleven days." He had taken the chair beside her because there seemed to be nothing else to do.

"How mathematically exact you are!" she gibed. "But I asked you what you had been doing."

He spread his hands. "Existing, one way and another. There has always been my work."

"'All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy,'" she quoted. "You are excessively dull today, Howard. Hasn't it occurred to you?"

"Thank you for expressing it so delicately. It seems to be my misfortune to disappoint you always."

"Yes," she said, quite unfeelingly. Then, with a swift relapse into pure mockery: "How many times have you fallen in love during the one year, three months and eleven days? The charming Miss Dawson"—

"You might spare her even if you are not willing to spare me. You know well enough there has never been any one but you, Eleanor; that there never will be any one but you."

"What a pity!" she said in mock sympathy.

THE FIRST SOAP.

According to Pliny, It Was In Use Among the Gauls.

Who invented soap? According to Pliny, soap was an invention of the Gauls, who used it for giving a bright hue to the hair. He also states that it was employed by the Germans both as a medicinal and as a cleansing agent, two kinds being used—hard and soft. There is reason to believe that it was introduced into Germany by the Romans, though on this point there is some difference of opinion.

Homer tells us in the "Odyssey" that Nausican, daughter of Alcinous, king of the Phaecians, and her attendants washed clothes by treading upon them with their feet in pits of water, so that apparently she and her servants were unacquainted with the use of soap.

The fact that soap was obtainable by boiling together oily or fatty substances and alkalis was known at an early period of history, but it must be borne in mind that the substance referred to in the Old Testament and translated "soap" (Jeremiah ii. 22, "For though thou wash thee with niter—properly, natrou—soda—and take thee much soap," and Malachi iv. 2, "For he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap") refer to the alkali itself and not to the substances prepared from oily bodies and these alkaline matters.

The French word for soap (savon) is supposed to have been derived from the fact of its having been manufactured at Savona, near Genoa.

The manufacture of soap began in London in 1524, before which time it was supplied by Bristol at a penny per pound. A duty was imposed on soap in 1711, but after several reductions was totally repealed in 1853.—London Journal.

Washington Monument Bent by Heat.

The towering Washington monument, solid as it is, cannot resist the heat of the sun poured on its southern side on a midsummer's day without a slight bending of the gigantic shaft, which is rendered perceptible by means of a copper wire 174 feet long hanging in the center of the structure and carrying a plummet suspended in a vessel of water. At noon in summer the apex of the monument, 550 feet above the ground, is shifted by expansion of the stone a few hundredths of an inch toward the north. High winds cause perceptible motions of the plummet, and in still weather delicate vibrations of the crust of the earth otherwise unperceived are registered by it.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

SHUBERT THEATRE.

The close of the fourth week of "Over Night," the laughing comedy which W. A. Brady is presenting at the Shubert Theatre, finds no diminution of patronage, and certainly no abatement of interest and enthusiasm for this very clever bit of nonsense. Last night's audience was large and enthusiastic.

"Over Night" is in three acts, and tells the story of two newly wedded couples who have started on what they hoped to be a joyous honeymoon on the Hudson. The two husbands are college chums, but the wives have not previously met. There is a mixup on the boat at the start, and the husband of one goes ashore with the wife of the other, missing the steamer. That is all there is to the plot, but from this the author Philip H. Bartholomae has evolved unnumbered amusing situations, and he tells a highly interesting and a very funny story.

The play is on for a run at the Shubert. There will be a special matinee on Labor Day.

BOSTON THEATRE.

The attraction at the Boston Theatre for a limited engagement beginning Labor day matinee, will be the return of Klaw & Erlanger's massive production "The Round Up." The theatrical annals of Boston do not record such a towering success as "The Round Up." It is the great American play of the hour. Every character and scene in the piece breath the life of the great Southwest. The enthusiastic interest displayed by every audience is thee most flattering endorsement this really great production can receive. The magnitude of this production is such that it can only be played in a few cities in the largest theatres. Its performances here are the only opportunities those living within a reasonable journey to Boston will have of seeing this tremendous dramatic sensation. So great is the demand for seats from those living at a distance from Boston that a special bureau has been established for the expeditious handling of mail orders which when sent with cash or money order and accompanied by addressed stamped envelope, receive immediate attention. Regular matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

The Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, will begin its season with a matinee on Labor Day, when Henry B. Harris will present Helen Ware in a new three act play "The Price." The piece is from the pen of George Broadhurst, author of "The Man of the Hour" and other successful plays. It is said that in the new play Miss Ware will have a part worthy of the talents which have made her one of the foremost emotional actresses of our stage.

The characters in the play are a prominent artist, his wife, his secretary and a physician. The threads of these people's lives are so entangled that each one plays an important part in the working out of the solution of their happiness. The secretary thinks she loves the artist, then discovers that it is really the physician she loves. The artist's wife is suspicious of their intimacy and when her husband dies plans to revenge herself on the secretary, who has married the physician. Through the working out of this revenge is brought forth the great scene in the piece where the girl pleads for her right to happiness since he has so greatly paid the price of her error. It is said that this scene is well worthy of the great emotional powers which Miss Ware possesses.

Miss Ware will be remembered for her splendid work in "The Third Degree" in which she played Ann Jefferies. Mr. Harris has selected for her support a company of capable players and the roster will include Jessie Ralph, Harrison Hunter, Margaret McWade, Warner Oland, Getrtrude Dalton and George W. Barnum. The three acts will be set with the same care that marks all the productions made by Mr. Harris.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The opening of the Castle Square Friday evening, September 1st, was an event long to be remembered. The theatre was crowded to the doors to greet Mr. Craig, his company and "The Rose of the Rancho," and the applause was liberally given and judiciously distributed to every feature of one of the most successful productions ever given on the Castle square stage. "The Rose of the Rancho" will be continued through the coming week. Mary Young makes a delightful Juanita, the heroine who falls in love with an American youth, and Mr. Craig fairly outdid as Kearney all his previous efforts at the portrayal of heroic youth. The other roles are no less well acted. George Hassell is seen as Kincaid, Walter Walker as the priest, Morgan Wallace as Don Luis, Al Roberts as Sammy, with Gertrude Binley, Mabel Colcord and Florence Shirley filling the leading feminine roles. Again at the Castle Square is "The Rose of the Rancho" displaying David Belasco's skill as a dramatist, and John Craig's ability as an actor-manager.

TREMONT TEMPLE

The Kinemacolor motion pictures of the Coronation remain indefinitely at Tremont Temple, being given every afternoon and evening. They represent the preparations, ceremonies and processions of the great event which took place in London two months ago, and they are the result of recent developments in the science of color photography. The inventors were granted the right to reproduce the Coronation festivities by their now process, and the results are almost beyond description. The successive pictures blend vivid colors of the Orientals with the brilliant costumes of Europe, and never before has royalty been pictured so that its representatives may be seen by the entire world. It is no exaggeration to say that this is one of the most notable entertainments of the season. A special lecture is delivered by Eugene Farnsworth, artist and traveler and musical accompaniment is furnished by an orchestra.

NATIONAL THEATRE.

Everything is now in readiness for the grand opening of the new National Theatre on Tremont street, near Berkley street. This latest Boston playhouse, which is the largest vaudeville theatre in the world, has been declared to be one of the finest examples of popularity. The management of the theatre are anxious to cater to women and children and all programes will be arranged with this end in view. The bargain matinees when 3.500 seats are to be sold for five and ten cents are sure to meet with great success. In the evening the orchestra seats will be fifteen cents, first balcony ten cents, and the second balcony, containing 1200 individual seats, five cents. There will be two performances daily and out of town patrons will have ample opportunity to get trains. The National Theatre will give the theatregoers high class vaudeville at popular prices. Women and children who cannot afford to visit high price playhouses will find excellent entertainment and comfort at the National.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

As next week will mark the opening of the regular theatrical season in Boston, a splendid programme of all-star vaudeville features has been arranged for B. F. Keith's Theatre, one that is remarkable alike for the number of novelties that it contains and for the number of acts that are new to Boston. There are no less than five attractions of headline calibre, and three of them have never before been seen in this city. G. Molasso, the famous French pantominist and producer will present his remarkable terpsichrean spectacle, "Paris by Night," in which a large company of skilful dancers and mimes take part. This is one of the most sensational offerings over imported from Europe, and the action is intensely thrilling and dramatic, and the scenery and costumes are of the most brilliant character. Still another big novelty will be the Great Bell Family, Mexican musicians and singers. Mrs. Gene Hughes & Co., in "Youth," will be still another headlines. Walter & Georgie Lawrence, late of "The Commuters," will appear in a ne wmusical comedy entitled "Just Landed;" and still another novelty will be the Frey Twins, in their exhibition of ancient Roman wrestling. Other big features will be Leo Carrillo, the mimic and entertainer; Ruby Raymond, in a new act; Marie Fenton, "the blonde in black" and La Toy Bros., acrobatic comedians.

MARDI-GRAS AT REVERE.

One Week of fun and Frolic and Pageants of Nations on the Great Boulevard.

Everything is in readiness at Revere Beach for the Mardi-Gras carnival, one full week of fun and frolic and pageants of all nations beginning Tuesday Sept. 5 and continuing every afternoon and evening until Saturday Sept. 9 inclusive. The committee of managers of the various amusement enterprizes along the beach have been hard at work for weeks and when the results of their labors is seen, the public will have many genuine and most satisfactory surprises.

Every detail of the mardi-gras has been carefully planned and no expense has been spared that the greatest possible artistic beauty will be secured. The committee is planning for the future so it does not propose to offer a cheap, tawdry show but will keep absolute faith with the many thousands who are certain to go to Revere Beach during the Mardi-Gras week. There will be equatic and athletic sports every afternoon, but the big feature will be the evening reception to the king and queen. Charles L. Ridgway, propretor of the Nautical Gardens has been elected king and he has chosen Irene Hile for queen. They will appear on a royal float and be escorted by the greatest mardi-gras procession ever seen at the North. There will be magnificent, electrically lighted floats representing the United States, Canada, France, Germany, Ireland, Scotland, Great Britain, Japan, Cuba, China, Sweden, Italy, Russia and Turkey and many foot features, banner bearers, one hundred horses and six bands of music. Every night will be a special night. Tuesday will be militia night, Wednesday, Lexington minute men's night Thursday, Boys' Brigade night, Friday, Veteran Firemen's night and Saturday night, automobile night. There will be special prizes every night. Gen. William A. Oakes, M. V. M., retired, has been selected chief marshal of the parades. It will be worth while going to Revere Beach during Mardi-Gras week.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

Mrs. Sarah Kincaide Died at Her Daughter's Home

MOTHER OF COL. KINCAIDE

Mrs. Sarah Kincaide, widow of William Kincaide and mother of Col. Henry L. Kincaide one of Quincy's well known business men, passed away this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John D. Mackay, on Merrymount road.

Mrs. Kincaide's health has been failing for several months. Early in the summer she went to Provincetown, where she owned a cottage, hoping that the change might be beneficial. Her strength, however, continued to fail and two weeks ago she was brought back to Quincy. Since then her decline has been gradual and this morning at 9 o'clock she passed away.

Mrs. Kincaide was for many years engaged in the dry goods business, her store being located on Water street. Here she enjoyed a large trade but a few years ago retired from active life. Since then she has made her home with her daughters.

Mrs. Kincaide leaves a son and three daughters, Henry L. Kincaide, Mrs. George S. Bass, Mrs. George W. Lewis and Mrs. John D. Mackay.

AVIATION NOTES.

The wet weather this week has been very trying to the management of the Aviation meet and the aviators and the hundreds of visitors that have come from other states to visit friends and see the flying. There has been some flying most every day, enough to sharpen the appetite for more on the first fine day, when the gates open. Conditions at the Atlantic station have been much improved although they are still at work on the tunnel under the tracks. They have cleaned things up so that now there is plenty of room to handle the crowd that will surely be here. They have put up a long row of electric lights around the station and all the way to the Atlantic bridge, and they have built a flight of stairs at the bridge so that the people can reach Atlantic street which shortens the distance to the Aviation Field very much.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

It is now evidently certain that the Atlantics will not cross bats with West Quincy tomorrow,, for Manager Joyce has announced that all arrangements for a game on the Old Colony league for tomorrow have been made with Manager Burton of the Manets. With this step being taken the contest for championship honors has assumed a new phase, and unless some compromise is made, it is doubtful if the fans will be able to know what team is the champion of the city.

Manager Keohane, of Atlantic, is willing to play West Quincy again, but he is unwilling to have the West Quincy management do all the dictating, as has been the case heretofore in the series. A number of teams were in line for the honors of supremacy, and it now seems that an elimination contest would be the best way to settle matters.

Atlantic is to play the Mohawks a series of three games at Atlantic, Makaria and South Quincy will contend another on Labor Day and the Manets and West Quincy start conclusions tomorrow.

All these games are to involve the championship of the city. Such being the case, it would seem that it would be an easy matter to have the winners come together and thus enable this baseball strife to be settled without any further argument. Let the managers of the three winning teams come together, arrange things to their satisfaction and the fans no doubt will rest satisfied with the outcome. This can be done readily, but it must be done at an early date, as the baseball season is fast waning.

Through some misunderstanding a number of the local fans have been inclined to think that Umpire Flynn was unfair in the decision which caused last Saturday's game to be declared a tie. No one who was present will question the justice of the ruling; the only fault to be found is that it should not take twenty-five or thirty minutes to reverse a decision.

That sporting aphorism, "they never come back," has been applied to many individuals with unquestioned truth, but in the case of "Jack" Kolson, the local twirler, now performing for the Clapp Memorial nine, it seems to be a solecism, for "Jack" is now pitching the game of his life. Kolson was one of the best local pitchers ever turned out, and in the days when baseball was at its supreme height in local circles, "Jack" accredited himself in fine style.

But as the game seemed to decline, "Jack's" ability to twirl seemed to go with it, and for a couple of years, he was unable to make himself conspicuous as a ball player. Things took a turn this year, and "Jack" turned from the "all in" to the "best ever." His work with the Weymouth team has been nothing short of sensational. He rarely allows his opponents more than five hits, and is himself batting the ball for a good average.

Recently manager Joyce tried to secure him for West Quincy, but the inducements offered at Weymouth, would not permit "Jack" accepting the call. If he can maintain his present pace, Kolson should be seen in greater circles in the near future.

Grethe, "Sid" Patterson and Murray Kerr will be the slabmen, and "Dode" Galvin, formerly with South Quincy and Kane, the Fore River star, will also be in the lineup.

Something unknown in baseball circles happened yesterday, when the rain prevented any games being played in the American National, or New England leagues. Usually there is some place on the circuit where the national pastime can be safely indulged in, but the inclement weather seemed to be universally prevalent.

"Jimmy" Michael, the former Makaria twirler, who has created a sensation last season in the Nova Scotia region, is back home again and it is not improbable that he will twirl for his former team mates on the morning of Labor Day, when Makaria and South Quincy are the attraction at the Ward three playground.

Baseball challenges, especially among the younger ball tossers, are greatly in evidence at the present time, and it does look as though we were to have some great contests before the present season draws to a close.

"Tris" Speaker, "Joe" Wood, Karger, Collins, Hall, Carrigan, Nunamaker, Yerkes, Wagner, Lewis and last, but not least, Walter Lonergan, well known in local circles, are the members of the Red Sox team who have signified their intentions of being present at the Bingville Barn dance, which takes place at Houghs Neck this evening. They will be entertained by "Ben" Johnson and Frank Gendreau, two well known figures in the sporting world.

YEGGMEN SERVE "SOUP."

Its Queer Recipe Is In Possession of the Secret Service.

"First take about ten or a dozen lmpwri hz xug, crumble it up fine and put it in a pan or washbowl, then pour over it enough uswhohs (either chhx or inky) to cover it well. Stir it up with your hands, being careful to break all the lumps; leave it set a few minutes; then get a few yards of cheesecloth and tear it in pieces and strain the mixture through the cloth into another vessel, wring the sawdust dry and throw it away. The remains will be the lhai ugx uswhohs mixed. Next take the same amount of water as you used of uswhohs and pour it in; leave the whole set for a few minutes."

This is the "soup" employed by yeggmen, and a single portion of it is guaranteed to open the door of the stoutest safe, provided an aperture can be made sufficiently large to pour in the stuff. The names of the ingredients are written in a crude sort of cipher commonly used for preserving such secrets. This and dozens more of the same transparency of meaning are in the possession of the United States secret service men, the police, detective agencies and others who deal with the cooks of such dishes. By a substitution of letter for letter—the first six for the last six of the alphabet, the second six for the third six, with G and N taken out of turn and made interchangeable—the cipher is easily read. "Impwri hz xug," translated, is "sticks of dan" (short for dynamite). "Uswhohs, either chhx or inky"—alcohol, either wood or pure—may be used.

The directions for serving this soup require considerable attention and the best of trained service. After the "gay cat," or advance agent of the band, has learned all that can be found out about the bank, store or post-office, its lighting, protection and the means of escape by freight train, vehicle or on foot, his companion or companions come on, avoiding notice as far as possible. "Stickups," or lookouts, guard the place while the "inside men" break into the safe. Sealing the cracks about the safe or vault door with soap, the yeggmen pour in the soup through a small hole left open at the top. The liquid flows down by locks, hinges and bolts and is set off by fuse or detonator. Blankets and covers of any kind are used to muffle the sound of the explosion and the fall of the door. Perhaps the "stickups" are forced to create a diversion outside and to frighten the citizens or mislead them while the "inside men" pick out the valuable papers escape. Who pays the check for the soup then depends upon the ingenuity of detectives.—New York Post.

EYE STRAIN.

It Has Many Symptoms and May Affect the Whole System.

Chief among the symptoms of eye strain are watering of the eye, a gluing together of the eyelids on awakening in the morning, headache, the position and character of which vary with each individual. It may be neuralgic or it may be deeply seated, as was the case with Wagner, the musician, who was complaining constantly of "the nerves of his eyes."

The headache is often replaced by an inflammation of the eyelids, especially in young and healthy persons, who also have a little conjunctivitis, with a feeling of tension or fullness in the eyes which may become real pain of a dull aching character, the eyeballs being very tender on pressure.

Sometimes there are vertigo and sickness, with dyspepsia, palpitation and even difficulty in breathing. Sleeplessness is a very frequent symptom, due in part to the excessive flow of blood to the brain and in part to the low tone of the whole nervous system.

The symptoms of eye strain appear sooner in those who lead a confined and sedentary life, who follow occupations which need a constant use of the eyes in bad or unsuitable light and in those who are debilitated from any cause. The symptoms appear later in those of coarser fiber, who pass much of their time in the open air or who follow occupations which do not need a prolonged use of the eyes for close work.—London Lancet.

Odd Bargain of Dumas.

The library of Carpentras possesses among its treasures a curious collection of autographs. One is the signature of Alexandre Dumas pere to an old bargain which he proposed and which was accepted. This strange contract was that the author should present to the library of Cavaillon copies of all his works, those already published and others which he might write in return for a supply of melons to be sent to him as long as he lived.—

TREATMENT OF PRISONERS

Radical Changes Are Recommended by Governor Foss

Boston, Sept. 1.—Governor Foss, in an address delivered at the opening session of the annual conference of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology, recommended radical changes by the commonwealth in the treatment of men in prison and on parole.

He said prisons should not be regarded as workshops run for profit to the state, and that prison discipline itself is a punishment that unfits a man for taking his place in the world afterward. He advocated abolishing city prisons and building places of correction out in the country.

"It seems to me that too much stress is laid on long term punishment, and far too little on remedial or corrective measures," he said.

"Give value to the prisoner's work," said the governor. "If he earns a profit let it be devoted to his family or his own future welfare. Our prisons are filled today not by degenerates, but by unfortunates who can be cured."

HARRIS QUITS HIS JOB

Town Marshal Weighs 410 Pounds, but It Is No Handicap

Farmersville, Tex., Sept. 1.—Sam Harris, who held the record for six years of being the largest town marshal in the United States, has retired from that office. He weighs 410 pounds. His weight was no handicap in performing the duties of police officer, but he got tired of the job and is now ready to take other employment.

He is 38 years of age and is still increasing in weight. Harris is the product of a farm near this place. He is proud of the fact that his flesh gives him no inconvenience in his everyday duties.

BATTLESHIP UTAH IS IN COMMISSION

Stars and Stripes Flung to the Breeze at Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.—With its crew of more than 700 men standing at "attention," the battleship Utah, one of the most powerful warships afloat, was placed in commission at the Philadelphia navy yard.

A representative of Captain Grant, commandant of the navy yard, read the orders of the secretary of the navy placing the big battleship in commission and then Captain Benson read the orders of the navy department placing him in command of the Utah. With the band playing "The Star Spangled Banner," the Stars and Stripes were thrown to the breeze from the masthead.

After stores and other supplies are placed on board the battleship will sail for New York and will later join the Atlantic fleet.

AN ABUNDANCE OF RAIN

Storm Has Been Practically Continuous In Boston For a Week

Boston, Sept. 1.—Boston is having a freak storm. Offifficially and on the books of the local weather observatory it commenced shortly after midnight one week ago yesterday. Since that time it has rained every day for a short or long period, which breaks the record for continuous days of rainfall, although the total for the month of August has been only slightly over one inch above the normal.

All along the Atlantic seaboard the same conditions hold, although Philadelphia is experiencing one of the worst storms in its history. Twice as much rain has fallen there since last Friday as has fallen here, while yesterday alone 4.68 inches fell in the Quaker city to 1.16 inches in Boston.

AGENT HAS DISAPPEARED

Employer Says $1900 Is Missing From Safe Deposit Box

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 1.—Oliver Lee, a business man at Sandwich, N. H., reported to the local police that $1900 which he had in a safe deposit box at the Worcester Trust company of this city had disappeared, and along with it Walter H. Quimby, who was employed here as Lee's agent.

Lee stated he gave Quimby his keys to his safe deposit vault about a year ago and, when the came to Worcester, he found his agent had disappeared. When his vault was opened $1900 in real money he claimed he put in it had taken the same course.

BIGGEST IN THE WORLD

Our Two New Battleships to Be of 28,500 Tons Displacement

Washington, Sept. 1.—The two new battleships authorized by the last naval act probably will be of 28,500 tons displacement, or the biggest war vessels in the world.

The largest ships so far designed for the American navy are the New York and the Texas, 27,000 tons each, and it has only just become known that the navy department contemplated exceeding their size. The new ships will have heavier armor than ever before put on a battleship.

AVIATOR FALLS AND IS NEARLY DROWNED

Jos. F. Cummings in His New Bleriot Monoplane Drops Into Bay

Accident Happened At Early Hour This Morning

Joseph F. Cummings, one of the aviators at the Squantum field, had a narrow escape from being drowned, early this morning, when something went wrong with his Bleriot monoplane and he dropped 300 feet into Dorchester bay. The Bleriot was a new machine and had just been assembled. About 5 o'clock, Cummings went up for his initial flight. He ascended from the field all right and was flying over Dorchester bay, at a height of about 300 feet, when the machine got out of order and he dropped like a log into the water, landing near the revenue cutter. The crew of the vessel were washing down deck and immediately launched a boat and went to the rescue. Those on the field seeing his plight also put out to his aid.

When the machine fell he managed to climb out among the mesh work of wires and jumped into the water where he swam about until rescued. He received a severe cut on the forehead and was also bruised about the face and body by the heavy engine and wires.

The machine sank out of sight in the water. Cummings was taken ashore to the hospital tent, where he was attended by Dr. Sheahan, who was obliged to take several stitches in t hewound on his forehead. The aviator refused to 'eave the field after being fixed up by the doctor, and insisted that he was all right.

He said that he did not know what had happened to the machine. That he was flying all right, when suddenly there was a peculiar sound and he felt himself dropping. It is thought

CLOSING EXERCISES ON THE SUMMER PLAYGROUND

Fully Five Hundred Children Bring to a Successful Termination a Summer Feature that has been Thoroughly Enjoyed By the Younger Element of the City---Those in Charge

Fully five hundred children, ranging in ages from five to fifteen, participated in the closing exercises of the playground, in the rear of the Coddington school, Friday, under the auspices of the Quincy Playground committee of one Hundred. It was a sight rarely witnessed in local circles to view the youngsters frolicking together in merry concourse, and those in charge certainly deserve great credit for the benefit that has accrued to the children of the Ward One section, as a result of the opportunities afforded.

The movement to establish a playground in the initial ward was started some time ago, and towards the latter part of June, plans were completed and all necessary facilities were placed at the hands of the youngsters, in order that they might attain proper development, besides being allowed to recreate in a manner that befits a child.

All sorts of games were indulged in, on the closing occasion, and from two o'clock till about six, there was not one dull or idle moment. Many parents of the children found time to be present, and all of them were loud in their praises of the movement and pronounced the undertaking to be about the best thing ever attempted.

Delcevare King was the chairman in charge and under his guidance, everything was conducted smoothly, and each child was given careful consideration. It seemed a huge task to provide amply for such a large number of children, but at the conclusion of the observance there was not to be found a youngster who did not say that it was the best time he ever had in his life.

The real fun started at two o'clock, when the Cubs and the All Stars, the two foremost contenders for the highest honors of the series that has been in evidence all summer in conjunction with the work, encountered each other. From start to finish it was a keen and interesting game, and seemed to resolve into a pitcher's battle. At first it looked as if the game would have to go to extra innings, for the score stood six to six, up to the last, when a home run by Falconer, enabled him to win his own game, and incidentally pronounce the Cubs the champions. So great was the enthusiasm shown at the end of the game, that continued cheers greeted Falconer, and he was carried about the playground on the shoulders of many of his youthful admirers.

Then followed a long list of sports, divided equally among the boys and girls, in such a way that there was no conflict noticeable. The following is the time and order in which the various events were pulled off:

3.00—Boys (under 12) Potato relay race (four teams)

3.15—Girls—Little Sallie Water.

3.30—Boys (10 years) Quoit—relay race.

3.30—Girls—Rattlesnake.

3.45—"Bingo"

3.45 Boys—Tug of War. Cubs and White Sox vs Naps and Athletics.

4.00—Boys (under 10) Leap frag race.

4.00—Girls—Go in and out the window.

4.15—Girls—On the carpet.

4.15—Boys—Hang tag (two games)

While the games were in the height of their power; Mayor William T. Shea and Henry M. Faxon, appeared on the scene amidst an outburst of applause. The two distinguished visitors had great praise for the work accomplished and both were pleased at the efficiency attained and the discipline arrived at, in the arrangement of affairs. Peanuts were greatly in evidence, and both guests of the afternoon were delighted on viewing the youngsters in action, for it was surely evident that all present were enjoying themselves to their hearts content.

The weather that prevailed was of the ideal variety, and Physical Director LaRose was enabled to card the various events without entailing any delay. On behalf of the committee and children, Mr. LaRose presented William C. Caldwell, the janitor of the Coddington school with a handsome stick pin and pair of cuff links, in appreciation of the kindness of courtesy he had requited while the playground was open.

At the conclusion of the game, ice cream and cake were served and it is safe to say that there was no where to be found a more happy lot of children. While refreshments were being served Mr. King presented prizes to the winners, and as each one stepped forth, he was given three hearty cheers. The following were awarded prizes for being the highest point winners in the various events.

Boys (under 10) All round test

J. McDonald, bronze cup, 9 points first, LL. Newell, silver fob, 7 points second.

Boys (10-12)

Elmer Esklund, bronze cup, 28 points, first, Joseph McDonald silver fob, 12 points, second.

Boys (13-15)

Clarence Gronberg, bronze cup, 16 points first, George Kane, silver fob, 15 points second, Besides these there were 47 other point winners.

Girls (10-12)

Elsa Sword, 10 points, first, 1lb. box of candy. Dorothy Lord, 8 points, second, 1-2 lb. box of candy.

Girls (13-15)

Marian Finn, 42 points, first, 1 lb. box of candy. Ethel Anderson, 22 1-2 points, second, 1-2 lb. box of candy.

The following players, comprising the Cubs, the winners of the championship series, were each presented with a handsome silver fob by Delcevare

SOPWITH ENGLISH AVIATOR LANDS FIRST HONORS

Ely Forced to Quit Lands On Island

The members of the City Council and thousands of others who attended the aviation meet yesterday afternoon, had the opportunity of their lives to see good flying. Not once during the meet of last year was there an exhibition that in any way compared with it. The weather conditions were nearly perfect and the birdmen who had been housed up for the past three days by rain, seemed anxious to get down to business.

It was a never to be forgotten night to see the big bird like Bleriot, Nieupert and Queen monoplanes sailing about the field, preparatory to their trip to Boston Light and return, which was made at a mile a minute gait.

There were three monoplanes and two biplanes lined up for the flight to the Light, and they got away at two minute intervals, so that when once started, the crowd could watch one machine disappear over Squantum hill toward the Light before the next one started.

When it was announced that Sopwith had made the two round trips to the Light, in 31 minutes and 33 seconds, and had broken the record made last year by Grahame-White, there was a great shout and as he made his graceful landing on the getaway the band played "God save the Queen."

One of the biplanes had trouble with its engine and made a safe landing on Moon island.

Promptly at 3 o'clock an exploding bomb announced the start afternoon program. The first event was accuracy in landing and was competed for by Beaty, Sopwith, Gill, Beachey and Coffin. Then came the quick starting events.

After this came the cross country flight to Boston Light. This over Harry Atwood came onto the field and for a half hour gave the crowd an exhibition of flying that alone was well worth the price of admission. He circled the field time and time again, cutting figure eights and doing other stunts. As he flew along several hundred feet above the ground, he would constantly wave his hand to the crowd inthe grand stand. He kept one foot dangling below his machine, which gave a kind of "don't care if school keeps or not air," showing that he was perfectly at home in his biplane and feeling as happy as a school boy.

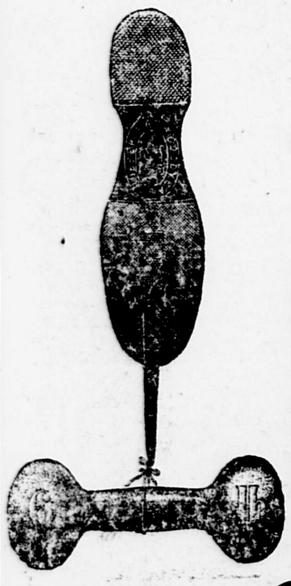

One machine started with a passenger while Atwood was flying but something did not work right. It did not rise very high and in a few minutes landed inthe swamp. It was laughable then to see Atwood fly over to see what was the matter, flying so low that it appeared as though he was but a few feet above the disabled plane.

Following this stunt came event, J which was altitude and speed and the participants inthis, as they circled the

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The terrible trestle accident on the Lehigh Valley suggests that while the red shirted man who walks the tracks may not get invited to our parties, yet he is needed for our health and happiness.

The G. A. R. encampment voted to have people stand bare headed five minutes Memorial day, but the crowd at the ball games won't do anything of that kind except as they may lose their headgear while licking the umpire.

If our state department does not get busy and send off that German cruiser that is doing torpedo practice in Buzzard's Bay, the summer boarders can't catch any tomcod.

The blacksmiths are talking strike on the Union Pacific, and the iron horse will kick up his heels if he isn't properly shod.

A body of European scientists say heat prostrations are caused by the elimination of the body salts through excessive perspiration. Now this explains why so many people are fresh in hot weather.

SCHOOL DAYS AGAIN.

The restless and happy days of vacation are about over. Soon the irresponsible gangs of tousled children playing about the back yards will be succeeded by the long lines of starched and brushed youngsters scarcely recognizable with their hair smacked down and vacation dirt removed from tanned faces.

The "What shall I do now, Mother" type of youngster is so general now, that schooldays are a relief to many a burdened family. The farm child will always find amusement enough, while the barn with its dark hay mows and lawless freedom stimulate the spirit of romance and play, while the brooks breed tadpoles, and the old swimming hole offers its cool welcome.

But the boy was considered a negligible factor when the modern town was laid out. Advanced municipalities are providing their playgrounds, it is true. Every town needs them. But the average city and large village offers the American youth no more constructive occupation than plundering such fruit trees as many exist under urban conditions, and swapping curbstone gossip and cigarettes.

THE LIBRARY HOURS.

The many patrons of the Thomas back to the old schedule. The central Crane Public Library are pleased that the hours at the library have been put library does not furnish as good opportunity of using the reading room as is enjoyed by the branch library, that being open evenings, while all the summer the central library has closed at 6 P. M. Also closing at 8 P. M. through the winter is thought by many to be too early. A constant user of the library said recently that it was impossible for him to get an hour's reading or use of the reference books for, hurry as he would, he could not get through the evening meal and get to the library until after seven and at eight he was turned out as the library closed.

Now it would seem to us that when Quincy is so much favored by the gifts of a beautiful building also gifts and endowments by the Crane family that the city should do its share in maintaining and running the library and not scrimp on salaries so that there are not clerks enough to maintain proper hours. The library is for the use of the people and Quincy residents have a right to expect as good accommodations as to service and hours as is already enjoyed by many smaller town to say nothing of cities the size of Quincy.

IMPERFECT RAILROAD TRACKS.

Two frightful railroad disasters, said to be due to spread rails, have happened within two days on the Lehigh Valley and the New York, New Haven and Hartford roads. Evidently the complacent feeling that the woeful defects in American track construction had been remedied must be abandoned.

A long continued series of railroad wrecks a few years ago brought the subject of imperfect rails and track construction forcibly to public attention. About 1907 our scientific journals and our newspapers were full of discussion of the rail question. Some betterment of construction followed. An investigation of rail breakages in New York state railroads showed 3,917 cases for the winter of 1907-8 as against only 1829 breakages for the winter of 1908-9.

The controversy that waged about that time between the railroad managers and the rail makers will be recalled. Railroad people charged criminal carelessness on the part of the rail makers. It was brought out that in New York state there were 836 rail breakages of rails made in 1906 as against only 29 of rails made in 1901.

The fact was also brought out that the ores are nearly exhausted that are free from phosphorous, a deleterious material. It was asserted that good rails would never be made until the companies adopted the open hearth process, by which phosphorus can be eliminated, a change which it was said would cost the Steel corporation alone $60,000,000.

The rail makers said that the railroads used excessive weights, and ran trains at an excessive speed, and failed to take care of their tracks, hence the many tragic horrors.

Whether or not this agitation accomplished satisfactory results in amending our rail manufacture, which may well be doubted, it will be believed by most people that our methods of attaching rails to the ties are obsolete. They did very well for experimental construction in a new country. But the time has come when we ought to adopt some such process as the screw spikes of Germany or France, which have two to four times the holding power of our spikes. Ours soon work loose, with the result that the wood of the cross tie decays, hence our method is believed by some engineers to be more expensive as well as perilous to the public.

King, viz—Falconer (captain) Barry, Ahlstrom, Mahoney, Shaughnessy, Dean, Clarkin McDonald, Pitts.

The entire project was pronounced a success, and is due in a large measure to Delcevare King, at whose suggestion it was attempted. Physical Director LaRose should also come in for his share, for the energy he displayed in an endeavor to make the children strong and healthy and at the same time happy. These two men were ably assisted by a committee comprised of Edwin Smith, William Roud, the Misses Ruth Bass, Wetherell and Goodspeed, Ralph Crane, Harold Sutermeister, George Jennings, Mrs. Geo. Byers and Mrs. William Poehler, were in charge of the refreshments. All in all the closing exercises showed that the project was productive of much good and is bound to prove a strong incentive to the playground movement in the near future.

ENGLAND WILL BACK FRANCE

In Full Agreement Concerning Franco-German Dispute

ESTIMATES OF WAR STRENGTH

Germany Has Many Reasons to Avoid Conflict, as She Would Be Greatly Handicapped In Military Operations—Strong German and Austrian Resentment at Britain—Accused of Instigating the Present Crisis

London, Sept. 2.—Information comes from Paris that the instructions received from the French government to be delivered to Germany contain "the maximum terms which France is willing to offer Germany in order to reach a settlement of the vexed Moroccan question."

London believes that Germany will back down and accept France's proposition, but this feeling of an amicable settlement, it would seem, is not so strong in either France or Germany.

The French and British governments have reached the fullest mutual agreement upon every phase of the Franco-German dispute.

The people of France have been given to understand, it is learned, that there is a possibility of war, and they are said to be ready to follow the desires of the government.

On the other side of the trouble it may be truthfully said that never since the beginning of the imbroglio has Germany been so angry. Her fury is directed mainly against England for what would be called "butting in" in Africa.

Articles were published in London showing the immense superiority of the British navy over that of Germany at the present moment, and among English military men the opinion prevails that Germany would be unwilling to try issues with France just now because of the superiority of the French field artillery and the alleged greater ability of the French general starff.

In the event of war, which is considered to be unlikely, it is held that France's defensive positions are so strong that the German military operations would be rendered ineffective for at least such a period as would insure the destruction of the German fleet and naval operations that would more than counterbalance any eventual German successes on land. For these reasons the British view of the present critical situation is somewhat rose-colored.

German resentment at the part which England, rightly or wrongly, is supposed to be playing is growing apace, and the persistent enmity of Great Britain toward Germany is the keynote of many Berlin newspaper articles.

In Austria, also, Great Britain is looked upon as having instigated the present crisis. The Reichspost declares that the Moroccan negotiations have taken a grave turn, owing to the sudden interference of Great Britain.

Belgium, while neutral in the matter, has apparently heard that hostilities are likely because she is rushing her coast defenses against a possible invasion of either the French or German forces.

A fair amount of war insurance is offered and with the market becoming restricted the rates advanced further on the risk of war breaking out between certain European powers within two months. Some risks were accepted at 8 percent, and in some cases 10 percent was quoted.

THE CANONSBURG HORROR

Coroner's Jury Unable to Find Anyone Criminally Responsible

Canonsburg, Pa., Sept. 2.—The coroner's jury which held an inquest into the panic of last Saturday night during a moving picture show at the Canonsburg opera house, when twenty-six persons were killed and several score injured, last night returned a verdict censuring the manager of the show and the state department of factory and building inspection.

The jury states that it is unable to find any person or persons guilty criminally.

C. P. Ferguson, manager of the show, was condemned for not providing police protection for the premises, while the state department of factory and building inspection is censured for approving the narrow street entrance leading to the auditorium of the theatre.

BRIEFS

The ivy which was planted around the Memorial church the first of the summer is climbing rapidly and will soon add greatly to the appearance of the church.

The friends of Morton L. Ring, who has passed the summer with his parents on Greenleaf street, will be pleased to learn that he passed his physical examination successfully Friday at Annapolis and that he will at once resume his course at the Naval Academy.

The officers of the Young Women's club are busy arranging the program for the coming year. This club offers much to the young women of our city not only in a social way but in an educational way. Membership tickets can be obtained from the president, Miss Marie Bass, or from the officers of the club. The membership is limited so it would be well to secure tickets early.

Rev. Joseph Henry Crooker D. D., of Roslindale, who is to preach on Sunday morning in First church should call out a large attendance as he is one of the best known ministers of Greater Boston. His writings and sermons are much quoted as he always has something pertinent and interesting to say and says it well. The church has been closed for the summer and the reopening on Sunday should bring out the full congregation and attendants. The church committee has issued cards of the services and preachers for September.

A special meeting of much importance of the Wollaston W. C. T. U. will be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Simpson Kay, 257 Beale street. All members are urgently requested to be present.

The altar boys and the children's choir of the Sacred Heart church were entertained at the Squantum Inn on Tuesday. The fish dinner and games passed the hours very quickly.

The devotional services of the Epworth League of the Hall Place M. E. church will commence on Sunday, Sept. 3. This being Epworth League "Rally Day", special emphasis is placed on the meeting for Sunday. The topic for consideration is the "Supreme Motive Power," the leader will be Miss M. E. Hodgkinson. A large attendance is hoped for. These services are held from 6.15 to 7 P. M. each Sunday night, with good topics and good leaders. Come and bring others with you.

The authorities were well prepared this year for the jam outside the aviation fields, having given the officers orders to keep all vehicles from standing on Squantum street or the Boulevard.

Fred Burr of Hendrie street has sold his house and moved to Boston. He will live at the Massachusetts Chambers.

Whales and Children's Whoppers Interest Hub's Folk—Can You Prevent Little People from Lying?—Theft of Louvre's Masterpiece Recalls Boston Art Club's Loss of Many Years Ago—Suffragists with Yellow Poppies Invade Aviation Meet—A Mass Meeting on Boston Common in Aid of California Campaign.

Boston, August 31, 1911.—That perennial question why little ones lie has been revived by a psychologist of Holy Cross college who claims to have a sort of recipe to prevent the family catastrophe. If really successful he has solved one of the problems of education. Most mothers whom one meets confess to anquish of soul and temper over little Gertrude's mendacity and the untrustworthiness shown by Tommie when he has solemnly promised not to take the boat into the deep part of the lake. Some cynics there are who urge that all children are liars by instinct; even observers of mellower disposition conclude that at least a considerable percentage are born to be untruthful. Perhaps, however, the Worcester scientist has discovered a means of changing human nature.

Speaking of whoppers, the whales at the rooms of the Boston Society of Natural History are attracting much comment. They are not living cetaceans, of course; those will be seen, if at all, only in the aquarial gardens planned for Marine Park, South Boston. They are simply life like models, sculptured from casts of the real creatures by the museum taxidermist, C. Emerson Brown, who is skilled at doing such things. The latest addition to the group of exhibition whales is the likeness of a pygmy spern which was cast ashore at Nahant last summer. As pymmies go he was a veritable giant.

The safety of the Boston art museum's many masterpieces has naturally come under discussion since the theft of the Mona Lisa from the Louvre. The authorities agree in saying that there would be nothing doing for the burglarious person who should attempt to purloin Stuart's Washington or the exquisite marble head from Naxos or the little bronze statuette of Kwannon from eighth century Japan or any other of the treasures of America's richest museum of fine arts. Careful guarding of such objects has become a tradition of Boston institutions ever since the famous occasion many years ago when a sneak thief entered the gallery of the Boston Art Club and cut eleven canvases from their frames. Those pictures were never recovered and the bill for their loss nearly bankrupted the club which was then an infant organization. From that day to this no important art collection has ever been left even momentarily without the presence of a custodian. A cock and bull newspaper story of a few years ago represented that a local Tong society was lying in wait to snatch from the Chinese department of the Museum of Fine Arts the great jade tree which is among its most curious possessions. This article, involving the largest piece of jade known to exist was said to have been stolen from an ancient Chinese temple and a band of fanatics to have sworn by every divinty known to three religions to restore it to its original abiding place. The Museum authorities for some time maintained an especially watchful guard over the case in which this object was kept, but no almond eyed visitor was ever noted as having felonious design upon it. The newspaper story, like many other, was probably a fake. At the same time eternal vigilance is the price of keeping a museum intact.

With flaunting of poppies, California's state flower, the Massachusetts woman suffrage association held its big mass meeting on Boston Common, August 29, in the interest of the western commonwealth's lively campaign for the political equality of the sexes. The men of California on Oct. 10 will vote on the question of "votes for women" and the Bay State suffragists are naturally anxious to contribute toward the needful funds for spreading right ideas between now and then. Hence the spirited sale among the crowds on the Common of poppies, suffrage buttons and other souvenirs. Unless California should unexpectedly go "anti" there will be six stars in the equal suffrage flag henceforth, with a strong probability that others of the more progressive western states will follow shortly. The mass meeting in Boston was well advertised in and about Squantum, for the suffragists, through the courtesy of their neighbor in Copley Square, the Everett automobile company, were enabled to invade the field in a machine decked out with yellow banners, from behind which four young ladies passed out cards of invitation to the aviation enthusiasts. General William A. Bancroft's employees were also well circularised, for it was too great a temptation to resist, that of handing out literature to every conductor and motorman encountered along Dorchester Avenue and elsewhere en route. In spite of all the lively happenings in connection with the Common meeting the regular propaganda has at no time been neglected this summer. Every day there are meetings at factories and on village greens, and now and then an extraordinarily fashionable event, as when the social summer colony at Dublin, New Hampshire, was invaded by three earnest suffrage workers from Boston.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of Memorial Congregational church has been active from the close of their meetings in May, and twelve women have been acting as a calendar committee to raise money for a new pipe organ.

These twelve represented the different months of the year—and each volunteered to find four to represent weeks and each week was to find seven friends to represent each day in the week. Every one giving ten cents for every month in the year and to collect the year's subscriptions by the second Wednesday in September and report at the first business meeting of the society.

Several of the committees have also been working for the annual fair which is to be held in November. The committee on the useful table has met several times and many of the women have made use of their spare time to make desirable and useful articles which they found a ready sale for when finished.

The china committee has sold a few pieces of decorated china and has orders for considerable which will be delivered before Christmas.

Other tables are planning to raise considerable before the days of the fair in the way of food sales, and entertainments. The largest committee heard from is the useful table which has twenty-two members, and each member is working to raise $5 before the fair.

Mrs. Chase H. Pope is chairman of the fair which undoubtedly will be the best the church has ever had.

The total amount of the ladies' work last year which was from November to May was $850. This was raised for furnishings in the new church.

CROWD'S TAUNT BRINGS DEATH

Aviator Frisbie's Wife and Children See Him Killed

FALLS ABOUT HUNDRED FEET

Side and Chest Crushed When Machine Falls Upon Him—Makes Flight Against His Own Good Judgment Rather Than Have Spectators Think He Was Not Trying to Do His Best

Norton, Kan., Sept. 2.—J. J. Frisbie, the Curtis aviator, was killed by a fall at the Norton county fair. Frisbie met with an accident Thursday, and went into the air again yesterday only when driven to it by the taunts and jeers of the crowd.

Frisbie fell about 100 feet, and the engine of his machine fell upon him, crushing his left side and chest. He died an hour later.

Frisbie had been giving exhibitions at Elmwood park for several days. Thursday his machine acted badly and he had a fall of about forty feet, but beyond bruises and a shaking up, was not injured. Doubting the ability of his machine to stand another flight, he announced he would not take the air yesterday afternoon. When this statement was communicated to the crowd there was an angry demonstration.

Frisbie announced that rather than have the big crowd go away with the impression that he was not willing to do his best, he would attempt a flight.

He ascended from the track without difficulty and attained a height of 100 feet, but in attempting to make a turn the plane tipped and Frisbie lost control. As he came crashing to earth the spectators could see the aviator trying to right the machine, but as it approached the ground one of the wings crashed into a barn and the biplane, glancing off, struck the earth with Frisbie underneath.

Frisbie's wife, son and little girl were witnesses of the accident, and Mrs. Frisbie was prostrated when she saw her husband fall. Last night she bitterly denounced the action of the spectators in forcing her husband to make the flight with a disabled machine.

Frisbie was well known among the aviators and was a participant in the recent meet in Chicago.

GLADDEN TO RETIRE

Ohio Preacher Deplores Church Members' Lack of Interest

Columbus, O., Sept. 2.—Dr. Washington Gladden, famed for his opposition to accepting John D. Rockefeller's money for missionary purposes and the originator of the term "tainted money," has written a letter to his congregation of the First Congregational church announcing his early retirement from active duties in connection with the church.

"I do not attribute the absence of church members in many cases to disaffection; in most cases I believe it is simply lack of interest," he says. "For some reason they have formed the habit of church neglect. Some of them devote their Sundays to pleasure—the ways of Sunday diversion have been multiplying of late. All this means that the interests of recreation have taken precedence, in the minds of many church members, of the interests of the higher life."

END OF ENGLISH STRIKES

Dissatisfied Men on Great Eastern Line Are Reinstated

London, Sept. 2.—Numerous small strikes, the aftermath of the recent upheaval, have been amicably settled. The most serious of these, which threatened to lead to a renewal of the general railway strike, arose on the Great Eastern line, owing to the company's failure to reinstate the men in the positions they held prior to the recent strike. A settlement has been reached, the company agreeing to reinstate the men.

The consequences of the national strike are now seen in the heavy decreases in the traffic returns of all the lines concerned. The losses are almost certain to lead to reduced dividends.

The yacht is due at Islesboro this morning, and the president and his party will spend today and Sunday as the guests of Mrs. Taft's sister, Mrs. Laughlin, at her villa at Islesboro.

Pinchot Goes to Alaska

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 2.—Gifford Pinchot and Senator Poindexter arrived here en route to Alaska to investigate conservation problems. They sailed for Cordova last night.

SOPWITH WINS

course, went higher and higher until they had reached a dizzy height and seemed to be but little specks in the air.

Then came the final exhibition flying, which closed the afternoon with several of the biplanes in the air at one time. An afternoon of exceptional flying was brought to a close.

Through the kindness of the management, the members ofthe City Council were present with their ladies as guests ofthe afternoon and it is safe to say that they came away with the flying fever.

Boston, Sept. 2.—Tom Sopwith, the smiling Britisher, captured the $1500 prize in the flight to Boston light yesterday afternoon, his official time over the course of 33 miles being 31 minutes 32 seconds. Sopwith bettered the time of Grahame-White, who won the race last year, by nearly three minutes. White's time was 34 minutes 1 1-5 seconds

Earle Ovington, in his seventy horse power dragon flyer, was second. His time was 35 minutes 32 seconds.

Lincoln Beachey quit the race at the end of the first lap, having gone far out of his course in his return trip from the light.

Eugene Ely was forced to quit the race and came near dropping in the water. He was able, by skillful management of his biplane, to land in the soft ground at the edge of Moon island.

Grahame-White, who was heralded as the victor and who was the first to get away from the field, was disqualified. White failed to circle the field twice before starting for the light.

The flight of the aviators was spectacular to witness, Sopwith's flight in particular. The Englishman flew very close to the water and when rounding the light was scarcely twenty feet above the waves. Ovington preferred to fly at a height of 1000 feet.

Sopwith was the first man after Grahame-White to get away from the field. His time for the first lap—rounding the field twice, going to the light and return—was 15 minutes 49 seconds, as compared with 17 minutes 45 3-5 seconds for Ovington. The unofficial time of Grahame-White, although disqualified, was 13 minutes and 41 seconds, nearly two minutes less than Sopwith.

George Beachey furnished the thousands of spectators with much excitement when he left the field in quest of Ely, who was reported by Sopwith to be in the water. Thousands stood breathless and watched the airman soar over the water. In a few minutes he returned and announced that Ely had landed on Moon island and was uninjured. This announcement was greeted with tumultuous cheers.

The winner was Frank Coffyn, in a Wright biplane. Second place was won by Howard W. Gill, while third money was taken by Sopwith.

Coffyn's distance from the flag of landing was 50 7-10 feet. The prizes were $200, $150 and $50.

Shortly before the time for the start of the Boston light race, Lincoln Beachey held the spectators spellbound for a few moments by the most spectacular flying yet witnessed at the meet. Soaring swiftly to a height of about 1000 feet he began a series of aerial evolutions, the like of which never were seen at Squantum, spectators said. He swooped, darted down at sharp angles, cut figures eight and made daring spiral dips.

In the quick starting Sopwith won first place. His time in getting away from the ground was exactly 10 seconds. He won $300. Gill won second money and Coffyn third. Lincoln Beachey was left at the post, his engine refusing to start at the critical moment of the pistol shot.

Editor of Patriot:

Wollaston has always had the reputation of being the strong no-license ward of our city. Recently a report has been current that a large amount of intoxicates had been noticed in Ward 5. A certain citizen jealous of the good name of Wollaston started an investigation, evidence led to Winchrop avenue to the garden owned by N. G. Nickerson, our sleuth at once made a break to see if Nick was running a beer garden, judge his surprise to find it was not human beings but robins that had a jag on large numbers in various stages of intoxication were found and one so helpless he was easily captured. Hunting for the booze he found Nick's grapery the pride of the street, was being stripped by the birds, large quantities of grapes were broken by the birds and later fermenting made the worst kind of a drunk. Query, is Nick liable under the no-license act?

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

BRIEFS

The Sunday school of First church reopens on Sept. 10.

Peter M. Sullivan a well known local newspaper man, connected with the Herald staff, has returned from Woolwich, Maine, where he has been sojourning during the past two weeks.

It is not surprising with so many booths along Squantum street, that some of the proprietors should attempt to get an extra revenue by selling liquor. They take great chances, however, for it will take many bottles of beer to pay a fifty dollar fine.

There will not be much doing in Quincy, Labor day, outside of the aviation meet.

No session of the City Council Monday. The next meeting is scheduled for Sept. 11.

Open and interclub race of the Wollaston Yacht club this afternoon.

Services at the First church, which have been suspended during the summer months, will be resumed tomorrow.

It is reported that an analysis made of the coal at the High school, by the City of Boston expert for the coal company, finds the coal to be all right. When doctors disagree who shall decide.

On Labor day, 1889, G. Arthur Gray bought land on Botolph street and immediately built a house which he has occupied since Jan. 1, 1890. He has now sold his house and will locate in Randolph where he has bought the property of the late James H. Wales, which is part of the estate of the late Peter B. Wales. Mr. Gray is a man of sterling qualities and his cheery good nature will be missed by his many friends. The best wishes of a host of friends go with him and his family to their new home.

Local

Phillip Halvosa, of Upland road, has gone to Montpelier, Vermont, for a short stay.

Freeman Hyland of Upland road has gone to Winchester for a two weeks' vacation.

Ethel Mason of Dimmock street is at Bath, Maine, on her annual vacation.

Mrs. John J. Hearn and daughter Laura and Miss Jeanette B. Corcoran, return to Cambridge tomorrow, atfer a two weeks' stay with friends on Manet avenue, Houghs Neck.

Miss Hazel T. Greene of Manchester, N. H., is spending a two weeks' vacation with her cousin, Miss Carrie Wilder, on Hancock street.

Miss Jennie M. Tobin returned to Dedham, this morning, after having spent a fortnight with friends on Beale street.

Drs. John F. Welch and George M. Sheahan are the two local physicians on the medical staff at the aviation field. One of these two physicians is on duty at the field during the flying.

Mrs. Stephen Penniman, who has been the guest of her son, has gone to Winthrop, Me. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. James B. Pollock.

The unlimited free use of the telephone at the court room by anyone that desired, has been stopped, as the telephone is now on the measured service plan. It has been the custom of men, who had telephones in their own offices to use the court room instrument when calling out of town in order to save toll charges.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The many local fans who travelled to the American league grounds to witness the double header yesterday, were especially pleased to be afforded the opportunity to see Walter Lonergan in action. Walter was the idol of the Quincy fans last year, when he captained the Old Colony League "champions," and this year, when he played with Brockton, he created the same sensation.

The emergency for his call to the Red Sox infield came yetserday when Captain Wagner sustained an injury to his ankle, and ordered that his place be taken by the former Quincy star. Lonergan was quick to grasp the opportunity, and when he started to trot out to the second sack, he was accorded great applause by his many admirers.

When he came to the bat, he was again greeted by great shouts and if he can maintain his usual speed and endurance, he will also occupy the same position with the Boston fans, as he did at Quincy and Brockton. Although he failed to register a hit, his fielding was nothing short of marvellous, and he saved a run in the fourth inning of the second game by his sensational fielding.

Labor day promises to be a gala one in baseball circles, and the many games that are scheduled, give promise of many a warm contest.

With such weather as this prevailing a record breaking attendance should be noticeable at the Water street grounds this evening. Both Managers Joyce and Burton expect that the series which starts today, will be about the best ever.

A number of local boys have entered the athletic events scheduled at the various picnics, to be held Labor Day. It is too bad that a Labor day picnic is not being observed in Quincy this year, for it was certainly warranted, if we but judge the success that last year's athletic events met with at New Downer Landing.

All the local players, who have been performing in professional circles, will return home shortly after Labor day, and then you will see "Joe" Ford get busy to give us the real article of baseball.

The third and final game between the Quincy Council K. of C. and the Granite Conclave of Heptasophs, will be played on Saturday afternoon, September 9th, at Merrymount Park. The first game went to the Knights by a close score, while the Heptasphs took the second by forfeiture. The Heptasophs are out to turn the tables, and a warm game may be expected when the members ofthese two aggregations come together and cross bats.

Manager Higgins of South Quincy announces that his team has been considerably strengthened and can assure the fans, who travel to the Ward Three playground on the morning of the holiday, of an article of ball of the first class order.

GIRL HELD WITHOUT BAIL ON SERIOUS CHARGE

The case of Elizabeth Savoy, the 17 year old girl who was arrested at her home in Atlantic, July 1st on the charge of murdering her newly born child came up in court this morning for a hearing. When the case was called, the girl waived hearing in the lower court and was held without bail for the grand jury.

The girl came to Quincy from New Brunswick about a year ago and had been employed in the machine shop, making her home in Atlantic. It is alleged that he girl gave birth to a 14 pound boy on the morning o fJune 30 and that in her distraction she smothered it.

The girl denied to Medical Examiner Jones that the child had been deprived ofhis life, but it is claimed that she later admitted to Inspector Goodhue that she had smothered the child.

PICNIC OF SCOTTISH CLANS

ON LABOR DAY

The twenty-second annual picnic of the Order of Scottish Clans to be held at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, on Labor day promises to be the greatest event of the kind yet held by that organization.

The local fans in the "soccer" football games have something to look forward to. A five-a-side competition under association or "soccer" rules is to be played, first prize, gold medals, second prize, silver medals, the winners of first prize to hold the Dewar Challenge Shield for one year. Two Quincy teams are to compete, the Fore Rivers and MacGregors and the prevailing opinion is that the medals and shield will come to Quincy. Both local teams are playing a very fast game and have trained hard for the Labor day event and as there are seven teams entered to date, the "soccer" fans will get their money's worth.

A number of new events are on the program. A team race between teams from the A. O. H. and O. S. C. for a cash prize of $40.

Clansman Walter Scott of New York City has presented gold medals to be competed for.

The ten mile race will be a great contest, thirty-two of the best runners ners at this distance in this country and Europe have already entered and this number will be added to on Labor day.

The extra large money prizes in this event has brought out the largest list of runners ever entered forthis race.

The Scots of Quincy will practically attend in a body and no doubt will enjoy the games and dances of their native land and it goes without question that the shrill scream of the bagpipes will awaken sleeping memories oftheir native land.

FAVORS BOWLES AS DOCK BOARD HEAD

Rear Admiral Bowles, retired, of the Fore River Works, is Mayor Fitzgerald's candidate for head of the new port of Boston Board.

"If he can be persuaded to take the place ,and if it is wise to take a man from the head of one of our big institutions, then he would be my selection," the mayor said.

"I feel," said the mayor, "that in selecting a man, the whole world has none too good for the place, and I am in favor of going any distance to find one."

The mayor said he most certainly had not indorsed Mr. Peabody of the Park Commission fo rthe place, and that the story he had was wrong.

Yesterday George S. Smith, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who has been spoken of very highly for the position, sent a notice to the newspapers that he was not a candidate for the position. "Realizing the tremendous importance of the work to be entered into," he wrote. "I am deeply interested that the right man be found, and I am sure he will be."

RAID STAND AT SQUANTUM

Beverage Sold Closely Resembled Real Beer

QUANTITY TAKEN

While the crowds in the aviation field were watching the flyers, Friday afternoon, Chief Burrell and some of his blue coats were busy making a raid on one of the numerous booths, opposite the entrance to the field, on Squantum street. The proprietor Charles Gray of Boston, had been heard crying out cool beer and some of the officers made purchases. Those who sampled it said that while it was not apparantly up to full strength, it evidently contained more than three percent of alcohol.

It is also alleged that the proprietor was heard to say to the crowd that he would have a better quality tomorrow, Saturday. Then the watching officers saw a team back up to the stand and unload a large number of cases.

A few minutes later, Chief Burrell, Inspector Goodhue, Officers Thorne, Doran and Cahill and Chief Pierce of Milton, made a raid on the place. They seized 23 cases of the beer and two cases of empty bottles.

Gray put up the claim to the police, that the beer contained but one percent and that he had a right to sell it.

Chief Burrell says that he will have the beer analyzed and the result of the analysis will depend whether the proprietor will be prosecuted or not.

ARAWAK WON TWO RACES

Light Breeze in Morning, Boats Given Short Course

FINAL RACE TODAY

The Arawak scored two wins, Friday, in the series of races for the cabin cat boats, held under the auspices of the Boston Yacht club for the championship of the Atlantic coast.

In the morning race, the wind was light from the northwest and the boats were given a short course, which with the almost constantly shifting air was plenty long enough.

The Dolly III champion cat boat of 1909, had the start, with the remainder of the boats well bunched astern of her. She held this lead until the last leg, a beat, when the Dartwell, Arawak and Emeline passed her in order. The Dartwell finished first with the Arawak only four seconds astern. This gave the race to the Arawak, which was sailed by Capt. Nickerson, on corrected time.

In the afternoon there was a southwest breeze and the boats were sent over a 9.1-2 mile course. The I. O. U. led the fleet in crossing the line at the finish, but lost on time allowance to the Arawak. The Arawak and Dartwell got into a little mixup at Strawberry hill and each entered a protest for foul.

The final race in the series of six was sailed this morning. The summary of Fridays two races:

OVINGTON THE WINNER IN CROSS COUNTRY RACE

Stone and Atwood Forced to Land---Others Refused to Enter Race Saying It Was Too Hazardous---Winner Given Great Ovation on Aviation Field

All roads led to Squantum, Monday, and never was there such a crowd gathered in the city. People came from far and wide, and from early in the forenoon until late at night there was a constant stream of automobiles, loaded electric cars and people on foot, passing to and from Atlantic, where the aviation stunts were in progress. Inside the field, the crowd excelled in number the best day a year ago. The grand stand was packed to suffocation. The fifty cents seats were all taken, and there was another big crowd in the stand up space. The $2 and $10 spaces in the auto park were all occupied.

Outside the field, as far as the eye could reach, there was a mass of humanity. All along Squantum street, both sides were lined with people and they even crowded into the marsh half way up to the field being held in check by mounted cavalry officers Along the boulevard and in every vantage point along the Neponset water front, there was another crowd. Field glasses showed the house tops to contain their full complement of sight seers, while in the river were hundreds of sail and power boats, many of which were gaily decorated. It was a sight never to be forgotten.

The street cars did an enormous business and for once, the several hundred public carriages that ran between the Atlantic depot and the field made a little money. The New Haven ran special trains from Boston to Atlantic every twenty minutes and brought thousands.

As for automobiles they were there without number. All along the line, the free parking places provided by the park commissioners, being crowded.

As the fun of the day started in the morning, with the Boston Globe cross country flight, many were on hand, so that when noon came, they began to get hungry and this made good business for the lunch stands. Although it was an enormous crowd, it was an orderly one and the police had but little to do other than enjoy the flying.

Early in the afternoon, a horse attached to a buggy, owned and driven by D. A. Meister of Watertown ran away on Squantum street. The horse became frightened and went over the side of the street into the swamp, throwing both Mr. and Mrs. Meister, but fortunately not injuring them. Mounted Officer Phillips and others went to the rescue but it was with some difficulty that the horse was taken out.

Another excitement came at 6.40, when an alarm was sounded from box 435. This is a special box that had been cut into the circuit near the aviation field. In order to give Lieut. Millen a beacon, by which he could find the aviation field, an immense bonfire had been built near the Neponset end of the field. A lot of old rubbish was used for this fire and it made a bright illumination. Some one thinking that it was a fire in the grand stand, rang in an alarm. It gave the department a long run, and their services were not needed.

The great problem of the day came in getting the crowds home. Many wise ones started in good season, realizing what a crush there would be later. Thousands of others, however, considered themselves "good sports" and remained to see the finish. The result was what might have been expected. Everybody made a rush for the cars and other conveyances which were quickly loaded to their full capacity. It was impossible to take all at one time and several trips were required, so that it was late when the crowd all got away.

The day was an ideal one for flying. There was little wind and no signs of rain, and the thousands saw some good flying during the afternoon. Grahame-White went up in several of the events in his powerful monoplane, while Beatty in a Wright biplane and Ely in a Burgess biplane, furnished plenty of amusement.

During one of the contests, both Beatty and Ely were in the air at the same time on a speed trial and it was exciting to see how Ely would gain lap after lap on Beatty the engine on his plane being more powerful. In addition to the figure eight speed contests during the afternoon, there was bomb throwing and other stunts, so that the crowd was not given an opportunity to get impatient. The progress of Ovington and Lieut. Millen on their flight was frequently announced through the megaphone. Shortly after 5 o'clock Atwood who had succeeded in getting his engine repaired, flew back to the field from Medford

FESTIVAL AND ILLUMINATION

Adams Shore and Post Island Celebrate In Glorious Manner

BOATS DECORATED

The annual festival and illumination of Adams Shore and Post Island was held Monday and a grand time it proved to be. During the morning and afternoon there were a series of field sports,during which the summer residents played ball and did other athletic stunts to such an extent that many of them are sore today.

In the early evening there was a general illumination of the cottages along the shore front. It looked very pretty when viewed from the water resembling a continuous line of light.

Shortly after dark came the annual illuminated parade of the Adams Shore yacht club. The fleet made up into two divisions, paraded up and down the water front, each line being drawn by a power boat. All of the boats were gaily decorated with Japanese lanterns making a pretty sight.

After the parade, there was a pleasing entertainment on the piazza of one of the cottages furnished by local talent. It was pronounced excellent.

Everybody along the shore front kept open house during the day and evening and many guests were entertained.

QUINCY MAN ASSAULTED IN BOSTON

A Boston paper reports that a man giving the name of Max Paronich, aged 24 years, of 3 Newcomb square, Quincy, was assaulted on the corner of Hanover and Elm streets, Boston, early Sunday morning and beaten about the head. The men who assaulted him, were three in number and ran away on hearing someone approaching. Paronich was taken to the Relief hospital, where a scalp wound was dressed and he was later sent home. The police could not find any trace of his assailants.

LOST CHILD CALL.

The lost child call at 11.45 Monday night, followed by one round from Box 38, was to summons searchers to hunt for John Emilie, the 6 year old son of John Emilie, of 26 Liberty street, who had been missing since 7 o'clock. The little fellow was found asleep in the back yard.

BOY INJURED BY AUTOMOBILE

Son of Officer Dhooge Is Knocked Down and Crushed

MAY RECOVER

Daniel, the four year old son of Officer Dhooge, was knocked down by an automobile in front of his home on Glencoe place, Sunday evening, and seriously injured. The automobile was owned and operated by William H. McKenna, Jr., of 1551 Centre road, Roslindale. The injured boy was taken to the office of Dr. Sheahan, where it was found that his left side had been crushed and that he had been severely bruised. He was also suffering severely from the shock. After he had been revived, he was rushed to the City Hospital. Here Dr. Reardon found that the boy had suffered the fracture of several ribs on his left side, in addition to a severe shaking up. It is thought that he will recover, unless internal injuries develop.

IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

The Quincy friends of Mrs. F. C. Granger of Randolph will be sorry to learn that she was in a head-on automobile collison on Saturday afternoon. It is to be particularly regretted as Mrs. Granger has been ill and confined to her home for about a year.

Dr. and Mrs. Granger in their runabout were coming down the hill of Randolph avenue and the big touring car of Horace R. Page was proceeding along Center street. The roads were filled with automobiles and pedestrians following aviator Beachey in his flight from the Squantum aviation field to the Blue Hills and return. Both sides of both streets are shaded by a thick growth of trees and it was impossible for the operators of the two cars to see each other approaching the corner.

The runabout was knocked 25 feet, Mrs. Granger being thrown from her car and Mrs. Page from hers. Both women were badly shaken up and bruised and lacerated. Mrs. Granger was taken into the house of Cemetery Commissioner Horner and treated by her husband, who, although injured, kept upon his feet because of the fear for the condition of his wife. She was removed to her home by friends in another automobile. The car was left at a garage for repairs.

AUTO HITS MOTOR CYCLE

Man From So. Boston Has Narrow Escape on Adams St.

NO BONES BROKEN

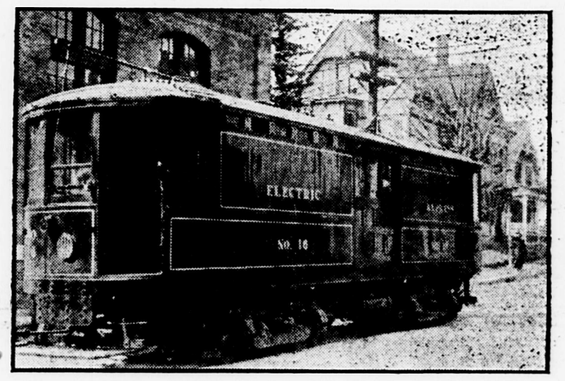

George Lee, of 651 East Fourth Street, South Boston, while riding a motor cycle on Adams street, near the Milton line, Sunday, collided with an automobile owned by William L. Cook of 221 Atlantic street, Quincy. The motor cycle was considerably damaged and Mr. Lee badly shaken up. The police ambulance was summoned, but by the time it had arrived, the injured man had gone to his home in an automobile. Lee said that he was on his way home and was proceeding along Adams street, on the right hand side. He saw an automobile coming toward him, but did not see the second machine that was running in back of the first car. The second car crossed over to turn into Beale street and before he had time to turn out, the mud guard of the auto struck him and he was thrown over with considerable force. A physician who was passing, gave him emergency treatment and he was taken home. His right arm and side were bruised, but fortunately no bones were broken.

ELECTRIC EXPRESS SERVICE STARTS NEXT MONDAY

Will Connect 141 Shipping Points in Mass., R. I. and Conn. Connects With New York

Attractive New Warehouse Constructed In Quincy

Commencing next Monday, the Bay State Street Ry. Co., will put into operation an extension of its electric express service which will bring into connection 141 shipping points in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut with freight connections to New York. This will come through the establishment of this service over the link between Brockton and Boston.

For the carrying on of this service, a new warehouse has been built at Neponset bridge by the side of the company's car barn, to which point the express cars will run. The Boston end of the service will be taken care of through arrangements made with the S. A. Freeman Co. The Boston office has been located at 34 and 35 India Wharf, which is conveniently situated with relation to the large wholesale and retail establishments of Boston.

An attractive new concrete warehouse has been constructed in Quincy and agencies have been established in Avon, Brookville, Holbrook, the Braintrees and Randolph.

The inauguration of the new service with the Boston connection marks a very important step in the development of this new method of express transportation, giving added facilities for shipping between the large territory to the south of Brockton, the Abingtons, Rockland and Plymouth and the great Boston district.

The electric express was started between Taunton and Providence April 4, 1906, with a few cars, makeshift terminals and connections with few points. Since then, however, the growth and expansion has been remarkably steady and rapid. New warehouses embodying the latest ideas in efficient construction have been built, more cars added extensions of service gradually made until it has come to be an established, necessary adjunct to the business life of the communities it serves.

Like all new propositions it met with more or less opposition at the start, but everywhere it has been in operation any length of time it has proven its value. Its service from the very nature of it has unusual features in the line of speed, frequency and general convenience which are possible in no other ways.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Welcome to the school teachers.

Little do those weather stained straw hats realize what is coming to them.

Aviator Atwood wonders why anyone ever yearned for seven league boots.

Dr. Wiley seems to be highly appreciated for the enemies he has made.

Chicago's postal bank leads all others in the amount of its deposits. Well money is not safe in many places in Chicago so you see why.

The man you see who bulges in so many places is a hay fever victim. The bulges are handkerchiefs in every pocket.

That the governors of twenty-three states favor uniform divorce laws may result in putting divorce in a straight jacket.

Woodrow Wilson says he is two kinds of Democrats. Some other Democrats have him beaten in that respect two or three score.

It's pretty safe to wager that the man who boasts that he has come back from his vacation with twenty or thirty dollars in his pocket never went.

THE LABOR DAY PARADES.

When you pick up a newspaper to read about Labor day, you find 20 columns about base ball and horse races, to a half column, crowded into some corner, of the serious discussion of labor problems for which the day was originally supposed to have been instituted. And yet there are other ways of reaching the labor problem than by oratory.

Farmer Corntassel observes the union organizations march down the city street with some disapproval. He has been heard unkindly to call the holiday "Loafers' day." A man of sense, he thinks, should get all the parading he wants as he strides after his work horses in the hay field.

And yet, even the sharpest critic of the labor unions should commend the spirit of craftsmanship suggested by the marching lines of this holiday. For this is an age when a host of people despise manual labor. When the blacksmith marches by in the Labor day line, rejoicing to tell the observing crowd that he is a blacksmith a little sermon on the dignity of labor has been preached. It is more eloquent than speechmaking.

Of course, if the philosopher with an aesthetic viewpoint had his way, he might dress up the parade rather differently. To him it may seem inappropriate that the boiler-makers should be rigged up in white shirts and trousers and shiny tall hats. This costume would soon become soiled in the process of making a boiler. He might more likely have them in their work-a-day clothes, which would give a more vivid picture of their rugged strength and herioc endurance.

But the boiler-maker has a wife and a sweetheart, and when these issue their commands for dress parade, when was the philosopher listened to?

The Labor day parades have an impressiveness of their own, as well as the more elaborate historical pageant, for history is being made in every workshop where a man puts his heart into making good tools and good garments.

Looking through a leading newspaper the other day, we found reports of four different strikes proceeding in different parts of the country. We were interested to search the files of the same newspaper to see what kind of a record labor was making 10 years ago. On just the same date of 1901, we found reports of 22 different strikes. Evidently the Labor day hosts are finding that diplomacy is a higher tump card than war.

HEAD OFFICERS WILL ATTEND.

Grand President P. J. Coyle and Grand Organizer F. J. Spooner of the Brotherhood of aRilroad Station Employes will attend the next meeting of the new Brockton union, to discuss the work of the organization and give such instructions as may be required. Its jurisdiction will extend as far as Quincy on the north, Bridgewater on the south and Whitman on the east, also west to tSoughton and including all these towns.

The union embraces station men, baggage men and other station employes also crossing tenders, freight handlers, etc. Employes at the Brockton, Campello and Montello stations have affiliated themselves with the new union. Permanent organization will be effected at the next meeting.

BABY WAS CHECKED TO SOUTH STATION

Great excitement prevailed in the vicinity of the Quincy depot late last evening when it was learned that an Italian, who had been visiting friends here, had lost his baby. It seems that the visitor was about to return to Boston on the 10.07 train. He had a baby carriage with him and as he did not desire to carry it in the train, he made arrangements to have it checked to Boston.

The carriage was checked and the Italian placed the baby in it, in order that he might procure his traveling ticket. In the meantime, the 10.04 train pulled in and Billy Shores, the baggage master, thinking that the child and carriage had been tagged, for that train, placed them on the baggage car. The Italian returned as the train was pulling out, and quickly missed his baby and carriage. His anxiety was finally appeased when he was informed that he could find the baby and carriage in the South station. He went to Boston on the train and was greatly pleased to find the baby and carriage waiting for him.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

BRIEFS

Henry O. Studley has returned, after a three weeks visit to his brother at So. Akeport, N. H.

John T. Cain of Standish avenue went Friday to Goffs Falls, New Hampshire, for a week's outing.

St. John's parochial school, began its second year this morning, with one more grade than last year, making seven in all.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hamilton of Elm avenue sailed Saturday on the "Winnifredian" for England. They are returning about the middle of October.

Half a dozen boats of the Wollaston yacht club, left the club house Sunday, for the annual club run to Marblehead. The boats remained at Marblehead over labor day.

After spending three weeks in New Hampshire with her sister Mrs. Whitney, Mrs. Charles H. Porter goes on Wednesday to visit her son Dr. Charles H. Porter at 321 Union street, Springfield, Mass.

Elsie Smart the five-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Smart of Brooks avenue who has been in the Brighton hospital for five months received many birthday presents Saturday from her friend. It is expected she will be able to leave the hospital in about ten days.

GOLD WATCHES TO WINNERS OF THIS CONTEST

Every boy and girl should have a watch, so we are going to help some of the children of Quincy and vicinity, by giving away six handsome gold watches to the little folks, who secure the highest number of votes by November 4, 1911.

There will be three watches to the three boys, and three watches to the three girls who poll the most votes making six watches in all.

If you want to show the grown-ups how you would gather votes if you were in politics, then get busy and hustle. Ask your relatives, and friends and their relatives and friends to help you by saving the ballots from the Quincy Daily Ledger and voting their S. & H. Green Stamps for you.

No doubt you could canvass the houses in your neighborhood for votes and increase the chance of your election to one of these six watches. Start today, for every day you delay it means votes lost to you.

Oh! yes we must tell you about the watches they are worth working for. You can see them at the Sperry & Hutchinson Co., Green Stamp parlor in the Quincy Department store, Hancock street. They will have to be seen to be appreciated. You are welcome to go there and ask the clerk in charge to show you the gold watches with Elgin movements to be given away to the boys and girls who receive the greatest number of votes during the S. & H. Hustlers watch contest.

We want to advise you that all ballots and green stamps must be voted at the S. & H. premium parlor located at the Quincy Department store only. Do not send them to the Quincy Daily Ledger office. Keep the ballots flat do not roll or fold them.

Each contestant's name will be published once a week, showing the number of votes they have secured, therefore, it is up to you, to keep hustling and not allow others to get ahead of you. Write your full name and address on each ballot, then there will be no mistake in recording your vote, be you boy or girl.

HARPOON WON THE SERIES

Final Race Sailed at Marblehead on Sunday

ELLEN SECOND

The Harpoon, winner of the series of races for the Quincy yacht club challenge cup, sailed off Quincy last month, won the series of three special races for sonder boats, the last of which was sailed off Marblehead, Sunday. The races were originally planned for a match between Burgess and Boardman designed boats. The Harpoon, Beatrice and Demon represented the Boardman boats and the Badger, Ellen and Panther the Burgess boats. The prize was a silver cup subscribed for by C. F. Adams 2d, C. P. Curtis and C. H. W. Foster. As several other boats desired to enter the series it was decided that the cup should go to the boat making the best showing, so that the Harpoon with two firsts and one second got the cup.

The first race was sailed Saturday morning over a short course and the Ellen won with Harpoon second. In the race Saturday afternoon the Harpoon won with the Demon second. The last of the series was sailed Sunday and was won by the Harpoon with the Ellen second.

A BIT OF ADVICE

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Quincy residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Quincy citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch st, Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly an effective kidney medicine. They fixed me up in good shape some years ago, and since then I have had no kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By
FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

"That I can't measure up to your requirements of the perfect man? Yes, it is a thousand pities," he agreed.

"No; that isn't precisely what I meant. The pity is that I seem to you to be unable to appreciate your many excellencies and your—constancy."

"I think you were born to torment me," he rejoined gloomily. "Why did you come out here with your father? You must have known that I was here."

"Not from any line you have ever written," she retorted. "Alicia Ford told me; otherwise I shouldn't have known."

"Still you came. Why? Were you curious?"

"Why should I be curious, and what about—the Red desert? I've seen deserts before."

"I thought you might be curious to know what disposition the Red desert was making of such a failure as I am," he said evenly. "I can forgive that more easily than I can forgive your bringing of the other man along to be an onlooker."

"Herbert, you mean? He is a good boy, a nice boy and perfectly harmless. You'll like him immensely when you come to know him better."

"You like him?" he queried.

"How can you ask when you have just called him 'the other man?'"

Lidgerwood turned in his chair and faced her squarely.

"Eleanor, I had my punishment over a year ago, and I have been hoping you would let it suffice. It was hard enough to lose you without being compelled to stand by and see another man win you. Can't you understand that?"

She did not answer him. Instead she whipped aside from that phase of the subject to ask a question of her own.

"Whatever made you come out here, Howard?"

"To the superintendency of the Red Butte Western? You did."

"Ridiculous!"

"It is true."

"Prove it, if you can, but you can't."

"I am proving it day by day, or trying to. I didn't want to come, but you drove me to it."

"I decline to take any such hideous responsibility," she laughed lightly, and then, with calculated malice: "Howard, if you were only as brave as you are clever! Why can't you be a man and strike back now and then?"

"Strike back at the woman I love? I'm not quite down to that, I hope, even if I was once too cowardly to strike for her."

"Always that! Why won't you let me forget?"

"Because you must not forget. Listen. Two weeks ago—only two weeks ago—one of the Angels—er—peacemakers stood up in his place and shot at me. What I did made me understand that I had gained nothing in a year."

"Shot at you?" she echoed, and now he might have discovered a note of real concern in her tone if his ear had been attuned to hear it. "Tell me about it. Who was it? And why did he shoot at you?"

His answer seemed to be indirection itself.

"How long do you expect to stay in Angels and its vicinity?" he asked.

"I don't know. This is partly a pleasure trip for us younger folk. Father was coming out alone, and I—that is, mamma decided to come and make a car party of it. We may stay two or three weeks if the others wish it. But you haven't answered me. I want to know who the man was and why he shot at you."

"Exactly, and you have answered yourself. If you stay two weeks or two days in Angels you will doubtless hear all you care to about my troubles. When the town isn't talking about what it is going to do to me it is gossiping about the dramatic arrest of my would be assassin."

"You are most provoking!" she declared. "Did you make the arrest?"

"Don't shame me needlessly. Of course I didn't. One of our locomotive engineers, a man whom I had discharged for drunkenness, was the hero. It was a most daring thing." And he told her Judson's story.

Miss Eleanor did not need to vocalize her approval of Judson; the dark eyes were alight with excitement.

"How fine!" she applauded. "Of course after that you took Mr. Judson back into the railway service?"

"Indeed I did nothing of the sort, nor shall I until he demonstrates that he means what he says about letting the whisky alone."

"Until he demonstrates!' Don't be so cold blooded, Howard! Possibly he saved your life."

"Quite probably. But that has nothing to do with his reinstatement as an engineer of passenger trains. It would be much better for Rufford to kill me than for me to let Judson have the chance to kill a trainload of innocent people."

"And yet a few moment ago you called yourself a coward, cousin mine. Could you really face such an alternative without flinching?"

"It doesn't appeal to me as a question involving any special degree of courage," he said slowly. "I am a great coward, Eleanor, not a little one, I hope."

"It doesn't appeal to you?" she said. "And I have been calling you— But would you do it, Howard?"

He smiled at her sudden earnestness.

"How generous your heart is, Eleanor, when you let it speak for itself! If you will promise not to let it change your opinion of me—you shouldn't change it, you know, for I am the same man whom you held up to scorn the day we parted—if you will promise I'll tell you that for weeks I have gone about with my life in my hands, knowing it. It hasn't required any great amount of courage. It merely comes along in the line of my plain duty to the company. It's one of the things I draw my salary for."

"You haven't told me why this desperado wanted to kill you—why you are in such a deep sea of trouble out here, Howard," she reminded him.

"No. It is a long story, and it would bore you if I had time to tell it. And I haven't time, because that is Williams' whistle for the Angels yard."

He had risen and was helping his companion to her feet when Mrs. Brewster came to the car door to say:

"Oh, you are out here, are you, Howard? I was looking for you to let you know that we dine in the Nadia at 7. If your duties will permit"—

Lidgerwood's refusal was apologetic, but firm.

"I am very sorry, Cousin Jessica," he protested. "But I left a deskful of stuff when I ran away to the wreck this morning, and really I'm afraid I shall have to beg off."

"Oh, don't be so dreadfully formal!" said the president's wife impatiently. "You are a member of the family, and all you have to do is to say bluntly that you can't come and then come whenever you can while we are here. You will come to us whenever you can, Howard; that is understood," she said. And so the social matter rested.

Lidgerwood was half way down the platform of the Crow's Nest, heading for his office and the neglected desk, when Williams' engine came backing through one of the yard tracks on its way to the roundhouse. At the moment of its passing, a little man with his cap pulled over his eyes dropped from the gangway step and lounged across to the headquarters building.

It was Judson, and, having seen him last toiling away man fashion at the wreck in the Crosswater Hills, Lidgerwood hailed him.

"HELLO, JUDSON! HOW DID YOU GET HERE?"

"Hello, Judson! How did you get here? I thought you were doing a turn with McCloskey."

The small man's grin was ferocious.

"I was, but Mac said he didn't have any further use for me—said I was too much of a runt to be liftin' and pullin' along with growed up men. I came down with Williams on the 66."

Lidgerwood turned away. He remembered his reluctant consent to McCloskey's proposal touching the espial upon Hallock and was sorry he had given it. But it was too late to recall it now.

PROHIBITION THE ISSUE

Will Determine Smith's Successor as Governor of Georgia

Atlanta, Sept. 5.—Governor Hoke Smith will resign as governor between Nov. 1 and 15 and be ready to assume his duties as United States senator when congress convenes. The governor will give thirty days' notice to enable the state executive committee to arrange for a primary to choose his successor.

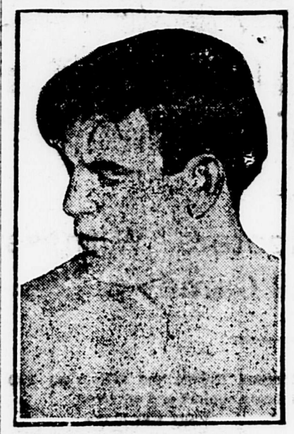

Two candidates for the governorship already are in the field and prohibition will be one of the vital issues. Judge R. B. Russell of Jackson is seeking the nomination on a straight local option platform. The other candidate is J. P. Brown, former state treasurer.

American Easily Proves His Superiority Over Heavier Antagonist—Crotch Hold Wins First Fall, While the Inevitable Comes to Pass When Toe Hold Is Gained In Second—Gotch Confident All the Way

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Frank A. Gotch, by defeating George Hackenschmidt at the American league park in Chicago yesterday, won the title of catch-as-catch-can wrestling champion of the world. It took Gotch less than twenty minutes to win the match. He won the first fall in 13 minutes 18 1-5 seconds., and the second fall in 5 minutes 32 1-5 seconds. The conditions were the best two in three falls. There was a purse of $30,000, and $20,000 of this goes to Gotch and $10,000 to Hackenschmidt. The gate receipts were $80,000. Gotch will receive 50 percent of the moving picture profits. The world champion was born in Humboldt, Ia., April 27, 1878. His opponent was born in Dorpat, Russia, Aug. 2, 1877.

Scarcely a minute was wasted in preliminaries. The timekeeper gave the signal, the trainers scrambled through the ropes and the two giants were at each other.

PRINCESS BECOMES BRIDE

Daughter of King of Servia Is Wedded to Russian Nobleman

St. Petersburg, Sept. 5.—Prince John Constantinovitch and Princess Helena, daughter of King Peter of Servia, were married in the chapel of the big palace at Peterhoff. The ceremony, only in minor details, was inferior to full grand ducal splendor.

Empress Alexandra was able to participate only at the robing of the bride, which occurred before the historic mirror, where all the brides of the imperial family have been robed since the day of Empress Anna Ivanovna. The bride wore an ancient Russian silver brocade and the historic veil of the Karagcorgevitch family.

New York, Sept. 5.—What is believed to be a record in the number of cabin passengers arriving on trans-Atlantic steamships at this port in one day was established when five liners from European ports entered the harbor with 4279 first and second class passengers on board.

The liners were the Adriatic, the Rotterdam, the Caledonia, the Lapland and the Cleveland. Of the total number of passengers, the Rotterdam brought 1080, the Adriatic 932 and the Cleveland 920.

Ankle Broken In Attempting to Avert a Serious Accident

Springfield, Ills., Sept. 5.—In an attempt to prevent a collision between his automobile and a two-seated conveyance Governor Deneen was seriously injured when he fell, breaking both bones of his left ankle.

The governor, seeing that a collision was unavoidable, sprang on the running board of the machine in which he was riding to grasp the bridle of the horses. He fell with his left leg doubled under him.

OVINGTON THE WINNER

and received a great ovation as he landed. The last event of the afternoon was rifle shooting by a United States army man while flying in a biplane.

Ovington won the Boston Globe prize of $10,000 offered for the best flight in a monoplane, and Milling won the $5000 prize offered by the Harvard-Boston Aeronautical society for the best flight in a biplane.

Ovington's actual flying time was 3 hours 6 minutes 22 1-5 seconds. Milling was in the air 5 hours 22 minutes 37 seconds.

With perfect weather for flying and not an accident to mar the fifth day of the Harvard-Boston aero meet, 25,000 people saw at the Atlantic aerodrome the greatest day of aviation in New England.

When in the growing dusk Milling dropped out of the twilight sky it was a wonderful spectacle that those who saw it will never forget. A great bonfire blazing on the field, rockets fired 500 feet in the air at two minute intervals and the darting searchlights of the shipping in the bay served as beacons to guide the daring officer to his haven.

From an altitude of 2000 feet he glided down across the face of the moon, circled once around the pylons and made a perfect landing on the dusky field that would have won a prize in an accuracy contest.

An hour before Ovington's monoplane broke through the clouds two miles away and a tremendous cheer burst from 25,000 throats, reverberating from the surrounding hills with the deafening din of honking automobile horns and the shrieking whistles of the craft along the shore. Growing in volume as the man-built bird volplaned down from a great height with powerful engine cut off, the roar of welcome drowned out the strains of the band playing "The Star Spangled Banner" in a great paean of victory.

Ovington was snatched from the cockpit of the "Dragon Fly" by Grahame-White, the English aviator, Eugene Ely and George Beatty, all of whom refused to enter the interstate race on the ground that it was too hazardous, and was borne in triumph about the field before the madly cheering thousands.

No less enthusiastic was the reception accorded Milling when he arrived safely back on the aviation field. He made his first flight but a few months ago.

Before Milling could extricate himself from the entangling wires and levers Ovington sprinted across the field and grabbed the other.

"Hold on, there!" he shouted; "your feet shall not touch the ground."

G. S. Curtis of the company that built the biplane and half a dozen others dragged the officer out of his seat and, not satisfied with carrying him as was Ovington, they ran with him up and down the field for five minutes while the band played "Hail the Conquering Hero," and hundreds crowded about to cheer at the tops of their voices and hurl their hats high in the air.

Arthur Stone, who started in a Queen monoplane as Ovington's competitor, was obliged to land on the Medford marshes because of a leak in his gasolene tank.

Harry N. Atwood started with his father as a passenger and dropped out of the race. Atwood said his engine did not have sufficient power, and he decided it would be foolish to keep on.

BEACHEY WHOLE SHOW

Lincoln Beachey was the whole show at the aviation field Saturday and but for him the crowd of 20,000 would have had a small show for their money. The wind was blowing all of twenty miles an hour and most of the aviators did not seem inclined to go up. Beachey, Ovington, Atwood and Lieut. Miller of the U. S. army were the only ones in the air, although Ely who landed on Moon island Friday, flew into the field shortly before 3 o'clock but did not fly afterward.

The flying of Beachey was remarkable. He did the figure eight stunt and then started on the cross country flight to the Blue Hills, in the teeth of a twenty mile breeze. It took him fifteen minutes to make the outward flight but he came home in less than five, his speed on the homeward trip being at the rate of two miles a minute.

Then he started for the flight to the light and while he did not break the record set by Sophwith, Friday, he made good time considering the wind. Ovington also made the light flight in his monoplane, but his time was not as good as that of Beachey.

Aside from these events, Lieut. Miller went up in the bomb dropping contest and was disqualified for flying too low, although low he did not make make a very good record. Then Atwood went up for the same contest and the very first bomb he dropped hit the edge of the flag. It was a signal for an enthusiastic outburst of applause.

As a result of Saturdays flying Beachey won $2,900, Atwood $150 and Lieut. Miller $16.

ELECTRIC EXPRESS SERVICE

While it has offered new facilities to all shippers, the service has brought great advantages to the shipper whose location is distant from the railroads but near the trolleys, and particularly the handlers of produce and perishable goods. It has been of much assistance in the establishment of new industries in the sections where it has operated. Interesting in this way is the possibility of quick shipment it has brought to the infant peach industry recently sprung up in Portsmouth, R. I., and Somerset, Mass. Hundreds of baskets of peaches from these orchards are being handled daily by this method throughout this territory and are being delivered within a few hours of the time they are picked. This is but one instance of many where cost is saved to the shipper while the consumer receives the article in better condition at a less price.

At the start it is planned to run four trips a day between Boston and the principal points south, which will be increased as the business demands it.

HAS RADICAL IDEAS ON PRISON REFORM

Foss Intends to Advance Them In Fall Campaign

Boston, Sept. 5.—Governor Foss will make the reform of the prisons in this state one of the big features of the fall campaign. He promises to advance some very radical ideas on this subject when he takes the stump.

The governor said: "In my inaugural address (he already regards his re-election as assured) I will outline a plan for the revolutionizing of the conditions in Massachusetts prisons. I have pronounced ideas on the subject.

"There are hundreds of so called criminals in the prisons who may be cured just as people in hospitals are cured of disease.

"Only a very small number of the men in prison are habitual criminals. Some of my political opponents are attempting to picture me as opening the doors of the prisons. As a matter of fact I have very decided ideas on the protection of the public from the habitual criminal."

HEAVY VOTE WILL BE CAST

Closing Week of Prohibition Campaign In Pine Tree State

Portland, Me., Sept. 5.—The forces for and against constitutional prohibition in Maine have entered on the closing week of the campaign and activity on both sides is even more marked.

The prohibitionists will continue their meetings with their corps of speakers from outside the state, augmented by ex-Governor Glenn of North Carolina and Congressman Hobson of Alabama.

The repeal movement workers will adhere to their original plan of the distribution of a large amount of literature rather than public meetings.

The city and town registration boards report that there has been a considerably larger registration in most places than there was for the state election a year ago. Then it was larger than it had been for years.

The increased registration is taken to indicate the vote next Monday will probably be larger than on any state election in recent years.

Mexico City, Sept. 5.—Stopped, and forcibly robbed of 3000 pesos by a mob of Maderists in the principal thoroughfare of the caiptal, Bernardo Reyes, candidate for the presidency in opposition to Francisco I. Madero, was forcedt o abandon an effort to address his constituents and to run the gauntlet of a jeering crowd upon whom the police had received orders not to fire except as a last resort.

Repeatedly the police charged the turbulent clement, however, and the records for the Red Cross, the White Cross and the commissaries account for forty-three wounded as a result of the day's disorders.

The stoning of the aged general was the climax of a riot that began about 10 o'clock in the morning and lasted until late at night.

BRIEFS

Wollaston Masonic lodge commences its regular communications tonight.

David White of Elm street left for New York Saturday to spend a two weeks' vacation.

Saturday's large edition of the Ledger was all exhausted and the demand was big.

James Parker of Upland road leaves this week for Atlantic City, to observe his annual vacation.

Francis J. Sweeney of Main street has resumed work after having made an extensive tour through Maine.

Paul Avery and Arthur Dilley, both well known in local circles, are spending their vacation at Portland, Maine.

The City Council committee on Fire Department will meet on Wednesday evening and the Finance Committee Friday evening.

Miss Priscilla Townsend has retuned to Eastport, Maine, after having spent two weeks' with her uncle, Charles W. Hanscom of Upland road.

Considering the large crowds in Atlantic during the aviation week, it is something remarkable that up to this morning, not one case of pocket picking had been reported. Lieut. McKay and Inspector Goodhue were on duty at the Atlantic depot every day on the lookout for dips, but found none.

Within the last week there have been three animals killed with glanders in West Quincy, one at Braintree Five Corners and one at East Weymouth. Dr. Abele urges those living about West Quincy depot district especially, to either water their horses at home or use a pail when on the road.

SWAMP MOHAWKS.

The Mohawks were no match for the strong Child's team of Middleboro in the game played at Middleboro yesterday afternoon, and as a result were compelled to rest satisfied with a 14 to 2 defeat.

SOUTH QUINCY LOSES

Manager Higgins and his South Quincy combination journeyed to Middleboro Saturday where they were defeated in a most exciting contest by the home team of that town, the score being 3 to 1. The South Quincy pitcher did not show up until the fourth inning and Dackers, who sustained a broken finger, occupied the mound until that period.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS ARE OPENED

Regular Fall Term Starts Today After Summer Vacation

BUILDING CROWDED

All of the public schools of the city opened this morning, for the fall term, after several weeks' summer vacation. Long before the hour for opening hundreds of children with books under their arms were seen wending their way schoolward. Although it is the first day regular routine business was commenced. It is not expected however that much work will be accomplished.

As usual, the fall term finds many of the school buildings crowded and it is quite a problem to accommodate all of the pupils. The district in Wollaston, Fields and Atlantic is particularly crowded, but when the Montclair and new Wollaston buildings are completed early next year, the situation there will be considerably relieved.

The Washington, Lincoln, John Hancock and Willard school buildings are also crowded and considerable shifting will be necessary to accommodate the pupils.

A list of the teaching corps of the public schools has been received and will be published Wednesday.

STATION OUTING CLUB WINS

In one of the closest and most interesting games ever played on the ward four playground, the Station Outing club defeated the Strong Colonials, Monday by the close score of 4 to 3. It was a pitchers' contest throughout and the game was keenly watched by the fans of that section. Both teams were hot rivals and this in itself made the battle a royal one.

ST. JOHN'S "COMES BACK"

The St. John's A. A. baseball nine created a sensation Monday morning by wresting away a 7 to 6 victory from the strong St. Mary's team of West Quincy. Saunders was in the points for the runners and twirled effective ball. As on previous occasions McVey figured as the star by his sensational all round work. The game was played on the ward 2 playground.

BEATTIE ON THE STAND

Unfolds Details of His Relations With "Woman In the Case"

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept. 5.—Through six weary hours Henry C. Beattie, Jr., indicted for the murder of his wife, battled for his life yesterday. Evening shadows alone interrupted a vigorous cross examination by the commonwealth, Judge Watson ending the ordeal by adjourning court.

The prisoner sat for hours, his manner cool and collected, unfolding the sordid details of his relations with Beulah Binford, a 17-year-old girl, for whom the prosecution alleges Beattie killed his bride of a year.

But not alone the orgies of the four years before his marriage and those that preceded the homicide, but the gruesome tale of the attack by the highwayman, the wild ride to the Owen home with the lifeless, blood-covered body of his wife in the machine beside him was given to the jury in all its detail.

DRUNKEN MAN KILLS EMPLOYER WITH GUN

Slayer Wanted Money to Purchase More Intoxicants

Stamford, Conn., Sept. 5.—Because his employer, Patrick Fahey, refused to give him money to purchase intoxicants, Joseph Heider seized a shotgun at the Fahey barn in Springdale, a suburb of Stamford, and shot Fahey dead. Fahey was on a staircase in the barn when he was shot. Heider in the loft above fired down at him. The charge from the shotgun tore away the right side of Fahey's face and part of the neck.

Heider was under the influence of liquor, the police say. Fahey had discharged him for being intoxicated and the police say he fired the shot in revenge.

Fahey staggered down the steps and out of the barn. Twenty feet from the staircase he fell dead. His wife and children were running from the house toward him when he died. Heider staggered away and disappeared in the woods.

Fahey was in the marble and granite business and he also dealt in real estate. He was well to do.

ATLANTIC HOLDS CITY CHAMPIONSHIP TITLE

Nearly 1000 Rooters Witness Great Ball Game

Inspired with a spirit of sportsmanship, such as is wont to be found among the foremost players of the great national game, and enflamed with a desire to prove to the local "fandom" that the outcome of the contest the week previous had not desparaged them "Ted" Keohane's Atlantic ball tossers crossed bats with West Quincy on the Water street grounds, Monday morning and returned home in triumph with a 10 to 5 victory. A number of Atlantic rooters accompanied the winners, and they, together with the usual crowd that a West Quincy aggregation is accustomed to draw, caused the Old Colony league grounds to present a spectacle never before witnessed. The bleachers on both sides were filled, and the services of three policemen were required to keep the eager admirers of both teams from swarming onto the diamond.

The game had been awaited with keen intensity from Saturday and the fact that all lovers of the game realized that it was to be a contest for blood, is mainly responsible for the presence on the scene of 942 fans. The announcement that "Jack" Kolson was to pitch, also had a tendency to prove an attraction and when "play ball" was called at half past ten, Water street resembled a major league grounds.

It was the fourth game of the series arranged to decide the championship of the city. The third game resulted in a tie as a result of the umpire's ruling, and since many thought that Atlantic had won it was at first generally understood that the boys from the ward six section would not play off the rubber. Thanks to Manager Keohane, for matters were quickly settled and an amicable agreement was reached.

"Jack" Kolson was given a thunderous round of applause as he went to the box after West Quincy failed to tally, and it did seem as if it was merited, judging from the record he made this season. But things did not turn out as anticipated and the way the Atlantic boys started in was a conclusive proof that Kolson was to have an off day.

Keohane, the first man up was out, Rooney to J. Desmond, Armstrong was safe on an error, Hoyt hit for two base, scoring Armstrong from second, where he had stolen. Fay fanned Cunningham, singled advancing Hoyt, and both men came in on a hit by Kelley and by a poor throw from O'Connell Losers score on fluke.

In the first half of the second game, "Jack" Kolson, adopting a method rarely used in baseball, enabled the losers to come across the plate with a run. Rooney was on third base. Kolson at the time was sitting on the bench. McIntyre was about to throw the ball, when Kolson rushed forth to the vicinity of the umpire and declared a "balk" having been made. In the flurry McIntyre threw the ball on the ground to participate in a supposed argument, and in the interview Rooney scored a run. It was a clever trick on the part of Kolson, even though the run was not gained on merit

Kolson gives way to Knight

Atlantic did nothing in the second inning but secured results in the third In this inning Armstrong was the first man up. He made a hit which would have been good for three bases, were he not compelled to go back and touch second base. Hoyt responded with his second two bagger, and the West Quincy management ordered Knight to the mound, thereby compelling Kolson to retire in favor of another pitcher, for the first time this season.

Knight performed a little better than Kolson, and had he started the game, things might have been different. In the fourth inning he struck out the three men that faced him.

The winners made five runs in the fifth on five hits, an error and a base on balls, but after this, there was no further scoring on the Atlantic side.

In the seventh and eighth innings, West Quincy batted twice on each occassion. Hits were made by the Desmond boys, a base on balls and an error netted two runs in the seventh. In the eighth the last two runs of the game were annexed on hits by McTiernan Knight and O'Rourke, two fielders choices and an error.

Many star plays.

Although the game did not create much interest after the fifth inning, still it was featured by many star players. Murphy, the Boston college recruit, made a fine catch of a drive off Duggan in the second, and a running back handed catch contributed by Keohane in the third off J. Desmond proved to be one of the most sensational plays ever pulled off in local circles. Fay and Hoyt were also conspicious in the fielding and the effectiveness of McIntyre was noticeable throughout. He seemed to have the opposing batsmen at his mercy and managed to keep control of the situation during the entire game.

Knight likewise deserves credit for the number he struck out, and seemed to be in rare form. "Joe" Desmond at first, covered himself with honors, and Mulligan and Rooney likewise fielded well. Duggan seemed to be unable to catch Knight rightly, and his playing at times was not up to his usual standard.

Great excitement prevailed throughout the game and great credit is due the police officers for the efficient manner in which they handled the crowd.

As a result of this game Atlantic is now little holders of the city championship, and as the Makarias now seem to be the only contenders, it is probable that a series of games will be arranged between these two nines.

The summary:—

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Atlantic	3	0	2	0	5	0	0	0		—10
West Quincy	0	1	0	0	0	0	2	2	0	— 5

MAKARIA VICTORIOUS.

By obtaining six runs in the opening inning Makaria secured as many runs as did South Quincy in the entire game and as a result was readily pronounced a 9 to 6 victor. Errors figured largely in the defeat of the South Quincy team, for both pitchers twirled in rare form.

The score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Makaria	6	0	0	2	0	0	0	1	0	—9
South Quincy	1	0	0	2	0	1	0	0	2	—6

Batteries:—Penley and Troupe; Hawkes and Barry.

QUINCY Y. M. C. A. WON.

The local association took a trip to Newton on Saturday afternoon and succeeded in giving the home team its first defeat of the season. The game was fast and exciting and it was not until the 8th inning that Quincy was able to get the winning run across the plate.

Foster was up against Cady the crack Newton High school pitcher but he had no difficulty in carrying off the honors, he let down Newton with 6 hits and struck out 12 men, while the Quincy boys gathered 13 hits and 8 men fanned the air. Holmes' work behind the bat was very good while his throwing to bases was the feature of the game. "Russ' Bates played a star game at "short" and also led at the bat with a three-bagger and a double to his credit.

Score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Quincy	1	0	0	2	0	1	0	1	0	—5
Newton	2	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	—4

Batteries: Foster and Holmes, Cady and Brooks.

HELD IN $5000 BAIL

Arthur F. Whitcomb, the 12 year old son of Fred W. Whitcomb of Holbrook, was struck by an automobile at 6 o'clock Saturday night at Holbrook and killed. The car was owned and driven by Royal W. Gill who was accompanied by Edward W. Carr. The boy jumped from behind a barge, directly in front of the car and was thrown several feet.

The boy received injuries from which he died soon after. Gill who is a brother of the aviator, was arrested and brought to Quincy, where he was bailed out by Theophilus King. He was arraigned in court this morning for manslaughter and held in $5,000 until Sept. 30.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Spoting Editor:

The Labor day game, at the Water Street ball grounds, finally and conclusively cleared the atmosphere of any base ball cobweb, leaving no doubt, in the minds of all who witnessed the game, which was the better club, the Atlantics or West Quincys? Now that controversy has been settled: but the indisputable fact remains that Charlie Ganzel's Makaria are the unquestioned base ball champions. Having defeated all clubs in the city, the Atlantics twice on the same day July 4th (and for money.) South Quincys twice, West Quincy once, and Quincy (Old Colony League) once. The Makarias lost only one game this season, to a Quincy club and that was to Quincy. (Glaze pitching) the Makarias and Atlantics have been great rivals for a number of years past and be it said to their credit true sportsmen at all times and like hundreds and hundreds of our fans we have immensely enjoyed the battles royal, for supremacy, between these two clubs. As an admirer of these gentlemenly ball players, I believe that a series of games, could and should be arranged, between the Makarias and the Atlantics and would be a most fitting closing of the base ball season of 1911 in our city.

WRECKS OF SPANISH FLEET

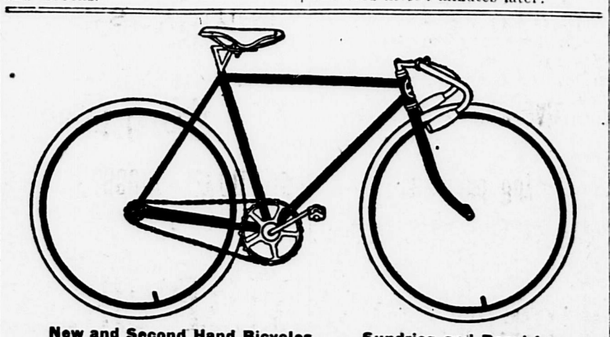

United States May Undertake to Salvage Five Hulks

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 5.—President Taft's recent message to congress, asking that it be determined whether the Spanish men-of-war sunk in the battle of Santiago thirteen years ago should be given away, and Secretary Knox' opinion that the wrecks belong to the United States, have revived speculation here as to the possible refloating of the ships.

Engineers who have stduied the location of the three battleships and two torpedo boats are of the opinion that their salvage is practicable and would warrant the expense of saving the hulks. It is believed that the United States will soon begin the work of salvage.

VIADUCT BLOWN UP

Woman May Have Had a Hand In Crime of Dynamiters

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Sept. 5.— Dynamiters blew up one of the sections of the viaduct of the New York, Westchester and Boston railway company in this city.

It is believed that a deliberate attempt was made to destroy one of the main sections of the new four-track electric rapid-transit system, which the new corporation is constructing.

According to information received by Chief of Police Foley, it is believed that a woman carrying a satchel and seen in the vicinity of the viaduct was the representative of the dynamiters.

The opinion is expressed that the work of destruction was carried out because of an alleged labor disagreement.

QUINCY DELEGATION FOR CONVENTION IN BOSTON

National Retail Granite Dealers Association May Come East Next Year

Letter of John L. Miller From Cincinnati

John L. Miller writing from Cincinnati, O., where he is attending the convention of the National Retail Granite Dealers association says the Quincy delegation is making a hard fight to have the 1912 convention held in Boston. He says:

I made my best fight for it, but Denver and Detroit were ahead of me, but I pressed Boston's claim so hard that it was referred to the Executive committee. I have interviewed the members of that committee and it looks favorable.

To show how the West does things, the Governor of Colorado wrote a strong letter in favor of Denver, the mayor of the city, the Merchants Association and the Board of Trade all urged the acceptances of the invitation. The great Yule Granite Co. of Colorado offered a special train to take the delegates from Denver over the Great Divide to their works, two hundred and fifty miles away. If we want to get it to come to Boston, the New England manufacturers will have to pull hard, and all together to get it. It would be the greatest advertisement the business ever had.

This has certainly been a great convention, and the exhibition of finished monuments and machinery from all sections of the Country was grand. They had over a dozen monuments from far away Colorado, Wisconsin had a splendid exhibit, and Quincy did very well, and sold every one of their twelve monuments. Vermont had a great exhibit of both granite and marble. Tennessee, Georgia and many other sections were well represented.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 1, 1911.
To the National Monument Retail Dealers Association in Convention Assembled.

Gentlemen:

With a firm belief that education should be the watchword of the organizations in the Monumental Business and believing that, by holding the Convention of 1912 in the Central of the great producing Section of the business; therefore the producers and the manufacturers of the New England most cordially invite you to hold the next convention in the City of Boston. They will provide building for the meeting of the association and they will provide ample accomadation to visit all the manufacturing centers and the sea shore attractions. The greatest aviation field in the country where the greatest aviators of the world are gathered this season and to visit the great shipyard where the greatest battle ship the world has ever seen is being built for the Argentine Republic. The beautiful green woods and the valleys of Vermont, with their great marble and granite industries. New England, New York and New Jersey are the states where more retail monument dealers do business than any section of the United States, and with less interest in our association work.

Come and show them what the association is; come show the manufacturers; come and have the greatest exhibit, the industry has ever seen. The hotel accomodations are ample. The park system the best of any city in the world.

Come eat, drink and be educated in your business; freely and without price. Come and we will do you good.

Yours most cordially,

Signed by
J. L. Miller, Quincy, Mass.

HAS EYE ON DAUGHTER.

It is a common occurrence to see mothers chasing after their daughters in order to keep them out of harm's way, or to hear of them adopting diverse means to locate them, but the method employed by an anxious Quincy mother in an endeavor to be ever mindful of the whereabouts of her daughter, is certainly a novel one. It seems that the fair young lady is an ardent admirer of sailing and took this means to be in attendance at the aviation meet.

The mother, however, was awakened to the situation, and had a red colored sail placed on the speedy craft. Every day she would anchor off Dorchester bay, and the number of visitors in that section were in a continual quandary as to what the red sail meant. The meaning of the move finally became known and now everybody is aware that the red sail is a signal to the mother of the girl, signifying the spot where the boat is located and also where the Quincy damsel is supposed to be.

The recent railroad wrecks indicate that the well equipped train needs its undertaker as well as dining car and barber shop.

FLIGHT TO BOSTON LIGHT WON BY GRAHAME-WHITE

At Terrific Speed the Englishman With a Passenger Gets First Prize

Rain Will Interfere With Today's Meet

There was a good crowd at the aviation meet Tuesday but nothing to equal the one on Labor day or the Saturday previous. There are many, however who have the bird fever and they have been at the meet every day since the start. The price of admission and reserved seat kept them from being inside of the grounds every day, but they could be found outside viewing the flyers from one of the many vantage points.

Except for seeing the birdmen rise and alight, fully as good a view could be had of them outside as from the grand stand, for once in the air, there was nothing to obstruct the view of the thousands gathered all along Squantum street and on the hilly places at Squantum and elsewhere.

Most of the flyers had other engagements this week and for that reason there were but few of them left for Tuesday's events. Grahame-White was present and went up in several of the events in his powerful monoplane, including a trip to Boston Light, which he made in remarkable quick time. It was expected that President Taft would be among the spectators Tuesday, but for some reason he did not appear.

A heavy, gusty wind made flying extremely difficult at the Harvard-Boston aero meet yesterday, and beyond the race to Boston light—won by Grahame-White in his Nieuport monoplane—there was little to interest the 5000 spectators scattered throught the grandstand and inclosures.

At a terrific speed the Englishman, with one of his mechanicians as a passenger, crossed over Quincy bay and Squantum head, flying low. He rounded the light on an even keel at an altitude of scarcely 100 feet, and had recrossed the starting line in the aerodrome in 14 minutes 9 4-5 seconds.

Flying high, buffeted hither and thither by the gale, Ovington seemed to have considerable difficulty in rounding the light. He was back over the field in 16 minutes 15 2-5 seconds.

Sopwith, winner of the first Boston light race last week, crossed the line five minutes after Ovington had started. He flew low, but his light Bleriot could not duplicate the tremendous speed of the other's monoplane. Sopwith's time was 15 minutes 5 1-5 seconds.

OUTING OF APPRENTICES

Of the Fore River Works Takes Place Today

SPORTING EVENTS

The annual outing and harbor sail granted by the officials of the Fore River Co. is being enjoyed today by the apprentices at the works. Fully 100 boarded the old Houghs Neck steamer off the shipyards this morning to take the trip.

An extended sail was made along the South Shore and a shore dinner is to be partaken of when Lynn is reached. Beverly and Salem, where the famous cadet band is to furnish music, are among the places scheduled to be visited. There are to be baseball and football games, and it is expected that arrival home will be made this evening about nine o'clock. The outing is in charge of James E. Neary instructor of the apprentices.

—Why couldn't the juvenile mischief-makers hereabouts have some of the same kind of spankings that the New York court administered to four young rowdies this week? The press despatches say that a strap two inches wide, a quarter of an inch thick, shredded to 12 ribbons of leather, was used. The judicious use of such an instrument ought to be effective.

OWNER OF LAND ARRESTED

For Letting Space at Squantum For Gaming Purposes

PLEADED NOT GUILTY

David T. Pray of Boston, owner of land along Squantum street, occupied during the aviation week by many of the booths, was summoned into court this morning by Inspector Goodhue, on a complaint charging him with knowingly letting and permitting building under his control for gaming purposes.

The building in question is situated directly opposite the main entrance to the field. It was raided last week by the police and a quantity of beer, which it is claimed contained more than one per cent of alcohol was seized. The party that occupied the building then left.

On Saturday the police again raided the place and the proprietor was arrested for violation of the gaming laws. This man was arraigned in court Tuesday and his case continued until Saturday. The police then swore out a warrant against Pray, the owner of the land, who was in court this morning. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued until next Saturday for a hearing.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Three months without Congress. Oh Joy!

Judge Taft has the courage to hand down a dissenting opinion whenever he feels that way about it.

If the President's veto of that wool bill cuts us out of a cheap winter suit, we're going to vote for a suffragette in 1912.

After those Democrats in congress have been in office a year they will not be so anxious to prolong an extraordinary session.

To defeat reciprocity, the Canadian Conservatives will have to gain 26 of the 133 seats held by the liberals in the next parliament!

The census of boy babies in Georgia that have been named "Hoke Smith" has now reached 401. Of course, the kinds can't help it.

Oysters are again eatable now that September is here, and good sewage will again be utilized in the waters where this popular eatable is fed.

More canals found on Mars. A tough country for the Unemployed, with the chance to dig ditches always being handed out to them.

It begins to look as if the president would have to plow up the Agricultural Department, harrow it thoroughly, and adopt a new system for cultivation.

It is announced that Germany and France are having polite "conversations" over Morocco, but we notice each of them keeps his eye on the other fellow's hip pocket.

The president has been asked to let his cow "Pauline" appear in the play "Way Down East," but it would be more effective still if Mr. Taft could be secured to milk her on the stage.

Queen Wilhelmina is getting congratulations for her 31st birthday, but perhaps she would swap her crown for obscurity with the chance to conceal all those incriminating milestones.

FROM VERMONT

The Quincy Daily Ledger calmly informs its readers that the Quincy city council held its first meeting Monday night since the latter part of June, having taken a summer vacation. To municipalities which desire to keep a close run on their affairs to see that business is conducted properly, that information is decidedly startling. Municipal business takes no vacation in Barre, for instance, and the conduct of it requires summer sittings of the city council, perhaps more than in the winter, because of the greater activity of various departments.—Barre, Vt. Times.

We don't know how we can answer that, unless to say that a superior organization in Quincy allows the city "Fathers" to "rest up" during the summer. Maybe a superior system in the various departments of the city's administration has something to do with it. At any rate, along those lines, we surely would not care to think the U. S. Gov't is going to ruin because congress is not in session.

CHAMP CLARK AND T. R.

Champ Clark, speaker of the house delivered an address in Pittsburg last Thursday before the Alleghany county teachers' institute. Speaking of scholars Mr. Clark said:

"Presidents Garfield, Adams and Jefferson were the greatest scholars of the nation. Former President Roosevelt can be classed with those three presidents, as he knows a little about more things than any human being."

And that's the way it goes. Respected by friend and foe, the name of Theodore Roosevelt goes down to posterity as one of the ablest scholars of recent times.

THE OYSTER.

A month with an R in its name having turned up, once again we have the hardihood to call for our stew, and once more does the solitary oyster in its golden bath of salty and buttery water suggest what might have been.

The R superstition is one o fthose queer table habits that grip our domestic customs without semblance of logic.

In these early days of September, when the crisp note of coming fall first puts the longing for the tang of sea food into your heart, the oyster fairly jumps into the chafing dish. Then the young oyster really needs protection from the ruthless assaults of the oysterman ,which destroy the tender shell of the fledgeling bivalve.

May, however, ruled out of the kitchen calendar for lack of the superstitious R, is according to the oyster farmers just the time to have a thorough cleaning up of the beds from sea weed and other debris. This spring house cleaning leaves them fresh and sweet ready for the visitations of the oyster stork.

The oyster is naturally a clean little beast, spite of the strong prejudice against him as a carrier of disease. The careful oyster farmer strews the beds with clean shells, upon which the infant is deposited. On these he thrives, but if left to the tender mercies of slime covered shells, his career is a short one.

There is however a real ground for caution in the eating of oysters. A recent British commission on sewage pollution analyzed 1,000 oysters in an infected river, and found evidence of human contamination in nearly everyone.

Your marketman will of course regard you as old maidish if you ask him where he buys oysters. But no man is fit to be in the business unless he has investigated such sources of supplies, and knows personally that the oyster man is feeding his submerged boarders on the kind of provender you would like to have on your table.

NOGI AND THE BOY SCOUTS

I am filled with admiration for the boy scouts, said General Nogi, the Japanese warrior, who did such remarkable work in the Japanese-Russian war. From what I have seen of you, he said, I recognize that you are in earnest and are determined to do well for your country. If you go on in the way that you have begun you will make most valuable citizens.

When I was a boy I was taught (and I have since had good reasons to believe it was right) that the chief object in life is to do your duty.

"To teach yourself how to do this you should try to do things which you are afraid of doing. You must not only train your body to be strong but also your mind to be full of knowledge and courage.

"Be charitable to all.

"Be believed by all.

"Obtain the respect of others by your good conduct and courtesy.

"Never do anything to cause your word to be doubted.

"If you train yourself now—as boys—in this way you will when you become men, be an honor to your forefathers who did so well in the days of old."

OUR OBLIGATIONS

Now that the vacations are closing and our people are returning to their homes we shall soon have something very important to our local tradesmen, the renewal of business intercourse says an exchange:

Just what that means to the stores and shops can best be imagined when it is stated that during the eight or ten weeks of vacation time there is a diminution of more than two-thirds in the volume in trade hereabouts. Add to that the fact that many customers who go away—through carelessness, thoughtlessness, or maybe from lack of funds—leave their accounts unpaid, and it is obvious that the poor storekeeper is not only obliged to remain at home throughout the season, but is sometimes at his wit's end to meet pressing obligations.

Further than that we would have the citizens generally realize that each individual owes a duty not only to one but to every store and every mechanic doing business in Quincy.

We perhaps cannot do better than to quote from the Manchester Mirror which says:

"The more money you send away from home, the poorer your town grows. Is there anyone who doubts it?

"Out of every purchase made in your own town, a certain percentage is set aside to be added to home capital.

"When home trade increases, new stores come and old ones do a bigger business. That means more clerks, larger profits for the employer. The inevitable result is the building of more houses for these people to live in. That makes more taxable property, and your tax rate, if public funds are properly handled, will increase, and besides there is more money available for public improvements.

"A purchase at home therefore is in part an investment, some portion of the money returning to you, in increased values of real estate, better stores to trade in, the building of more civic improvements.

"A purchase in a distant city is equally an investment, but the investment is for the benefit of the people who live in the city where the purchase is made."

A PARCEL POST.

In an address delivered before the members ofthe Republican City Committee of Melrose, Alexander McGregor touched on a very timely topic when he said: "It is to be hoped that in the very near future the legislation championed by the distinguished secretary of the navy. Mr. Meyer, while he was post-master-general, will be enacted into law. I refer to the parcels post. The etsablishment ofthis is one of the greatest needs of the country as a whole. It is as sure to come ultimately as it is inevitable. I notice in a dispatch from Washington this morning that Postmaster-Gen. Hitchcock intends to bring this matter before congress in December. Why we have gone on so long without it is one ofthe modern wonders. Many of our ablest and most efficient postmaster-generals have advised its adoption. The press of the country is in favor of it, and if there is a serious and disinterested objection to it it is not on record."

Inquiry at Washington shows that the administration is in earnest in this matter and that the postmaster-general will make the plea for a government parcels post one of the most notable features of his report to congress, next December. The hope is widespread that something may be done to put the members of both houses on record, in this connection. The influence of the great express companies has been powerful enough, from time to time, to prevent the government from going into the express business; but it begins to look as if the influence ofthese powerful interests could not prevent the administration much longer from having its way.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!

The present manager of the Granite Railway Co., from whose celebrated extra dark stock quarries the granite was taken for King's Chapel, Boston, as well as many other prominent buildings throughout the country, is Luther S. Anderson. Mr. Anderson was born in Braintree, April 9, 1858. He graduated from the English High school in 1873, the Adams Academy in 1878 and Harvard college in 1882. He was for several years assistant treasurer of the Union Pacific railroad at the time Charles Francis Adams was its president, but resigned his position when Mr. Adams retired.

Some years later he became interested in the Granite Railway Co. and has been the energetic manager of that company for a number of years. At the time ofthe building of the Quincy Quarry railroad, leading to the quarries on the hills back ofthe West Quincy depot, Mr. Anderson was one of its prime movers and was its first superintendent. Since his advent as the manager of the Granite Railway Co., he has introduced many modern ideas so that today the plant is thoroughly up to date in every way.

He never had any great desire for public office and the only office that he has held was that of Councilman from Ward One, where he served three years. He has also been a member of the Board of Managers of the Adams Academy for a number of years.

He was for many years prominently identified with the First church as one of its parish committee and it was largely through his efforts that the basement of the church was so changed, that it became possible for the public to visit the sarcophagi beneath the steps, where lay the remains of the two Presidents and their wives. He was also instrumental in preserving the hearse which was used at the funeral of President John Quincy Adams.

"Well, my son, that's a solution of the trust question."

"Does it fix it so there isn't any trust any more, pa?"

JUST AS GOOD—"You're rather a young man to be left in charge of a drug shop," said the fussy old gentleman. "Have you any diploma?"

"Why-er-no, sir," replied the shopman; 'but we have a preparation of our own that'sjust as good."—London Sketch.

CRANK.—He—I noticed that you call a great many of your acquaintances cranks. I hope you do not consider me a crank.

She—Certainly not! A crank is a person with one idea, and I never heard anybody accuse you of having one.—Toledo Blade.

WILLING—The Lawyer—"Are you acquainted with any of the men on the jury?"

The Witness—"Yes, sir; more than half of them."

The Lawyer—"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?"

The Witness—"If it comes to that, I'm willing to swear that I know more than all of them put together."

SLOW—I've heard it said he was a thought reader," said her dearest friend.

"It's not true," she said bitterly.

"How do you know?"

"He has been calling on me twice a week for four months, and hasn't yet mustered up courage to propose."—Ally Sloper.

COLD FEET—"Brother Hardesty wasn't able to come to church last Sunday. He had caught a cold."

"Yes, and it settled in his feet. That was our day for taking up the missionary collection."—Chicago Tribune.

LANGFORD STOCK LOWERED

"Tar Baby" Fails to Knock Out the Black Man From Hoboken

New York, Sept. 6.—Sam Langford won his ten-round bout with Joe Jeannette here last night, but every minute of the thirty in which blows were exchanged the Boston man knew he had a stiff problem to solve. Jeanette fought gamely and cleverly. The Hoboken negro was at no time afraid of the Boston terror, and frequently sent back better than he got.

It was a grueling mill from start to finish, and while it was fast and clever, the bout was somewhat of a disappointment to the followers of pugilism. Langford was looked to for a knockout in seven rounds, but the fact that Jeanette pulled through for the limit sent Langford's stock as a likely opponent for Johnson away down.

In a trolley accident in New England an Irishman was badly hurt. The next day, relates the Youth's Companion, a lawyer called on him and asked if he intended to sue the company for damages.

"Damages?" said Pat, looking feebly over his bandages. "Sure , I have thim already, I'd loike to sue the railway for repairs, sor, av ye'll take the case."

FIRST DAY AT SCHOOL.

There's a sigh in her heart and a tear in her eye,
As mamma goes softly around
And she listens in vain for a sweet, boyish laugh—
In vain for some whispering sound
To tell her her precious is with her today,
To tell her he's safe at his games or his play.

There's a sigh in her heart, though she knows he'll return,
And smother her with his caresses,
While she, in her turn, will hug him to her heart,
And smooth out his wild, play-tossed tresses,
For the first day at school means another link gone
From the chain which has bound them since his sweet life's dawn.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL
ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.
Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.
First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.
Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.
Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.
Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.
Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.
Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

Henry L. Kincaide Writes Interesting Letter Regarding the Recent Tour of Inspection

Sincere Pride For This Country's Development

Upon Mr. Kincaide's return recently, from his tour of inspection with the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Ledger asked him for a statement regarding his impressions abroad. It is with much pleasure that we give to the public today this very interesting and instructive letter that has been kindly prepared by Col. Kincaide. It is as follows:

Quincy Daily Ledger:

You have asked me to give you some impressions gained by members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce on their European tour. I think on the whole that in our hurried trip studying governments, docks, manufacturing, city planning, cooperative activities and business conditions, to me the most interesting countries were England and Germany.

Space will permit of but few of our many observations. We were greatly impressed by the docks of Liverpool,—26 miles of quayage taxed to its utmost with shipping and new docks under construction made an object lesson long to be remembered when compared with our own undeveloped water front. Our trip on the 35 1-2 mile long Manchester ship canal, built by the enterprising merchants of Manchester, at a cost of over $80,000,000 was especially interesting. It showed how an inland city was transformed into a seaport by determined business men working together. Last year over five million tons of merchandise was transported over this canal and handled at the great Manchester docks. We saw ships from all parts of the world unloading cargoes into mammoth warehouses and we were astonished to learn that ships capable of carrying 12,000 tons cargo traversed this canal. In Euorpe they believe in building docks first and then going after business which is sure to follow.

Town planning or city planning as it is called in Germany left a marked impression on the minds of our delegation. Far-sightedness characterizes Germany in all things for Germany is building a mighty nation. They think of human beings as well as of rifles and endeavor by every means to produce strong men and women. In city planning, Germany calls in her experts,—they begin at the bottom and build up. Nearly every city has an official plan of development to which everyone must conform. The government controls the land through ownership, taxation and regulation. The government controls and governs the people. It believes that public welfare and future development of a municipality is of first importance irrespective of private opinion or personal interest. It decides what is best for a city, its people and future generations, takes a definite stand, and proceeds to do things in accordance with definite well laid plans.

Public utilities are nearly all owned by the government, consequently these interests are in harmony with the city plan.

"City planning" has a prosaic sound but the words stand for a movement which has perhaps, a more direct bearing on the life and happiness of the great masses of people than any other single movement of our time.

In the German city plans, can be found strict regulations protecting the city from the annoyance and necessity of rebuilding streets or sidewalks which have been put in by the get rich quick speculator. Streets and boulevards are carefully planned and laid out. Open spaces for parks, playgrounds and resting places are reserved within walking distance of nearly every home. At intervals you find fountains, statuary and shelters. Shade trees and flower beds line the boulevards and even the sidewalks of main thoroughfares. Gas, water, telephone, electric light and other conduits are placed under the sidewalks close to the curbings or beneath the gutters and are very accessible. A street once completed must never be disturbed or torn up. The city buys land for docks, school houses, police stations, fire stations, parks and playgrounds far in advance of its needs. City and public buildings are arranged and located to harmonize with surroundings.

The railroad station is the gateway of the city, it is built substantially of imposing size and attractive. Flowers in abundance (principally geraniums in blossom) can everywhere be seen. Private, public and mercantile buildings are adorned with window boxes filled with these attractive flowers which receive the greatest care. Emerging from the railroad station your eyes rest on a park or open space with fountains, trees or statuary. Public buildings or hotels usually face the open area—giving the visitor a most pleasing impression as he enters the city. Buildings are limited in height to five stories. Parks, boulevards, public structures, school houses, pleasure spaces and even docks are planned to fit into one another for a generation to come, so that a pleasing continuous view will reach the eye at every turn. Strictest supervision of plans for new buildings is maintained. Architecture and construction are carefully watched in order that the city scheme or plan for development shall not be marred. Beauty is promoted in small things and private interests are not permitted to disfigure the city or inconvenience the public. Bill boards are prohibited within city limits and are seldom seen in rural districts. No telegraph or telephone wires are permitted overhead. At regular intervals waiting rooms are provided ofr street car passengers. Public sanitaries are provided in convenient places for people of either sex. Trolley wires are attached to rosettes on buildings doing away with trolley poles. Street signs of artistic design lettered on both sides are placed at every street corner. Electric light or gas poles where permitted are of artistic and attractive design. The individual dwelling or cottage is made attractive with flower gardens and vines reminding one of the little verse:

"Little beds of flowers
Little pots of paint,
Make a pleasant cottage
Out of one that ain't."

City housing of the poor is receiving much attention and modern homes are being erected by the municipality or by public "Friendly Societies." Comfortable homes rent from $6 to $10 per month. They are provided with plenty of light, air and open spaces, not only making healthier people but have reduced the mortality very materially.

School children are carefully examined, the body, eyes and teeth receiving medical attention. Parents are advised by those in authority how to care for the afflicted. Sickly children are sent to the country and strenthening food is provided at noon day for children of the poorer class, all at Government expense. Plenty of exercise, gymnastics and baths are required all with the one thought in view of making the young grow strong and healthy and the future generation more physically perfect. The schools teach young men the theory of business before they enter it and require them to learn a trade, thereby giving them in early age the instruction necessary to gain a living. This broad training gives confidence in commercial undertakings in later life. The free industrial schools are palatial in their appointment and equipment, furnishing pupils the highest class of instruction. Among the many departments visited in these industrial schools were architecture, sculpture, landscape gardening, city planning, printing, chemistry, electricity, wood carving, art, painting, decorating, engineering, iron working, agriculture, metal working, furniture designing, shoe making, carpentering. These same schools are open evenings for those who wish to become more proficient in their trades. In the city of Frankfort we visited an industrial school building which cost $500,000.

Leading business men in Germany consider it an honor to serve in the city government. Mayors are usually

TEXTILE INDUSTRY BEGINS TO IMPROVE

Fifty-Five Thousand Operatives Are Back In Mills

Boston, Sept. 6.—A change for the better occurred in many cities, towns and villages of New England, when textile mills employing an aggregate of 55,000 persons resumed operations after a shutdown varying from eight days to two weeks or more.

The resumption of activities was hailed with delight by operatives and business men, most all of whom have lost money by the severe curtailment policy which has been effective in all textile centres since spring.

President Wood of the American Woolen company, which controls thirty mills in New England and New York state, says the woolen business is improving.

CLOTHING CATCHES FIRE

Woman Dead and Husband Dying From Severe Burns

Milford, Mass., Sept. 6.—A kettle of doughnuts cost the life of Mrs. Joseph E. Chatelain, aged 51, and caused probably fatal injuries to her husband.

When Mrs. Chatelain was frying the doughnuts the kettle upset and the fat caught fire. Chatelain, who is 55 years old and crippled by a shock, tried to help his wife put out the flames, but both were so severely burned that they had to give up the effort and save their own lives. The house was burned to the ground at a loss of about $2000.

Brigan says he entered the car Saturday to come to Philadelphia and did not consider the low temperature. The doors were locked at Buffalo, and failing to get them open or attract attention he fell into a stupor.

WHY CUMMINS OPPOSES TAFT

Senator Declares That President Is a Reactionary

ISSUES BILL OF PARTICULARS

Criticises Executive's Position on Payne-Aldrich Tariff Law, Canadian Reciprocity, and Vetoes of Woolen Bill and Statehood Measures—Old Order of Things Would Be Continued by Renomination

Chicago, Sept. 6.—In a signed article published in the Chicago Record-Herald Senator Cummins of Iowa gives his reasons for declaring that President Taft should not be renominated by the Republican party for the presidency. Taft is declared to be a reactionary. He says in part:

"It is to be understood that my opposition to the renomination of Taft is based solely upon his attitude toward public questions, and by conviction that the convention ought to nominate a candidate for president who will be strongest in the election.

"It will be conceded, I suppose, that President Taft's alignment must be defined chiefly—

"By his position upon the Payne-Aldrich tariff law.

"By his position upon the bill for the further regulation of interstate common carriers, brought forward about the first of the year 1910.

"By his position upon the change made in the postal savings law, just as it was being passed in the senate.

"By his position upon the proposed income tax law, which was sought to be incorporated into the Payne-Aldrich tariff act.

"By his attitude toward the control and disposition of our public domain.

"By his position on the Canadian tariff bill passed at the extra session just closed.

"By his work for the peace treaties.

"His vetoes of the woolen schedule, the free list and the resolution admitting New Mexico and Arizona as states."

Senator Cummins takes up each one of these in turn and picks Taft's stand to pieces. He criticises Taft's associates in the making of the tariff, naming Aldrich, Payne, Cannon and Dalzell in particular. He lays the interstate law to Aldrich and Taft and declares that coercion was used to force its passage.

The Canadian reciprocity measure the senator calls "the most unfortunate act of legislation passed within the period of the present administration."

Mr. Cummins charges that Taft was aligned with the reactionaries on practically every big piece of legislation and concludes his article thus:

"My general conclusion then is that in every struggle which has taken place since Mr. Taft became president upon vital things his allies and supporters have been the senators and members of the house, who, however honest they may be, are known from one border of the country to the other as reactionaries or standpatters and not as progressives.

"If the voters of the Republican party believe that the old leadership should be perpetuated they can find no better nominee than Mr. Taft.

"I don't believe it ought to be continued and therefore, without any personal disparagement of the president, I am hoping that progressive president will be nominated and elected next year."

KAISER REVIEWS FLEET

Hundred and Forty Warships Demonstrate Germany's Naval Power

Kiel, Ger., Sept. 6.—Emperor William, from the quarterdeck of the imperial yacht Hohenzollern, reviewed the mightiest German fleet ever assembled. One hundred and forty men-of-war, comprising twenty-two battleships, four armored cruisers, ten protected cruisers, twenty-six modern ocean-going torpedo boats, twenty-four mine layers and a flotilla of submarines were in the vast array of fighting fleet that swept by with a show of majestic power and grace before the eyes of the German ruler.

Coming at a time when Germany's diplomatic relations with France are strained over the Moroccan situation, the assembling of the gigantic fleet was a striking demonstration of Germany's war power.

BOMB UNDER HIS COAT

Arrest of Young Italian In New York May Prove Important

New York, Sept. 6.—The police arrested a young Italian with a bomb under his coat all ready to explode, and believe that through him they will trace the perpetrators of the numerous outrages that have baffled them for the past month.

The prisoner, Giuseppi Castabile, carried a bomb shaped like a cantaloupe, with an eight-inch fuse attached, and the police believe he was about to use it.

The police records show that Castabile was arrested three years ago as an accessory in a bomb-throwing episode, but was acquitted.

COY-ORR WEDDING

A pretty home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everlin H. Coy, at 8.30 o'clock Thursday evening, August 31, when their youngest daughter Espy Elizabeth Coy, formerly of Middletown Springs, Vt., was united in marriage to Wm. J. Orr of Braintree, Mass., by the Rev. Mr. Chase of the Wollaston Congregational church. The bride looked charming in white messaline, surmounted by the customary tulle veil. She carried a shower boquet of brides roses. The bridesmaid was a cousin Miss Mabel Coy Haskins of Rutland, Vt. She was dressed in white batiste. The groom wore the usual conventional suit of black. The best man was the groom's brother, Chas. Orr of Braintree.

The house was prettily decorated with evergreen and asters. The wedding was attended by the relatives and intimate friends.

Following the wedding breakfast the couple left in an automobile amid a shower of rice and congratulations. After a tour to New York City and other New York towns, they will be at home at 117 Taylor street, Wollaston.

Mr. and Mrs. Orr were the recipients of many beautiful presents including cut glass, silver, furniture and china. The groom's gift was a solid gold bracelet, beautifully engraved. The bride's gift to the the bride's maid was a ring, set with a ruby and diamonds. The wedding day was the 12th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Coy's eldest daughter, Mrs. Henry McLaughlin, also the 11th anniversary of Mrs. Emory McLaughlin and Mrs. Fred McLaughlin and the 11th birthday of Miss Eva McLaughlin all of Middletown Springs, Vt.

A small girl at dinner sat patiently through the various courses she was not allowed to eat, because she had been promised dessert. The dessert turned out to be pie, which she was not allowed to have. A very small wedge of it was put upon her plate, however to redeem the promise. She gazed at it a moment, sighed and said mournfully,—

"All that for this!"—March Lippincott's.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Freakish Fashions Modified to Graceful Lines.

Gathered Empire Skirt Now In Vogue.

One of the continuous conditions in clothes is that the thing that becomes popular is not really new, it has been invented months or years before, and while an exclusive few have worn it no one else has made an attempt to do so. Nearly every fashion begins in this way, and then, suddenly, like a bolt from the skies, it becomes universal.

Every one knows about it even if every one does not take it up. This is why the professionals in clothes, like the buyers, the great dressmakers here and abroad, and the multi-millionaires who buy experimental clothes to be individual, look rather superior when popular fashions are mentioned. They have known about them for so long that they cannot imagine the public thinking that they the new.

They greet nearly every popular fashion with the explanation that it was brought out long ago, and it usually was. This however, does not affect its value to the public. Emerson once said that it was never worth while to read a book until it was two years old, if then; and a great many Americans—and well-dressed ones at that—feel the same way about fashions.

You will notice how often some certain style which has been exploited and written about at great length never seems to take a hold upon people until you hear nothing about it: then you notice it worn. The public has made up its mind about it and taken it to heart.

Another method is to let the sensational people exploit certain fashions until they are tired of them, and after the public has looked at them from all sides and weighed their virtues and vices, they decide that they are worth adopting. This was especially true concerning the divided skirt. It lived through a short period when it was freakish and in the limelight, and then when the world forgot about it, it was brought out in all manner of good-looking clothes and is now worn without comment.

It is probable that the Fall will see the majority of walking skirts divided at the sides or in front. Underneath them will be a short, narrow petticoat of taffeta or satin, or possibly another kind of thin cloth.

One sees nothing quaint or queer or immodest in the present-day walking suits of black and gray striped serges which are open quite high on each side and a little in front, showing a plan black taffeta petticoat that is finished with a hem turned up on the right side and piped with black velvet.

The underskirt is a little less than two yards wide, and it cannot be said to facilitate the movements of the wearer,unless it is divided in front, which is often the case. The square trouser skirts which are worn as petticoats are already as well known and even more widely adopted than the knickerbockers of satin which women wore under the sheath skirts of two years ago.

One of the fashions which was started early in the summer by some great dressmakers was the high waisted skirt with slight gathers all round the figure. They considered this a graceful change from the skirt that drew in at the end of the corset and pulled at the knees. But judging from the gowns that have been worn all summer few people took up the idea; they remained true to the skirt which had prevailed since last September, and which, with all the criticism and ridicule hurled against it remained the favorite.

Now the gathered Empire skirt is coming into fashion, not only among the exclusives, but among the many. True, it is not very full, and it has the effect of scantiness, on account of the filmy fabric used, but it is a decided departure from the tight skirt of June, and it would be well for us to look at these models carefully before choosing anything for autumn made on the lines that are familiar to us.

The skirt is usually draped up quite a bit on the left side. Sometimes there is a panel, frill or plaiting from waist to hem; again the fulness is drawn around the knees, caught slightly at the back, and finished with a very broad bow with two ends that hang to the hem. This is called the apron skirt and is one of the new models which seem to be be very well liked.

The once fashionable tight skirt with the broad panel down the middle of back and front has become quite commonplace; it has dropped off from first place with amazing celerity. Most people thought it would remain in fashion for at least another year, and may be it will continue here and there buts its very popularity during the summer was its death blow. It was worn by thousands—one would like to say millions, for it seemed to be epidemic over the face of the earth.

A year ago, when it made its appearance at the fashionable seacoast resorts, it seemed too extreme to obtain for long, and yet when it was modified by the better French and American tailors it seemed so sensible and convenient that it was difficult to believe public taste would ever go against it.

Yet we constantly demand something new even if we give the old second place,and it looks very much as though the new would be expressed in the draped skirt.

Panels have had their day. The newest approach to them is in the Directoire coats with their long flat tails at the back. Velvet sashes are still popular and will remain so, but the kind of panel we have been wearing for a year is absent from the new mid-season models.

Sashes are of every variety and they hang at the back, in front and at the sides. They are made from beads, crystals, heavy stones, gold and silver galloons and combinations of fur and chiffon. The part that goes about the waist is pulled into the figure more often than it used to be. It rather outlines the curves instead of concealing them, and as the bodice is growing slimmer and taking on a very serious phase of Victorian days it is well that the waist itself should not be to much swathed.

It is quite interesting about these narrow bodices. They do not yet prevail but one can see them here and there in smart gowns on smart women. There are regulation armholes and small ones at that, with sloping shoulders, fitted waists and narrow backs. They are not pretty and yet we will wear them if they become fashionable.

The accessory that offsets this slim bodice is the Charlotte Corday fichu. This is somewhat different from the Manon Lescaut fichu, which came in last summer and which never was worn to any extent. The corday one is rather narrow, is made of exquisitely fine white mull with a plisse frill at the edge and is drawn across the bust around the waist and finished at the back with a bow or a buckle, as one wills. The flat pump bow is still in high favor, and it is used to ornament the back of the waist in many kinds of frocks.

Another kind of fichu is quite narrow, is of hemstitched chiffon with a tiny ruffle of Mechlin lace. It outlines a V in front of the neck, usually quite a deep one and then the two ends are drawn together in a straight line down the front and finished under the high sash.

This is an especially attractive girl's fashion and makes the popular black satin gown very becoming. It is not always necessary to use white for these fichus; some very smart ones are made of black and white plaid or striped fabrics, others made of black net or chiffon and again others are made of black and white combined one color laid over the other.

To the mingling of black and white chiffon or white batiste with black chiffon there is no end. It supplies many needs and is adopted by many dressmakers.

The new kind of hat, which may not last through the Fall but at least is in fashion now, is the immense poke that one sees in pictures of Mrs. Scott Siddons. It has an extra high crown, a flaring brim, towering plumes, and wide streamers at the back. In white leghorn, with black velvet and three helmet plumes of bright pink, it is a charming addition to eyelet embroidery gowns, which are dropped over black chiffon and have high, tight sashes of black velvet.—New York Times.

PEASANTS SUSPECT PLOT TO KILL POOR

Riots Follow Measures to Stamp Out Cholera In Italy

Chiasso, Switz., Sept. 6.—Since the beginning of the present year the total number of deaths from cholera in Italy has passed the 30,000 mark. Terror and superstition are causing outbreaks of violence among the inhabitants, who consider the authorities responsible for the scourge.

Health measures are opposed by the people, who think that the measures have been put into effect for the purpose of spreading the infection, firmly believing that it is the desire of the authorities to kill, through poison, a large number of the population and in that way to get rid of the poor.

The most energetic measures have been adopted by the Italian government to maintain order.

elected by the aldermen for a term of twelve years. When a city needs a mayor they secure the best man they can find in the empire. They do not hesitate to advertise for a mayor and select the one from the available list which has the best record, usually taking a man of experience from a smaller city. Being a mayor (or Burgomaster as they are called) becomes a life work, and a successful Burgomaster is usually reappointed for an additional twelve year term, being retired on a substantial life salary in advanced age, after having given the best that is in him to his city and people. Heads of departments or assistant Burgomasters as they are termed, are constantly training for the higher office.

Roads are built to last for a generation. Foundations are deep and drainage receives most careful attention. We observed a paved street in England in process of construction which proved most interesting. The lower layer consisted of four inches of cinders topped with six inches of concrete (cement and stone mixed.) The next layer consisted of granite chips three-quarters inch mesh, capped with paving blocks three inches by three inches by 8 inches set on end. Small stone chips were then swept in between the paving and pitch poured on top.

Macadam roads are built with a greater foundation than many of ours. They are carefully drained from beneath, on the sides and the surface. You can ride over a road 50 or 100 miles long and scarcely find a bad spot. Roads are divided into sections under a section-crew of a few men. These men are responsible for the up keep of the road. Weeding on either side is carefully attended to and small piles of trap rock with necessary filling are kept at frequent intervals along the road side. As soon as a bad spot starts it is quickly cut out, carefully filled in and rolled to the level. By this method roads are kept up at a small cost.

Hours of labor, are long and pay to laborers small, the average skilled mechanic receives from $1.50 to $2.00 per day, while common laborers receive from 75 cents to $1.25 per day. Factory inspections are enacting, requiring ample fire escapes and safety devices for machinery and belting, to prevent accident. Danger signs are conspicuously posted near any machine where an accident might occur. Light, air and sanitary equipment receive special attention.

Municipal enterprises consist of gas, electricity, trains, railroads, hotels, restaurants, breweries, cigar stores, undertaking establishments, markets, bakeries, slaughter houses, saving banks, pawn shops, ware houses and insurance. These utilities nearly all show a profit for the government. In many places we saw women tending the street car switches, sweeping the streets and working on buildings. In agricultural work they seemed to be in the majority.

Vacant land is leased at a small charge or loaned to the poor without cost for farming purposes and but little land was seen in the German Empire that was not under cultivation.

Social reform has reached an advanced stage in Germany. Workingmen's compensation, Old Age and Invalidity Pension, and the Workingmen's sick insurance are now compulsory, Employer and Employee each contributing weekly.

Taxes are high and burdensome Income tax varies from five to fifteen per cent the more the income the more the tax. The tax on food stuffs is very common. What is known in Paris as the octroi tax, a tax levied on food and building materials entering the city, yields an annual income to the city of over twenty-one million dollars.

Among other forms of taxation noted as we travelled, were—a tax on strangers entering a city, a tax on doors, windows, carriage entrances, balconies, verandas, cellar-entrances, a tax on weight of vehicles, the wheels on vehicles, a tax for the removal of garbage levied on those who are served, a tax on death certificates, stock companies 10 per cent of net income, merchants trade tax for the priviledge of carrying on business, tax on servants, double tax on servants in livery, building and rebuilding operations, waiters, bar-maids, 10 per cent of all receipts from public amusement enterprises, all salesmen or saleswomen over two employed, bankers, brokers and their representatives for the priviledge of attending the stock exchange, posters or show bills, tax on buildings for fire protection, tax on property inside the police and lighted district for this service. In Liege Belgium—lawyers are taxed, and a two per cent annual assessment of presumed realizable value of improved or unimproved real estate is collected. In Hamburg twenty-five per cent of the profit on a real estate transaction must be paid to the government and accurate returns at all sales and prices must be recorded.

Incorrect returns on income tax constitutes a most serious offence punishable in Germany by a fine of ten times the amount defrauded, no matter how many years back, plus interest and imprisonment for perjury if returns were made under oath.

Cooperative activities are steadily growing—In Brussels some twenty odd years ago, a few men dissatisfied at the price of bread, bought a sack of flour and commenced making bread in a cellar. This little enterprise has grown until today the society operates forty-two stores in Brussels and vicinity selling foods and clothing to its members and doing a business of over a million dollars annually.

The great Manchester England cooperative stores last year did over $50,000,000 worth of business and are steadily growing.

On the whole our trip was very profitable. The opportunity afforded to secure information from leading officials without delay was very valuable. In many things such as dock development, city planning, housing of the poor, police activities and municipal government, we have gained valuable information but we turn back to our own country with a feeling of sincere pride, when we consider what our own people have accomplished in such a wonderfully short time. We have many perplexing problems yet to solve but the same wisdom and forethought which has guided our destiny in the past may be relied upon in the future.

Anty Drudge Tells How to Save a Day.

Mrs. Method—"Let's see when I can go shopping: Monday, washing; Tuesday ironing—"

Anty Drudge—"Right there's where you can save a day, Mrs. Method. Use Fels-Naptha in your washing and it'll only take a part of Monday forenoon, with no hard work and you can do your ironing the same day. Fels-Naptha's worth nearly a whole day in time alone every week besides the work, fuel and bother it saves."

Fels-Naptha is more than a soap—it's a helping hand on washday.

And a mighty big help, too.

If a neighbor came in and did three-fourths of your weekly washing, she would be doing as much as Fels-Naptha will do for you if you wish.

Fels-Naptha will dissolve and loosen the dirt in your clothes while they soak in cool or lukewarm water.

Then, with a light rub and thorough rinsing, they're ready for the line.

No boiling; no hard rubbing; in summer or winter.

And your clothes will be sweeter, cleaner and whiter than if you boiled them till Doomsday.

Take advantage of this helping hand next washday and the drudgery of washing clothes will be ended for you.

Boston Pot Hunters For Black Handers Remanded For a Week

Boston, Sept. 6.—The three laborers who went gunning for Black Hand compatriots at Harrison square a week ago Sunday and managed by bad luck to pot a couple of policemen, who were engaged in the same hunt, were remanded for a hearing a week hence.

They were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon on Officers Clark and Cooper. It was believed at first that Clark had been fatally shot, but he is rapidly improving.

The men pot hunters were held in the same bail as before, $5000.

MOOSE CHASE AN AUTO

Two Are Wandering Around In Vicinity of October Mountain

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 6.—As a party of automobilists were going over Washington mountain toward Becket they were chased for half a mile by two moose that are believed to have escaped from Harry P. Whitney's October mountain preserve.

The automobile gained on the moose, which soon left the road and disappeared in the forest. The moose were seen later near Redtop, the villa of Mrs. Fannie Burgess in Becket. Game Warden Ziegler claims the moose can be legally shot if caught destroying crops.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By
FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Binford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

CHAPTER XV.

BLIND SIGNALS.

LIDGERWOOD'S new stenographer, Grady, was a rapid, capable young fellow with the gift of knowing how to make himself indispensable to a superior, coupled with the ability to take care of much of the routine correspondence without specific instructions and with a disposition to be loyal to his salt.

Climbing the stairs to his office on the second floor of the Crow's Nest after the brief exchange of question and answer with Judson, Lidgerwood found his helper hard at work grinding through the day's train mail.

"Colgan wired that you were on Mr. Brewster's special, and I was waiting on the chance that you might want to rush something through when you got in," said Grady, reaching mechanically for his notebook.

"I shall want to rush a lot of it through after awhile, but you'd better go and get your supper now and come back fresh for it," said the superintendent, who was always humane to every one but himself. "Was there anything special in today's mail?"

"Only this," turning up a letter marked "Immediate" and bearing the cancellation stamp of the postal car which had passed eastward on train 202.

Lidgerwood read the marked letter twice before he placed it face down in the "unanswered" basket. It was from Flemister, and it called for a decision which the superintendent was willing to postpone for the moment. He had not seen Flemister since the day of the rather spiteful conversation, with the building and loan theft for a topic, and on that occasion the mine owner had gone away with threats in his mouth. Yet his letter was distinctly friendly, conveying an offer of neighborly help.

The occasion for the neighborliness arose upon a right of way involvement. Acting under instructions from Vice President Ford, Lidgerwood had already begun to move in the matter of extending the Red Butte Western toward the Nevada gold fields, and Benson had been running preliminary surveys and making estimates of cost. Of the two more feasible routes that which left the main line at Little Butte, turning southward up the Wire Silver gulch, had been favorably reported by the engineer. The right of way over this route, save for a few miles through an upland valley of cattle ranches, could be acquired from the government, and among the ranch owners only one was disposed to fight the coming of the railroad—for a purely mercenary purpose, Benson declared.

It was about this man, James Grofield, that Flemister wrote. The ranchman, so the letter stated, had passed through Little Butte early in the day on his way to Red Butte. He would be returning by the accommodation late in the afternoon and would stop at the Wire Silver mine, where he had stabled his horses. For some reason he had taken a dislike to Benson, but if Lidgerwood could make it convenient to come over to Little Butte on the evening passenger train from Angels the writer of the letter would arrange to keep Grofield over night, and the right of way matter could doubtless be settled satisfactorily.

This was the substance of the mine owner's letter, and if Lidgerwood hesitated it was partly because he was suspicious of Flemister's sudden friendliness. Then the motive—Flemister's motive—suggested itself, and the suspicion was put to sleep. The Wire Silver mine was five miles distant from the main line at Little Butte, at the end of a spur; if the extension should be built it would be a main line station, with all the advantages accruing therefrom.

Lidgerwood looked at his watch. If Grady should not be gone too long he might be able to work through the pile of correspondence and get away on the evening passenger, and when the stenographer came back the work was attacked with that end in view. But after an hour's rapid dictating a long drawn whistle signal announced the incoming of the train he was trying to make and warned him that the race against time had failed.

"It's no use; we'll have to make two bites of it," he said to Grady, and then he left his desk to go downstairs for a breathing moment and a cup of coffee.

Train 205, the train Flemister had suggested that he might take, was just pulling in from the long run across the desert when he reached the foot of the stairs. That it was too late to take this means of reaching Little Butte and the Wire Silver mine was a small matter; it merely meant that he would be obliged to order out the service car and go special, if he should finally decide to act upon Flemister's suggestion.

Lidgerwood marked a group of discharged railroaders withdrawing to a corner of the lunch room as he entered, and while the waiter was serving his coffee he saw Hallock join the group. Once again Lidgerwood remembered McCloskey's proposal and his own reluctant assent to it, and now he was not too greatly conscience stricken when he saw Judson quietly working his way through the crowded room to a point of espial upon the group in the corner.

The keen inner sense which neither the physiologists nor the psychologists have yet been able to define or to name apprised him of a threat developing in the distant corner, but he resolutely ignored it, drank his coffee and presently went his way around the peopled end of the building and back to the office entrance, meaning to go above stairs and put in another hour with Grady before he should decide definitely about making the night run to Little Butte.

His foot was on the threshold of the stairway door when Judson overtook him.

"Mac told me to report to you when I couldn't get at him," the ex-engineman began abruptly. "There's something hatching, but I can't find out what it is. Are you thinking about goin' out on the road anywhere tonight, Mr. Lidgerwood?"

Lidgerwood's decision was taken on the instant.

"Yes; I think I shall go west in my car in an hour or so. Why?

"There ain't any 'why,' I guess, if you feel like goin'. But what I don't savvy is why them fellows back yonder in the waitin' room are so dead anxious to find out if you are goin'."

As he spoke a man who had been skulking behind a truck load of express freight, so near that he could have touched either of them with an outstretched arm, withdrew silently in the direction of the lunch room. He was a tall man with stooping shoulders, and his noiseless retreat was cautiously made, yet not quite cautiously enough.

"By cripes! Look at that, will you?" Judson exclaimed, pointing to the retreating figure. "That's Hallock, and he was listening!"

Lidgerwood shook his head.

"No, that isn't Hallock," he denied. And then, with a bit of the man driving rasp in his voice: "See here, Judson, don't you let McCloskey's prejudices run away with you; make a memorandum of that and paste it in your hat. I know what you have been instructed to do, and I'll tell you here and now that I shall be much better pleased if you can bring me the assurance that Hallock is a true man."

"But that was Hallock," insisted Judson, "or else it was his livin' double."

"No; follow him and you'll see for yourself. It was more like that Ruby Gulch operator who quit in a quarrel with McCloskey a week or two ago. What is his name—Sheffield?"

Judson hastened down the platform to satisfy himself, and Lidgerwood mounted the stair to his office. Grady was still pounding the keys of the typewriter on the batch of letters given him in the busy hours following his return from supper, and the superintendent turned his back upon the clicking activities and went to stand at the window, from which he could look down upon the platform with the waiting passenger train drawn up beside it.

Seeing the cheerful lights in the sidetracked Nadia, he fell to thinking of Eleanor, opening the door of conscious thought to her and saying to himself that she was never more than a single step beyond the threshold of that door. Looking across to the Nadia, he knew now why he had hesitated so long before deciding to go on the night trip to Timanyoni park. But he could still resolve that there should not be a repetition of the old tragedy of the moth and the candle. It was well that at the very outset a duty call had come to enable him to break the spell of her nearness, and it was also well that he had decided not to disregard it.

The train conductor's "All aboard!" shouted on the platform just below his window drew his attention from the Nadia and the distracting thought of Eleanor's nearness. Train 205 was ready to resume its westward flight, and the locomotive bell was clanging musically.

At the critical moment when the train was fairly in motion Lidgerwood saw Hallock—it was unmistakably Hallock this time—spring from the shadow of a baggage truck and whip up the step of the smoker, and a scant half second later he saw Judson race across the wide platform and throw himself like a self propelled projectile against and through the closing doors of the vestibule at the forward end of the sleeper.

Judson's dash and his capture of the outgoing train were easily accounted for—he had seen Hallock. But where was Hallock going? Lidgerwood was still asking himself the question half abstractedly when he crossed to his desk and touched the buzzer push, which summoned an operator from the dispatcher's room.

"Wire Mr. Pennington Flemister, care of Goodloe, at Little Butte, that I am coming out with my car and should be with him by 11 o'clock. Then call up the yard office and tell Matthews to let me have the car and engine by 8:30 sharp," he directed.

The operator made a note of the order and went out, and the superintendent settled himself in his desk chair for another hour's hard work with the stenographer. At twenty-five minutes past 8 he heard the wheel grindings of the up coming service car, and the weary shorthand man snapped a rubber band upon the notes of the final letter.

Bidding good night to Grady, the superintendent put on his light coat and went out and down the stairs.

At the outer door he turned up the long platform instead of down and walked quickly to the Nadia, persuading himself that he must, in common decency, tell the president that he was going away—persuading himself that it was this and not at all the desire to warm his hands at the ungrateful fire of Eleanor's mockery that was making him turn his back for a moment upon the waiting special train.

BEATTIE CASE NEARS THE END

Evidence Is Closed by Agreement of Both Sides

GIRL IS TO BE RELEASED

Prosecution Fails to Put Miss Cinford on Stand, Though Fortified With What It Considered Necessary Information to Convict Accused Man—Pirsoner Denies Cousin's Story Concerning Purchase of Gun

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept. 6.—With unexpected brevity both the commonwealth and the defense in the trial of Henry C. Beattie, Jr., indicted for the murder of his wife, closed the evidence in the case shortly after 6 o'clock last night.

Judge Watson announced that court would adjourn until Thursday, today to be devoted to argument of counsel with the court as to the instructions to be given the jury before the argument proper is begun on Thursday.

When court adjourned last night Beulah Binford, the so-called girl in the case, alleged by the prosecution to have been the motive for the murder by Beattie of his young wife, still was in jail without having uttered a single word of testimony. Scarcely an hour had passed in the eleven days of testimony when her name was not on the lips of witnesses or counsel for either side.

Admittedly fearing that she would scrupulously avoid injuring the case of her former companion at any cost, though statements and interviews galore had fortified the prosecution with what it regarded as all necessary information, the commonwealth did not put her on the stand.

"We have proved that she was the motive for the crime," said Prosecutor Wendenburg, "without hearing her testimony. Our witnesses and the admissions of the prisoner himself have told the jury enough."

Another figure, Paul Beattie, cousin of the accused, whose confession concerning the purchase of a shotgun for Henry four days before the homicide led to the building of the case for the prosecution, likewise was kept in jail, but both he and the Bintord girl are likely to be released today.

Judge Watson explained his attitude toward her continued imprisonment by saying that unless the girl was to be put on the witness stand he wished "tu turn her loose."

The closing of the case was sudden. Messrs. Smith and Carter of counsel for the defense first announced that they had a few witnesses for the surrebuttal, but if the commonwealth would agree to rest its case they would do likewise. The agreement was accepted.

The single question of importance that the prosecution put to the accused in its brief examination yesterday was the one on which the commonwealth has been basing practically its whole case against him. The prosecution wanted to know how it happened that a gun admittedly purchased by a cousin of Henry C. Beattie, Jr., and corroborated by witnesses for the defense as having been purchased on the Saturday before the murder, came to be in the hands of the very highwayman who killed Mrs. Beattie on the Midlothian turnpike four days later.

The prisoner answered simply that he knew nothing of the purchase of any gun by Paul and did not see the weapon until it was raised by the lone highwayman.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Bids were opened at the isthmian canal commission for the sale and removal of the remainder of French machinery on the Panama canal zone, and the last tokens of the DeLesseps failure to dig the big ditch.

The Chicago Wrecking company was the highest bidder. The company offered $215,000 for the junk. The old French locomotives, dumpcarts, tanks, sheet iron and other scrap which was sold for a song represented an expenditure of more than $10,000,000.

Aged Man Found Dead at Graves of Wife and Daughter

Boston, Sept. 6.—Lying across the graves of his wife and only daughter, Charles S. Rauh of Manchester, N. H., aged 66, formerly of this city, was found dead by workmen in the Forest Hills cemetery. A revolver lying on the ground explained the wound in his forehead from which he had been dead about an hour.

On the tombstone erected three years ago, when Rauh's wife died, was a vacant space for his own name. In an adjacent grave was the body of his daughter, Sophie, who died four years ago, when she was 25 years old.

A path that had been worn around the two graves is thought to show where Rauh walked all night.

NEW ALTITUDE RECORD

Garros Betters Beachey's Mark by Going Up 13,945 Feet

Parame, France, Sept. 6.—Roland G. Garros, the French aviator, broke the world's record for altitude in an aeroplane. He ascended 13,945 feet, which is 743 feet more than two miles and a half. The achievement of Garros betters Lincoln Beachey's height record, made at Chicago on Aug. 20 last, by 2303 feet.

Garros is well known in American aviation circles, having appeared at meets in many American cities. He is noted as one of the few successful flyers of the Demoiselle, the dwarf monoplane.

BRIEFS

A regular meeting of the Quincy Board of Trade will be held tonight.

Miss Isabelle Quinn of Malden is spending a few days with Miss Ida Sullivan on Copeland street.

Miss Nellie Carroll and Miss Elizabeth Bawn have returned to Waltham after having spent two weeks with friends on Washington street.

Mr. and Mrs. S. T. MacQuarrie and Master Lawrence returned Monday from Lake Winnepesaukee.

Miss Helen Gavin of the Overseer's of the Poor office, at City Hall, has returned from a two weeks' vacation.

Mrs. Charles W. Hoffman of Lyndonville, Vt., nee Belle J. Patterson, is the guest of Mrs. Howard Rogers of Hancock street.

Joseph and Lee Tierney of Summer street, have returned from Michigan, where they were visiting their brother John.

James W. Parker, of the claim agents department of the Bay state street railway at Quincy is away on a two weeks vacation.

The City Council committee on Fire Department matters will probably take up the question of increasing the number of permanent firemen at the meeting of the committee tonight.

The though line of street cars between Neponset and Nantasket have been taken off for the winter. In order to reach the beach by street cars now, it will be necessary to go via East Weymouth.

The weather has made progress slow on the widening of Hancock street between Saville and Dimmock streets. The street, however, is now ready for the paving and the sidewalk is ready for concreting.

Charles Gregg, the well known druggist of the Quincy Point section, expects to move into his new quarters at the corner of Washington and Chubbuck streets by the middle of the month.

Councilman George A. Bolster one of the candidates for the nomination for Representative from the fifth district is putting in his spare time in city square on a still hunt for votes. The registrars of voters advertise today the dates upon which they will meet to revise the voting lists. Unless your name is on the lists, it will be impossible to vote at the caucuses. Sept. 26. This year they are unusually important and should be well attended.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The Glovers of Atlantic have now made it ten straight.

Watch for football news from now on. The Quincy High athletic association has secured the services of a permanent coach and it is likely that a few surprises are in store for us.

The game played on the Water street grounds on the morning of the holiday is still fresh in the minds of local fans and all talk concerning the outcome has not yet subsided. It was without doubt the best drawing card that has been billed for some time in local circles and the number of fans who turned out for the occasion, prove conclusively, that Quincy is an ideal centre for the national pastime, when once the proper method of scheduling games is adopted.

Manager Keohane was subject to no little criticism when he decided to play the game off Monday morning, but he displayed a true spirit of sportsmanship throughout and desired to have things settled in a peaceful way, despite the fact that many fans from the Ward Six section, and other parts of the city as well, thought that the third game of the series should have gone to the Atlantic contingency. The controversy is all over now, the fans are satisfied with the result and everywhere "Ted" Keohane is receiving hearty congratulations for his efficient management of affairs and for the endeavors, as well, that he has made to make baseball play the part it should in Quincy.

The Atlantics are now the title holders and it seems that they should try conclusions with the Makaria nine the logical candidate for the honors of supremacy, and thereby settle the question of superiority for the present season.

Managers Keohane and McKenzie can be depended upon to arrange matters to satisfaction and there is no doubt that with these two teams contesting, that Quincy fans will see the best article of baseball ever displayed upon a local diamond. So get together, you two managers, and give local fandom a chance to witness the kind of baseball that is desired.

It was the first real setback of the season for "Jack" Kolson, who had been twirling effective ball for the Clapp Memorial team all along. Jack was hit hard while in the box and it was plainly evident to all that he was experiencing an off day. Although the stunt he pulled off in the third cannot be considered sportsmanlike, still it was a clever piece of work and it only goes to show that a player must be wide-awake to the situation all the time.

The fans were especially pleased to see "Charlie" Knight in action, for his wonderful record while in Nova Scotia this season was well known to all and this had a tendency to make his appearance on the mound all the more desirable. Knight entered the game at a bad stage, for the Atlantic boys were hitting the ball hard and it would require an exceptionally good twirler to stop them. Then, too, "Sid" Duggan seemed to be unable to catch Knight efficiently and this was also a serious drawback. But Charlie accredited himself in fine style. His speed was good, his control was well mastered and the fact that he struck out eight men goes to show that greater things are to be expected from him on his next appearance.

Makaria seems to be going at a fast clip and should give the Atlantics a game for blood.

South Quincy and West Quincy are due to play on Water street grounds next Saturday.

That running back handed catch of Keohane's in the third was about the best ever and every one who was present was willing to concede that the left fielder on the Atlantic team is as about as fast a player as one can see in amateur semi-professional ranks.

Fay, too, deserves credit for his playing and especially for the remarkable one hand stop made in the early part of the game.

I have been watching "Joe" Desmond very closely during the entire season and his playing all along has convinced me that he is without a peer as a first sacker in local circles. On the holiday he was compelled to "dig" many a badly thrown ball out of the dust and his hitting has also been commendable.

The members of the Manet club were subject to much ridicule as a result of the performance of their team mates against West Quincy last Saturday, but the tables seemed to be turned on the morning of the holiday, when the members of this prominent organization were satisfied in leaving the Water street grounds with considerable West Quincy money.

942. How long has it been since that number of admirers of the national pastime was noticeable at a baseball game in Quincy?

Did you notice how Walter Lonergan, last year's captain of the Old Colony League Champs, performed for the Red Sox last Monday? Four hits out of six times up is certainly going some. It does seem that "Lony" is in the right place now and his many friends are rooting hard for him in the hope that he may be able to land a permanent birth.

BRIEFS

It was announced this morning that President Taft would be among the spectators at the aviation field this afternon.

The family of James H. Penniman of Hancock street who have been at Cliftondale for the summer are expected to return to their winter home Thursday.

Commissioner Bainbridge said this noon that work building the new granolithic walk, on the west side of Hancock street, would be commenced Thursday morning. On this job the city is furnishing the material and the work is being done by a contractor.

Work has been commenced building the new sidewalks in the different parts of the city, authorized by the City Council last June. Most of these sidewalks are to be tar concrete although there are a few that will be granolithic.

Mayor Shea has been unusually popular for the past ten days, for many believed that he had at his disposal an unlimited supply of aviation tickets. At any rate he has hundreds of calls every day for them. All of the young ladies at City Hall as well as the department officials have been his guests at least one day of the meet.

Assailant Still at Large---Friends Arrested

There was a lively row among the Italians on Brackett street, Wednesday evening, during which Frank Mariana was shot and seriously injured and two other men had their faces bitten. Domenico Milinazzo, who it is allaged did the shooting, succeeded in getting away and has not as yet been arrested, although the police of Quincy and Boston have a good description of him.

The trouble is said to have arisen over a game of croquet, during which Domenico was either hit or came near being hit by one of the balls, while the game was in progress in the yard at 97 Brackett street. All of the parties concerned in the assault and shooting are said to be related to each other and the police have had some difficulty in getting a correct version of the affair. It is alleged, however, that Domenico fired the shot which hit Marinana and that Frank Mola also attempted to shoot, while Salvatore Cosentino was armed with a wicked looking knife. As far as can be learned however he did not use it.

From what can be learned, Mariana was shot while stooping. The bullet, a 8 calibre, entered his stomach and took a downward course fracturin gthe hip bone and entering the leg.

It was sometime after the shooting before the police became aware of it. The facts were made known when Dr. Hardwick was called to attend Mariana, who was at at the boarding house of Santis Serafina at 97 Brackett street. Dr. Hardwick rendered first aid after which Marina was sent to the City Hospital where an operation was performed, late in the evening by Dr. Lund of Boston. The bullet was found just under the skin of the back, having gone through from the stomach. None of the intestines were punctured, but the right hip was fractured. His condition is pronounced as serious.

The story told the police by Mariana is, that he was engaged in playing a game of bowls and in throwing one of the balls it hit Domenico in the knee. This threw him into an uncontrollable rage and drawing a revolver he fired a shot at him. After the shooting, he threw the revolver away and ran off. While being taken into the house, Luigi Milinazzo, a brother of Domenico, picked up the revolver and running into the house made an attempt to complete the job started by his brother. A scuffle ensued during which the other boarders got the revolver away and during the scuffle Luigi was bitten on the chin. The brothers then disappeared.

The police were able to obtain a good description of the men wanted and upon searching the house seized three valises belonging to them. These contained account books with two Italians and a Boston bank.

Sometime later in the evening, Officer Avery met several Italians on Adams street, near the residence of Fred B. Rice and noticing that one of them had a cut lip, he placed him under arrest believing that he was the man wanted for the shooting. The fellow offered no resistance. The patrol wagon was summoned and on its arrival two of the other men were arrested, all being taken to the police station. The man with the cut lip gave his name as Luigi Milinazzo, a brother of Domenico, the man alleged to have done the shooting. He said that he did not know where his brother was and the cut on his lip was made by Mariana's teeth and that he had hit back in self defense. One of the three men had a revolver which he threw away when the arrest was made. It was picked up by the police. This weapon was a hammerless Iver Johnson 38 calibre revolver. All of the chambers were full.

The man who threw the revolver away is said to have been Fred Mola of 32 Brackett street. The third man gave his name as Alfano Calorgero, of 15 Summer street, and was arrested as a witness.

At the police station, Luigi had his wound dressed by Dr. Jones, who said it had been caused by a bite. Luigi

"BOOM QUINCY" THE SLOGAN AT BOARD OF TRADE MEETING

Many Important Matters Considered Including Street Car Extension and the Building of A Public Dock---Granite Men Endorse Scheme For River Improvement---Ex-Representative Fallon Speaks

"Boom Quincy" has long been the slogan of our many improvement organizations and it was greatly in evidence at the meeting of the Board of Trade held Wednesday evening. President Eugene R. Stone was in the chair and it was shortly before midnight when the gathering dispersed, after having considered many topics of the utmost interest to Quincy.

The matter of the extension of car service was taken up at length, and it was voted to go on record as being in favor of asking the Bay State Railway Company to extend the East Milton car line to the Boston line. The selectmen of the town of Milton are to be notified of the action taken, also the officials of the company, and it is expected that they will be present at the next meeting to give their views on the matter.

The matter of excess baggage rates, of which the Boston Chamber of Commerce is making an issue, was discussed at length and a vote was taken notifying the Boston organization that the local association is opposed to having trucks limited to less than 45 inches and thereby paying rates on excess baggage of 150 pounds or more.

The question of a public dock then caem up and held sway the greater part of the evening. Communications were read from practically all the granite dealers and other business men who might have occasion to use a dock. The secretary of the Board had sent out letters the week previous asking the amount of shipments that would be forthcoming in the event of a dock system being established. About fifty replies were forwarded and out of these there were but two firms that declared the dock would be of no advantage to them. The letters showed that great ship-

GOMEZ-NOW NUPTIALS

Quietly Wedded at St. John's Parochial Residence

AT HOME AT HOUGHS NECK

A wedding of especial interest in local circles took place at the St. John's Parochial residence Wednesday evening. The contracting parties were Everett Gomez of 9 Edwards street, and Miss Maude Now of Charles street, Houghs Neck.

The pastor of St. John's church, Rev. John J. Coan, was the officiating clergyman.

The bridesmaid was Miss Nellie Collins of Brackett street, and the best man William McDermott, of Elm place. Only a few intimate friends and relatives of bride and groom were present.

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride, and after a honeymoon to New York, the newly married couple will assume permanent residence at Houghs Neck.

Jerrold—"I can't get any speed out of that motor car you sold me. You told me you had been arrested six times in it."

Hobart—"So I was, old chap. For obstructing the highway."—Stray Stories.

RAILROAD ACQUIRES OLD BAXTER ESTATE PROPERTY

Land Probably Taken in Connection With Scheme for Abolishing Grade Crossings

Rumor That Land Will Be Used For Freight Yard

Papers were passed this week conveying to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. the property on School street commonly known as the Daniel Baxter estate, now owned by what is known as the Homestead Trust.

The property consists of the old homestead house, and barn in the rear The store building facing on School street and the store house in the rear, together with 48,000 square feet of land..

The land is probably taken in connection with the abolishing of the grade crossings at Water and Saville streets and the building of the four track system by the railroad. For sometime past, the railroad has been acquiring land along its line through the city, getting ready for the additional roadbed between Boston and South Braintree.

There are many rumors in regard to this most recent purchase by the railroad, one of which is that it is the intention of the railroad company to make this property a School street entrance to its freight yard. Many believe that the company intends to make this property a part of its local freight yard and that instead of two freight depots in Quincy proper there will be one large yard which will take care of the centre with entrances to it from Granite and School streets. The yard for the granite industry at Quincy Adams would it is thought, be retained.

That the most recent purchase by the railroad of the Baxter property will play an important part in the elimination of the two grade crossings there is no doubt. Under the plan which many believe will be adopted for this, the School street bridge would have to be raised. As it is considerably higher now than the grade of School street, at its junction with Franklin, it would mean quite a hill to climb if such a change was made.

It is therefore among the probabilities that the present bridge may be abolished and a new street built connecting the old one on either side of the bridge, through the Baxter property.

GILCOINE—MEANEY WEDDING

Miss Mary Gilcoine daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Gilcoine of 12 Sumner street was married Wednesday evening to John Meaney, of Franklin street, a prominent young man connected with the Fore River Company. The wedding ceremony took place at the Parochial residence of St. John's church and was solemnized by the pastor Rev. John J. Coan. A wedding reception followed the ceremony and a number of the friends of both parties were in attendance.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Meaney are well and favorably known in local circles and enjoy the acquaintance of a large number of friends who were especially pleased to learn that they had been united in wedlock. After their honeymoon trip, which will take in different parts of New York, they will reside on Franklin stret.

FOOT CRUSHED.

Harz Donz, a teamster employed by W. F. Loud & Son, had his left foot badly crushed at the gravel pit near the city stables this morning by being run over by one of the gravel teams. The police ambulance was called and he was removed to his home on Union street. It is not thought that he is seriously injured.

OPENING OF BOWLING ALLEY

Every accommodation is available for bowling lovers at 16 Granite street. The alleys open for the season tonight and no stone has been left unturned to make it an ideal bowling centre.

The alleys have been polished and resurfaced, a new ventilating plant has been installed, and fine pool tables are also in evidence. Cigars and tonic can be obtained and a large electric sign will point out the place where an enjoyable evening can be spent to advantage.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It will cost $900,000 to raise the Maine when the job is completed. Maybe this will help us to remember.

Sauerkraut is to be higher this year because the cabbage crop is short. This is the most unkindest jump of all.

It is not true that the high tide along the coast is due to the floating of the world's biggest battleship at the Fore River Ship yards.

92,000,000 lobsters have been liberated along the Maine coast, but it will take far more than that to feed the chorus girls through one winter.

The House of Governors is to meet this month at Spring Lake, N. J., but we doubt if they have been drawn there by the suggestion in the name of the place that water is abundant.

John W. Gates left about $30,000,000. Would any hardship be done to anyone, if an estate of that size was assessed an inheritance tax of 25 to 50 per cent?

There is talk of abolishing the express companies and making the railroads do the work. That would open a broader field for some of our artistic baggage smashers.

Champ Clark is sure that the Democrats will come back in 1912. Still it might be a good plan for him to take out accident insurance on his sureness.

A committee of French experts is coming over to study American methods. They will find that the American article down on the Bowery will come close up to Maxim's.

President Taft's plan to make 200 speeches during his trip to the Pacific coast reminds us of what the number might have been if William Jennings Bryan had been elected.

At a meeting of women held in an Ohio town the other day, the question was propounded, "What is a highball?" From what we have heard sisteren, it is a pleasant concontion for promoting a high old time.

President Taft has been a judge and he doubtless knows what he is talking about when he says it will be impossible for judges to be independent, and yet afraid of the politicians at the same time.

Congress having adjourned, Champ Clark went back to Missouri to discover whether his presidential boom had pawed down the fence and broken over into any of the neighboring states.

THE DANGEROUS DUST.

A warning against the dangers of dust was recently issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in which it is shown that percentage of deaths caused by tuberculosis in dusty trades is more than double that for all employed men in the registration area of the United States.

"Dusts are of three kinds," says the National associaton; "factory, street and house dusts." The statement refers to the results obtained through investigations made for the Bureau of Labor, by Frederick L. Hoffman. While among males generally in the registration area of the United States 14.5 per cent. of all deaths are from consumption, the mortality among grinders from this disease is 49.2 per cent., and in hardly any of the dusty trades is it below 25 per cent. The percentage of deaths from tuberculosis among all those exposed to metalic dust is 36.9 per cent.; to mineral dust, 28.6 per cent.; to vegetable fibre dust, 28.8 per cent; to mixed animal and other forms of dust. 32.1 per cent; to street dust, 25.5 per cent.; and to organic, or dust coming from the articles being manufactured, 23 per cent.

The statement speaks also of the dangers from home dust, especially in rooms that are not well ventilated. The association warns against dry sweeping, and against the use of the feather duster or other devices that scatter but do not take up the dust.

Since the ordinary dust blown about in the streets is impregnated with disease germs, the National association urges the adoption of methods that will prevent the further dissemination of such bacilli. It also urges for the coming months of fall and winter, more open windows and more fresh air in house, shop and schoolroom.

THE COUNTY FAIR CROWDS

Once more the rolling year has brought us around to the cattle show season. It is customary for the Smart Alecks of metropolitan press to rail at the rustic character of the people there assembled. The artist who covers "cattle show" fails of editorial commendation unless the farmers are depicted with bushy hair and superfluous whiskers and the women are set forth with hoop skirts and floppy bonnets.

No doubt the artists who cover these events never get any nearer the scene than the golf clubs just outside the city limits. For their benefit we might inform them that you can see some pretty good styles at the modern county fair. Occasionally there are traces of whiskers, but no more so than you can see on Broadway.

As for the women, how they have spruced up since fashion cuts began to circulate about the country. It takes a lot of presence to run a grange meeting, and country women oftentimes look a good deal smarter than the Suffragette element you get in the women's clubs about the big cities.

As for the up-to-date country girl, there isn't a finer feminine specimen afoot. She has gone just far enough in the world to know what good clothes can do for her, and not so far as to imagine that the paint brush is mightier than rosy human flesh and blood.

HOME AND ABROAD.

Closing his interesting letter with the patriotic remark, "we turn back to our own country with a feeling of sincere pride, when we consider what our own people have accomplished in such a wonderfully short time, Col. Kincaide tells in a few words two paramount facts, first, that of a little sentiment, there's no place like home, and the other, that this country, considering its age has outstripped anything so far in history.

Undoubtedly the inspection tour of the Boston Chamber of Commerce will do a world of good for this locality. Coming just now, when our own city has at its command the opportunity to secure funds to improve its water front, the ideas secured abroad by such a prominent citizen will be of the greatest help in deciding the important questions bound to arise.

Mr. Kincaide says, among other things, leading business men in Germany consider it an honor to serve in the city government. When a city needs a mayor they secure the best man they can find in the empire. They do not hesitate to advertise for a mayor and select the one from the available list which has the best record.

Among other interesting statements are these:

Public utilities are nearly all owned by the government consequently these interests are in harmony with the city plan.

The railroad station is the gateway of the city, it is built substantially of imposing size and attractive. Flowers in abundance can everywhere be seen.

Parks, boulevards, school houses, pleasure spaces and even docks are planned to fit into one another for a generation to come, so that a pleasing view reaches the eye at every turn.

Trolley wires the attached to fixtures on buildings doing away wth trolley poles.

Street signs of artistic design lettered on both sides are placed at every street corner.

Roads are built to last for a generation. Foundations are deep and drainage receives most careful attention.

Vacant land is leased at a small charge or loaned to the poor without cost for farming purposes.

—The passing away of the old country banker means that it is less easy to get credit on purely personal security than in the old days. A great centralized institution must necessarily lay down rules and to some extent standardize the conditions on which it will make advances against security.—Economist.

IN MEMORY OF C. G. FARWELL

Who Died Last Week at His Home in Wollaston

A RESPECTED CITIZEN

Charles G. Farwell, who died at Wollaston last week at the age of 59 years and 11 months, was born in Andover, Mass., Sept. 23, 1851, his father being at the time principal of Abbott Academy. He was prepared for college at Demark Academy, Iowa and was graduated from Middlebury Vermont in 1876. For ten years he followed the profession of teaching with marked success, but was obliged to give it up by reason of ill health. Entering upon a business life, he became again a resident of Massachusetts, coming to Wollaston in the fall of 1892, where he has since continuously resided. He was connected as treasurer with the Boston Floating Hospital in its early years, being an intimate friend of Rev. Rufus B. Tobey, to whose effort the Hospital owed its existence.

In Wollaston, Mr. Farwell was a member, and for six years an officer, in the Masonic Lodge. He was a member of the Wollaston Congregational church, a teacher in its Sunday school for several years chairman of its music committee; and at the time of his death, a deacon. To all the duties attendant upon these officers he brought a trained mind, a steadfast doing of needful work, a real patience and a cheerful hope. Himself sustained by a vital faith in God, his spirit was ever optismistic, and in all good works the rewards sought were never personal and never selfish, but always those which the work itself contemplated.

Mr. Farwell was one of a group of men in Wollaston who to the full extent of their ability can be depended upon to sustain things of a common interest. All too many of them have been taken away by death. They were the product of a christian teaching which captured the mind, the conscience and the heart. Many of the men of this class are still in our midst, staunch elements in the upbuilding of our church and community life. These men stand to the many strong younger men of the community examples of unselfish giving and workng and they point the way to a fulfilment of personal success through the larger service in society. Among them Mr. Farwell holds an abiding place.

NOTES FROM ATLANTIC.

The grounds around the Quincy school are in excellent condition, and much credit is due Mr. Smith, the janitor for their pleasing appearance. We are all proud of the building, and doubly so when the grass is nice and green, well cut, and trimmed. Let us hope the children will do their own individual part, now that school has begun, and never step a foot on one spear of grass.

Bathing at the Atlantic beach is practically over for the season for the large majority, but it is surprising to see the number who still take a dip even when high tide is as late as six P. M.

I heard a boy telling some of his companions about his school this noon, and he evidently thought his teacher very strict and desirous of having her orders carried out to the letter. "When she says, 'Feet sideways place, one two!' if everyone doesn't do it just when she says, 'one, two!' she points us out, and there is something doing." Evidently this boy is in the right place to learn the lifelong lesson of carrying out a command to the letter; for he spoke very emphatically, and from his conversation he was one of the unfortunates who were "pointed out." It is the good old motto: "Do it now?" that counts everywhere in life, and thanks to the schools that teach it to the boys and girls who have never been taught it at home.

Mr. F. W. Kilpatrick formerly of Sagamore street, has moved to Boston where he has gone into the real estate business.

Art and Nature.

Art is the revelation of man, and not merely that, but likewise the revelation of nature speaking through man. Art pre-exists in nature, and nature is reproduced in art. As vapors from the ocean floating landward and dissolved in rain are carried back in rivers to the ocean, so thoughts and the semblances of things that fall upon the soul of man in showers flow out again in living streams of art and lose themselves in the great ocean, which is nature. Art and nature are not then, discordant, but ever harmoniously working in each other.—Longfellow's "Hyperion."

TESTING AN EGG.

Many Ways to Detect Staleness Besides Smell and Taste.

It does not require a very discriminating palate to detect an old egg from a new one, says a correspondent of the New York Sun. The former has a musty flavor that the latter never has, and the mustiness may range from a slight taint to a very pronounced one. It is always noticeable in storage eggs.

If any one wishes to verify the judgment of his palate, the following tests may be used:

1.—It is almost impossible to peel the shell from a fresh hard boiled egg without having some of the white come away with it.

2.—A stale egg cannot be beaten to a froth.

3.—When a fresh egg is broken into a dish the yolk stands up and the white does not spread, whereas in a stale egg the yolk lies flat and the white seems watery.

4.—The shell of an egg after a certain length of time loses its chalky appearance and becomes shiny.

5.—The air space in the large end of a newly laid egg is about half an inch in diameter, and as the egg ages this space grows larger. In storage eggs it sometimes extends to one fourth the length. An expert can very closely approximate the age of an egg by examining this space. This is known as candling and is done by holding the egg in a beam of light. A simpler test is to hard boil the egg and notice the relative size of the space.

Hardness of heart is a dreadful quality, but it is doubtful whether in the long run it works more damage than softness of head.—Roosevelt.

SCHOOL ARMY NUMBERS OVER 6000 PUPILS

Meeting of Public School Teachers Held on Wednesday at Coddington School

Schools Crowded In Quincy and Wollaston Districts

A meeting ofthe public school teachers with Supt. Barbour, was held Wednesday afternoon at the Coddington building. At this meeting, the enrollment at the several school buildings of the city was reported. This report shows a school army, including the High school of 5,445. Of this number 4,668 are enrolled in the graded schools.

The entering class in the graded schools numbers 413 and the new class at the High school numbers 315 which is the largest first day freshman class in the history of the school. As there are two weeks more in which pupils may enter the schools, the indications are that these numbers will be increased fully ten per cent.

The only section of the city where the schools are any way crowded are the in the Quincy, Massachusetts Fields and Wollaston districts, but this crowding will be taken care of when the two new school buildings are completed early in the year.

One of the interesting things in relation to the opening of schools is the Atherton Hough school at Houghs Neck. The total enrollment at this school last year was 140. This year the enrollment at this building to date is 154 including an entering class of 21, showing that the school was needed for this section and that it will not be long before an addition will be necessary.

The following table gives the total enrollment in each of the public schools, and the number of the entering class in each. The first column of figures gives the total number of pupils and the second column those in first grade.

Adams	329	25
Atherton Hough	154	21
Coddington	416	31
Cranch	505	21
Gridley Bryant	255	20
John Hancock	317	23
Lincoln	407	36
Mass. Fields	380	31
Quincy	574	45
Washington	397	32
Willard	781	90
Wollaston	353	38
High	777	315
	5,445	728

The enrollment of the graded schools in Sept. 1910 was 4,817 and at the High school 761 making a total of 5,578. As stated above the pupils have two weeks more in which to enter and as fully ten percent more are expected during that period it will be seen that the report for the month of September will show quite an increase over last year. Practically a school army of 6000, not including the Woodward or Parochial school.

The Woodward school, which opened this week has a total enrollment of 180, which is the largest in the history of the school. This years freshmen class numbers 69. The total enrollment of the school in September 1910 was 178.

Parochial School

The Parochial school on Phipps street, also opened this week with a total enrollment of practically 550 an increase of 100 over the total of last year. Up to date 90 new pupils have entered the school, necessitating the opening of two additional rooms for the seventh grade which was added this year.

Rev. Fr. Coan said this morning that pupils have all the month in which to enter, that new enrollments were being made every day and that before the end of the month he expected that the increase in the total enrollment would be considerably over 100. Thi sye ar it was necessary to add the seventh grade and it would not be long before an eighth grade would be added making it necessary to open two more rooms as the boys and girls are taught separately.

The above figures will show that the grand school army of the city numbers, up to date, 6,175.

As there are only seven state elections this fall, it looks like a long cold winter for the politicians.

DELIGHTFUL RECEPTION

Follows Steward-Merrill Wedding at Ashmont

"AT HOME" IN WASHINGTON

Quincy people were much in evidence Wednesday evening at the wedding reception given by James Flint Merrill at his home 16 Bruce street, Ashmont, for his daughter Clara and Roy Franklin Steward of Washington, D. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Steward of Chicago.

The ceremony was solomnized at eight o'clock, Rev. Arthur Little of the Second Congregational church of Dorchester officiating. Frank Elisha Barrows of Washington was best man and the maid of honor Miss Elizabeth Brown Merrill sister of the bride. There were two flower girls Marjorie Hall and Eleanor Merrill who were dressed in pink and white.

The bride, a petite blond, was charming in a princess lace robe over white satin and in delicate contrast was the embroidered white silk marquisette over pink satin worn by the maid of honor; the color scheme of the bridal group being ping and white.

A largely attended reception at half past eight followed the ceremony, among those present being Mr. and Mrs. William Steward of Chicago, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin G. Edgerton, Mayor of Oconomawoc, Wis.,, Mrs. Harry B. Downey and Miss McGregor of Springfield, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Steward are to live in Washington, D. C. where they will be at home to their friends after Nov. 1 at 822 Kennedy street.

The bride is closely identified with Quincy, passing her early girlhood here and for the past few years teaching in the public schools. Her brother J. Frank Merrill lives at West Quincy and her sister Mrs. Arthur W. Hall on Upland road. She is also the niece of Hon. John F. Merrill, who represents Quincy on the Board of County Commissioners at Dedham.

Mrs. Steward goes to her new home with the best wishes of hosts of friends in this vicinity.

—A few years ago a coastwise steamer on fire off Cape Cod would have had little opportunity of summoning the fire department in the form of two ships of war. Not only was there no wireless, but there were mighty few Government ships within call if there had been telegraphic facilities.—Providence Bulletin.

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day receipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

Cut them and paste in scrap book for reference.

A Welcome Guest.

To be a guest esteemed and desired you must make your effort, small as it may be, to look satisfied and happy in whatever company you are placed. Do not go to entertainments and wear a bored, indifferent expression, or wait, with melancholy patience, for someone who willl make the effort to amuse you. Make that effort yourself first, and you will have no reason ever afterward to regret the exertion.

Talk your best, smile your best, and above all things learn how to look as though your fellow guests were amusing and satisfactory. Guard carefully against the mistake of looking dissatisfied, vague and inattentive to the company in which you find yourself.

FOR WOMANKIND

Volle Dinner Gowns

White volle of the finest texture is the material used for the dinner gown designed for informal wear during the early fall. The tops of the peasant sleeve and bodice are laid in groups of fine pin tucks, a band of one-inch Irish insertion extending almost the entire length of the sleeve from shoulder to elbow. The collarless yoke is made of block chiffon finished at the neck with a fine cording of white silk and embroidered French knots. The volle is hand scalloped about the edge of the yoke and trimmed with hand-embroidered dots. Bands of Irish crochet are set in across the front of the bodice, this same lace joining bodice and skirt, outlining the black chiffon cuff and finishing the top of the 15-nch tucked flounce. Hand embroidered dots decorate the skirt above the hem and flounce. A distinctive note is gained by the introduction of Helen pink chiffon beneath the lower part of the bodice and cuff.—Harper's Bazar.

Fashion Hints.

There is a distinct trend toward Second Empire styles, and many are the three-flounced skirts.

Colors that predominate at fashionable gatherings abroad are royal blue, coronation red and empire green.

Not many collarless waists appear for fall; as a rule collars are high, since they look so much better with wraps.

Embroideries on volle are again becoming the feature for the coming season and some exquisite effects are obtained in colors.

Wide lace collars are worn on coats and dresses are bordered with soutache worked in a pattern which gives weight to the edges.

When Ice Is Unobtainable.

A good way to prevent food spoiling when ice is unobtainable is to dig a hole in the floor of your cellar three feet long, eighteen inches wide and nine inches deep—or any desired dimensions in length and width, but never less than nine inches deep: and with cement and sand line the hole with a concrete wall. Use one part cement and five parts sand for this concrete and spread it on the bottom and sides of the hole very evenly and about one inch thick.

Be sure to keep such an improvised refrigerator sweet and clean. It can be washed and dried as any icebox can, and it is well to keep a small lump of charcoal in the corner to absorb any unhealthy gases or germs that may emanate from the food. Change the charcoal lump every two or three weeks.

RECEIPES

Camp Biscuit

Mix into a quart of flour two teaspoons baking powder and one of salt (Rounding measure for baking powder I would suggest, and level for salt) and a piece of lard or pork fat the size of an egg. Add one tablespoon evaporated milk, or milk powder, and cold water enough to make a dough that can be rolled out with a bottle or rolling pin to one-half inch thick. Cut into form with top of baking powder can or knife. Place in rows in the greased pan of the baker and place before a hot fire. Watch very carefully to prevent burning and turn the pan around so as to have even baking. If baked too slowly the biscuit will be hard and tough, and if too quickly they will be doughy inside. Test with sharp sliver of wood to see when done.

Flour Camp Bread

Make same as biscuit and put into pan without cutting into forms. If you have no bread board or flat surface specially adapted for the purpose, it is possible to mix in the flour bag, which is a matter of considerable skill. The veteran camper says do not knead the bread too much or it will be tough. Under the circumstances we will take his advice, as we would need to be pretty tough ourselves to knead much in a flour bag.

Other Breads.

Other breads are made in camp practice as above, simply compounding with the rye, oatmeal or other cereal meal or flour as desired, or available but mixing and cooking on same general lines, sweetening or scalding if desired.

Spinach.

Wash a half peck of nice spinach, picking out any damaged leaves and the roots, and lift it from the wash water, putting it into a double boiler; add to the spinach a pinch of salt, but no water except such as cling to the leaves. Cover closely, cook until soft enough to rub through a colander. Scald a quart of milk, thicken with a tablespoonful each of butter and flour rubbed together, and add this to the spinach as soon as it thickens. Season and serve.

Delmonico Potatoes.

Dispose a pint of cooked, sliced potatoes and a pint of hot white sauce, made with milk as the liquid, in alternate layers, in a buttered baking dish. Cover the top with buttered cracker crumbs and set into the oven to brown the crumbs.

Consolation.— "Why! What's up Cholly?"

"Toothache, confound it. I'm going to have 'em all out. If this keeps on, I'll be dead soon and it won't matter—"

"Oh yes, it would. You'd need 'em to gnash with."—Life.

POINTERS FOR MOTORIST.

A motorist may find that an inner tube has been injured, and perhaps ruined from no apparent cause. Upon examination small holes will be found in its surface, the only logical reason for their presence being apparently poor tube material. This, however, is seldom the cause, says the Michelin Tire man. The real trouble lies with the motorist. He has carelessly fitted the tube allowing small particles of mud and dirt to enter the envelope, the air pressure from within the tube and the external pressure having combined to grind the foreign matter into the tube.

When fitting a tire it is not enough to simply clean the envelope and tube. care should be taken to admit no mud or sand during the operation. The tire levers should not be left lying on the ground as they will collect dirt which may find its way into the envelope.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM OVER WATCH CONTEST.

From the enthusiasm shown by the crowds of boys and girls that have seen the handsome gold watches at the Sperry & Hutchinson Company premium parlor located at the Quincy Department Store, there is going to be some hustling among the contestants.

Never have we heard of such enthusiasm. Hundreds of boys and girls have entered the watch contest. The watches will be awarded to the three boys and three girls who secure the most votes. Votes can be secured by clipping the ballots from the Quincy Daily Ledger and by voting your Green trading stamps.

Complimentary remarks are heard on all sides for the Quincy Daily Ledger and the Sperry & Hutchinson Company ,for giving the little folks a chance to secure these gold watches. Boys and girls are clipping ballots and hustling in every section of Quincy and vicinity so great is the interest.

All ready we hear of clubs forming in different neighborhoods to help some poor child secure votes. A little girl while viewing the watches remarked, "I will win one of those watches if I have to canvass every house in Quincy and ask them to save the ballots for me, and I will work hard until the very last ballot is published." We would advise all boys and girls to follow the rule as stated by the little girl above mentioned.

Do not give up. Keep at it and the hustlers will be rewarded. Let us remind you again to deliver all your votes to the "S. & H." premium parlor, Quincy Department Store, 1435 Hancock street. Do not hold your ballots as there is a time limit on them, and they should be deposited promptly.

If you follow instructions as printed on ballots you will make no mistakes. All ballots deposited after the date of expiration printed thereon will not be counted.

A LACK OF SUPPORT

Chances of Strike on the Illinois Central Are Growing Dim

Chicago, Sept. 7.—The probability of a strike of the Federated Shop Employes of the Illinois Central railroad was lessened when it was reported that officers of the nine international unions involved had declined to extend the support of their organizations to such an industrial struggle.

After another all-day conference of the committee of international officers of the unions, the officers declined to authorize any statement of their position. It is said that they sent word to the members of the system federation committee that they could strike if they desired, but that the international unions at this time could not authorize such action.

—The question of supervised play grounds for children will be taken up seriously by the city of St. John, N. B. For several years past the Women's Council, with the aid of a small civic grant, have conducted a supervised play ground in one of the school yards and an institution called the Every Day Club has conducted another. At an outdoor entertainment given by the children in presence of a large crowd of people at one of these grounds one evening last week, Mayor Frink pledged himself to bring the whole question of play grounds before the City Council and endeavour to have suitable public grounds equipped. The Council last Spring endorsed the general principal of municipal play grounds but took no further action. The Mayor, with the evidence before him of what might be done with school houses and grounds as social and play centers, declared that he would not rest until action had been taken to bring St. John into line with cities which realize the value of play grounds for the children.

MRS. THURSTON

FOUND DEAD IN BED

Mrs. Thurston, Noted Novelist, Becomes a Victim of Apoplexy

Cork, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Katherine C. Thurston, the Irish novelist, who wrote "The Masqueraders," "The Gambler," etc., was found dead at a hotel here.

Upon retiring Mrs. Thurston was apparently in her usual health. Apoplexy is given as the cause of her death.

Mrs. Thurston was a native of Cork and married in 1901 Ernest C. Thurston, with whom she was the joint author of several popular novels. The authoress was granted a divorce in the spring of 1910.

GERMANY DELIVERS ANSWER TO FRANCE

Counter-Proposals Submitted In the Moroccan Dispute

Berlin, Sept. 7.—M. Cambon, the French ambassador, and Herr Von Kiderlen-Waechter conferred last evening and the German reply to the French proposals was delivered.

According to the Cologne Gazette's semi-official dispatch the German counter-proposal demands a full guarantee on important economic interests in Morocco, concerning which technical advice must be taken before the conclusion of the agreement.

This will require care and time. Much preparatory work, however, has already been accomplished in the details of the guarantee and territorial compensation, so that, with good will on both sides, an early result may be hoped for.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF SKIN

Expected From Guests Invited to a "Cuticle Party"

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 7.—Bert Smith, who risked his life in a steam filled room to save Joseph Cochran, his assistant, from being scalded to death, issued invitations yesterday afternoon to friends to be his guests at a "cuticle party."

Surgeons at the city hospital explained he would be disfigured for life unless persons voluntered to part with strips of skin to be grafted on his face.

Smith and his companion were trapped in a small apartment in the basement of the Champion building when a steam pipe burst. Smith's arm was broken and he was badly burned.

BODIES FOUND BY DOG

Bullet Holes In Heads of Twin Boys Murdered In Woods

Aberdeen, Wash., Sept. 7.—The bodies of the 19-year-old twin sons of Henry Beauer, a farmer, were found by deputy sheriffs in a lonely spot near the shack of the boys' uncle, John Turno. Bullet holes in the heads of both boys indicated the manner in which they met death. A posse is in search of Turno, who is missing.

The two boys went bear hunting. When they did not return at night the father started a search and later notified Sheriff Payette, who sent out a posse with a bloodhound to take up the trail. The bloodhound soon found the bodies covered with leaves.

GREAT SCARE IN NAVY YARD

Heavy Sticks of Dynamite Secreted In "Hoodoo" Crane

SEVERAL LIVES IN JEOPARDY

Accidental Discovery of Apparent Plot to Blow Up Part of Government's Plant at Charlestown—No Occasion For Use of Explosives In Vicinity of Giant Monolith—Official Investigation Without Result

Boston, Sept. 7.—An apparent plot to dynamite the lower end of the Charlestown navy yard was disclosed yesterday, when three heavy sticks of dynamite were accidentally uncovered in the gigantic floating crane in the yard by workmen. The lives of 500 men were endangered.

The dynamite was secreted in the framework of the crane and two workmen were wielding hammers about a foot away. One of them happened to examine the place he was next going to hammer and saw the explosives.

More than 100 men, mostly iron workers, were repairing the monster crane at pier 9. Hundreds of other workmen were in the immediate vicinity.

At the discovery of the dynamite the men were filled with consternation. They laid down their tools, too alarmed to continue work.

The officials of the yard were notified. Experts of the hull division hurried to the scene. With the greatest precautions the dynamite was removed.

There was no occasion for the use of explosives in the repair work being done on the monolith of iron and steel, nor in that particular section of the yard.

No sooner had the workmen begun their duties again, the dyanmite having been removed, than officials spread about the yard in an endeavor to learn particulars of the plot. They investigated for hours, but without result.

The crane has already met with three mishaps and is known throughout the yard as the "hoodoo" crane. About three months ago the crane, which is one of the most powerful owned by the government, mysteriously sank at one of the docks in the yard.

Just previous to its being submerged it had been inspected by officials and considered ready for work. Only a short time previous it had been towed from New York. On that trip it went aground.

CLOSE OF AERO MEET

Wound Up by Flight to Boston Light by Grahame-White

Boston, Sept. 7.—The second Harvard aero meet closed yesterday afternoon. Three minor world's records were broken during the week. They were for quick starting, 8 3-5 seconds, by Lincoln A. Beachey; speed and altitude climbing, 2005 feet in four minutes, by Claude Grahame-White; accuracy in bomb throwing, 9.4 feet, average for three bombs, by Tom Sopwith.

Skimming low over the harbor at the tremendous speed of ninety miles an hour, Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, won the fourth and last Boston light race in 27 minutes 35 1-5 seconds, breaking the best previous record for the 33-mile course by nearly four minutes.

WEALTHY MEN INDICTED

Woman Said to Have Furnished Evidence In Smuggling Case

New York, Sept. 7.—United States District Attorney Wise announced yesterday afternoon that indictments charging smuggling, in connection with the famous smuggling plot, of which Mrs. Helen S. Jenkins was the principal character, had been found against Nathan Allen, the wealthy leather merchant of Kenosha, Wis., and John R. Collins, millionaire coal operator of Memphis.

The testimony of Mrs. Jenkins, the woman with whom Allen is said to have quarrelled and broken his friendship not long ago, is understood to have formed the foundation upon which the true bills were found.

GEIDEL IN SING SING

Boy Murderer Starts Upon His Sentence of Twenty Years

Ossining, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Paul Geidel, the 17-year-old slayer of William H. Jackson, has begun his indeterminate sentence of not less than twenty years at Sing Sing prison.

A group of deputy sheriffs escorted him on foot from the railroad station to the prison, where he was given the regulation haircut, shave and bath, afterwards donning the gray prison outfit.

Bailey to Quit the Senate

Gainesville, Tex., Sept. 7.—United States Senator Joseph W. Bailey announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election to the United States senate. His term will expire March 3, 1913.

BOARD OF TRADE

ments would be made and it would be hard to estimate the amount of business that would be done.

Ex-Representative Peter T. Fallon was the principal speaker on the dock question. He cited many instances where great losses had been experienced by local men as a result of having no dock system. He declared that with a such a system, Quincy would be able to secure the large amount of work lost in Brooklyn and New York city. Owing to the high rate of tonnage, Mr. Fallon said that these cities secured their granite from Barre, Vermont, and even Cape Ann. "A dock in Quincy, continued the speaker, would entail a business accumulation of thousands of dollars."

Mr. Fallon dwelt at length upon the method that could be employed in digging out the channel. He advocated a channel 200 feet wide and 15 feet deep. He said that the channel could be made by suction dredges and that the same advantages would accrue as were noticeable in the case of the Charles River, and as is now fast becoming evident in the construction of the Cape Cod Canal. Mr. Fallon said that in dredging in Quincy the embankments on both sides of the channel could be raised, and that besides having the channel made, the land bordering on it would be increased and many improvements would result. He advocated an expenditure of $500,000 for the establishment of a dock system and said in conclusion that the bulk of this could readily be paid by the state, inasmuch as the whole project would be of inestimable advantage to the whole country, as well as Quincy.

Others who spoke on the subject were Frank Fessenden Crane, President Stone, Councilman Sandberg and Arthur W. Stetson.

A vote of thanks was then given to those men who had kindly answered the letters sent out by the secretary, and the abiding gratitude of the association was recorded for the many suggestion and informations offered.

A report of the banquet committee was heard, and all plans for the banquet, to be held at Norteman's pavilion, Houghs Neck, next Tuesday evening, were completed. The members expect to make this the gala event of the season and the speakers for the occasion will be Mayor William T. Shea, Congressman James M. Curley, Senator George L. Barnes, ex-Senator Eugene C. Hultman and Henry L. Kincaide. The two latter have just returned from Europe and the members of the Board of Trade expect that these two gentlemen will have many suggestions to put forth relative to the development of Quincy.

Towards the close of the evening a few words waxed warm between a few of the members. The question of allowing the Republican City Committee the use of the rooms was considered, as was also the dealings with the Merchants' Association.

Many members were opposed to having the rooms let to any political organization, because, they contended, it had a tendency to introduce politics into the Board of Trade and cause it to be termed a political organization. A. L. Whitman was the strongest objector and protested vehemently against allowing any political organization to have the use of the rooms.

Councilman Sandberg scored some of the members of the Merchants' Association, for interfering with the activities of the Board of Trade. He said that some of the members of that organization were accustomed to dictate to the Board of Trade and that it was about time that such tactics were stopped. After many other minor matters were brought forth the gathering broke up after a most interesting session.

HELD IN $45,000 EACH

High Sums Fixed to Hold Alleged Robbers Brought From Austria

Boston, Sept. 7.—Jacob and Joseph Goldberg, the men brought from Austria by the Boston police on a charge of breaking into the jewelry store of Samuel E. Ullian, 1113 Washington street, and stealing $15,000 worth of jewelry, and who are also suspected of being members of the gang that terrorized Jamaica Plain, Methuen and other places, were each held in $45,000 bail by Judge Lawton in the superior court.

The men were held on three indictments charging breaking and entering and two charging the larceny of the jewelry.

—Under the present law the voting lists must be posted two months before the Novembeer meeting which falls this year on November 7. The list as revised and corrected must be posted September 7, and at least one meeting for registration purposes must be held by the board previous to the joint primary September 26.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rutford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

CHAPTER XVI.

ELEANOR INTERVENES.

THE president's private car was sidetracked on the short spur at the eastern end of the Crow's Nest, and when Lidgerwood reached it he found the observation platform fully occupied.

"Hello, Mr. Lidgerwood, is that you?" called Van Lew when the superintendent came across to the spur track. "I thought you said this was a bad man's country. We have been out here for a solid hour, and nobody has shot up the town or even whooped a single lonesome war whoop. In fact, I think your village with the heavenly name has gone ingloriously to bed. We're defrauded."

"It does go to bed pretty early—that part of it which doesn't stay up pretty late," laughed Lidgerwood. Then he came closer and spoke to Miss Brewster. "I am going west in my car, and I don't know just when I shall return. Please tell your father that everything we have here is entirely at his service. If you don't see what you want you are to ask for it."

"Will there be any one to ask when you are gone?" she inquired, neither sorrowing nor rejoicing so far as he could determine.

"Oh, yes; McCloskey, my trainmaster, will be in from the wreck before morning, and he will turn flipflaps trying to make things pleasant for you if you will give him the chance."

Miss Brewster was running her fingers along the hand rail as if it were the keyboard of a piano. "You say you don't know how long you will be away?" she asked.

"No, but probably not more than the night. I was only providing for the unexpected, which some people say is what always happens."

"Will your run take you as far as the Timanyoni canyon?"

"Yes, through it and some little distance beyond."

"You have just said that we are to ask for what we want. Did you mean it?"

"Surely," he replied unguardedly.

"Then we may as well begin at once," she said coolly, and, turning quickly to the others: "Oh, all you people, listen a minute, will you? Hush, Carolyn! What do you say to a moonlight ride through one of the grandest canyons in the west in Mr Lidgerwood's car? It will be something to talk about as long as you live. Don't all speak at once, please."

But they did. There was an instant and enthusiastic chorus of approval, winding up rather dolefully, however, with Miss Doty's "But your mother will never consent to it, Eleanor!"

Lidgerwood said what he might without being too crudely inhospitable. His car was entirely at the service of the president's party, of course, but it was not very commodious compared with the Nadia. Moreover, he was going on a business trip, and at the end of it he would have to leave them for an hour or two, maybe longer. Moreover, again, if they got tired they would have to sleep as they could, though possibly his stateroom in the service car might be made to accommodate the three young women. All this he said, hoping and believing that Mrs. Brewster would not only refuse to go herself, but would promptly veto an unchaperoned excursion.

But this was one time when his distantly related kinswoman disappointed him. Mrs. Brewster, cajoled by her daughter, yielded a reluctant consent, going to the car door to tell Lidgerwood that she would hold him responsible for the safe return of the trippers.

"See, now, how fatally easy it is for one to promise more—oh, so very much more!—than one has any idea of performing," murmured the president's daughter, dropping out to walk beside the victim when the party trooped down the long platform of the Crow's Nest to the service car, and when he did not reply, "Please don't be grumpy."

"It was the maddest notion!" he protested. "Whatever made you suggest it?"

"Listen," she said. "I did it out of pure hatefulness. You showed so plainly this afternoon that you wished to be quit of me—of the entire party—that I couldn't resist the temptation to pay you back with good, liberal interest. Possibly you will think twice before you snub me again, Howard, dear."

Quickly he stopped and faced her. The others were a few steps in advance—were already boarding the service car.

"One word, Eleanor, and for heaven's sake let us make it final. There are some things that I can endure and some others that I cannot—will not. I love you; what you said to me the last time we were together made no difference; nothing you can ever say will make any difference. You must take that fact into consideration while you are here and we are obliged to meet. In justice to me, in justice to Van Lew"—

"I think your conductor is waiting to speak to you," she broke in sweetly, and he gave it up, putting her on the car and turning to confront the man with the green shaded lantern, who proved to be Bradford.

"Any special orders, Mr. Lidgerwood?" inquired Bradford.

"Yes. Run without stop to Little Butte, unless the dispatcher calls you down. Time yourself to make Little Butte by 11 o'clock, or a little later. Who is on the engine?"

"Williams."

"Williams? How does it come that he is doubling out with me? He has just made the run over the Desert division with the president's car."

"So have I, for that matter," said Bradford calmly, "but we both got a hurry call about fifteen minutes ago."

Lidgerwood held his watch to the light of the green shaded lantern. If he meant to keep the wire appointment with Flemister there was no time to call out another crew.

"I don't like to ask you and Williams to double out of your turn, especially when I know of no necessity for it. But I'm in a rush. Can you two stand it?"

"Sure," said the ex-cowman. Then he ventured a word of his own. "I'll ride up ahead with Williams—you're pretty full up back here in the car anyway—and then you'll know that two of your own men are keepin' tab on the run. With the wrecks we're enjoying"—

Lidgerwood was impatient of mysteries.

"What do you mean, Andy?" he broke in. "Anything new?"

"Oh, nothing you could put your finger on. Same old rag chewin' going on up at Cat Biggs' and the other waterin' troughs about how you've got to be done up if it costs money. Williams went over to take the 266 out o' the roundhouse a few minutes

"RUN WITHOUT STOP TO LITTLE BUTTE."

"What's that?" was the sharp query.

"That's all there was to it," Bradford went on imperturbably. "Williams asked the shopman what he was doing under there, and the fellow crawled out and said he was just lookin' her over to see if she was all right for the night run. Says Williams to me, tellin' me about it just now: 'That's all right, Andy. But how in blue blazes did he or anybody else except Matthews and the caller know that the 266 was goin' out? That's what I'd like to know.' And I had to pass it up."

Lidgerwood asked a single question.

"Did Williams find that anything had been tampered with?"

"Nothing that you could shoot up the back shop man for. One of the truck safety chains—the one on the left side, back—was loose. But it couldn't have hurt anything if it had been taken off. We ain't runnin' on safety chains these days."

"Safety chain loose, you say—so if the truck should jump and swing it would keep on swinging? You tell Williams when you go up ahead that I want that machinist's name."

"H'm," said Bradford. "Reckon it was meant to do that?"

"God only knows what isn't meant these times, Andy. Hold on a minute before you give Williams the word to go." Then he turned to young Jefferis, who had come out on the car platform to light a cigarette. "Will you ask Miss Brewster to step out here for a moment?"

Eleanor came out at the summons, and Jefferis gave the superintendent a clear field by dropping off to ask Bradford for a match.

"You sent for me, Howard?" said the president's daughter, and honey could not have matched her tone for sweetness.

"Yes. I shall have to anticipate the Angels gossip a little by telling you that we are in the midst of a pretty bitter labor fight. That is why people go gunning for me. I can't take you and your friends over the road tonight."

"Why not?" she inquired.

"Because it may not be entirely safe."

"Nonsense!" she flashed back. "What could happen to us on a little excursion like this?"

"I don't know, but I wish you would reconsider and go back to the Nadia."

"I shall do nothing of the sort," she said willfully. And then, with totally unnecessary cruelty, she added: "Is it a return of the old malady? Are you afraid again, Howard?"

The taunt was too much. Wheeling suddenly, Lidgerwood snapped out a summons to Jefferis: "Get aboard, Mr. Jefferis. We are going."

REAL ABORIGINE IS CAUGHT IN THE WEST

Scientists Think They Have Made a Great Discovery

San Francisco, Sept. 7.—Anthropologists of the university of California announce that they have found "the most uncontaminated aborigine in the known world." The tribal and folk-lore secured from him thus far are considered of great value. The man, driven from the mountains by forest fires, was caught near Oroville while attempting to steal meat.

"Ishi," the anthropologists call him, which means "man" in the tongue of the Southern Yahi Indians, his tribe. At his theory of the origin of fire the scientists almost danced with joy. It connects intimately with the mythology of other California tribes east of the Sierras and with that of the Greeks and Romans.

When Ishi wearied of talking Professor Waterman offered him a bow and arrow and the old man—Ishi is over 60—brightened up. A hat was put on a post 100 feet away and Ishi sped his first arrow through the centre of its crown.

Ishi's one garment has been replaced by trousers, shirt and necktie. He refuses to remove any of them even at night.

DEATH OF DISLER

Medium Stricken While Receiving Spirit Message For Gage

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 7.—The spiritualistic medium known as Disler, who was stricken under rather sensational conditions here, died without regaining consciousness. Among those assembled at his seance was the former secretary of the treasury, Lyman J. Gage, whose interest in occult and spiritualistic matters is well known.

Disler, who had become the personal friend of the former secretary, was stricken while in the act of receiving a message for Gage, supposedly from the spirit world, and fell into a state of insensibility.

Most Valuable Cotton Crop

New Orleans, Sept. 7.—"No American cotton crop ever grown has sold for as much as the one just marketed, the total value, including the seed, having been $1,030,000,000," according to the report of Secretary Hester of the New Orleans cotton exchange.

Great German Forest Fire

Landsberg, Ger., Sept. 7.—A great forest fire has done damage amounting to $2,000,000 in this district. A captain of artillery was burned to death while fighting the flames.

VALUE OF NEW WEAPON LAW

Shown In Arrest of Man With Bomb Under His Coat

IS HELD IN $10,000 BAIL

Supposed Chief of Black Hand Is Known as "The Fox"—Has Laughed at Police and Levied Tribute For Years—Petrosino, Who Was Murdered In Italy, Had Accused Man Arrested Three Years Ago

New York, Sept. 7.—With a dapper young Italian believed to be one of the country's master criminals in their hands, the police spread their nets for the gang of bomb-throwers, blackmailers and kidnappers that have terrorized the Italian settlement here for the past four years.

Guiseppi Castabile, the Black Hand chief who has hidden in the shadows for years, laughing at the police and levying tribute where he pleased, stumbled into the grip of Detective Carrao of the central office. Tucked under his coat was a dynamite bomb as big as a grape fruit, fused and ready for explosion.

Castabile was arraigned under the new law which makes the mere possession of a deadly weapon a felony, but the police hope to prove against him far more serious crimes.

"In many ways Castabile is the most important prisoner we have ever entertained," said Police Inspector Hughes. "There have been seventeen bomb explosions in the Italian quarter in the past month; how many of these Castabile, who was known as 'the fox,' and his subordinates are responsible for, I don't know, but we hope to fasten enough on him to remove him from the scene of operations for some time."

The detention of Castabile in $10,000 bail has proved the value of the new "deadly weapon" law; and for the mere possession of a bomb, "the fox" may be sent to prison for seven years. The law was passed particularly to assist the police against elusive Italian criminals, whom it is difficult to convict because their victims are afraid to testify against them.

Some of Castabile's career is already a part of the records of the detective bureau. He is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighing 118 pounds, with quizzical blue eyes and a good-humored mouth about which curls a soft brown mustache. He is 27 years old, calls himself a salesman and lives comfortably with his wife and two children at 136 Chrystie street. In that neighborhood he is called "Papinello" —Little Joe—and the nickname is not one of endearment.

Castabile came to New York ten years ago. Two and a half years later he returned to Calabria and appeared again in New York four years ago. Since that time, the police say, he has not done a day's work.

Lieutenant Petrosino, who was murdered at Palermo, was responsible for Castabile's first arrest, on July 17, 1908. Three days before that Petrosino and Corrao were on guard at the store of Francesco Spinella, 314 East Eleventh street, where a "final" Black Hand notice had been served. The detectives stood by while Pinzolo Bonaventuro crept with a bomb into the hallway of that house.

Bonaventuro pleaded guilty to an attempt to wreck the building, and was sent to Sing Sing for five years. In tracing his movements just before his arrest clew after clew pointed to Castabile, and he, too, was arrested, but with Bonaventuro's refusal to talk about anyone but himself Castabile was discharged. But before Bonaventuro set out for Sing Sing he told Corrao, so the detective says, that Ctastabile had fashioned the bomb that was to have brought Spinella to terms.

For three years the police have been keeping track of Castabile. Petrosino long tried in vain to get conclusive evidence against him. Many stories are told about his methods of taking what he wanted from those who feared him too much to complain.

OFF FOR CONNECTICUT

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 7.—President Taft started this morning on a visit to Hartford, where he will lunch with Governor Baldwin, see some harness racing and deliver a speech on peace at the fair grounds. The president expects to be back in Beverly in time for a late dinner.

One of his companions on the Hartford trip is Attorney General Wickersham, who joined the party at Boston and upon his return will go to Marion, Mass., to visit Secretary Nagel.

Women Shirk Jury Duty

Seattle, Sept. 7.—Of twenty-three women called for jury duty in King count, only one remains on the list, the others having been excused when pleas of sex exemption were urged.

DUPLICATES WEBB'S FEAT

Burgess Swims the English Channel on His Tenth Attempt

London, Sept. 7.—William Burgess of Yorkshire completed a successful swim of the English channel after having been in the water for fully twenty-four hours. Burgess was in good condition at the conclusion of the swim, that so many have unsuccessfully tried to negotiate.

Burgess' success in swimming the English channel, which is twenty miles wide where he crossed it, followed nine plucky, but unsuccessful, attempts to navigate the span of water between the French and English coasts.

The only other successful attempt was that of the late Captain Matthew Webb, who swam the distance on Aug. 24, 1875, in 21 hours and 45 minutes. On July 24, 1882, while attempting to swim Niagara rapids, he was drowned.

DECLINES TO MARRY ASTOR

Rhode Island Preacher Says Wedding Was Set For Today

Little Compton, R. I., Sept. 7.—Rev. Frederick L. Brooks, pastor of the Methodist church here, has been asked to officiate over the nuptials of John J. Astor and Miss Madeleine T. Force and has declined, owing to the restrictions which the laws of his church in connection with divorcees place over him.

Richard B. Comstock, a Providence attorney and summer resident here, gave the pastor two days in which to decide, and upon receiving the clergyman's answer is believed to have gone elsewhere in his search for a clergyman.

According to Brooks the date of the wedding was set for today and was supposed to occur at Newport, R. I.

ENORMOUS LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY

China to Face Another Famine on Account of Flood

Pekin, Sept. 7.—The great flood which is devastating a part of the Chinese empire extends from Ichang in the province of Hupeh to Shanghai on the coast, a distance of about 700 miles. The banks of the Yang-tse-Klang have been obliterated, except in the highlands and around the walled cities and towns.

So far the loss of life can only be estimated, but it is believed that thousands of persons have been drowned.

The cotton and rice crops in the Yang-tse-Klang valley have been completely destroyed. The consequent famine will doubtless be more severe even than that of last year.

The Liao river in Manchuria is also flooded. Many have been drowned and a serious famine in that section is certain.

The Chinese government has other important matters confronting it at the present time. Rebellions have arisen in not less than five different quarters.

DEATH OF HELEN DIXON

Woman Once Wielded Great Influence In Colorado Politics

Denver, Sept. 7.—The body of Mrs. Helen F. Dixon, once the most prominent woman politician in Colorado, was found in her squalid home here. She had been dead several hours.

Mrs. Dixon was graduated from the New York academy of music and was said to be the daughter of well-to-do eastern parents. She was an accomplished elocutionist and employed this talent in the Populistic cause when that movement spread over Colorado.

She was an active supporter of Governor Waite and during his administration she was credited with having marked influence in state affairs.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear if the Advice of this Quincy Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.
Most times 'tis the kidney's fault.
Backache is really kidney ache;
That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.
Many Quincy women know this.
Read what one has to say about it
Mrs. F. Curtis, 18 Quarry St., Quincy, Mass., says! "We used Doan's Kidney Pills in our family with good results and in 1908 publicly endorsed them. At the present time I am pleased to confirm that statement. A member of my family was in bad shape from kidney complaint. He used plasters and several well-known remedies, but did not improve until he began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, which were obtained at Cox's Drug Store. They effected a cure in two weeks and restored him to better health than he had enjoyed for years. I have also taken Doan's Kidney Pills myself and have found them excellent for strengthening the kidneys."

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

THEIR AWFUL SECRET.

It Caused the Real Estate Agent to Change His Mind.

When the family who admitted that they were moving because the tenants at the old address made their lives miserable confided to the renting agent that they had one peculiarity which they wished him not to mention to their neighbors in his building the agent got uneasy and executed a mental quickstep trying to devise some way to break the lease. But aloud he said very courteously:

"I shall be glad to oblige you if I can. What is it you wish me to keep a secret?"

"The fact that we pay our rent promptly on the 1st of every month," said the head of the family. "That was something that nobody else in the other house did, and the agent as an incentive to quick action on their part published the news of our promptness. The only action it stirred them into was persecution of us, and they carried that to such extremes that we had to move. If you will kindly refrain from using us as a club to whack your delinquents into obedience we will appreciate it."

The agent resolved not to cancel the lease, but at the same time he relinquished a hastily conceived plan for procuring prompt remittances.—New York Times.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Now that the result of the Atlantic West Quincy game has become a thing of the past, it might be well for you fans to direct your attention to the baseball game, to be played on the Old Colony league grounds, next Saturday. All of you who were present on the holiday know exactly the enthusiasm and excitement that prevailed.

But this coming occasion promises to eclipse them all, for no less an aggregation of ball tossers than from the Battleship Rhode Island, has been billed as the headliner, to try conclusions with the West Quincy boys. All who have ever witnessed the navy boys in action; are well aware that they use every endeavor to win.

The Rhode Island team is the champion of the navy and has already taken the measure of many a fast semi-professional nine. It is also expected that the Nautical stars will be accompanied by their band, and this announcement of itself should prove a sufficient inducement for local fans to turn out in large numbers.

The West Quincy team is to be considerably strengthened for the occasion, and all in all, the contest gives promise of being a most interesting one, despite the fact that no championship honors are at stake, as Atlantic will probably not play with the Makarias until the week following, this to be the real big game scheduled in local circles.

Although it is not yet definitely settled, Manager Joyce says that Knight may be given a chance to perform.

"Ted" Galvin is the latest arrival from the fields of Nova Scotia and he looks in the pink of condition. "Hick" Elcock is expected home this week, and then we will concentrate our attention on that move that "Joe" Ford has in mind.

In Arthur Staff, the teacher of manual training, Quincy High school has an athlete who bids fair to accomplish great things as a coach. Arthur graduated from Brown University this year and is a civil engineer. While at Brown he proved to be one of the foremost athletes ever turned out.

He was an all round man, and was a potent factor last year and this year in the contest with Yale. As an end on the football team, an outfielder on the baseball nine, and a forward on the basket ball quintet, he gained an enviable reputation, and with him directing the athletic movements Quincy High should be without a peer in the interscholastic world.

West Quincy is to have a football team in the field, and when the time comes, we may well await some warm contests, especially if the boys from the West section and the Wollaston A. A. are carded forthe attraction. The Wollaston A. A. expects to have a fast eleven in the field, and this certainly will be done, if the performance of last year can be taken as a criterion..

As the baseball season is fast waning, the time will soon be here to make a selection of an all Quincy team. All fans are urged to send in their choice, which will be printed from day to day. See how near you can come to the Ledger selection, which will appear shortly.

Wootton Is Leading English Jockey.

Jockey F. Wootton is again leading the English riders, Danny Maher, the American, being second. Wootton is much lighter than the Hartford boy.

BASEBALL NOTES

One of the peculiar things of baseball occurred recently in a game at Corpus Christi, Tex., when three Laredo players got hits in succession, yet none of them reached third base.

Joe Agler, the first baseman bought from Newark by the Cubs, is not twenty years old. He has absorbed all the big league advice that Joe McGinnity could give and is going to improve because he is willing to learn.

"Can you tell me," said an inquisitive fan to Hans Wagner, "why it is that you can hit the ball one day and you cannot hit it the next?" To which Hans answered, "Can you tell me why it is that it doesn't rain upside down?"

They have a catcher at Davenport who is said to be so slow on the bases that the pitchers actually pass him to get him on, knowing that all base running will thereby be blocked unless somebody hits the ball over the fence.

AD WOLGAST HAS HARD JOB AHEAD

Packy McFarland Says He Can Make 133 Pounds.

THEY WILL MEET SEPT. 15.

Bout, to Be Held In Milwaukee, Is For Ten Rounds, and Limit Favors Packy, Who Possesses More Skill Than His Opponent.

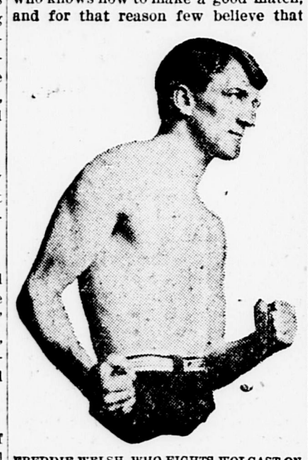

By TOMMY CLARK.

Widespread interest is being displayed by the pugilistic fans in the coming ten round bout between Ad Wolgast and Packy McFarland, to be held in Milwaukee Sept. 15. Wolgast and McFarland are names to conjure with, and the meeting between the boys should furnish one of the finest fistic entertainments of the year.

Although he is to make the low weight of 133 pounds at 3 o'clock, McFarland says it will not injure his chances a bit. He insists that he can make the weight without weakening himself and that he will take on sufficient avoirdupois in the six or seven hours before ringtime to enable him to offset Wolgast's rugged style of milling.

Wolgast recently stated that McFarland has been fooling the public long enough regarding his weight and that he will show him up when they meet in Milwaukee.

McFarland is a shrewd young man who knows how to make a good match, and for that reason few believe that he is running dangerous risks by agreeing to make 133 pounds at 3 o'clock for Wolgast. The conclusion drawn by ring experts is that if Wolgast is forced to live up to the Queensberry rules in Milwaukee McFarland will outpoint him with plenty to spare in the ten round bout. If Wolgast couldn't outpoint K. O. Brown, a clumsy and awkward fighter, in ten rounds it is argued that he will have his hands full in a bout of similar length with a clever boy like McFarland.

Wolgast's best chance to whip McFarland decisively would be in a fight of forty-five rounds, or to a finish, for for the chances are that he would prove stronger in physique than the Chicago boy.

Wolgast's confidence in his ability to whip McFarland lies in his tendency to fight roughly at close quarters. McFarland is one of the few modern boxers who know the meaning of footwork in providing defensive tactics, so that it is believed Wolgast will find it a most difficult matter to reach him very often in ten rounds unless he gets Packy in a corner or on the ropes.

After his battle with McFarland Wolgast intends to rest for a month or so and then take on Freddie Welsh, the ex-champion of England, in Los Angeles, Cal., on Thanksgiving day. Wolgast ought to stow away the little Englishman as easily as he did Moran. Welsh is a tricky fellow in the ring, but he lacks Moran's punch, and all his footwork will not keep him out of danger.

There is reason to doubt that Welsh has any special advantage over Moran in the matter of boxing skill, and he certainly is not more rugged than Moran. It is true that Welsh will not meet the champion halfway, after the fashion of Moran, and for that reason he may avoid the knockout for some time, but eventually the champion will get him.

It will be quite hard for Welsh to stand off Wolgast's furious attacks for more than fifteen rounds, and every one is quite sure that the Englishman has a slim chance of stopping the champion. Welsh is not a hard hitter. Knockouts are few and far between in his record. In fact, it may be said that he never put away a really first class man in his entire ring career.

He is a great defensive fighter and is adept at pecking daintily away with quick jabs and jolts that land freely and pile up a big score of points in his favor. But that lets him out.

The man to defeat Wolgast must be capable of delivering a ripping, crushing punch of a type never possessed by Welsh.

For the matter of that, neither is McFarland particularly strong on the punching angle, but he is a far cleaner, snappier boxer than Welsh and a better man in every way.

A PLEASANT MEETING.

It Is Nice to Find a Friend Who Scatters Sunshine.

"I don't like people who are always coming to me for sympathy."

"They do get tiresome, but I prefer them to the ones who come boasting of their successes and trying to make me dissatisfied with my lot."

"Oh, I don't mind that kind. They never worry me any. I am always successful myself that I never have cause to envy them. And, speaking of success, I made $500 last week in a little real estate deal, and my boy has been making a great record in school. He's away ahead of all the other boys of his age, and my wife has a maid now who is the best girl we have ever been able to find—the best one in our neighborhood, in fact. How is your boy doing now? I heard some time ago that he was inclined to be rather wild."

"Please don't mention him. I'm afraid he is going to bring sorrow upon us. You always were lucky. I guess I'll have to lose the little home I've been paying on during the past eight years, all on the boy's account. My wife has had to quit keeping help, although her health is very poor and"—

"Well, goodby. I've got to be going. Cheer up. What's the use of being grumpy? Look at me. You'll find, if you try it, that it pays to scatter sunshine."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Vol. 26 No. 207 QUINCY, MASS. FRIDAY EVENING SEPTEMBER 8, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

ITALIAN NOT FOUND

No Trace of Principal In Wednesday's Fracas

MAY BE IN BOSTON

The police have been unable as yet to find any trace of Domenico Milinazzo, who is wanted on the charge of assaulting Frank Mariana, Wednesday, with a revolver. Thursday afternoon and again in the evening the police visited the Italian colony on Brackett street and searched two houses, where it was thought that the man might be in hiding. The search however developed nothing.

The police now believe that the man lost no time in getting out of town and that he is now in hiding somewhere in Boston. The Boston police have a good description of him however, and if he should appear in the street his arrest would follow.

Reports from the man who was shot are that he is doing well and that unless something new developes he will soon be about again.

Late Thursday night the police received word that there was something going on in the house of Alfaino Calorgero, the man held as a witness and Chief Burrell and a squad of officers investigated. It seems that Calorgero's wife is expected from Italy and that he had fixed up a house for her reception. He wanted the interior of the house painted and had asked a number of his friends around to help him out. It was this gathering that gave rise to the rumor that there was something wrong.

TODAY'S COURT.

George W. Rackham was fined $20 for violating a rule of the Board of Health at Quincy.

Fred G. Dahlberg was fined $15 for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton.

The continued case of Lizzie Kendall of Weymouth for disturbing the peace was called and she was defaulted.

W. H. Ellis	3,350

Later in the afternoon the commission awarded the contract to Lawler Bros., the lowest bidders. This firm also has one of the other contracts on the bridge.

LINEN SHOWER.

A linen shower was tendered Miss Annie Wadman at the home of Miss Mary McKay Wednesday evening. Miss Wadman, who is soon to leave for the south to enter a life of wedded bliss, was greatly surprised on entering the room by being showered with many beautiful and costly pieces of linen, the men rattling the tins. Miss Nellie Souter presided at the piano, while Miss Mabel Hodge favored the compapny with solos. Games of all sorts were played in which al joined and spent a very enjoyable evening. Refreshments were served by Misses Grace Hodge, Mary McKay and Belva Hamilton of East Milton. The company adjourned at midnight all wishing Miss Wadman success and best wishes for the future.

SQUANTUM AGAIN NORMAL

After Entertaining Aviation Throngs of Past Week

THE FINANCES

Squantum yesterday resumed its usual quietude, after 10 days of aviation and the entertainment of thousands of people from all over New England. By darkness last night the field was pratically stripped of everything movable. The big tent hangars were quickly taken down, the canvas rolled into bundles and packed into teams. This laid waste a large space of ground, and nothing was visible of the former hangars excepting the poles which supported the canvas. In one of the Burgess Company and Curtis wooden hangars were stored Earle Ovington's Blerfot monoplane, the "Dragonfly," in which he made his famous cross-country flight and a monoplane of the Curtiss type.

There was much speculation among those interested in the Squantum aviation meet yesterday as to its financial outcome. While the crowds were not large, it was pointed out that the amount of the prizes was not as large as was expected, that only a small amount of money was spent on repairs to the stands and fences this year, and for this reason there probably would be no loss. Manager Adam D. Claflin, who was in charge for the Harvard Aeronautical society, said last night that the figures had not yet been compiled, and that it was impossible to tell just what the financial outcome would be.

Harry N. Atwood will decide within the next three days whether or not he will make the aeroplane trip from the Pacific coast to New York, according to a telephone message received in this city late yesterday afternoon by his mother.

Mr. Atwood went to New York early yesterday to take part in the Brighton Beach aviation meet. Upon his arrival in the metropolis, Mr. Atwood telephoned to his mother at the family's home in Roxbury, telling her of his safe arrival. He said that he was still uncertain whether he would go to the coast and endeavor to win the $50,000 prize, but that he would decide within three days, and telegraph her his decision.

Mrs. Atwood was talked with late last night by a Herald reporter, following the rumor to the effect that her son had already started for the coast to make the long distance cross-country flight. She emphatically denied this rumor, and to substantiate her denial told of the telephone conversation with Harry.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED FOR SMOKER

Special committee of the Ward Four Improvement association met Thursday evening and completed arrangements for the smoker to be held at its rooms in the St. Jean building, next Thursday evening. A lunch will be served during the evening and several matters of importance to the ward will come up for discussion . Among them will be the missing street railway link between East Milton and Adams street, Dorchester, and the public dock question.

—Navel circles in Washington are said to be preparing to prove the practicability of a 40,000-ton battleship. There is very little need of proof. The only reason why battleships lag behind ocean liners in displacement is that they cost enormously, make no money return on the investment, and call for $1,000,000 or thereabouts, annually for upkeep. It is estimated that a 40,000-tonner would mean the expenditure of $15,000,000 by the time the ship was ready to go into commission. Our present limit is 27,000 tons.—Boston Transcript.

RESIDENTS OF BETHEL BEACH "UP IN ARMS"

Look With Little Favor Upon Outing of Political Club

The residents of Bethel beach are getting very much wrought up over the fact that the Timalty political club of South Boston, is expected to hold its outing Sunday, at Quincy woods. The residents of this section well remember what happened a year ago when this club was present and strenuously object to their reappearance. A year ago the police made a raid on the picnic and seized a large amount of intoxicants but failed to convict the men in court. This year it is rumored, that the club have given it out, that if the Quincy police appear they will be given a warm reception.

Of course it is well known that the police can not prevent the club from holding its outing, but it can and will prevent a reoccurence of what took place last year. Alleged threats of the leaders of the club do not frighten the police and Chief Burrell has been told by the Mayor to take his whole force to the picnic, if necessary and by all means to keep things down where they belong. If the gang gets too free there may be a few sore heads among the picnickers, Monday morning.

FINED FOR VIOLATING HEALTH RULE

George W. Rackham of Houghs Neck was summoned into court this morning by Lieut. McKay on a warrant issued on complaint of Board of Health for violating its rules. It seems that Rackham was ordered by the Board of Health to connect his premises at Houghs Neck with the public sewer. It is alleged that he refused to comply with the order and a warrant was issued against him. In court this morning he pleaded guilty and was fined $20.

—The shooting affair at Quincy, together with many more of the same kind, constantly call attention to the necessity for more repressive measures in the matter of carrying fire-arms. Had the measure advocated by Dist. Atty. Pelletier been enacted, there would have been much less of this indiscriminate shooting, on the slightest provocation.—Boston Record.

NEW TROLLEY FREIGHT DEPOT

Imposing Structure On Washington Street

SERVICE MONDAY

The new freight depot on Washington street for the trolley freight, which goes into operation Monday, is practically completed and is a decided improvement to the lot, which was formerly occupied by an old stable. The building, which is of concrete is quite attractive and the yard on the south side of the building has been paved, so that it will not be muddy when it rains. The paving also makes it much easier to keep the yard clean. Washington street in front of the building has been paved with vitrified brick and is very smooth so much so that passing teams will never know that there is a track across the street. This track is also far enough north of Foster street so that there is no danger of street being blocked by cars crossing, for the turn does not come opposite the street. The cars used in the trolley freight service are painted a dark color and when in the yard are far enough back from the street so that they will not detract from the appearance of the building. From experience in places south of Quincy, where the system has been in operation it has proved a good thing for business houses as it enables them to get their goods more promptly than by freight or th usual express methods.

—Now for cattle shows, schools, football games, spell binding and coal bills.—Mansfield News.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Oh, that mine enemy might write a tariff bill!

A. D. T. No; this session was not call "extra" because it was more satisfactory than usual.

Arizona may come in but she must leave that R. E. Call person at the door.

Now that the Rockefellers have been entertained at John D.'s home it does look as if blood were thicker than kerosene.

They are having food riots in France, but in this country we have them in the boarding houses all the time during the beef steak season.

An experiment of free newspapers in Oklahoma has failed. Newspapers that are distributed like hand bills are generally about as interesting.

As the government spent $5,000,000 more than it received in August, it is high time that Uncle Sam's wife learned to do her own work.

Croakers who are complaining that the modern church isn't milliant should observe that one branch of it was not bluffed by Astor's millions.

The Chicago bookkeeper who stole $6,200 to give to charity evidently believed that it was not well to let the right hand know what the left was doing.

The Omaha Bee suggests that out of regard for senatorial courtesy Jim Vardaman will get his back hair trimmed. Yes, he will get a trimming.

Wind and worms have damaged the cotton crops very badly, but the crop experts may also prove to have been among these destructive insect pests.

Only 16 attended the much heralded hobo's convention at Washington. The rest are probably quite busy looking up the most convenient jails in which to engage their winter's board.

The high tariff people seem to think you can sell a lot of goods abroad while refusing to buy anything of your neighbors. No man ever made a business success out hat principle.

TROLLEY EXPRESS

Next Monday an electric express service becomes operative in Quincy and the surrounding country, and another link is forged in the chain of rural conviences. Although served by telephones and rural mail delivery and most everywhere by trolley lines, it has not been an uncommon spectacle to see farm products rotting, in nearby sections, for want of a quick way to get them to the markets of populous communities.

The company has gone to much expense in its equipment for handling the contemplated business, erecting a substantial and imposing building here.

Its success seems assured and its workings will be watched with interest by all sections of the state and country.

THE DOCK QUESTION

One could not listen to the speech of the Hon. Peter T. Fallon at the meeting of the Board of Trade on Wednesday night last, without being thoroughly convinced that a dock system in Quincy is an absolute necessity. Mr. Fallon had gone deeply into the study of the subject and was on hand with ways for digging the channel and getting the affair under way. He cited many instances where great losses had been experienced by local men as a result of having no dock system. "A dock in Quincy," continued the speaker, "would entail a business accumulation of thousands of dollars." It was a notable fact, also that out of fifty letters sent to the members of the granite industry here, only two declared that the dock would be of no advantage to them. Undoubtedly such and affair is needed and wanted by the city's greatest industry and deserves the careful consideration that is being accorded to it.

DESTROYING ADVERTISING SIGNS

The Automobile club of America designated Sept. 1 as a day for destroying signs on Highway land in the state of New York, under a new law in that state making such defacing signs illegal. Many of these nuisances were made more serviceable by being reduced to the kindling wood stage. Citizens of many other states will wish that they had equal privilege under their laws to engage in a similar hunt.

Many business people fail to realize, that when a man goes out into country haunts and woodland scenes, he is not looking to find the best variety of tooth powder, nor is his wife searching for the most stylish corsets. They left town to get rid of all that commercial side of life.

Their feelings on meeting this vociferous advertising are much as if you escaped from your office to avoid a pertinacious book agent, and on reaching home you discovered him "laying for" you in your easy chair.

Rev. S. G. Wood of Blandford, Mass., acquired a nation wide reputation by a campaign against the nuisance of advertising on public highways. Armed with an axe and protected by state law, he tore down such signs for miles around his parish. The advertisers then erected their signs on private land, but Mr. Wood persuaded the owners to withdraw permission. Then the advertisers put their signs high up in the tree tops. Mr. Wood sent his athletic son up in the trees after them, and at last acount was ahead of the game.

The North End Improvement society of Tacoma, Wash., got after the bill board people, first by courteous protests against this form of advertising, next by agreements not to patronize goods thus handled.

It will probably not be long before all of the states outlaw advertising on the public highways, after the manner of the new law in New York. The control of signs on private land is a more serious problem. Some courts have pronounced such signs a public nuisance, but many people sensitive to invasion of personal rights say this is equivalent to dictating the manner in which a man shall cut his hair.

The English House of Commons has, however, passed a general law against defacement of scenery. In Rio Janerio they have nearly outlawed bill boards by taxing them.

THE PLAY.

What gives greater ease to a tired out nervous system than seeing a really good play? And after seeing one, is there any greater satisfaction than telling others about it. That old "war horse" of journalism, the late Col. Singerly of the Philadelphia Record took great delight, after enjoying a good show, in giving it a prominent write-up sometimes featuring it on the first page of his widely circulated paper. The thought was perfectly natural, for who would not have the same desire, after listening to John Craig and his company in that delightful drama, The Rose of the Rancho which is being played in Boston. Superbly staged, its lines artistically read, the production is offered with a grace and charm that speaks much for the uplift of the stage and the tireless energy of the artists who have its interests at stake.

THE AUTO DANGER.

Following the increasing number of automobilt accidents all over the country, the officials will indeed be remiss in their obligations to their constituents if something is not done immediately to regulate the "abuse" of the man-killing motor car as it speeds without restraint along the public highway. Here any fool with the "speed bug in his bonnet" can drive a car in public without the least hindrance. We are too liberal in granting licenses. He can get one from most any city by passing a merely perfunctory examination. Compare our dangerous, if not criminal way, with that of Germany, for instance.

In that country he must spend a week in the "school" of the factory that made his machine, watching motors being taken apart and assembled, and learing to steer.

He must take to the police authorities a sworn certificate from this school, bearing witness to his proficiency, together with a birth certificate, a photograph of himself, and a certificate from the state doctor saying that his sight and hearing are normal and an application for a permit.

He must drive a car, carrying a police examiner, through a hilly country, turn it around in a narrow piece of road, pass a quiz as to the mechanism of the motor, and lastly run the machine through narrow city streets where tram cars are running.

If he passes all these tests he gets his permit—to which his photograph and autograph are officially affixed. And nobody but the man in the photograph can run that machine.

"Well, ice is used to preserve meat."

GREAT MANY FIRE ALARMS THIS YEAR

Chief Williams reports that there have been an unusually large number of fire alarms thus far this year. Up to the first of September there had been 221 alarms. When it is considered that the total number for the whole of 1910 was but 217 it will be seen that this year will easily break the record. Although there has been a large number of calls the loss has been small, which speaks volumes for the efficiency of our fire department.

A STORY FROM WYOMING

Hail at Foot of Mountain Reported "Twenty-Five Feet Deep"

Cheyenne, Sept. 8.—Horse Creek reports a storm which has left hail four feet deep over a wide area of country. At the foot of Round Top mountain it is reported to be twenty-five feet deep.

Crops are destroyed for a radius of twenty miles. Much stock was killed. The damage from wind is great to the farm homes of that section of Wyoming.

—While the question of the location of the ship building plant where the Canadian naval vessels will be constructed has not yet been settled the citizens of St. John, N. B., are confident that their port will be selected. Mr. Edward Bath, who is the consulting engineer of Norton, Griffiths and Company of London, the lowest tenderers for the great dry dock which is to be erected at St. John, is authority for the statement that the tender of Cammell, Laird and Company for the construction of the naval vessels is much lower than that of other tenderers. He states further that they favour St. John as the location of these great works, at a point close to the site of the dry dock. It is further stated that capitalists interested in these great works are of opinion that the natural gas found in New Brunswick may be utilized in connection with steel works at St. John, which would be a great point in its favour. If the hopes of the citizens are fulfilled and these gerat works materialize, a new town will soon grow up on the shore of St. John harbor and many subsidiary industries would naturally follow the larger ones.

CAR HITS WAGON, MAN THROWN UT

A team driven by John T. McDonnell was struck by an electric car, near the corner of Quincy avenue and Water street, shortly after 7 o'clock Thursday night. McDonnell was thrown to the street. He was attended by Dr. Sheahan who found that he had been injured about the back and shoulders, but not seriously. He was taken to his home in the police ambulance.

CANADIANS SIEZE GLOUCESTER SHIP

Took on Cargo Without Permit to Touch and Trade

Louisburg, C. B., Sept. 8.—Because she took on a cargo of salt fish at this port, the Gloucester, Mass., schooner Arbutus was seized by officials of the Canadian marine department. Although the Arbutus has the usual fishing license, she lacks what is termed a permit to touch and trade. Her fishing license gives her the right to call at a Canadian port for provisions, supplies or repairs, but does not allow her to purchase fish at a Canadian port without the supplementary permit.

Captain Kemp, in command of the Arbutus, said that the schooner had secured only a small fare of fish on her handline trip to the Grand Banks. Desiring to carry home a full fare, Kemp said that he decided to put in here and buy enough to fill the vessel, not understanding that he was violating any regulation.

HELD AS KIDNAPPER

Italian Took Girl Playing In Street For His "Bride"

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 8.—Bernard Conto, an Italian, aged 21, was arrested last night on the charge of kidnapping Antoinetta Ringo, an Italian girl of 13, and held in $1000 bonds. It is alleged that Conto came from Holden and, going to Plum street, where the girl lives, found her playing in the street and took her to Providence.

Conto and his so-called bride came to Worcester last night and were about to enter the home of the girl's mother when he was arrested. He is also held for carrying a concealed weapon.

WANTED A GUIDE

To Show Tourists Historic Places In Quincy

GREATLY NEEDED

It is a wonder that some bright boy has not been smart enough, during the summer just closing, to provide himself with a badge reading "Guide" and make a few dollars. There is scarcely a day but what some automobile party touring the country stops in City square to inquire the direction to some of the historical places, for which Quincy is known all over the world. These parties, as a rule, would be willing to pay well for someone who would pilot them over the city and point out such places as the Presidents Adams birthplaces, the Dorothy Q house and the sarcophagus under the First church. It was only recently that ex-Councilman Joseph L. Whitton Jr. met such a party from Ohio at City hall making inquiries and kindly volunteered to show them about. Even no later than this morning an automobile party from a distant state drew up in front of the Hancock cemetery and as some of the party wandered among the old grave markers one of the party made diligent inquiries of those passing, as to who was buried there.

They also desired to visit the First church and see the sarcophagus of the two presidents and their wives, but it is quite a problem to hunt up the janitor and get a key.

If there was some one to act as an official guide of the city, he could be stationed at City hall and could be provided with a key to the First church and it seems as though he could get quite a sum for this work. Although the summer is almost gone, it is not too late for some one to start in the guide business even now, for this is the best season of the year to tour the country in automobiles and there would hardly be a day but what the official would get a job.

This business is nothing new, for iin the City of Boston, Salem and other cities of historic interest, such a man may readily be found.

HINDU WOMEN WORK IN MEN'S CLOTHING

Discovered When Stork Pays Visit to One Known as "Tom"

Ontario, Cal., Sept. 8.—"Tom," a Hindu laborer employed in an orange grove here, failed to put in an appearance and the only information the foreman could obtain from coworkers was that "Tom ver seek."

The foreman investigated "Tom's" absence and was astounded to learn that "Tom" was the mother of a 4-days'-old baby, born since the gang quit work Saturday.

The foreman's discovery led to the disclosure that many Hindu women work in men's clothes when they can deceive the foremen. They are nearly as large and strong as the men and not greatly unlike them in physical appearance.

AVIATORS FALL TOGETHER

German Army Officer and His Passenger Meet Instant Death

Mulhausen, Ger., Sept. 8.—Two more names have been added to the long roll of persons killed this year in aeroplane accidents. Lieutenant Newmann, a German military aviator, started from this city in the direction of Strassburg, carrying as a passenger, M. Leconte, a French aeronaut.

The aeroplane hardly had gone fifteen miles when the gasolene tank exploded. The machine dropped at Blitzheim from an altitude of sixty feet and both aviators were instantly killed. Their skulls were broken and they were frightfully injured about the body.

Aviator Paul Senge fell with his aeroplane while making a flight at Karlsruhe yesterday afternoon and fractured his skull.

DISAGREEMENT IS LOOKED FOR

Beattie Unlikely to Be Convicted of Slaying Wife

SOME EXPECT AN ACQUITTAL

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept. 8.—It is considered as extremely unlikely here that Henry C. Beattie, Jr., will be convicted for the murder of his wife, and there are some who hold that when the jury comes in, probably tonight, the young man will be freed.

Those who have followed the case closely say that, in view of Judge Watson's charge, which was very favorable to the defendant, and the scathing denunciation of Paul Beattie by Attorney Carter, it will be extremely hard for the prosecution to bring forth any argument which will lead the jury to bring in a verdict of guilty.

The fact that Prosecuting Attorney Wendenburg has stated that, although he will not ask for a reopening of the case now, he will have the man who wrote him that he was an eye witness of the shooting come on from the west, also lends strength to the belief that the prosecution is looking for a disagreement. The prosecution have all along stated publicly that they were perfectly satisfied with their case, but those close to them know that they are expecting nothing better than a disagreement.

The attorneys for the defense have put up a good fight and a brave front, saying all along that their client is bound to be acquitted, but they have stated to friends that the most they can look for is this same disagreement.

For five long hours in a hot and murky courtroom, Carter, with a plea of both pathos and argument, sought the hearts of twelve jurymen in an effort to secure the acquittal of Beattie.

At sunset Carter concluded, and today the clash between Harry M. Smith, Jr., of the defense, and L. C. Wendenburg of the commonwealth, close friends and notable lawyers, is scheduled.

From the depth of an argument in which he unsparingly denounced Paul Beattie, cousin of the accused and principal witness against him, as a weakling and falsifier, Carter at times fairly shouted to the jury as he leaned over the bar, but when the day was drawing to a close his voice sank to a whisper of impassioned appeal.

The day began with the reading by Judge Watson of the instructions to the jury. More vital than usual were they, particularly as attention was drawn to the frailty of the alleged confession of Henry to Paul, and the manner in which it came—in jail from an incarcerated witness to the commonwealth's attorney. Other points in the story of Paul, which related to the conversations of Paul or meetings of the two cousins alone, unsupported by witnesses, were held up as requiring a careful scrutiny.

Beulah Binford and Paul Beattie, detained as witnesses for the commonwealth, were released from Henrico county jail by order of Judge Watson.

"Did somebody tell a story that was new?"

"No, the stories were all old, but one of the speakers who said he had nothing to say sat down immediately after saying it."—Chicago Record Herald.

PLEA IN BEHALF OF TREATIES

President Criticises Atiitude of Senate Committee

"LIMITED AND NARROW VIEW"

Hartford, Sept. 8.—With "Peace" as his subject, President Taft, at the Connecticut state fair grounds, made an earnest plea in behalf of his arbitration treaties. He particularly advocated that clause of the international agreements providing for the reference to courts of arbitration of questions of national honor, and took direct issue with the critics of that clause. Ex-President Roosevelt has been one of the chief opponents of this provision.

"Personally, I don't see any more reason why matters of national honor should not be referred to a court of arbitration any more than matters of property or matters of national proprietorship," said the president.

"The majority of the senate committeen on foreign relations say that they cannot consent that somebody else shall decide for them where a question arising in the future is within the provisions of the first article of this treaty; that for them to do so is to delegate their power to another tribunal and is to bind themselves by an obligation which they have no power to assume.

"It is the view of the minority, however, and with that view I am earnestly in accord, that the issue where a future difference shall be within the terms of the description of article 1 of the treaty is an international question arising out of a construction of the treaty under a claim of right by one of the parties to an arbitration, and and is a question, therefore, that the president and the senate, acting as the treaty-making power, have the right to agree by treaty to submit to a tribunal for final judgment.

"In what different way is the treaty-making power invoked when we ask the senate to concur in a treaty which agrees to submit all justifiable differences to arbitration and when it is asked to agree to submit to arbitration the question where a difference arising is justifiable or not under the treaty? I confess that I cannot see the distinction.

"Now, if I understand the attitude of the majority of the senate committee, it is that they have no power, and therefore the government has no power to enter into a treaty by which we shall agree to submit to a third person, constituting an independent tribunal, the question where we are bound under a treaty to abide by the judgment of the tribunal as to a particular issue.

"The treaty-making power under the constitution, it has been decided by the supreme court, hardly knows definition or limit. It is one of the broadest powers conferred by the constitution and it is conferred upon the executive and the senate. Certainly, it is not in the interest of the cause of peace that that power should be limited in such a way that other governments may make treaties of this kind and we may not.

"I cannot exaggerate the importance of escaping from the limited and narrow view the majority of the senate committee takes of the powers of the senate in this regard and of securing action by the senate sustaining the minority view. The ideal toward which we are all working with these treaties is the ultimate establishment of an arbitral court to which we shall submit our international controversies with the same freedom and the same dependence on the judgment as in case of domestic courts.

"If the senate cannot bind itself to submit questions of jurisdiction arising under the treaty, as Norway and Sweden have done, for instance, then the prospect of real and substantial progress is most discouraging."

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day receipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

COLONIAL CHAIRS.

Benjamin Franklin Said to Be Inventor of American Rocker.

In early colonial times it was not customary to have more than two or three chairs in a house. Our people followed the English custom of their day and sat upon stools, or upon benches, which they called "forms" and which presently developed into the high backed settles, says Mary H. Northend in the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

The middle of the seventeenth century saw chairs come into more common use. They were of strong and solid frame, with seat and back of durable leather. The legs and stretchers were often plain, but sometimes both legs and back posts were turned.

The "slat back" chair was the kind most commonly in use from 1700 to 1750. The number of slats in the back varied from two to five; the shape varied also, and one firm in Pennsylvania made "slat back" chairs in which the slats were curved to fit the figure and furnish a more comfortable support to the back. Benjamin Franklin fixed one of these armchairs upon rockers, and so invented the first American rocking chair and set a fashion which has never been permitted to pass away.

Of all these names that of Chippendale easily leads and was considered supreme authority for thirty years. A chair seems to have been his favorite piece of furniture, and for its design he blended the finest points to be found in the French, the Dutch and the Chinese patterns. The result was a masterpiece, in which we have some of Chippendale's best points, as shown by the chair of his seen in one of the illustrations. The broad seat, the bow shaped top rail, the arms with their well known curve ending in scroll work, the absence of stretchers, the ornamentation confined to the front legs, while the back legs are straight and plain, after the fashion of the Chinese. The splat back and bandy legs are copied from the Dutch, but the ornamentations of the splat is modified from Gothic forms. The full curve of the bandy leg terminates in the ball and claw foot, which was so commonly used by Chippendale and his imitators.

The Bathroom.

There need be not the slightest jarring note in the color scheme of the bathroom now. A pink or blue or lavender tiled room—if there be such—with fittings to correspond, need not be marred by dead white wash cloths or bath towels. These, in Turkish toweling, come in all the dainty pale shades mentioned, and they for the first time may be called pretty.

To Wash Silk Stockings.

It is something of a puzzle how to wash silk stockings successfully, but the following method has been used with satisfactory results: Make soapsuds of lukewarm water and a good grade of castile soap. Do not use hot water, as it destroys the life of the silk. Rinse in clear, cold water until free from all soap, then pull the stockings lengthwise and press with a warm iron, never a hot one. They will be as glossy as when new.

The New Sweater.

For fall motoring a three-quarter knitted sweater is just the most comfortable wrap one can wear. The illustration shows a charming new model in russet brown wool, with collar and band trimmings and buttons of a pale tan color. The motor hood is lined in the same shades and the long chiffon veil is of tan.

When Marketing.

A bushel of potatoes should weigh sixty pounds without the basket, as provided by law.

The eyes of a fresh fish are bright, not glazed. The flesh is firm, the gills red and the odor natural, but not offensive.

There is no blue or green tinge about the veins of good poultry. This is a mark of decay the careful buyer should not fail to observe.

Yellow feet and bills are the mark of a young goose.

How to Care For the Attic.

Few attics are ceiled but if they are not light the walls and beams should be treated to a coat of white paint or of whitewash. Once a month the floor should be swept. The windows should be washed three or four times a year. Twice a year there should be a campaign waged against moths, roaches and possible bedbugs, as well as against larger vermin. Keep a rattrap and a mousetrap in commission.

FIRE CAUSED BY LAMP EXPLODING

The alarm from Box 123 at 2.35 Thursday afternoon, was for a slight fire in the attic of a new building on Fenno street, being erected for Charles Pratt. The fire was caused by a plumbers lamp exploding, and caused a damage of $10. There is a fire alarm box within 200 feet of the house, but in their excitement the workmen ran across the park to the car barn to sound the alarm.

Story of a Nail Keg.

A hundred years ago Jeremiah Atwater was a leading New Haven merchant, buying his supplies in Boston and receiving them by vessel. Among other goods received were several casks of nails, one of which on opening it under a layer of nails at each end was found to be filled with silver dollars. Mr. Atwater, who was a conscientious man, immediately wrote to the Boston merchant that there must be some mistake in the invoice of nails, as one of the casks contained other articles besides nails. He was promptly informed that the nails were bought for nails, sold for nails and nails they must be. Forthwith Mr. Atwater had a basin made of the silver and presented it to the Center church, where it has been used in the baptismal service from that time to the present.

THE CARE OF CANARIES.

How to Keep Birds So They Will Be Healthy and Sing.

In selecting a canary one of the cross breeds, pure canary with a strain of goldfinch or bullfinch, is the best to choose, as they are much hardier than the pure canary and have splendid voices. The best food for canaries is canary and rape seed, one part of rape to three of canary. From April to September they should have a little fresh green food every day, either chickweed, watercress or lettuce, says Our Dumb Animals. A lump of sugar should always be kept between the cage wires within easy reach.

Always give a canary a bath the first thing in the morning. After cleaning, the bottom of the cage should be sprinkled with gravel and sand (not sand from the seashore, as the salt will kill the bird).

Never hang the cage in a draft or a stiff breeze, as canaries are very susceptible to cold. Neither should it remain uncovered in a lighted room at night, as the bird's song is liable to become impaired because of its nervous temperament.

Those Useless Questions.

"How did you get the bruised face?"

"It was caused by the batrack last night."

"Accidentally?"

"No; I think it attacked me purposely."—Kansas City Journal.

"Nope; I have already put all my money into a fruit orchard.

"Where?"

"On my wife's hat."—Houston Post.

BRIEFS

Cattle show week is near at hand. First comes the Weymouth fair and then the great show at Brockton.

Mr. and Mrs. George Keyes have moved from Brackett street to the Faxon house on Faxon avenue.

The City council committee on Finance meet tonight to act on a number of requests of city departments for additional money.

The days of the straw hat are numbered. Sept. 15 is the official date on which straws are supposed to be laid aside for the winter. Soft felts will take the place of straws for a time and then comes the derby.

Local yachtsmen are interested in the rendezvous and sail of the Boston Yacht club on Sunday from Hull to South Boston. It is one of the prettiest sights of the season as hundreds of yachts participate.

It will not be many days before the Fore River bridge will be closed for a number of weeks to team travel. The contractor is about ready to commence work widening the draw and while this work is in progress the bridge will be impassable to teams. A foot bridge will be built however so that persons may cross to the Weymouth side. It will be quite an inconvience to street car passengers as they will also have to walk across. The draw which is to be widened fifty feet will be done by building the new addition in the centre and extending the ends of the draw.

Naval Man Makes Trip From Annapolis to Washington

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 8.—In a Wright biplane especially built for experiments as to the practicability of using aeroplanes in conjunction with warships, Lieutenant Rodgers of the navy started from here and flew to Washington.

The flight of forty-five miles is one of the longest and most successful yet accomplished by a naval aviator, Rodgers being one of the three omcers who are stationed at the aerodrome near the naval academy, and who are the first in that branch of the service to take up aviation.

MURDER IN MAINE CAMP

Alleged Slayer of Woman Dying From a Bullet Wound

Oakland, Me., Sept. 8.—As the result of a shooting affray at the Winona camps on Messalonskee lake last evening Mrs. Maude A. Burrill, aged 35 years, is dead, and William J. Brooks, aged 25 years, is not expected to live, as he has a self-inflicted bullet wound in his head. Brooks was placed under arrest at the camp immediately after the shooting, charged with firing the shots.

Mrs. Burrill was one of the owners of the camps at the lakeside and Brooks was in her employ. During the summer they had been seen much together, it is said, but lately, friends declare, the couple have quarrelled much.

Yesterday morning, according to the police, Brooks went to Oakland to purchase camp supplies and on his return acted in such a way that Mrs. Burrill discharged him. The shooting occurred soon afterward.

"STORY IS ALL BOSH"

Naval Officer Denies Dynamite Plot In Navy Yard

Boston, Sept. 8.—Commander Irwin, aide to the commandant of the Charlestown navy yard, referring to the story of a dynamite plot in the yard, says the story is all bosh.

"When this crane sank about three months ago," said Irwin, "a contractor was given the job of raising it. He used dynamite to blow out a bulkhead, so that he might pump water out of the crane more easily. In using the dynamite one stick of it was left on the crane in an inconspicuous place, and was found there by a workman.

"There was no danger of an explosion. No fuse was attached to the dynamite. The workmen did not quit work and were not frightened. There was nothing to be afraid of. Dynamite is being continually used in the yard."

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS IN "SOLITARY" CELL

Pomeroy Concludes Another Year as a Life Prisoner

Boston, Sept. 8.—Jesse Pomeroy, serving a life sentence for murder, has begun his thirty-sixth year in solitary confinement at the state prison in Charlestown. Pomeroy has served in solitary longer than any other prisoner in this country.

While "solitary imprisonment" is the name given to the punishment Pomeroy is undergoing, it does not mean that he never leaves his cell. He goes out in the yard every day in charge of a guard, and spends an hour there while the other prisoners are at work in the shops. His cell is in a row of about twenty other cells, and is similar to the others. But while the other prisoners, when they are in their cells in the daytime, have their doors left open, Pomeroy's is always closed whenever anyone passes through the corridor.

Since he entered state prison as a boy of 16, Pomeroy has educated himself from the books in the prison's large library. He has all the books he wants and reads constantly.

COLOR LINE IN BOSTON

Election Officers n Back Bay Refuse to Serve With Negro

Boston, Sept. 8.—Race prejudice against a negro who has been selected by the election board to serve as an election officer in the ultra-fashionable section of the Back Bay ward has fomented a revolt among the election officers of that section of the city.

So serious have matters become that all of the white election officers of the precinct in which the negro has been made an election officer have served notice on the city hall officials that they will refuse to serve with a negro and will resign if he is not removed.

Mayor Fitzgerald and the board of election commissioners have taken a hand in the mix-up, and one of the most remarkable situations in the history of Boston politics has been precipitated.

DUCHESS WON'T MAKE UP

Consuelo Prefers to Live Apart From the Duke of Marlborough

London, Sept. 8.—There are persistent rumors to the effect that negotiations have been started to effect a reconciliation between the Duke of Marlborough and the duchess, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt before her marriage.

The couple have been estranged and living apart for several years. King Edward VII, according to rumor, tried several times to bring them together, but without success.

It is understood here that it is the duchess who refuses to make up with her husband.

ASTOR'S PLANS DISARRANGED

Wedding With Miss Force Is Postponed For a Time

LARGE FEE GOES BEGGING

Adverse Public Criticism Responsible For Ministers Being Reluctant to Perform Ceremony—Woman Refuses to Have Civil Marriage—Newport City Clerk Not Yet Consulted In Regard to Securing License

New York, Sept. 8.—While agents of John J. Astor are scouring Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York trying to find a clergyman who will marry the multi-millionaire and his fiance, Miss Madeleine Force, Colonel Astor declared that so much had to be done that the ceremony could not take place for some time.

Clergymen who have turned down Astor's offers of a large fee—$1000 in one case—say that the wedding was to take place yesterday. The fact that all of them who have been approached have declined to act, because of adverse public criticism, has led to the conclusion in society circles that Astor has been compelled to delay his wedding because of inability to find the necessary clergyman. Miss Force refuses to have a civil marriage.

It is known, notwithstanding Astor's declaration that the wedding was not to occur so soon, that Beechwood, the Astor residence at Newport, is ready for the ceremony. Vincent Astor and all the servants are there and preparations seem to have been completed.

Rev. Dr. Edward A. Johnson, pastor of the First Baptist church of Newport, reiterated his statement that he had turned down an offer of $1000 to perform the ceremony. Rev. Frederick L. Brooks, pastor of the Methodist church of Little Compton, R. I., said that he had declined to act.

Rev. Dr. Johnson of Newport, who has refused to perform the ceremony, is in ill health and in financial straits. Bad eyes are forcing his retirement, at least temporarily, from the ministry, but, despite this fact, he would have nothing to do with the marriage. He says that William P. Sheffield, Newport attorney for Colonel Astor, asked him to perform the ceremony.

The other clergyman who refused to marry the multi-millionaire and his pretty fiance, Rev. Mr. Brooks, was asked to act by Richard B. Comstock, a Providence attorney, who rode thirty-five miles from Providence to find some one in Little Compton who would perform the service.

It is presumed that Comstock canvassed the other churches, but the pastors have said nothing about the monetary offers made to them.

Though Astor seems, according to the statements of these clergymen, in a great hurry to get married, no one, it is reported, has been to consult City Clerk Fullerton of Newport about a marriage license. Both contracting parties must present themselves to the city clerk when the application for the license is made.

SHOT DOWN BY WOMAN

Prominent Victim Refuses to Talk About the Affair

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Robert B. Watson, one of the best known architects and contractors in Chicago, was shot by an unidentified woman in front of Watson's residence. The woman was arrested.

At the police station the woman gave her name as Mrs. H. B. Coney. This is believed by the police, however, to be an assumed name. The woman refused to give a reason for the act. She is 35 years of age and has been living at a well known downtown hotel.

Watson was shot twice, once over the right ear, and in the right thigh. His condition is said to be not serious. He refused to talk about the shooting when questioned by the police.

WANTED TRIP TO POLAND

Woman Sets Three Fires to House to Secure Her Passage

Central Falls, R. I., Sept. 8.—Mary Stulick was held for the grand jury after admitting that she set fire to a house three times in two days on advice of her landlord's wife. In court she said through an interpreter:

"I set the fires to get money to go back to Poland. Mrs. Karol Adamkiowicz, wife of the landlord, told me to do it."

Adamkiowicz testified he does not know where his wife is. The police make no charge against him. They think that Mrs. Adamkiowicz has fled the country.

Reciprocity Pastor Asked to Quit

St. John, Sept. 8.—Because of his taking an active part in the present election campaign, Rev. J. J. McCaskill, pastor of St. Matthew's Presbyterian church here, was asked by the trustees of the church to resign.

BRIDE OF FINANCIER

Dorothy Whitney Married to Willard Straight In Geneva

Geneva, Sept. 8.—Miss Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the late William C. Whitney of New York and Boston, was married in this city to Willard D. Straight, at the American church.

Straight was formerly American consul general at Mukden and Mexico City and is connected with the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. in far eastern investments.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop T. A. Jaggar, formerly rector of St. Paul's church in Boston.

Harry P. Whitney gave away the bride. She was attended by her nieces, the Misses Olive and Dorotny Paget, and Miss Beatrice Bishop, the little daughter of Cortland F. Bishop.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By

FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Ashford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE SHADOWGRAPH.

FORTY-TWO miles southwest of Angels, at a point where all further progress seemed definitely barred by the huge barrier of the great mountain range, the Red Butte Western, having picked its devious way to an apparent cul-de-sac among the foothills and hogbacks, plunges abruptly into the echoing canyon of the eastern Timanyoni.

For forty added miles the river chasm, throughout its length a narrow, tortuous crevice, affords a precarious footing for the railway embankment. At its western extremity the canyon forms the gateway to a shut in valley of upheaved hills and interior mountains isolated by wide stretches of rolling grass land. To the eastward and westward of the great valley rise the sentinel peaks of the two inclosing mountain ranges.

Red Butte, the center of the evanescent mining excitement which was originally responsible for the building of the railroad, lies high pitched among the shouldering spurs of the western boundary range. On the south bank of the river, at a point a short distance beyond the stream fronting cliffs, lies the landmark hill known as Little Butte, and at the station of the same name is the bridge across the Timanyoni.

On the engineering maps of the Red Butte Western the outline of Little Butte appears as a roughly described triangle with five mile sides, the three angles of the figure marked respectively by Silver Switch, Little Butte station and bridge and the Wire Silver mine.

Between Silver Switch and the bridge station the main line of the railroad follows the base of the triangle, with the precipitous bluffs of the big hill on the left and the torrenting flood of the Timanyoni on the right. Along the eastern side of the triangle and leaving the main track at Silver Switch ran the spur which had formerly served the Wire Silver when the working opening of the mine had been on the eastern slope of the ridge-like hill. For some years previous to the summer of overturnings this spur had been disused, though its track, ending among a group of the old mine buildings five miles away, was still in commission.

Along the western side of the triangle, with Little Butte station for its point of divergence from the main line, ran the new spur, built to accommodate Flemister after he had dug through the hill and ousted the rightful owner of the true Wire Silver vein and had transferred his labor hamlet and his plant, or the major part of both, to the western slope of the butte, at this point no more than a narrow ridge separating the eastern and western gulches.

Train 205, with ex-Engineer Judson apparently sound asleep in one of the rearward seats of the day coach, was on time when it reached Little Butte. A moment later Judson had let himself silently into the rear vestibule of the day coach and was as silently opening the folding doors of the vestibule itself.

Hanging off by the handrails, he saw the engine's headlight pick up the switch stand of the old spur. The train was unmistakably slowing now, and he made ready to jump if the need should arise, picking his place at the track side as the train lights showed him the ground. As the speed was checked Judson saw what he was expecting to see. Precisely at the instant of the switch passing a man dropped from the forward step of the smoker and walked swiftly away up the disused track of the old spur. Judson's turn came a moment later, and when his end of the day coach flicked past the switch stand he, too, dropped to the ground and, waiting only until he could follow without being detected, set out after the tall figure, which was by that time scarcely more than an indistinct and retreating blur in the moonlight.

The chase led directly up the old spur, but it did not continue quite to the five mile distant end of it. A few hundred yards short of the stockade inclosing the old buildings the shadowy figure took to the forest and began to climb the ridge, going straight up, as nearly as Judson could determine. The ex-engineer followed, still keeping his distance. From the first bench above the valley level he looked back and down into the stockade inclosure. All of the old buildings were dark, but one of the two new and unpainted ones was brilliantly lighted, and there were sounds familiar enough to Judson to mark it as the Wire Silver power house. Notwithstanding his interest in the chase, Judson was curious enough to stand a moment listening to the sharply defined exhausts of the high speed steam engine driving the generators.

"Say," he ejaculated under his breath, "if that engine ain't a dead match for the old 216 pullin' a grade I don't want a cent! Double cylinder set on the quarter and choo-chooin' like it ought to have a pair o' steel rails under it. If I had time I'd go down yonder and break a winder in that power shack, blamed if I wouldn't!"

But unhappily there was no time to spare. As it was, he had lingered too long, and when he came out upon the crest of the narrow ridge and attained a point of view from which he could look down upon the buildings clustering at the foot of the western slope he had lost the scent. The tall man had disappeared as completely and suddenly as if the earth had opened and swallowed him.

This, in Judson's prefiguring, was a small matter. The tall man, whom the ex-engineer had unmistakably recognized at the moment of train forsaking as Rankin Hallock, was doubtless on his way to Flemister's headquarters at the foot of the western slope. For some reason of his own Hallock did not wish to be seen going openly to the Wire Silver headquarters; hence the drop from the train at Silver Switch and the long tramp up the gulch and over the ridge.

Forecasting it thus, Judson lost no time on the summit of mysterious disappearances. Choosing the shortest path he could find which promised to lead him down to the mining hamlet at the foot of the westward fronting slope, he set his feet in it and went stumbling down the steep declivity, bringing up finally on a little bench just above the mine workings. Here he stopped to get his breath and his bearings. From his halting place the mine headquarters building lay just below him, at the right of the tunnel entrance to the mine. It was a long log building of one story.

Making a detour to dodge the electric lighted tunnel mouth, Judson carefully reconnoitered the office end of the headquarters building. There was a door, with steps giving upon the downhill side, and there were two windows, both of which were blank to the eye by reason of the drawn down shades. Two persons at least were in the lighted room. Judson could hear their voices, but the thick log walls muffled the sounds to an indistinct murmur. The figure of a man sitting in a chair was sharply silhouetted on the drawn window shade.

Judson stared, rubbed his eyes and stared again. It had never occurred to him before that the face of a man, viewed in blank profile, could differ so strikingly from the same face as seen eye to eye. That the man whose shadow was projected upon the window shade was Rankin Hallock he could not doubt. The bearded chin, the puffy lips and the prominent nose were all faithfully outlined in the exaggerated shadowgraph. But the hat was worn at an unfamiliar angle, and there was something in the erect, bulking figure that was still more unfamiliar. Judson backed away and stared again, muttering to himself. If he had not traced Hallock almost to the door of Flemister's quarters there might have been room for the thin edge of the doubt wedge. The unfamiliar pose and the rakish tilt of the soft hat were not among the chief clerk's remembered characteristics; but, making due allowance for the distortion of the magnified facial outline, the profile was Hallock's.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

For the final week of the conspicuously successful summer season of the Lindsay Morison Stock Company at the Majestic Theatre, Mr. Morison has consented to appear himself in the production of "Jim the Penman," the play which was selected by popular vote as the dramatic offering in which his patrons and many Boston friends would most like to see him. Mr. Morison has been a conspicious figure in Boston theatricals for a number of years and probably no stock manager has accomplished more notable achievements in securing for the first presentation in stock so many leading play successes of the past two seasons. A better play could not have been selected for the grand final week of the season. The role of Capt. Redwood, the English detective, in "Jim the Penman," is a familiar one to Mr. Morison and he has always been much liked in the part.

The performance on Tuesday evening next, Sept. 12, has been arranged as a big testimonial to Mr. Morison and the occasion should be a gala one.

"Jim the Penman," which will be the attraction for the coming week, every afternoon and evening, beginning Monday afternoon, Sept. 11, is a familiar one to theatre-goers, although it has not been often seen in recent years.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

Miss Helen Ware will begin the second week of her engagement at the Hollis St. Theatre Monday evening in George Broadhurst's new play "The Price." There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. "The Price" is a modern drama in three acts and Henry B. Harris has selected the company to support Miss Ware with such care that an absolutely perfect performance of the play is given. The stage settings are in perfect accord with the unusual play and its performance. Those who remember Helen Ware as Annie Jeffries in "The Third Degree" will realize that as an emotional actress she has power excelled by few players on the stage today. It takes a big play and a big part to give scope to her talents. Yet in "The Price" Mr. Broadhurst has succeeded in providing just the sort of a drama in which Miss Ware appears to the best advantage. The part of Ethel Toscani, which Miss Ware created, is big, human and touching. it makes an irresistible appeal to the audience and through the tremendous scene which caps the story of the play she holds her audience spellbound. It is a character study to be long remembered by those so fortunate as to see it. "The Price" is the first play in which Miss Ware has appeared in this city as a star, and in it Mr. Harris has given her a play which is worthy of the talent that gained her that eminent position.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Another all-star vaudeville show is announced for next week at B. F. Keith's Theatre, one that abounds in novelties and with the same wealth of headline features that is making the current week memorable in the annals of this popular resort. Rose Coghlan, one of the cleverest actresses on the legitimate stage, will appear in a new dramatic sketch entitled "Between Matinee and Night." This piece tells an intensely interesting and at the same time amusing story of that side of theatrical life of which the public has little or no knowledge. Miss Coghlan will be supported by a splendid company, including her daughter Rosalind. One of the most pretentious novelties in all vaudeville is Joseph Hart's "Bathing Girls," a tabloid musical revue in which a dozen scenes of dazzling splender are unfolded, a host of pretty girls take part in lively songs and dances, and the amazing bathing effect, where a number of shapely misses disport themselves in the dashing surf at Long Branch. Ray Cox, "the girl from Dixie," will bring her famous imitations, including "The Baseball Girl." A genuine novelty will be Staley and Birbeck in their great musical transformation act, and other big features are Wynn and Rawson, the rah rah boys; Alf Grant and Ethel Hoag, "Something doing all the time;" Joe Kelsey, the mirthful man; and Meyden Brothers, acrobats.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

There is no doubt about the success of "Over Night" at the Shubert Theatre where it begins its sixth week Monday evening. It has demonstrated most clearly its popularity, for the house has been crowded at almost every performance, and laughter and applause may fairly be said to have rocked the theatre. Seldom has a farce comedy come to Boston which has pleased the public to such an extent as "Over Night." It is laughter all the way through the three acts of the performance. Laughter which at first is sporadic and intermittent and which grows and grows until the house is fairly in convulsions.

The cast which is the original New York people is excellent, and the individual work of Miss Lawrence, the cherry little ingenue, and of Mr. Truex Mr. Aylsworth in the character of the hotel clerk, and Miss Crewe and Mr. Kelley is above criticism. Indeed the "team work" of all hands call for appreciative comment.

Little Elsie Darling (Miss Lawrence) the baby bride, is the little trick of the play and the way she takes the part leaves nothing to criticize for she "gets you" every moment she is on the stage. If it is to laugh, then surely Philip H. Barthlomae, the author of "Over Night" has hit the bulls eye the first time, for this is his first play.

TREMONT TEMPLE.

The management of the Coronation pictures at Tremont Temple is not content with a repetition of the same views day after day. In fact, new ones are added each week, and in addition to the scenes of the Coronation spectators are now able to see many events relating thereto. For instance, the posing of famous French models in the Coronation robes is represented, and one especially attractive series of pictures shows the investiture of the Prince of Wales at Canarvon Castle. Other scenic displays disclose the beautiful mountain scenery of Wales. This exhibition is given at Tremont Temple twice daily, at 2.30 in the afternoon and at 8.15 in the evening.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The romance of "The Rose of the Rancho" will be succeeded by the farcial humor of "Her Husband's Wife" at the Castle Square. This play was originally produced in New York by Henry Miller last season, and it made an immediate success. It will be given by Mr. Craig at the Castle Square for the first time in Boston, and it promises to create a genuine sensation. The plot hinges on the little disagreements of a husband and wife, and after amusing complications everything is straightened out, and the play ends merrily and happily. The cast will be as clever as the play is lively. Two of the principal roles, that of the wife, and a society woman, will be played by Gertrude Binley and Mary Young. The husband will be acted by John Craig, and in the other leading characters will be Morgan Wallace, Walter Walker, George Hassell, Al Roberts, Mabel Colcord and Florence Shirley. "Her Husband's wife" is certain to be an event of the season at the Castle Square.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Those who like melodrama of the kind that makes the blood leap in the veins and sets the nerves a-tingling will find plenty to interest and entertain them in "The Cowboy and the Thief," which will be next week's attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House. As its title implies, it is a story of the Western country, and is from the pen of J. Wendell Davis, an ex-newspaper man of Laramie, Wyo., who is thoroughly familiar with life among the cowboys, outlaws and cattle thieves, with which the play deals. A brother's love for a brother who has gone wrong, and his efforts to bring him back into the path of right-living, form the main theme, which leads to many startling situations and thrilling moments, while the rivalry of a good and bad man for the love of a beautiful and cultured Western girl complicates matters and adds the tinge of romance that completes the picture. This is the third season of this thrilling melodrama, and the success it has achieved places it on a par with "Arizona," "The Round-up" and other pieces of like character. The play is beautifully mounted, the first act, showing the exterior of the Golden Ranch headquarters, with the Rockies looming in the distance, being one of the most effective and realistic bits of scenery ever painted for stage use, while all the saddles and accountrements used have seen active service on the big ranches. Truly, if you like this kind of a play, this is the kind of a play you will like.

There will be the usual matinees on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Marty O'Toole, Pittsburg's new $22,500 pitcher, according to reports, relies entirely upon two curves, a speedy spitter and a drop. He has a fast ball with a good break that he occasionally mixes in and uses when he is in the hole. Almost every other ball he pitches is a spitter. It shoots to the right or left and breaks with such a quick snap that batters can't tell where it is going. His fast ball also breaks with a quick snap. He gets the break by snapping his wrist as the ball leaves his hand.

OUTING WAS "BEST EVER"

Fore River Boys Enjoy Themselves To the Limit

BOAT GROUNDED

Although a rather unfavorable mishap was encountered, still the outing of the Fore River Apprentices enjoyed by some 150 of them Thursday through the courtesy of the officials was about the best ever. The Houghs Neck steamer was used for the occasion in bringing the apprentices to their destination, and on embarking from the shipyards, various parts of the harbor were visited The start was made about 8.15 and arrival was made at Lynn beach about noon time. Here a shore dinner was partaken off, which proved to be a rare treat.

The boat was boarded again and the boys started for Salem Willows. On arrival there, the steamer ran aground, and being stuck in the mud, the services of the life savers were required to make her float.

Matters were soon remedied and sports of all kinds were indulged in by the picnickers. The feature of the afternoon was a baseball game between the first and second teams. It was won by the former by the close score of 5 to 4. The batteries for the first team were Williamson, Kerr and Boyle, while Grethe and Wilson did the honors for the losers.

At the conclusion of the game, the boys started for home, and on reaching the shipyards, all acknowledged the outing to have been about the best ever experienced.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

With good weather favoring us tomorrow, a record breaking crowd should be in evidence on the Water street grounds. The attendance on the morning of the holiday was the largest ever noticeable at a baseball game and the spirit of enthusiasm that was manifested certainly was the best that has been shown for many a day.

The game tomorrow will be a drawing card of the same sort, and any one who has seen the "jackies" indulge in the great pastime, knows just what may be expected on this coming occasion.

The Manets have compelted their schedule for the season and the members of this organization are now directing their attention towards putting a football eleven in the field.

Manager Joyce stated to me last evening that every effort is being used in order to have the sailors' band present, and if this can be done, things are sure to assume a lively pace, "Charlie" Knight will in all probability occupy the mound for the home team, and since he himself asserts that he is in good condition, we may well await great things from him tomorrow. The baseball period for this year is fast withwrawing from us and tomorrow's game gives promise of being a game for blood.

Many of the fans passed much favorable comment on the way the championship game was umpired. It does seem that two indicator holders can fare better than one, and it is hoped that the services of Cunniff will be sought for tomorrow in addition to those of Umpire Flynn, in order that all official dictating will be imparted smoothly.

Coach Staff expects to have the candidates for the Quincy High football team out by the latter part of next week.

To those who may be inclined to form an all Quincy baseball team, I would suggest to bear in mind that the Ledger selection will be composed of all Quincy men and no man will be considered who has not participated in at least five games.

"Old Cy" Young was on the job yesterday and from his performance against Philadelphia, it may yet be a long time before he will retreat to the farm.

The local Y. M. C. A. will line up against the strong Hyde Park A. A. at Upper Field, Merrymount Park on Saturday afternoon. The Hyde Park boys are out for revenge for the trimming they received three weeks ago when Foster pitched a "no hit" game against them. They are bringing Meagher, the crack High school pitcher over with them, and expect to take home a victory for he has lost but three games out of 27 pitched this season. Morrissey, also of the High school team will catch for him. Foster and Holmes will do the battery work for the Quincy team. Game called at 3.15.

ED WALSH IN ACTION.

Ed Walsh is the only Chicago American pitcher who has been going good of late, and when Jimmy Callahan came into Comiskey's office a few days ago the Old Roman asked him what was wrong with the staff.

Callahan tried to get away without expressing his opinion, but Commy nailed him down. Cal told him the only thing the matter with the pitchers was lack of control.

"Put a home plate or two handy so the boys can practice shooting the ball over," Cal advised.

"Two days later Cal came into the office to get his mail. "Say, Cal," said Comiskey, "I took your advice and bought $58 worth of home plates. I've got one in right field, one in left, one near third base and another near first base, and I'm going to take up the whole shooting match."

"Why?" asked Callahan.

"Because if I don't those wild pitchers will have as an excuse that they thought they were throwing at one of the plates they use in practice."

BRESNAHAN BEST CATCHER.

So Thinks Ira Thomas of Athletics, Who Says Roger Has No Weakness.

Ira Thomas of the Philadelphia Athletics thtuks Roger Bresnahan is the greatest catcher in the game, and many agree with the Mackman. "Bres for mine as the greatest catcher," says Ira. "Look at him. He can do everything. He is a fine catcher, can throw to bases like the deuce, is fast himself running bases, a good hitter, and, besides all this, is showing himself to be a good manager. That ought to be enough to show that he is a little better than anybody else. Next to him comes Charlie Dooin, to my mind. And there isn't much difference between them, though I lean a little toward Roger."

SECRET OF LAJOIE'S BATTING.

Former Ball Player Says His Success Is Due to "Follow on" Style.

"The secret of Lajoie's successful hitting lies in the fact that he adopts the 'follow on' style used by golfers," said a former ball player. "He doesn't swing his bat from his side, but meets the ball squarely when it reaches a point in front of his chest, and then puts his strength into a sort of punch which carries the bat well beyond his left side. All first class batsmen do this, for it enables them to keep their eyes on the ball and to put strength into their bats when they hit the leather."

JURY FINDS BEATTIE GUILTY OF WIFE'S MURDER

Quick Verdict Is Rendered---Prisoner Sentenced to Die November 24th---Convicted Man Hopeful---Says Hasn't Lost Yet

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept 9.—Twelve Virginia farmers knelt at dusk last night in the obscurity of the small jury room of Chesterfield courthouse, praying fervently that they might pass judgment aright on Henry C. Beattie, Jr., indicted for the murder of his wife. Grimly determined, they arose a moment later and silently one by one recorded a unanimous verdict of "Guilty."

Pausing in solemn contemplation for fifty-eight minutes, weighing carefully the meaning of their decision and once more on bended knees beseeching divine assistance that they might not err, they filed into the hushed stillness of a crowded courtroom and with startling suddenness twelve voices, instead of the usual one of the foreman, spoke the single word "Guilty." It was almost a shout.

The spectre of death which stalked Midlothian turnpike on July 18 last when the life of Mrs. Louise O. Beattie was taken away with the single report of a shotgun stared hard at the young husband, ready to claim its victim by electrocution on Friday, Nov. 24 next. But the prisoner returned the gaze, unswerving and unafraid.

The court of appeals, to be sure, will be asked to grant a writ of error and a new trial. Young Beattie, cognizant of the legal weapons yet at his disposal, did not surrender. Instead, he consoled his broken-down father and comforted him as he whispered: "I haven't lost yet, father."

Unusual as had been the tragedy and the gruesome stage where it occurred, the twelve jurymen did not hesitate to admit to their friends that they stood in judgment not only over the cold-blooded murder, but upon his marital infidelity as well.

At the close of a powerful address by L. O. Wendenburg, the voluntary assistant of the commonwealth in the case, the suspense was keenly felt.

The jury had for eleven days heard evidence, for two days speeches, but the words of Wendenburg rang in their ears as they left the courtroom to find their verdict.

"Let that man go free!" he cried. "What, let that man go free? Why the motherhood of Virginia, the womanhood of this nation will shudder in terror as the security of its life is threatened. Let this man go free? The man who basked in the degraded sunshine of another woman while at his home a young wife nursed his child? Gentlemen, I merely ask you in the name of justice to do your duty."

Judge Watson delivered an impressive speech to the prisoner. He said the young man had stained his own life and that of the community in which he lived by his sordid acts. He had hoped that counsel would prove the defendant innocent, but the evidence, he regretted to note, was all convincing and overwhelming.

"The court, in this trial," said Judge Watson, "has endeavored in all its decisions to lean toward the side of the prisoner, and, in its charge to the jury as well, attempted to give him the benefit of every doubt and every opportunity to establish his innocence. The rulings mostly have been not on matters of law, but on small questions of fact.

"You have had a fair and impartial trial, Mr. Beattie, and the jury has done what it considers its duty. Therefore, you have been convicted of murder in the first degree and on Nov. 24, between the hours of sunrise and sunset, you must forfeit your life to the community. May God have mercy on your soul."

A moment later, by the side of his father and his brother Douglas, their heads bowed in grief, walked Beattie in the darkness toward his cell 100 yards away.

VETERAN FIREMEN'S

Association Will Be Formed At Atlantic

TO SECURE OLD TUB

A well attended meeting was held at Music hall, Atlantic, Friday evening, to take steps toward forming a veteran firemen's association. Peter W. Branschied presided and considerable enthusiasm was shown. The plans of the proposed association were fully discussed and a permanent organization will be made in a few days. The association will make an effort to get the old Granite engine, now at the Central Fire station and failing in this, they will probably purchase some second hand tub and fix it up. The association will be thoroughly drilled in handling the tub and may be expected to be head from at firemen's musters in the near future.

MAY BUILD GREEK WARSHIP

Fore River Works to Bid For Dreadnought

IF BILL PASSES

It is among the possibilities that in the near future the Fore River Shipbuilding company may be asked to submit a bid for the construction of a dreadnought, similar to the Rividavia for Greece. The Herald this morning says:

Greece has caught the dreadnought fever. According to L. L. Caftanzoglu, Greek charge d'affaires at Washington, a bill is to be introduced in the Greek Chamber shortly for construction of a battleship of the pattern of the Argentine Rividavia. Should it be passed the Fore River Ship Building Company and other American concerns will be invited to bid.

Mr. Caftanzoglu passed through Boston, Friday, on his way to Washington from Bar Harbor, where the summer quarters of the legislation have been. He called on Gov. Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald, assuring them of the good sentiments entertained toward the United States by his country and by the Greeks in Massachusetts.

"Recent political troubles in Greece and the war cloud over eastern Europe have had little or no effect," he said in an interview, "upon my country's commercial prosperity. M. Venezuelos, the new premier formerly prime minister of Crete and head of the Cretan national party, is strong and popular, and has instituted a thoroughgoing reform of the finances, the army and the navy.

"The navy of Greece is superior to that of her neighbor and hereditary enemy, Turkey, and the Greeks are what the Turks have never been—naturally good sailors. The Greeks own a large merchant marine, and there is no port of importance in Asia Minor, southern Russia or Egypt without its Greek mercantile colony. The sentiment of nationality among them is very strong. The latest addition to the Greek navy, a fine Italian-built cruiser which took part in the international review at Spithead in June, was built by money left by George Averof, a wealthy Egyptian cotton merchant of Greek birth, after whom the vessel was named."

Mr. Caftanzoglu expressed the hope that he would be instrumental in interesting merchants in New York, Chicaga and Boston in trade with Greece.

"The Greek people are mainly agricultural," he said, "and the most promising depot for trade at present is Volo, the chief port of Thessaly, which province has only begun to recover from the late war with Turkey, of which it was the centre."

The Greek legation at Washington he said would be glad to furnish detailed information as to the classes of goods most in demand, but he emphasized the wisdom of American manufacturers sending representatives of their own nationality, not leaving their business in the hands of foreign merchants, whom he rarely has found energetic in pushing any line of American-manufactured goods when a substitute can be found in Europe. English was spoken so much in Greece, he said, that there were practically no linguistic difficulties there for Americans.

It is supposed to take the power of God to tell whether one man is really good or bad, and yet our politicians think they can decide between the thousand complex personalities and actions that separate a good trust from a bad trust.

AIR REGULATION.

Modern progress is developing some knotty legal problems. The matter of regulating navigation of the air is rapidly coming to be one of importance. And apparently, in the absence of provision to the contrary, when one flings a message into the air, "via wireless," a dispatch becomes the property of anyone who can catch it. At least a court in California has so decided in the case of a man who made public the contents of an intercepted aerogram. It looks as though there would have to be some interstate, national or international agreement as to flying machines and wireless telegraphy.

ROWDYISM.

Anticipating a repetition of the disgraceful orgies of last year, the people of Bethel beach are "up in arms" regarding the contemplated picnic of a Boston political club, booked to take place next Sunday. With the announcement of the affair, comes a threat from the club's leaders, that should the local police try to interfere, they will be given a warm reception. The main question at issue is, how long will the law abiding citizens of this Sabbath respecting community be content to stand for the desecration of the Lord's day by the obnoxious hoodlums from certain sections of Boston, who are well aware that their actions would not be tolerated in that city. The protesting citizens are right and are to be commended for taking a stand against the intruders. Unless we are greatly mistaken in His Honor's orders to the Chief of Police, the members of the political club, out for a picnic, will think, before the day is over, that they have made very little impression with their threat of violence.

KEEP THEM AT SCHOOL.

With the opening of the school season each year it develops that many who were in the schools in the spring and should still be gaining their education have dropped out. It is one of the sad features of the opening days, for as a rule those who leave are the ones who are most in need of the benefits to be derived from further education.

There are many reasons why pupils drop out. One of them, unfortunately, is necessity. The burden of supporting the family is at times too heavy for those upon whom it falls, to bear unaided. There are of course cases where actual need is behind the failure to continue school work. Very frequently however, a little care would still enable the pupil to continue his education and receive the benefits that are to be secured from the discipline and knowledge of the school course and the association with the other boys and girls. In too many cases there is a lack of interest on the part of the parents, a failure to appreciate the benefits to be derived from the course or the handicap the boy or girl will suffer from lack of education and school association.

In other cases the trouble lies largely with the girl or boy. Frequently they show a lack of interest in the work and after following the course unwillingly for a time drop out at the earliest opportunity. The youth cannot perhaps be blamed for this for he is too immature to fully realize what he is doing. It is a duty of the parents to do all possible to see that his attitude toward education is right and that he does not handicap himself. Other things being equal, the boy or girl who has been thoroughly trained in the public schools, whose powers of reasoning have been developed and who has gained the confidence and control over his faculties that come with the school training, has an advantage over the one who was forced to leave school earlier and was denied further study. The parent should strain every faculty to keep the pupil in school as long as possible, to provide the best education that can be provided, for the influence of the early school days will be felt all through life.

MEETING OF TOWN RIVER BOAT CLUB

A meeting of the Town River Boat club was held Friday evening in the barn adjoining the home of Eugene R. Stone, on River street. Many plans were outlined for the coming year and the club now has an enrollment of eighty members, but it is expected that the number will reach one hundred before the time for closing the charter is at hand. The pennant of the club is to be a red one, with a blue field and bearing a white star.

The next meeting of the club will be held Friday Sept. 15 at 8 P. M. at Stone's barn, River street, and a cordial invitation is extended to all interested to attend and become charter members which can be done by paying the entrance fee of five dollars.

SIGHTS NEW TO THEM

Life Term Convicts Overcome When Treated to Ride In Auto

Indianapolis, Sept. 9.—Two life term convicts collapsed from nervous excitement caused by riding in an automobile and the sight of trolley cars when E. J. Fogarty, warden of the state prison, took them for a ten-mile jaunt through ichigan City and the surrounding country.

One of the men had been within the mile jaunt through Michigan City and the other thirty-five. They were awe-stricken by buildings more than four stories high and shivered at the speed and the mystery of power of the motor car, the warden said, and he had to cut short the tour and return his charges to the prison.

Fatal Auto Accident

Newbury, Mass., Sept. 9.—George Russell of Portsmouth, N. H., was instantly killed and Frank E. Hall of Boston was seriously injured last night, crushed under an automobile which ran away from them while they were changing seats.

WHEEL ABOUT THE HUB.

Charles W. Reed of Atlantic was also one of the party of thirty wheelmen to start. Friday the trip was through the Blue Hills to Sharon where the night was spent. Tonight it is planned to hold a banquet at Pemberton.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

MY friends are asked: "Why does SPRAGUE want to be County Commissioner when he has a business?"

BECAUSE our County business is conducted to build up a POLITICAL MACHINE, and business methods are ignored. They build a Ten Thousand Dollar bridge over Straits Pond at a cost of $20,800.00, absolutely without competition.

They place the contract for the granite in the new Quincy Court House at an excessive price, absolutely without competition. Their excuse is that there is only one quarry in Quincy that produces granite suitable.

"If true, 'tis pity."

Mr. Merrill "has been tried (for 6 years) and has been found wanting."

If I am elected I shall not forget I am your SERVANT.

HINTS ON COOKING

INDIAN BEEF BALLS

These really are a form of curried meat, but being a typical Indian dish they are worth mentioning. After mashing a pound of beef, pepper it well adding half a teaspoonful of chopped green ginger and garlic and a little salt. Having made the mixture into balls, flour and fry these in lard until (according to the native cookery book) they become the color of a brown horse. Place a sliced onion a large spoonful of butter two tablespoonful of coriander seed, a saltspoonful of saffron and a pinch of curry powder in a stewpan. In due course add the beef balls, and a few minutes later, half a pint of milk, letting them remain over a slow fire until they are required.

CANNOT RAISE BAIL

Vermont Woman Denies That She Tried to Poison Husband

Barre, Vt., Sept. 9.—Without a friend of means to help her, Mrs. Vera Smith, the 21-year-old wife of Clarence D. Smith, is in Montpelier jail because she cannot raise $2500 bail to free her and give her a chance to fight the charge of poisoning her young husband, whom she is trying to divorce.

Mrs. Smith made a statement to the officers yesterday in her own defense, declaring that she knew absolutely nothing about the alleged poisoning of her husband.

Mrs. Smith has made many friends since her arrest and they are trying to raise sufficient bail to set her free. She has a good reputation.

Anty Drudge on Education.

Katherine—"My, how provoked I am, Anty. You wouldn't dream this frock had once been white. Look at it now. I sent it to the laundress and it looks almost the color of weak coffee with milk in it."

Anty Drudge—"It's partly your fault, my dear. You're a college graduate, but you aren't educated until you know what is best for your clothes. If you had known enough to see that your white frock was washed with Fels-Naptha soap in cool or lukewarm water it would have been snowywhite. The Fels-Naptha way is the only method of washing to keep white clothes white without harming them."

Here's the easiest way that's ever been discovered to wash clothes—either in summer or winter.

For the white things: Wet the clothes, soap well with Fels-Naptha, roll and let soak for thirty minutes in cool or lukewarm water. Unroll, rub lightly, rinse and hang out to dry.

This simple Fels-Naptha way of washing makes your clothes sweeter, whiter, cleaner than you can get them any other way.

And the clothes last longer because they are not weakened by boiling, nor worn by hard rubbing.

Worth trying?

It is for the woman who values her clothes, her time and herself.

For washing colored clothes and other things, see plain directions on the red and green wrapper.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL
ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.
Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.
First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.
Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.
Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.
Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.
Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.
Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

After reading the public statement of this fellow-sufferer given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

J. Fortin, Montello St., Brockton, Mass., says: "I was troubled for over two years by attacks of backache. If I arose from a sitting position or stood any length of time, I was caused great pain. There was a feeling of weariness present and if I did a hard day's work, I was bothered by Lameness and soreness across my bac k. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, for such complaints and I got a box and began their use according to directions. They went directly to the seat of my complaint, relieving me of severe backaches and restoring me to good health. It has given me pleasure on several occasions to recommend this remedy." (Statement given June 13, 1905.)

A SECOND STATEMENT.

On July 26, 1911, Mr. Fortin was interviewed and he said: "I willingly verily my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. You may continue to use my reference, as the relief this remedy brought me has been permanent."

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

Having definitely settled for himself the question of identity, Judson renewed his search for some eavesdropping point of vantage. Risking the moonlight, he twice made the circuit of the occupied end of the building. There was a line of light showing under the ill fitting door, and, with the top step of the downhill flight for a perching place, one might lay an ear to the crack and overhear. But door and steps were sharply struck out in the moonlight, and they faced the mining hamlet, where the men of the day shift were still stirring.

Judson knew the temper of the Timanyoni miners. To be seen crouching on the boss' doorstep would be to take the chance of making a target of himself for the first loiterer of the day shift who happened to look his way. Dismissing the risky expedient, he made a third circuit from moon glare to shadow, this time upon hands and knees. To the lowly come the rewards of humility. Framed level upon stout log pillars on the downhill side, the headquarters warehouse and office sheltered a space beneath its floor which was roughly boarded up with slabs from the log sawing. Slab by slab the ex-engineer sought for his rat hole, trying each one softly in its turn. When there remained but three more to be tugged at the loosened one was found. Judson swung it cautiously aside and wriggled through the narrow aperture left by its removal. A crawling minute later he was crouching beneath the loosely jointed floor of the lighted room, and the avenue of the ear had broadened into a fair highway.

Almost at once he was able to verify his guess that there were only two men in the room above. At all events there were only two speakers. They were talking in low tones, and Judson had no difficulty in identifying the rather high pitched voice of the owner of the Wire Silver mine. The man whose profile he had seen on the window shade had the voice which belonged to the outlined features, but the listener under the floor had a vague impression that he was trying to disguise it. Judson knew nothing about the letter in which Flemister had promised to arrange for a meeting between Lidgerwood and the ranchman Grofield. What he did know was that he had followed Hallock almost to the door of Flemister's office and that he had seen a shadowed face on the office window shade which could be no other than the face of the chief clerk. It was in spite of all this that the impression that the second speaker was trying to disguise his voice persisted. But the ex-engineer of fast passenger trains was able to banish the impression after the first few minutes of eavesdropping.

Judson had scarcely found his breathing space between the floor timbers and had not yet overheard enough to give him the drift of the low toned talk when the bell of the private line telephone rang in the room above. It was Flemister who answered the bell ringer.

"Hello! Yes, this is Flemister. What's that? A message about Mr. Lidgerwood? All right; fire away."

"Who is it?" came the inquiry in the grating voice which fitted and yet did not fit the other man.

The listener heard the click of the telephone earpiece replacement.

"It's Goodloe, talking from his station office at Little Butte," replied the mine owner. "The dispatcher has just called him up to say that Lidgerwood left Angels in his service car, running special, at 8:40, which would figure it here at about 11 or a little later."

"Who is running it?" inquired the other man, rather anxiously, Judson decided.

"Williams and Bradford. A fool for luck every time. We might have had to wipe out a couple of our friends."

The listener under the floor had a sensation like that which might be produced by a cold wind blowing up the nape of his neck.

"There is no such thing as luck," rasped the other voice. "My time was short—after I found out that Lidgerwood wasn't coming on the passenger. But I managed to send word to Matthews and Lester, telling them to make sure of Williams and Bradford. We could spare both of them, if we have to."

"Good!" said Flemister. "Then you had some such alternative in mind as that I have just been proposing?"

"No," was the crusty rejoinder. "I was merely providing for the hundredth chance. I don't like your alternative."

"Why don't you?"

"Well, for one thing, it's needlessly bloody. We don't have to go at this thing like a bull at a gate. I've had my finger on the pulse of things ever since Lidgerwood took hold. The dope is working all right in a purely natural way. In the ordinary run of things it will be only a few days or weeks before Lidgerwood will throw up his hands and quit, and when he goes out I go in. That's straight goods this time."

"You thought it was before," sneered Flemister, "and you got beautifully left." Then, "You're talking long on 'naturals' and the 'ordinary run of things,' but I notice you schemed with Bart Rufford to put him out of the fight with a pistol bullet."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Boston, September 8, 1911—Bostonians interested in art as applied to the beautification of their city are much pleased over the confirmation of the appointment of J. Templeman Coolidge to the Boston Art Commission. Mr. Coolidge was for ten years a member of the commission and his return to the circle is hailed with satisfaction by those looking toward civic beauty. Many of the beauty spots of which Boston is justly proud are attributable in large part to Mr. Coolidge's influence and judgment.

Lagging feet and long faces mark the returning vacationists who crowd the railroad stations these early September days. The conviction that three months is none too long for a good vacation is forcibly expressed by the large majority of tanned travelers. The only thing that compensates for the misery of the return is the aviation meet and the prospect of football days in the near future. In the meantime those fish grow longer with each telling.

Adding to the Hub's facilities for musical education Allen A. Brown, a Boston business man who some years ago gave to the Public Library the "Allen A. Brown Collection of Musical Literature" has returned from his annual European trip during which he picks up works which he thinks may interest his city's musical people. Mainly in consequence of Mr. Brown's enlightened purchasing for the community's benefit the New England capital is able to offer to the thousands of music students who register each year at its Conservatory and at the various other schools and colleges of the vicinity the advantages of the best all around musical library in America. Other collections excel in possession of exceptional treasures. The Library of Congress at Washington has certain rarities and freaks of muical literature which no other library has. The New York public library not only has a creditable working music library but some very expensive treasures of antiquity which it owes to millionaires' munificence. Other public institutions have begun to collect in this field. Yet for general, comprehensive usefulness the Allen A. Brown collection is said on good authority to be the best of its kind. Although it contains its share of unique and curious works the additions, as the Public Library trustees have recently noted, are "chiefly prompted by a desire to keep the Library abreast of musical progress here and in Europe." The needs of a city which entertains thousands of music students appear to influence Mr. Brown more than any other one consideration. Director George W. Chadwick of the New England Conservatory of Music, where upwards of 2,800 pupils acquire professional education in music, frequently makes suggestions to the donor of the Brown collection concerning works which would be useful to students of musical interpretation or composition. These suggestions have usually been followed. The Allen A. Brown Music Library, in consequence, favorably located as it is in commodious rooms at the Public Library building in Copley Square, serves as a Mecca for serious minded music students from September through June. It is a recognized "big brother" to the convenient and well selected working library of about 2,700 works at the New England Conservatory building a few blocks up the avenue.

Cooking is being introduced this autumn into several of the high schools about Boston. It is the first time that this plan has been tried and in itself indicates a great change in the ideas of the present day regarding domestic work. In the old days our great grandmothers were usually excellent housekeepers, but our grandmothers began to lose a little of the enthusiasm for cooking and housework which their mothers had possessed, and to rebel against the constant drudgery which antiquated modes of living imposed on them. Our mothers are even more rebellious except in those cases where scientific housekeeping has been adopted and domestic duties rendered agreeable and pleasant. Now however, cooking is becoming once more the art of all arts, and every effort is being made to educate young people into understanding the vast importance of the culinary art in the smooth running of the family machinery. It is no longer the fad to "just hate housekeeping" and it has been found in those schools which have undertaken cooking as a study that the girls are very much interested and find much enjoyment in the model kitchens

AS WELL AS BUSINESS REASONS
WHY
JOHN F. MERRILL
PRESIDENT CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS
SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED TO OFFICE

The American people have repeatedly insisted upon the fact if a public servant has faithfully performed his duty and real experience gained by years of service is of the utmost value to the taxpayer and to the County, he should be continued in office, (notwithstanding the fact at the present time there are people seeking the office who think that they have all the qualifications without the experience). Conservative business men, particularly in an office like the County Commissioner, where experience gained by holding office and the faithful conservative fulfillment of the duties of the same, would seem to require a continuation, there can be no reasonable argument made at the present time why the present incumbent, Mr. John F. Merrill, who holds the important position as Chairman of the County Commissioners of Norfolk County, should not be re-elected to office.

The most important reasons why he should be are the fact that some very important matters which are partially under way will have to be completed within the next two years, namely, the County Building at Quincy, involving an appropriation of $100,000, the re-building of Fore River Bridge involving an appropriation of upwards of $65,000 and the re-building of the Weymouth Back River Bridge involving an appropriation of $80,000.

In all these matters where the Land and Harbor Commissioners and other parties necessarily under law, have the detail of these matters under consideration, they have in every case elected Mr. John F. Merrill as Chairman of the board. That is an unqualified endorsement of his ability and integrity with his experience to fill the office, to the satisfaction of the various boards. This is a simple statement of facts to every business and thinking man, why it would be unwise to make any change at the present time by the election of anyone else to succeed Mr. Merrill to fill these important positions. Does it not seem particularly against the interests of the county to do otherwise than re-elect Mr. Merrill to this important position?

SPORTING "DOPE"
By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

It will be sadly regretted by local fans, that the weather indications do not seem to warrant a game being played today between West Quincy and the champions of the Navy.

It was at first thought that the big game of today would be postponed till next Saturday, but the arrangements that have been made with regard to the championship series, it seems that we will not be afforded an opportunity to see the nautical stars in action.

Manager McKenzie of the Makaria nine has informed me that his combination will play the Atlantics a series of three games for the championship of the city. The games will be played on the Water street grounds. The first game is scheduled to take place next Saturday.

This coming series should prove a great drawing card and will be a fitting close to the baseball season.

The Atlantic boys will have the same team in line that defeated West Quincy on the holiday, while the Makarias have an influx of players from whom a fine selection can be made. Michael may be in the mound for these latter, and is sure to make things lively with the tossers from the ward 6 section.

Coach Staff issued a call yesterday for candidates for the football team. About 35 prospective players assembled in one of the rooms of the school building and listened attentively to the instructions of the former Brown athlete. Coach Staff went over a number of the new rules and explained them in detail.

He seemed to be very optimistic concerning the chances for a fast high school eleven and stated that he expected to have the boys out in the field by next Tuesday.

Capt. Johnson seems pleased with the manner in which things have started and said that the local high school players should be able to cope with the best in interscholastic circles.

George Sullivan and the Marcean brothers are the Quincy entrants in the Democratic Barbecue games, scheduled to take place this afternoon at Caledonian grove. Frank Marceau is down to compete in the mile run, while his brother E. J. is to try conclusions in the half mile. George Sullivan, however, will try to covet the honors in the 440 yard dash.

The members of the Quincy Athletic Association observed a busy session last evening and it now is beginning to look as if this flourishing organization will give us some fine attractions this winter.

"Link" Elcock and "Joe" oFrd, two popular ball players, are expected home this evening.

If wet grounds prevail this afternoon, the deciding game of the Heptasoph—Knights of Columbus series will in all probability be postponed till next Saturday.

The Soccer football season will be on in full blast this afternoon when the strong Coats team from Pawtucket lines up against the formidable Fore River aggregation.

The Mohawks have been booked to play Atlantic, in a practice game, at ward 6 this afternoon.

I see that "Bill" Manning, the star Quincy high athlete, is attending Burdett college. "Bill" received very flattering offers from Dartmouth, Colgate and Brown, but has thrown them all down to enter business life. It will seem rather strange to realize that the local boys will not hereafter engage in such athletic activity as was noticeable when he carried the colors of the local institution.

☞Housekeepers await the coming of the Ledger each day with more than usual interest as they are anxious to see what new and palatable recipe will be in Berry Brothers ad. FIRE AT RESIDENCE OF COUNCILMAN BRANCH

Prompt Action of Fire Department Prevented Serious Blaze on Sunday

Probably Caused By Grounded Electric Wire

The prompt discovery of a fire in the residence of Councilman Ernest W. Branch, at 72 Putnam street, Sunday morning, prevented what gave promise of a bad blaze. Councilman and Mrs. Branch were at church and there was no one at home. A. P. Elwell was just about to jump into a bath tub, when in looking out,, he saw smoke coming from his neighbor's house. After the alarm was given, neighbors immediately came to the rescue and while one ran to Box 29 to sound an alarm others got the lawn hose working and tried to extinguish the fire. The first to enter the house were surprised to find nearly every light chandelier red hot and smoking. The most fire, however, was in a room on the second floor. There was a dense smoke which filled the whole house up into the attic, giving the impression that the fire had worked into the attic.

Combination 2 and Hose 2 of Wollaston were the first on the scene having made the run in four minutes. The central station apparatus soon arrived but in the meantime Combination 2 had raised a ladder to a window in the room and had a chemical stream working.

The auto chemical, acting under orders, had gone for Chief Williams, as his tapper was not working. The chief however got the alarm from the whistle and had started, meeting the auto at St. John's church.

On the arrival of this apparatus, a chemical stream from Combination 1 and from the auto chemical was run into the building. A line of hose was also laid from a near by hydrant, but no water was used on the fire thus reducing the loss that would have been occasioned by water. It required the firemen but a few minutes to get the fire under control. The house had been thoroughly smoked, however, and the room where the fire started was gutted.

Mr. Branch who had been informed of the fire, arrived as the fire was under control.

After the fire, Chief Williams said that the loss would not exceed $600. Thealarm sounded at 11.40 and at 11.47 Combination 2 had a chemical stream on the fire.

The cause of the fire is generally believed to have been caused by the electric light wires becoming grounded in some way on the gas pipes.

YACHTING SEASON ENDS

Officially With Review and Rendezvous Off Hull

RACING NEXT YEAR

While there was an unusual amount of yacht racing in Quincy waters the past season, there seems likely to be even more next, for in addition to the races, for the Quincy Yacht club challenge cup and the Thomas Fleming Day cup for Cape Cat boats, it is now certain that there will be a series of races for the Bermuda trophy which was won this year by a Quincy boat. Under the new deed of gift, the Quincy club becomes the custodian of the cup until next Labor day. The cup is one presented by the City of Boston. This was announced Saturday night at the South Boston Yacht club, when the Frothingham and Bermuda cups were awarded, as well as the penants won in the interbay association.

The points secured by Quincy boats according to the start and finish were as follows:

All of the yachts were in their Sunday dress and with cock-of-the-walk and other pennants flying, they made a pretty picture.

After passing in review, the yachts proceeded to City Point where they were reviewed and the parade dismissed.

FLYING AT ATLANTIC.

Lieut. Thomas B. Milling, U. S. A., did considerable flying at the aviation at Atlantic here Sunday afternoon in a Burgess-Wright biplane and incidentally he took up a number of passengers.

He has been at the field for several days giving instruction in some of the finer points of flying to some students who have already taken lessons at the Wright schools. Among these were W. Starling Burgess and C. L. Webster of Haverhill, who is going to be an instructor at the Burgess school here.

Lieut. Milling took up both these men this afternoon, also Farnk L. Carey, the head mechanician for the Burgess-Curtis company, Mrs. Carey, the young Japanese, I. Agatsuma, head draftsman for the company, and Elijah Hines, the foreman .

Among the first of his passengers was Miss Anna Hathaway of Marblehead. Later he took up Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lawrence of New Bedford separately. Mr. Lawrence proposes to buy a machine and he begins to take lessons tomorrow. P. W. Bliss was also a passenger.

It was a perfect afternoon for flying. Lieut. Milling left the field soon after 6 P. M. and started at 8 for Washington, D. C., to report at the government aviation school at College Park, Md., tomorrow.

Philip W. Page is expected here Monday from the Wright brothers' school, Dayton, O., where he has been learning to fly. He is to be an instructor at the Burgess-Curtis school.

STOLE FRUIT.

Many complaints have come to the police about parties who have been stealing fruit along Hancock street. About 4 o'clock Sunday morning Officer Malone arrested Salvatore Vantrici while he was helping himself to pears in the orchard of John W. Hall. In court this morning a fine of $25 was imposed and the sentence suspended until Dec. 1.

She will probably recover.

STOLE A FIFTY FOOT SCHOONER

Word was received by the police Sunday, that a fifty foot schooner had been stolen from South Boston and was headed toward Houghs Neck. Inspector Goodhue went there in the auto patrol to arrest the parties when they landed. Before they reached the beach, however, their boat was overhauled by the police boat Guardian and the three men placed under arrest.

Interesting Addresses Tell of Needs of That Community

The first annual dinner of the Squantum improvement association was held Saturday evening at the Squantum Inn. Mayor Shea was the principal guest of the evening and occupied the seat of honor at the head table. Others at this table were William N. Kenyon the wide awake president of the association, Councilman at large Branch, chairman of the Finance Committee Councilman at large Cherrington of Ward Six, Boran Von Srholley, Dr. H. F. Moran and President Bryant of the City council who sat at the left hand of President Kenyon.

At the other tables were Councilmen Histen, Parlee, Sandberg, Ross, Sodergren, Leslie, Jenkins Boyd Erickson, Craig, Bolster, Smith and Forde, Clerk of Council Magee, chairman Adams of the Assessors, Chief Engineer Williams, chairman Gill of the Park Commission, City Messenger Tirrell, City Engineer Sargent, ex-Representative Peter T. It was about 5.30 when dinner was announced and a few minutes later all were seated about the tables. President Kenyon in opening the dinner spoke briefly, welcoming the guests and members and after three rousing cheers for Mayor Shea and the City Council it was in order to eat no second invitation was needed and for the next two hours there was a constant clash of knives, forks and

"Do you believe in fairies?" asks Maude Adams in Peter Pan. The news we are now getting from the fishing camps compel us to admit that we do.

Those European powers should learn that you can never support your family when you spend your time heaving ultimatums into your neighbor's back yard.

The sailors may have had a bad time in the South Atlantic storm, but they felt relieved that there were no chimneys over them to rattle down on their heads.

The newspapers print too much about the Beattie murder trial and other similar tragedies, yet the publicity of the thing is part of the punishment, and is dreaded by some men more than the electric chair.

MAINE'S BIG DAY.

This is surely Maine's big day, an interesting one, if not the greatest in the history of that state. Twenty-seven years ago last Friday the people of the Pine Tree State adopted the prohibition amendment to State Constitution by a vote of 70,783 to 23,811. Gen. Neal Dow, the father of the prohibition movement, was then the most powerful figure in Maine politics. It was he who drafted the severe prohibitory law passed early in the 50's. Dow was a Quaker by descent on his father's side, but he was likewise a fighter says the Boston Journal.

He was a militant reformer, but he fought a fair and dignified fight. He went around neither smashing windows nor abusing his opponents, but talking eloquently for prohibition. In 1880 the Prohibition party nominated him for President. The party was then young and he received a small vote, not much over 10,000, but his enthusiasm paved the way for the much more impressive showing made by John P. St. John four years later. Dow fought through the Civil War, part of the time with Butler and distinguished himself for bravery. He was a born fighter, like Whittier, who was even more of a Quaker than Dow was.

Dow was the big man in Maine when the prohibiton amendment was grafted upon the constitution in 1884, and while he lived everything went well with the cause. In fact, it went well enough for several years after his death, but there was a sharp warning of a long threatened reaction when Governor Cobb, after an attempt to have prohibition strictly enforced, saw his plurality cut down to unimpressive proportions in 1906. After that the opposition became bolder and more confident and finally it forced through the resubmission of the issue; and this is the question that will take Maine voters to the polls today. This is what makes today the most important the prohibition cause has faced in this part of the country in the last quarter of a century.

CO-OPERATION BY FARMERS.

A comprehensive plan for getting rid ofthat much berated creature, the "Middleman," has been announced by the promoters of a movement embracing 62,000 farmers in Pennsylvania and New York. They supply the New York produce market. Plans for a central receiving station and cold storage, etc., are carefully outlined. A convention just held at Newburgh, N. Y., considered throwing out the middleman from the dairy trade, the producers to sell directly through co-operative associations.

It is more than strange that the American farmer has been so slow to adopt co-operative methods. A recent magazine article tells how the Eastern Counties Association of England sells for 55 pounds seed mixtures that the farmers had to pay 70 pounds for outside. A farmer walked into the office of the Hereford Society one day. He was afraid that they had made a mistake in their remittance to him for pears. They had given him 28 shillings per 100 weight, where previously he had sold them for three shillings.

In the Teme valley in England, co-operative associations took up the matter of transportation, and got motor wagons started that hauled freight for three shillings a ton that previously had cost the farmers five shillings.

France is a great country for co-operative work among farmers. There are 30,000 members of these societies in the province of Brittany alone. They buy fertilizers, tools and seed at low rates, sell all products, secure low rates for insurance, get more favorable freight rates, etc.

The Anglo-Saxon temperament has a certain independence that does not take kindly to co-operation, particularly among a class of people having tendencies of isolation like farmers.

Our English cousins have similar tendencies, although co-operative movements have made far greater advance there than here. But English experts feel that British agriculture is falling behind the Continent, because the farmers don't co-operate any better.

The Consumer of course looks askance at any movement to enable the producer to get higher prices. He need never fear. No co-operative farm association can ever get any hold in competition with the independent producer until it beats out the independent producer on prices and quality.

LOVE NEEDS SPEED LIMIT.

The rash act of Labor day when W. A. Childs, Jr., of New York City, killed Miss Catherine Van Wyck of Brooklyn, is attributed to unrequited love. The young centers in this grisly tragedy were but 20 years old.

Passionate love is a very powerful motor. When driven about the crooks and turns of a protracted wooing by an immature hand, it often lands in the ditch.

Most young fellows at about that period have an attack of what the humorists call "calf love." Any grown up human fledgeling wearing skirts stirs their tremulous senses. Restrained through the day time by the stupid compulsions of work and study, in the evenings this temporarily dominant passion takes the reins. They waste their physical substance with late hours.

This should be a period when ambitions for a useful and efficient career should color even the dull class room or machine shop with romance. But the fever of a premature love costs energy at a critical period that throws the dull pall of failure over many a life.

A hand clasp from Miss Sweet Sixteen, having the slightest suggestion of physical energy behind it, sends the thrilled boy home treading on the starry spaces. But if Miss S. S. enters the ice cream parlor with the black hearted rival, what a mask of treachery human nature becomes! How all faith, hope, and charity turn into dust and ashes in a land of sand and thorns!

Girls are more mature at twenty than boys. They read danger signals in these black looks. The fellow who takes the game too seriously usually finds himself disqualified before it reaches the stage of playing for blood. Well trained girlhood finds a "steady" to be embarrassing and needless baggage. She dislikes to see the bloom of her maidenhood taken off before the real master of the flower garden turns up.

Some people may often attribute such a tragedy as the Van Wyck-Childs case to the idea that the "girl encouraged him." One must remember, however, that a girl at twenty is nearer the time of normal marriage than the boy. He should still be laying the foundations of success among the world's workers. She needs to know men well before making her final choice, needs her own opportunities for testing and trying of dispositions.

There are fewer such tragedies where the tennis court is substituted for the hammock. When young people interest themselves in acquiring expert skill at some athletic art, there is less energy left to feed bonfires that are not ripe for the torch.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!

Much ofthe credit for the success of the July Fourth celebrations last year, and this, was due to the untiring efforts of Eugene R. Stone, the hustling president of the general committee. "Gene" is a hustler and anything he takes hold of is sure to go. Born in Boston in 1871, he received his education in the public schools of that city. In 1890 he accepted a position in the building department of a well known New York house with whom he remained until 1898 at which time he was its superintendent, resigning to accept a position with the Magee Furnace company with whom he remained many years. Leaving the employ of this firm Mr. Stone embarked in the heating and ventilating business under the firm name of Stone, Underhill & Co. This firm have been hustlers from the start and have been successful in obtaining many contracts, several of which are for public buildings in this city.

Mr. Stone entered the City Council as a representative from Ward Two in 1905 and served several years. Here he did good service on several important committees. In 1908 he was the Republican candidate for Mayor, but was defeated at the polls. He has been mentioned since that year in connection with that office but has not yielded to the call.

He is the present president of the Quincy Board of Trade, which position he has held for two years, during which time he has worked hard for the success of the organization. In 1910 when the movement was started to have a July Fourth celebration in Quincy, he was made the president of the general committee and as stated above, he worked night and day to make the affair a success.

He has also been prominently identified with the Washington Street Congregational church and has served as one of its officers.

Socially he is affillated with the Masonic fraternity, being a member of Rural lodge, St. Stephen's Chapter and Quincy Commandery, K. T. and is also a member of Quincy lodge of Elks and the Granite City club.

He is a pleasant man to meet and is always ready and willing to lend his aid to any movement for the betterment of mankind and the city.

SUES FOR A FORCED JAG.

Sunday School Teacher Wants $55,000 as Recompense.

Harry J. Bohart, Presbyterian Sunday school teacher of Kansas City, has filed suit in the circuit court asking $55,000 damages from the Missouri Pacific railroad because that company's employees forced him to drink whisky enough from a jug to make him drunk.

The petition relates that Bohart and John Laughlin went to Lake City, a station on the Missouri Pacific north of Kansas City, one day last fall. When they started to return they found the train was late and would not reach Lake City until midnight. They sought refuge in the depot from the cold while waiting for the train.

The petition alleges that the station agent and operator informed Bohart that they expected to have a jolly evening and brought forth a jug of whisky. Bohart, who up to that time had never tasted whisky, was the first to be asked to drink. When he refused it is alleged that the men forced him at the point of a revolver to swallow the liquor.

The Sunday school teacher claims to have become intoxicated and to have suffered a splitting headache the following day.

An effort will be made in the suit to hold the railroad responsible on the ground that its employees in charge of the depot were the prime movers in the affair.

TRIED TO ENTER HOUSE AT HOUGHS NECK

James Gammon, who claims his home to be in Canton, found himself at Houghs Neck Sunday, much the worse for liquor. Just how he came there he does not know, but about 1 o'clock this morning he was discovered trying to make an entrance into the house of Charles W. Gould on Great Hill. Mr. Gould tried to drive him away but he persisted in trying to enter. The result was that he was locked up. This morning after hearing the evidence, the court found want of probable cause to believe him guilty of breaking and entering and ordered his discharge. A sentence of two months in the house of correction was however imposed for drunkenness.

KEPT VOW SIXTY YEARS.

Pendleton Shaved After Saybrook Bridge Was Completed.

Keeping a vow registered sixty years ago, Jonas Pendleton of Saybrook, Conn., lost his patriarchal beard. When he was twenty-one years old he swore never to shave again till the Connecticut river was spanned by a bridge that linked Saybrook with Lyme. Six decades have flown by, and Pendleton has reached the age of eighty-one.

A year ago the bridge was begun, and recently it was finished, and Pendleton sought a barber shop to keep his vow. The entire village was on hand to witness the removal of Pendleton's beard. Few of the villagers had ever looked on his face. The barber declined to accept compensation.

Pendleton declared after the operation that he felt twenty years younger.

Comfort Mattresses

Just returned from your Summer Outing? The first thing you did in your summer quarters on being shown to your room was to go at once to the bed and test the mattress to see what sort of a place was given you to sleep in, wasn't it?

A good bed as much as a good table, is the test of hospitality and comfort. Isn't it a wonder how some people fritter money away on the merest trivialities and sleep on the hills and hollows of a bone ache bed. Look over your bed-room equippment and whatever you do this fall, see that your beds, where one-third of your life is spent, are as restful as they can be.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES
NO SLATE NO CLINKERS
ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

Divine services were resumed yesterday. Everyone seemed to be glad to get back to our house of prayer to pledge himself anew at the altar of our faith to the worship of God and the service of man in the spirit of Jesus Christ. The floral decorations were most beautiful being presented in memory of one of our most promising young men Carleton Cummings. The pastor preached from the text: "Desire earnestly spiritual gifts." 1 Cor. 14-1. The pastor returns from his vacation in Prospect Harbor, Maine, refreshed and eager for work for the church and the community. In addition to the regular services of worship the Sunday school sessions, the Young People's Religious Union meetings, there will be a series of Sunday afternoon vesper services, special Lenten services and a series of lectures dealing with the problems of today.

Extensive repairs have been made this summer, including a new heating apparatus, a new furnace room, renovated vestry, etc.

The twenty-fourth biennial meeting of the National Conference of Unitarian and other Christian churches will be held at Washington, D. C., October 23, 26, 1911. Headquarters will be at the Arlington hotel. The meetings will be held in the D. A. R. Memorial hall. Our church will be represented officially by pastor and two lay delegates.

Two new names have been added to our Cradle Roll—George Frederick Bennett, born August 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Benentt, 174 Arlington street and Linwood Boice Young, born August 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Young, 144 Arlington street.

Mrs. Frank A. Page sang two beautiful solos at the morning service yesterday.

A meeting of the Sunday school teachers will be held with the superintendent, Frank A. Page, Grand View avenue, Friday evening, Sept. 15.

FIRST U. P. CHURCH.

A good sized congregation listened to the pastor's discourse at the morning service. He took his address from the topic: "The tears of Jesus." A soprano solo was given by Mrs. Henry Paterson and was splendidly rendered. There was the usually good attendance at the Sabbath school and Men's league.

Mrs. John Russell was the leader of the Y. P. S. C. E. and her services were greatly appreciated by a large number of members. From the text, "Christ exchanging places with us," the pastor gave an inspiring address to a large audience at the evening service. The choir sang a beautiful anthem, "Sweet Sabbath Eve."

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. A. D. Littlefield of Brookline, occupied the pulpit at the First church Sunday morning, and preached an unusually interesting sermon. His topic was "Worship" and his text was taken from these words: "God is the spirit They that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." The musical numbers were also unusually fine After the regular morning service the sessions of the Sunday school which have been suspended during the summer months were resumed and with a larger atendance than usual.

IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY DINES MAYOR AND COUNCIL

spoons. The menu was a special one, well cooked and well served and was generally pronounced to be one of the best ever partaken. The menu opened with chowder.

THE DINNER

Then came chicken, lobster, roast beef, broiled chicken and the usual side dishes of potatoes, corn and the like, ice cream and cake, coffee, cigars and cigarettes.

The dinner over, President Kenyon in opening the after dinner exercises said that the association was formed by some residents who got together to discuss the needs of the section. We felt that an organization that could come together and discuss the needs, would be in better position to get some of the needed things. The organization now has 81 members all good fellows. Squantum has at present 25 families who reside here all the year. He then referred to the extension of the water mains and the completing of building the upper part of Squantum street. Gas had also been extended and now nearly every family was using it. Many things were desirable, such as abolishing the smoke and odor nuisance of Spectacle island. We also desire to rid Squantum of mosqu - toes. We do not intend to try and intimidate of force any action of the City council but we do hope that the council will do what they can for us and that some of our requests will be granted.

He then extended his greetings to Mayor Shea who he said was a prince of good fellows. This of course called for more cheers, loud and long.

MAYOR SHEA

Mayor Shea spoke briefly saying he was a little embarrased at the introduction. Being mayor does not amount to much when in the presence of the City council. You must see the president and then convince the council your needs are just. This association is a good thing and has a good influence. We at City hall are keenly alive to the importance of this section and he believed the city government intended to do all it could to help them. We spent $17,000 to get the water in, so you could have something to drink. The City Councilalso showed the proper spirit in helping along the causeway and he had no doubt money would be appropriated to complete it. With a good way to get here and plenty of water to drink you are pretty well fixed. Of course I know that you also want lights. In closing he congratulated the association on the class of men its members was composed and said that there was a kindly feeling for them at City hall. With the many demands on the city it was hard to decide where it was best to put the money at its disposal. My advice to you is to keep plugging. Come to the council in a fair spirit and you will be met in the same spirit.

PRESIDENT BRYANT

President Bryant, was introduced as one who knows the game, said when the president of this association told him o fthis gathering I said it was just what he ought to do. We expect to be told what you want us to do. You are going at it in just the right way. You talk things over among yourselves and then come to the council as a unit. In some other parts of the city one wants one thing and anther smething else. Squantum has been one of the most neglected parts of the city. He had argued for the appropriation for the causeway. It is a beautiful spot. We have an ideal form of charter as the whole responsibility rests on the shoulders of the Mayor. Next Spring when you make up your mind what you want, you should again invite the City council here and put it to them.

COUNCILMAN CHERRINGTON

Spoke of the need of more than one thoroughfare to Squantum. The time to do things was when it does not cost too much. You should have a main artery leading to Squantum 90 feet wide. He hoped the association would push this one thing. Instead of asking of 20 lights ask for 200 police, school house, and fire alarm boxes. Keep after us and get a share of what belongs to you.

COUNCILMAN SMITH

Made one of his characteristic speeches, although he said that it was not fair to call upon him to speak. He was not one of the spell binders. This association is doing just what is right to get the improvements needed, but you have got to show the members of the council your needs. Squantum thus far has come to the council as a unit for what it wants which is the right idea. He wished them God speed.

COUNCILMAN BOLSTER

Councilman Bolster was introduced as the leader of the choir. .He said that during his two years in the council he had in mind the benefit of all the city. He could not help but appreciate what a beautiful spot this is. You ought to get all in reason you ask for He hoped to be able to do something for them at the state house next winter.

COUNCILMAN BRANCH

Said that he never understood why the president had made him chairman of the Finance Committee. He could not agree that Quincy was poor. We have many good assets and we have good citizens which is better than property. One great muncipal expense is interest.

He did not believe that the $12 limit was right. He was looking for the time when we should go to the legislature and get authority to expend all the money that the citizens want to. If we had the item of $100-000 expended for interest to use for other things it would go a long way. He favored short loans. He was not quite alone in that stand, but so near so he was lonesome.

COUNCILMAN LESLIE

Said that the Mayor was almost a Republican and he would not be surprised at the next primaries to see him recorded as such. As a member of the Republican committee he had tried to find something to beat him on but could not. This year we find many ready to keep him. Until caught by some fair dame he will continue to be popular as it is the young ladies who influence the men in voting. This association is a great thing and should be in every ward of the city. They talk over matters and the needs of the ward and agree. We all want to see Squantum grow and he hoped the association would keep out of selfish interest.

AVIATOR OVINGTON

At this point Earl L. Ovington the aviator came into the dining room. As he did so the diners rose as one man and cheered him to the echo. After the cheers had died down he thanked the party for their rousing reception and felt sorry that he did not arrive in time for the dinner. He said that he had entered for the trans-continent race and told of the plans for that event. One had to go from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but could go in either direction. The course must be covered in thirty days It was 4300 or 4500 miles an average of 130 miles a day but as there would be delays it would mean 160 miles a day.

W. A. REED

Was introduced to speak on the needs of street lights and streets. Many of us want to become citizens of Quincy and we want you to help us. He looked forward to seeing more streets accepted and he told us of the great need of new streets. We want to influence you so that you will see that it is a business proposition. From the top of the hill you can see 27 cities and towns. There is not a spot in New England that compares with it. A bridge across to Castle island was among the possibilities. He also believed that they were entitled to more street lights he also touched on the need of sewers.

J. J. LOUGHAN

Told of the need of police protection. We must have such protection as the place has grown so rapidly. There has been a lot of malicious mischief by young men who ought to know better. No doubt many of these come from out of town. It was a common thing for places to be raided and gardens and fruit trees despoiled.

H. W. ORR

The man who is the head of the mosquito committee spoke of what a great need there was to rid Squantum of this pest. The Board of Health is interested in the question but is handicapped by lack of money.

W. E. HARVEY

Spoke of the need of water extensions and fire apparatus. These questions were serious ones to deal with what we need is a piece of apparatus with a horse and man. We stand ready to give the land necessary for an engine house and he almost felt sure that the residents would build the engine house if the city furnished the apparatus. He felt grateful for what water extensions had already been made but a few more were needed.

INSPECTOR GOODHUE

At this point President Kenyon said that there had been many stories circulated about Squantum Inn and as he had made a promise to the City council when he appeared in favor of a license for the house he would like to have Inspector Goodhue tell what he had done.

Inspector Goodhue said that these stories about a hidden bar and push buttons were all rot. One day at noon during the aviation week he had visited the Inn and found them very busy. He had met Mr. Moran and told him that while he did not have any search warrant he would like to search the premises as there had been numerous stories cirlulated. Mr. Moran was perfertly willing and he had then searched the house from cellar to garret and he was prepared to say that the stories were false. Mr. Moran did not know that he was coming and had no intimation of it. In regard to the violation of the law last year he would say that Mr. Moran had not done so, but that it was done by others and he shouldered the blame. He firmly believed that Mr. Moran had kept his promise to the Mayor and City council.

Inspector Goodhue said in closing that he had no apology to make for what he had done in investigating the Inn this year and in the raid which he conducted last year.

BARON VON SCHOLLEY

Spoke briefly of the good work the association was doing as well as to express his appreciation for the hearty reception that had been given him.

DR. H. F. MORAN

Gave the party an interesting talk on how mosquitoes were responsible for malaria and other diseases. A mosquito might become infected by some foreigner in Boston one day and the next day be spreading the germ in Squantum. It was useless for one section alone to try and exterminate the pest. It must be a state wide plan.

He spoke of the pleasant people at Sqantum whom he characterized as being honest, democratic and bohemian. Here we have something to live for. The only drawback was that if he had to depend on his profession for a living at Squantum he would starve to death.

Following this there came calls for Callahan, and after some trouble he was found hiding. He did not want to speak but was prevailed upon to say a few words. This closed the speaking, and after cheers for Mayor Shea, the City council, President Kenyon, landlord Moran and everybody else, the main office room was sought where an hour was pleasantly passed with vocal and instrumental music. At 10.30 a special car took the party home to Quincy.

The dinner had been an unqualified success. The association had in a pleasant way outlined some of the things needed. There was no attempt to coerce the City council but simply to present the fact fairly, and best of all there were no varied ideas. Everybody was a unit and the result will probably be that some of the things most needed will be granted.

TRIP OF MONTH OR MORE FOR PRESIDENT TAFT.

Visit to Middle West Regarded as 1912 Opening Gun.

The most important trip that President Taft has planned since he has been in the White House, in the view of Republican leaders, a trip in which he is expected to open the 1912 presidential campaign for his party, will begin Sept. 16 next. It will last at least four weeks, and should it later be decided to extend the outing to the Pacific coast it will be stretched into six weeks, so that the president will not get back to Beverly or Washington until November.

According to the plan so far drawn up at the White House, the president will visit most of the states in the middle west north of and including Missouri and will make incursions into practically all of the states which have progressive congressional delegations. The president so far has given almost no consideration to speechmaking on this trip, but it has long been the idea of Republican leaders that he would make as many political addresses as possible west of the Mississippi.

The president will open the Appalachian exposition at Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 18 and speak at the Kansas State fair at Hutchinson Sept. 26.

From Hutchinson the president expects to travel into Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin. If the trip is to end in four weeks Milwaukee probably will be the last stopping place. If it should be extended the president will journey to Denver, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake and the coast, taking in California, Oregon and Washington and returning east over a northern route.

CHRIST TO COME IN 1912.

Dowie Disciples File a Declaration With Chicago Recorder.

The second advent of Christ upon earth and the reuniting of the lost tribes of Israel will occur some time in November, 1912, according to a declaration filed in the office of the Chicago county recorder.

This remarkable document, which fixes the month of the second coming of the Saviour, was drawn up and filed by Harry L. Burnett and John Taylor, disciples of the late John Alexander Dowie, and asks that all the followers or Zion rally to the support of the King when he shall come.

"Before the year 1912 shall close Jesus, the Christ and the Son of God, will come forth from the eternal throne once again to teach and preach the gospel of salvation and to heal the sick," reads the document.

"The Christ will be revealed in Zion city, built by God's Elijah as a preparation of the way, unto all who await his coming."

According to Burnett, who is the author of the prophecy, the Christ will remain on earth 434 years. This time will be consumed in reuniting the tribes of Israel and in building cities throughout the earth after the model of Dowie's Zion city. The rebuilding of Jerusalem will be the last work of the Christ upon earth.

AIRSHIP ACCIDENTS AT BRIGHTON BEACH

Machines of Prominent Fliers Out of Commission

New York, Sept. 11.—With two aviators plunging headlong into the ocean, another ramming the fence, and a third making a desperate effort to turn a somersault in the midfield, the thousands in and around Brighton Beach race track were afforded a series of thrills yesterday afternoon that more than made up for the rather dreary display that had marked the previous days of the exhibition.

All of the mishaps were accomplished without the loss of life or limb or any injury more serious than a slight scratch on the nose of Thomas Sopwith and a cut lip for Claude Grahame-White.

The machines, however, did not fare so well, Sopwith's Wright biplane being completely wrecked by its dive into the sea. Grahame-White's Nieuport suffered damaged propellers, damaged engine and a smashed frame, and George W. Beatty's Wright damaged one wing when it struck the fence.

GERMANY ASKS FOR PRIVILEGES

Counter Proposa's In Moroccan Dispute Not Acceptable

MENACE TO THE "OPEN DOOR"

Experts to Form Opinion Which Will Be Submitted to Capinet For Final Decision—German Monetary World In Tight Position—Time Has Come For Cool Reasoning Both at Berlin and Paris

Paris, Sept. 11.—Germany's counter propositions to those submitted by France regarding the settlement of the Moroccan difficulty have reached Paris. M. De Selves, the foreign minister, after taking cognizance of them, immediately carried the document to Premier Caillaux.

The two ministers made a lengthy examination of its contents and decided to submit the counter proposals to specialists on Moroccan questions, notably M. Regnault, the French minister to Morocco. When they have formed an opinion the premier will call a meeting of the cabinet, probably on Thursday, and lay the whole matter before them for decision.

In accordance with an agreement made with the German government, no communication was made to the press concerning the text of the document, but it is understood that Germany, in return for the recognition of France's free hand in Morocco, demands economic guarantees, which amount to privileges, and which would be unacceptable, not only to France but to all the other powers, as they would practically suppress commercial equality in Morocco.

It appears certain that the financial difficulties of Germany are partly the result of the operations of French financiers. The German monetary world was caught at a time when it was unable to resist the sudden hostility of the Paris bankers, who three weeks ago began to cut off the credits which in any way concerned Germany.

A good deal of Berlin paper is held in Paris, and considerable is held by Swiss banks, who are debtors of the Paris bankers. When the political situation was taking on a dark phase, as an ordinary measure of prudence French financiers began calling in the debts owed by Germany. German embarrassment was immediately percieved, and this process was encouraged by the French government as a diplomatic maneuver.

PANIC ON BERLIN BOURSE

Distrust In Government's Promise That War Will Not Occur

Berlin, Sept. 11.—"Black Saturday"is the only description which fits the tumultous times which the Berlin stock exchange has weathered. Nothing approaching it has been witnessed in years. The market lost its head completely and prices fell remorselessly in all directions.

The financial world has lost all confidence in the government's assurance that the differences with France "are in process of settlement."

In the meantime the country at large is in a ferment of nervous anxiety and excitement. The savings bank runs at Stettin, Metz and Koenigsburg were succeeded by a similar manifestation at Essen, Aix La Chappelle and at Friedrichshagen. The epidemic has become widespread.

Reminded of "Open Door" Pledge

London, Sept. 11.—Following the announcement that Germany's counter proposals in the Morocco case have been received by the French government, the French minister to England, Paul Cambon, left hurriedly for Paris Sunday.

The consensus of opinion of the English press is that the negotiations between the two countries are still at a critical stage and that the time has come for cool headed reasoning both at Berlin and Paris.

As there is plenty of scope for trouble over the question of German economic privilege in Morocco, Germany and France are both adjured to remember that they stand pledged before Europe to maintain the principle of the "open door" and "equal opportunities."

LAMBERT MAY LOSE CHURCH

Criticised For Tying Astor-Force Matrimonial Knot

"FEE MADE NO DIFFERENCE"

Minister Was Willing to Officiate Whether He Received a Dollar or Nothing — Carpenter-Pastor Feels "Abused" at Being Frozen Out—Bridal Pair Off on Yacht Honeymoon After an Exceedingly Quiet Wedding

Providence, Sept. 11.—While the ante-matrimonal troubles of Colonel John J. Astor and Miss Madeleine T. Force were terminated when they were united at the groom's home in Newport by Rev. Joseph Lambert of the Elmwood Temple Congregational church of this city, Lambert's troubles seem to be just beginning.

The great majority of the members of Lambert's congregation are indignant over the fact that their pastor consented to perform the ceremony. There are hints that drastic action will be taken by the church, and he may be dismissed.

Mr. Lambert said that he expected criticism, but that his conscience was clear. He said that he had been approached by Lawyer Comstock, representing Astor, and had been asked what he would take to officiate. He says he replied that the price to be paid was immaterial, and that it made no difference whether he should receive a dollar or nothing. He refused to divulge the amount of his fee.

Mr. Lambert defends his course by saying that there is nothing in the laws of the Congregational church which forbids the remarriage of a divorced person. He upheld remarriage as a better condition than what might exist if prohibition were enforced.

Mr. Lambert says he had been considering the matter for nearly a week. The opinion prevails here that Straight was approached in order to bring Lambert to a definite conclusion. Others insist that the bride would never consent to be married except by a regularly ordained pastor, one at present in charge of a congregation.

Meanwhile, Rev. Edwin S. Straight the clergyman carpenter, who announced that he had been engaged to marry Astor and Miss Force, returned from Newport in a state of high indignation.

"I think I have been made a catspaw in this matter," he said. "I am terribly hurt about the whole matter, and I feel as if I had been abused all the way through."

Mr. Straight says that after going to Newport he was notified that his services would not be required.

Attended by only members of their immediate families and a few intimate friends, Colonel Astor and Miss Force were quietly united in marriage. Although several days had been spent in what, at times, seemed a fruitless quest for a clergyman to marry a couple, of whom one had been divorced, Rev. Dr. Lambert performed the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, while her sister, Miss Katherine Force, was bridesmaid, and Colonel Astor's son, Vincent Astor, was his father's best man. Less than a quarter of an hour after the ceremony had been concluded Astor and his bride departed on the Astor steam yacht Noma for a honeymoon cruise in waters known only to the bridal couple.

Seldom has Newport witnessed a more unusual marriage. The event was surrounded with the utmost secrecy, and not until a half-hour or so before the ceremony was actually performed was it definitely known that the couple would be married Saturday.

"Now that we are happily married I do not care how difficult divorce and re-marriage laws are made. I sympathize heartily with the most straight-laced people in most of their ideas, but believe re-marriage should be made possible, as marriage is the happiest condition for the individual and the community."

The aerial mail experiment was undertaken for the object of demonstrating the practicability of this means of letter transit when war or strikes render unavailable the ordinary train service.

Four airmen piloting two monoplanes and two biplanes were engaged in the work. Upwards of 100,000 postal packages constituted the first delivery.

Convict Descends Six Stories and Makes a Clear Getaway

Boston, Sept. 11.—Sawing the bars of his cell in the old prison at Deer island, Frank Stone, aged 27, who was serving a thirty-six months' sentence for breaking and entering, escaped.

The departure of Stone is surrounded in mystery and Penal Commissioner Gore has instituted a rigid inquiry. Stone was in a cell on the sixth floor of the prison, and how he managed to escape to the ground and then make his departure are things that remain to be explained.

It is assumed that Stone came down from the sixth floor upon a rope made from window cords and then swam the perilous Shirley gut.

BOSTON HAS BEST MILK

Excels Supply of All Other Cities, Says Government Expert

Boston, Sept. 11.—In the opinion of Dr. B. H. Smith, Greater Boston has the best milk supply in the country and perhaps in the world. Smith is head of a federal investigating commission which has just finished a secret examination of Boston's milk supply.

This investigation, declared Smith, covered a period of four weeks. He thought the reason for Boston's excellent milk supply was the rigid milk inspection made by the local health authorities.

STRUCK IN TEMPLE BY A BATTED BALL

Boston Man Is Killed While Umpiring Amateur Game

Boston, Sept. 11.—While umpiring a baseball game at Recreation grounds, Newton, yesterday, Meyer Schlosberg, 22, of this city, was struck in the temple by a batted ball and died from the effects of the blow early last evenning.

The game, which was to have been the feature of the Sunday outing of the Civil Service House, was played between teams represnting the Eliot evening school and the Mazzina class of the Civil Service House.

Schlosberg, who was a director of the house, was chosen as umpire. The accident occurred in the fifth inning. Schlosberg was in his position behind the pitcher, when the batter hit out a scorching liner.

THREE SERIOUSLY HURT

Passengers Leap From Trolley Car When Controller Explodes

Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 11.—Thirty panic stricken passengers of a crowded open car in this city leaped in terror from the swiftly moving car when the controller exploded with a loud detonation and a sheet of flame last night. Three of those who jumped were seriously hurt, the others escaped with less serious cuts and bruises.

Motorman Leard, realizing the danger to the passengers who were fighting to get off, brought the car to a stop as quickly as he could, staying at the brake although the detonating controller box was right alongside his legs.

The fortune of the baroness, who is 25 years old, is estimated at $20,900,000.

The Rothschilds always have been very clannish as to marriages. Baroness Valentine's mother not only was a first cousin of her husband on the paternal side but on her mother's side as well.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By
FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson felt a sudden easing of strains. He had told McCloskey that he would be willing to swear to the voice of the man whom he had overheard plotting with Rufford in Cat Biggs' back room. Afterward, after he had sufficiently remembered that a whisky certainty might easily lead up to a sober perjury, he had admitted the possible doubt. But now Flemister's taunt made assurance doubly sure. Moreover, the arch plotter was not denying the fact of the conspiracy with "the killer."

"Rufford is a bloodthirsty devil—like yourself," the other man was saying calmly. "As I have told you before, I've discovered Lidgerwood's weakness. He can't call a sudden bluff. Rufford's play—the play I told him to make—was to get the drop on him, scare him up good and chase him out of town—out of the country. He overran his orders and went to jail for it."

"Well?" said the mine owner.

"Your scheme as you outlined it to me in your cipher wire this afternoon was built on this same weakness of Lidgerwood's, and I agreed to it. As I understood it, you were to toll him up here with some lie about meeting Grofield, and then one of us was to put a pistol in his face and bluff him into throwing up his job. As I say, I agreed to it. He'll have to go when the fight with the men gets hot enough, but he might hold on too long for our comfort."

"Well?" said Flemister again, this time more impatiently, Judson thought.

"He queered your layout by carefully omitting to come on the passenger, and now you propose to fall back upon Rufford's method. I don't approve."

Again the mine owner said, "Why don't you?" And the other voice took up the question argumentatively.

"First, because it is unnecessary, as I have explained. Lidgerwood is officially dead right now. When the grievance committees tell him what has been decided upon he will put on his hat and go back to wherever it was that he came from."

"And secondly?" suggested Flemister, still with the nagging sneer in his tone.

"The secondly is a weakness of mine, you'll say, Flemister. I want his job, partly because it belongs to me, but chiefly because if I don't get it a bunch of us will wind up breaking stone for the state. But I haven't anything against the man himself. He trusts me; he has defended me when others have tried to put him wise; he has been white to me, Flemister."

"Is that all?" queried the mine owner in the tone of the prosecuting attorney who gives the criminal his full length of the rope with which to hang himself.

"No. Lidgerwood is Ford's man. If he throws up his job of his own accord I may be able to swing Ford into line to name me as his successor. On the other hand, if Lidgerwood is snuffed out and there is the faintest suspicion of foul play—Flemister, I'm telling you right here and now that that man Ford will neither eat nor sleep until he has set the dogs on us."

"You say it is unnecessary, that Lidgerwood will be pushed out by the labor fight," said Flemister. "My answer to that is that you don't know him quite as well as you think you do. If he's allowed to live he'll stay, unless somebody takes him unawares and scares him off, as I meant to do tonight when I wired you. If he continues to live and stay you know what will happen sooner or later. He'll find you out for the double faced cur that you are, and after that the fireworks."

At this the other voice took its turn at the savage sneering.

"You can't put it all over me that way, Flemister; you can't, and you shan't. You're in the hole just as deep as I am, foot for foot."

"Oh, no, my friend," said the cooler voice. "I haven't been stealing in carload lots from the company that hires me. I have merely been buying a little disused scrap from you. You may say that I have planned a few of the adverse happenings which have been running the loss and damage account of the road up into the pictures during the past few weeks. Possibly I have, but you are the man who has been carrying out the plans, and you are the man the courts will recognize. But we're wasting time sitting here jawing at each other like a pair of old women. It's up to us to obliterate Lidgerwood, after which it will be up to you to get his job and cover up your tracks as you can. If he lives he'll dig, and if he digs he'll turn up things that neither of us can stand for. See how he hangs on to that building and loan ghost. He'll tree somebody on that before he's through, you mark my words, and it runs in my mind that the somebody will be you."

"But this trap scheme of yours," protested the other man. "It's a frost, I tell you. You say the night passenger from Red Butte is late. I know it's late now. But Cranford's running it, and it is all downhill from Red Butte to the bridge. Cranford will make up his thirty minutes, and that will put his train right here in the thick of things. Call it off for tonight, Flemister. Meet Lidgerwood when he comes and tell him an easy lie about your not being able to hold Grofield for the right of way talk."

Judson heard the creak and snap of a swing chair suddenly righted, and the floor dust jarred through the cracks upon him when the mine owner sprang to his feet.

"Call it off and let you drop out of it? Not by a thousand miles, my cautious friend. I'm about ready to freeze you anyway for the second time—mark that, will you?—for the second time. No; keep your hands where I can see 'em or I'll knife you right where you sit. You can bully and browbeat a lot of railroad buckies when you're playing the boss act, but I know you. You come with me or I'll give the whole snap away to Vice President Ford. I'll tell him how you built a street of houses in Red Butte out of company material and with company labor. I'll prove to him that you've scrapped first one thing and then another—condemned them so you might sell them for your own pocket. I'll"—

"Shut up!" shouted the other man hoarsely. "Get your tools and come on. We'll see who's got the yellows before we're through with this."

WIFE SHOOTS RIVAL IN DIXIE THEATRE

Victim Was Seated Alongside Husband of Assailant

Nashville, Sept. 11.—Mrs. Earl Samuel walked into the Dixie theatre and, going to the seat where Miss Willis West was seated, drew a thirty-eight-calibre revolver and fired three shots into the woman's neck. Samuel, the assailant's husband, was alongside of Miss West.

For a few moments the playhouse was in an uproar. Seven women fainted and a panic was narrowly averted. Miss West was removed to a hospital and Mrs. Samuel was arrested.

Samuel's and Miss West's names have been connected several times, and it is stated that it was due to her that divorce proceedings were instituted by Mrs. Samuel. This action was compromised, however, while the hearing was in progress. Miss West is not expected to recover.

She farther said that she had talked with the pope about the matter and that he expected great things of her.

CITIES LIKELY TO VOTE "YES"

Rural Vote to Decide Prohibition Question In Maine

EACH SIDE CLAIMS VICTORY

Secretary of Repeal Campaign Organization Says It Will Win by Over 10,000—Mrs. Stevens Feels Sure That Temperance Forces Will Be Victorious—Prohibition Pageant the Closing Feature of Hot Campaign

Portland, Me., Sept. 11.—The outlook is that the repeal element will win today and that the constitutional prohibitory amendment of Maine will be annulled. A straw vote indicates that the majority is over 10,000, every city in the state being counted on to help pile up the majority against the prohibitionists. Even the "no" supporters admit that the cities are against them, basing all their hopes on country districts.

The prohibitionists seem to be pinning their faith to the belief that with the granges and churches on their side they cannot lose, while those working for the abrogation of the amendment said that they have canvasses that show beyond doubt that the country districts will be with them.

Secretary Fassett of the Maine Non-Partisan Local Self-Government league, the repeal campaign organization, said:

"I believe that the prohibitory amendment will be annulled by a substantial majority. The men who have been out at work among the voters estimate the majority at from 10,000 to 20,000, and I personally believe that these estimates are reasonable. I believe that from what I know of the canvasses that have been made in different sections of the state and from other information that we have received."

Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, national president of the W. C. T. U., who has been the leader in the fight for prohibition, said:

"I expect now, as I have from the first, that we shall win a victory for constitutional prohibition in Maine. I don't see how it can be otherwise with all the forces that are on our side. I need not say what these forces are, for it is well known who have stood on the side of sonstitutional prohibition in Maine.

"I don't believe that the business men of Maine will vote to inaugurate a system in Maine that will bring the saloon in competition with their business life, and I don't believe that the taxpayers generally will adopt a plan that will raise their taxes and endanger their families."

The campaign will be carried right up to the time of the closing of the polls this afternoon. Led by Richmond P. Hobson and Mrs. Stevens, a monster prohibition pageant passed through the city streets Sunday as a closing feature of the battle to be decided at the polls today. Big lettered banners called upon onlookers to "Save Maine From Beer," to "Protect the Children" and "Vanquish the Demon Rum."

Children on floats, boys and girls from Sunday schools and ministers and men and women temperance workers were in the procession. They sang the prohibition campaign songs.

LAURIER SCENTS VICTORY

But Both Sides Are Confident of Winning Reciprocity Fight

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—The Canadian election campaign has now been in full swing for a month. An army of orators has been busy throughout the country daily; tons of political literature have been distributed. Yet the leaders of each party claim that victory is assured, and they appear to be sincere.

"Victory is in the air," declared Premier Laurier. "I feel the swing that makes it sure. I am pretty old in the game. I have traveled over the provinces of Canada more than once, and today I find for the cause I represent such enthusiasm as I never found before."

CLARA BARTON NOT ILL

Said to Be In as Good Health as Could Be Expected

Boston, Sept. 11.—The condition of Miss Clara Barton, the famous humanitarian, who has been reported seriously ill at her home in Oxford, was the subject of a statement issued by Stephen E. Barton of this city, a nephew and fellow-worker on many fields.

The statement declares Miss Barton is in good health, considering her 90 years, aside from "a slight weakness in the muscular action of the heart."

Marriage of Deaf Mutes

Danville, Ills., Sept. 11.—John Swanson, aged 46, and Louisa Lewis, aged 44, both deaf mutes, were married here by a justice of the peace through an interpreter, who put the questions to the couple in the sign language and transmitted their answers to the justice orally.

A REAL BIG SMOKE

All Cigarets and Tobacco In College Town Go Into a Bonfire

Asheville, N. C., Sept. 11.—Singing hymns of praise which followed the opening of the exercises with prayer, citizens and students of the college town of Mars Hill marched around a big bonfire of all the cigarets and tobacco kept in stock by the local merchants, who promise that no more will be ordered.

An evangelist started a movement to stop the sale of tobacco to students, and the merchants agreed to discontinue its sale as soon as the stock on hand was exhausted. The college authorities at once raised the necessary money by subscription and the tobacco stock was bought for destruction.

MANY WAGERS ON RESULT

Four-Masters Start From Boston In Race of Nearly 7000 Miles

Boston, Sept. 11.—Within three hours of each other two big four-masted lumber laden schooners sailed from this port Sunday on a race of nearly 7000 miles to Buenos Ayres.

The May V. Neville left her anchorage in tow of the tug Juno, and the Hattie P. Simpson started down astern of the tug Mary Arnold. A brisk westerly wind prevailed, and both vessels sped out of the bay at a fast clip.

Each schooner is laden with 1,000,000 feet of lumber, and their captains expect to make the run to the River Platte inside of sixty days. Several wagers have been placed on the outcome of the race.

FOUND IT DANGEROUS

To Interfere With Officer Who Had Made Arrest

FINED $25

James Carr will be obliged to contribute $25 for his act Saturday night, when he attempted to take from Officer Bishop, a friend who had been arrested for drunkenness. The two men came to Quincy on the last train and one of the men was so intoxicated that he was arrested. On the way to the box, Carr undertook, so the officers say, to take the man away and finding he could not, used some bad language. The result was that he himself was sent to the station. In court this morning he was fined $25.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED AT RECEPTION

Miss Marion Estelle Corey of Wollaston, entertained a party of her young lady friends on Saturday evening at the shore house of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Francis Henry Corey at Fort Point, North Weymouth. The decorations of clematis and asters in the interior and japenese lanterns on the piazzas, made an attractive and cheerful appearance in spite of the inclement weather.

As the young ladies sat down to supper each one drew from her napkin a pink aster to which was attached a card announcing the engagement of Miss Corey to Mr. Otis Chester Wheeler of Berlin, Mass.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Sporting Editor:

My idea of an all Quincy team would be the following and I think it would be a hard combination to beat:

Duggan, of West Quincy, catcher.
Knight, of Adams A. A., pitcher.
Desmond, of West Quincy, first base.
Hoyt, of Atlantic, second base.
Kane, of Manets, third base.
Mulligan, of West Quincy, short stop.
Curtis, of Makaria, left field.
Keohane, of Atlantic, right field.
Ganzel, of Makaria, centre field.

O. U. Fan.

The selection of an all Quincy team has created great interest among the fans, and the fact that no two admirers of the game can be found to pick the same players, tends to make such a selection all the more interesting. Here are two which were forwarded to me this morning:

Sporting Editor:

In view of the fact that you have asked the fans to send in a choice of an all Quincy team, I beg leave as a great admirer of the game to submit the following. I have seen every team in Quincy play and I have sized them all up very thoroughly:

H. Chapman c, (Makaria.)
Canavan p, (West Quincy.)
Jenkins 1b, (Makaria.)
Hoyt 2b, (Atlantic.)
Kelley 3b, (Adams A. A.)
McCarthy ss, (Manets.)
T. Galvin lf, (South Quincy.)
Keohane cf, (Atlantic.)
Berry rf, (West Quincy.)

Yours,
Bertram J. Tobin.

The inclement weather of Saturday proved to be a source of sad disappointment to the many local fans who had anticipated a great game between the West Quincys and the Rhode Island Jackies. It is hoped that good weather will be in evidence next Saturday and that nothing will deter us from seeing the Makarias and the Atlantics clash for the championship of the city.

A better place than the Water street grounds could not have been selected for the championship series. Of course the diamond is anything but excellent to play ball upon, but since it is the only enclosed base ball park in the city it is likewise most suitable to accommodate the many who should be in attendance. If the same crowd as was present on the morning of the holiday would turn out for each occasion it would be well worth having the grounds fixed up and placed in the proper condition for the national pastime.

Manager McKenzie has informed me that "Mike" Shea has given consent to have the championship series start there next Saturday. Mike has always been a great admirer of the game and deserves great credit for the endeavors he has made in the interests of the game of games.

The candidates for the football team were called out on the lower field at Merrymount Park this afternoon. About forty responded to the call. Many of the boys are rather light, but Coach Staff seems to be pleased with the way things are going. Quincy High's team, while it will be light, will nevertheless be a speedy aggregation.

It took Buck O'Brien to turn the trick on the champion Athletics last Saturday. Buck has twirled many a game right here in Quincy and his numerous rooters in local circles were especially pleased that he had made his advent to the Boston Americans under the most favorable auspices. O'Brien has always been an effective slabman and will no doubt prove a valuable acquisition to his new team mates.

And now comes the report that Marty O'Toole, the $25,000 pitching beauty, is to take treatment for "a sore wing." Let's hope that nothing serious will result and that Manager Clarke will have no cause to regret anything.

"Rube" Marquard vs. "Old Cy" Young at the national league grounds this afternoon. Looks like some contest, eh?

BIG CHIEF MEYERS' OPINION OF AMERICAN ART.

You have doubtless heard the story about Chief Meyers' opinion of American art, but it is worth repeating. One day Meyers visited the Boston Art gallery. Knowing the Indian to be a lover of pictures, so the the story goes, some one asked him what he considered the two greatest examples of American art.

"Oh, I think Edwin A. Abbey's mural panel, 'The Holy Grail,' and 'Custer's Last Stand.'"

"Why," said his questioner. "I can understand your choice in the former, but why the latter? That's an old chromo."

"I know," Meyers answered, "but it's the only picture I've ever seen where the Indian was getting an even break."

PERFECT BAT NEVER MADE.

Hans Wagner, However, Used One That Was Near Perfection.

"A perfect bat has never been made and never will be," says Hans Wagner. "I have had bats break when I met the ball squarely, break after months of faithful service, and a grounder would trickle to an infield when the force I put into my swing was enough for a three base hit.

"The nearest perfect bat I ever saw was owned by a kid in a small Kentucky town where I once played in an exhibition game. I gave the boy 50 cents for it. Everybody on our club used the bat the first day I got it, and we made twenty-three hits."

OUTING WAS POSTPONED

Fearing Trouble Political Club Thought It Wise

POLICE ON HAND

The expected outing of a South Boston political club at Quincy woods, Sunday, did not materialize, doubtless for the reason that it was an assured fact that someone would get into trouble if they did come. Late Saturday night, Inspector Goodhue went to Quincy woods and remained on guard nearly all night, as it was expected that a cargo of beer would arrive for the outing. Had the beer arrived it would have been seized by the police.

"BUGS" RAYMOND WAS ANXIOUS TO SEE WADDELL PERFORM.

When "Bugs" Raymond, whose stunts with the Giants this year may explain the derivation of his first name, was a real but eccentric star in the National league Rube Waddell was shining similarly in the American. Rube was at the height of his career then and by reason of his wanderings from conventional paths was pulling several columns of press agent stuff in the newspapers every day.

Raymond's team happened to be in the same city where Rube was billed to perform, and as it was an off day for Raymond he concluded to stroll over to the opposition camp and watch Rube in action.

RAYMOND.

When he reached the pass gate Raymond attempted to talk his way in.

"Thought I'd drop in and look this freak over," he said to the gateman.

"Got a pass?" the official demanded.

"Oh, no," said "Bugs" easily—"professional courtesy, you know, old man. I'm a big leaguer. Merely wanted to see Rube pitch. They told me he's so nutty the squirrels follow him. Funny how a bat like that can pitch about .999, isn't it?"

The gateman was silent.

"Been reading about him playing marbles in alleys with the kids while the managers were searching the city for him to take his turn in the box," Raymond continued hopefully. "By George, he sure is nuts, if all this stuff is true. Must be worth looking at. I'd like to see him."

"You've got to show something better than a vocabulary to get in here," said the gateman.

"Why, man, you ought to pass me. I'm Raymond of the National. Merely want to size up this freak you have caged here."

"Oh, you're Raymond, are you?"

"Yep."

"The one they call 'Bugs?'"

"Yep."

"Well, you wait here a minute," said the gateman. "I'll bring Rube out and let him look at you."

MAINE VOTES REPEAL BY NARROW MARGIN

Election Paves the Way For Local Option Law. Country Vote Heavy

Special Session Of Legislature Expected

Portland, Me., Sept. 12.—Unofficial returns indicate that prohibition has been voted out of the constitution of the state of Maine by a bare majority of 904 votes, but the exact result is still in some doubt. About 121,000 voters visited the polls and cast their ballots on the question. The vote now stands 60,782 for repeal, 59,878 against repeal.

Although the repeal vote showed a majority at all times as returns were coming in, at no time was there a sufficient margin to warrant the anti-prohibitionists in laying claim to the election or for the "dry" workers in admitting defeat.

As had been predicted, the cities were the strongholds of the repeal faction, but their strength had been under-estimated, and instead of the margin being big enough to make the election sure it was almost offset by the country vote.

Returns were received last night from 502 of the 521 cities, towns and plantations, a larger number than ever before received on an election night. These came from all sources, many of them by telephone, and until the vote can be revised and compared with the official figures some doubt will remain as to the exact situation.

Farmers Out In Force

In the country towns a much larger vote was cast than had been hoped for. The harvesting season is on and it was feared that many of the farmers would not take interest enough in the situation to go to the polls. This fear was found to be groundless, for in practically every village the vote was normal, and in a large number more than normal. This upset the calculations of the anti-prohibitionists and narrowed the result down.

The results on the other three questions which appeared upon the ballot, the location of the state capital, the increase of the debt limit for cities of over 40,000 and the adoption of the direct primaries act, are not yet tabulated for the state, but indications are that the first mentioned will be defeated and the latter two adopted. There was little interest in the question outside of the cities and many blanks were recorded.

Simultaneously with the opening of the polls yesterday prayer meetings were opened in many of the city churches. Here pastors of different denominations preached in relays. Each hour the church bells were tolled, and as they pealed forth those of the church members who were prevented from attending the services in person offered up a short prayer for the success of the cause.

Campaigners Kept Busy

Although the vote cast yesterday did not equal that of a year ago, when the Democrats swept the state which had for years been a Republican stronghold, the election was one of the most interesting contests that the state has ever known.

There was not a home in any section of the state, no matter how deep in the wilds it might be situated, which had not been flooded with the literature sent out by both sides, while those voters residing in more accessible sections were waited upon by personal workers, or harangued at numerous public gatherings, and urged to cast their ballots either for or against repeal, as the case might be. The result was that hundreds of voters who had not visited the polls for years, with the possible exception of last year, were recorded yesterday.

CITY COUNCIL REQUESTS GAS COMPANY TO SEND THEM INFORMATION WHEN REDUCTION IN PRICE OF GAS MAY BE EXPECTED

Mayor Makes Changes In the Election Officers. Councilman Duffy, Benedict, Presented With Case of Silver

An adjourned meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening and although it was but a short meeting, considerable important business was transacted.

Among the important matters to come up was the adoption of an order for a special committee to consider what changes, if any, are necessary in the City Charter. Also an order requesting the gas company to inform the Council at the next meeting when a reduction in the price of gas may be expected.

Still another matter was the presentation of a case of silver to Councilman Duffy, who has recently taken unto himself a wife.

Councilman Bailey, Branch, Campbell, and Cherrington were absent.

Herbert Thomas as inspector Ward Six, precinct two, in place of Fred A. D. Maxwell.

William T. Moran as deputy inspector Ward Six, precinct two, in place of Robert J. Clifford.

Fred Bent as deputy inspector Ward Six, precinct two, in place of Herbert Thomas.

These changes were made, for the reason that the names of the officers submitted at the previous meeting have ceased to be residents of the ward in which they were appointed.

These with the names of other election officers submitted at the last meeting of the Council were confirmed.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Commissioner of Public Works, stating the need of an additional water supply line to take care of Houghs Neck and recommending an appropriation of $10,000. Referred to Committee on Water Supply.

WAITING ROOM.

Councilman Ericson offered a resolve requesting the Mayor to confer with the officials of the street railway relative to providing a waiting room in City Square with proper sanitary arrangements. Adopted.

PRESENTATION.

At this point Councilman Smith arose to a question of personal privilege. He said that something took place on the night of the last meeting of the City Council which had caused the papers, especially the local papers to make considerable of it. Continuing in this manner for a few minutes, or long enough to get his hearers wandering what he was driving at, he said that he supposed that under the charter that an order giving Councilman Duffy permission to get married should have been adopted. He had heard no such order and would now be glad to hear from the Councilman why an apology was not due the Council for failing to get its permission.

Councilman Duffy in reply said that in answering he could only quote scripture and say: "Go thou and do likewise."

PRES. KING ENTERTAINS

Quincy Tennis Club With Delightful Dance

AT YACHT CLUB

A salute of three guns greeted Delcevare King and his merry party Monday evening as they were about to make their entrance into the Quincy Yacht club house. The occasion was a party given to members and friends of the Quincy Tennis club by Mr. King, president of the Tennis club.

Two special cars carried the guests to and from the club house, the trip being enlivened by the orchestra and songs. Red fire was conspicuous, both at the beginning and conclusion of the affair.

Members of the Tennis club assisted Mr. King in the entertaining as did also Commodore Ira M. Whittemore of the Yacht club.

The party arrived at eight o'clock and dancing was in order until eleven. A special feature of the evening was a masked dance, in which all the dancers, wore faces of a most hideous variety. Frappe was served during the evening and on the way home all joined in singing popular airs, with Mr. King acting as director.

The club house had been prettily decorated for the event and Japanese lanterns were everywhere in evidence. About 75 couples were present.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The latest ocean greyhound is over 900 feet long, but it could be more correctly described as a dachshund.

The politicians are now enriching the country by trying to make two plums grow where one grew before.

Several women have lately qualified as aviators. Judging from the pictures, they are not aero-plains, but aero-beauties.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room is being featured by the Moving picture companies this fall, and it makes things seem very home like to many of the boys.

In Reno lately a woman was divorced at 11 A. M., and remarried at 1 P. M. Some people are naturally tardy, or this needless interim would have been dispensed with.

An epidemic of rheumatism was said to have been brought on by the dry weather of the early summer, but the old fashioned doctor laid that trouble to damp weather. It is no longer safe to live in any kind of weather.

COST OF LIVING.

Says an exchange: Let's see, didn't Gov. Foss assure us last fall that if he was elected, prices would be lower and the cost of living would be materially reduced? Is anybody paying any less for beef or mutton, or house rent, or fish, or anything else that enters into the every day life of the family? After all the Governor bit off more than he could chew, didn't he? Did you vote to help elect him? There'll be a chance to show your change of heart next November.

Which proves further how ridiculous it really was to blame the Republican party for the high cost of necessities from which the country had been suffering. The Democratic candidates at the last election knew better than anyone that they would be unable to lessen the cost of living. The fact that they made such assertions at that time proved just the amount of sincerity with which they were placing their cause before the voters at large.

SQUANTUM AWAKE.

That the people of Squantum are awake and expect to do something in that very pretty section of Quincy was proven beyond a doubt on Saturday night, when the Mayor and City Fathers were dined by the business association of that locality. They want some things down that way but they realize that there is a proper way to go about it, in order that their requests may be granted. Appearing as a unit they merely suggested, their suggestion "backed up" by an enjoyable evening and a delightful repast. Isn't it a fact, that in the long run more may be gained by molasses than vinegar?

THE PRESIDENT'S JOURNEY.

President Taft starts out Sept. 15 on his 13,000 mile journey, and local committees must remove the moth balls from their frock coats and silk hats, and rehearse the speeches which will never be listened to by the crowd anxious to see a real president.

The custom of presidential tours is not a comparatively recent one, and has not been adopted by previous presidents merely as a means of repairing political fences.

Even Washington five months after inauguration felt that he must get out and see the people in the Northern states. Adams and Jefferson did not look favorably on these trips, which in those days without telegraphs separated a president from his official business. Monroe, however, got out for a four months' tour, which caused a great outcry in the newspapers. He went up the Delaware river in a boat lined with crimson velvet, rowed by 16 brawny oarsmen wearing scarlet vests, white sleeves, and white trousers. When he got to New Hampshire, Gov. Plumer refused to receive him, and the party had to find their way around by looking at the guide boards.

Grant got a call down from Congress for his trips, but he told the legislators that it was none of their business.

The pleasant custom has usually prevailed of giving a president a warm welcome regardless of politics. Cleveland got the friendliest sort of a reception in Minnesota, a Republican stronghold. The South has always lavished good fellowship on presidents who were politically unacceptable.

Travelling brings the president in closer contact with danger from cranks. President Garfield was shot by Guiteau while waiting in the station to start on a New England trip. President McKinley was shot at the Buffalo exposition.

The custom that a president must not step out of the country was disregarded by President Roosevelt when he went to Panama. President McKinley, a conservative by nature, walked to the center of the bridge at El Paso, Texas, and looked across for many moments, as if he almost felt himself a prisoner. But he would not take the single step that would break a 110 years old precedent.

MEDICAL FRATERNITY DEAN IS DEAD

Dr. Granville Wilson Tinkham for forty years a resident and practicing physician in Weymouth, died at Boothby hospital, Boston, Saturday evening following an operation a few days previous for abnormal trouble. He was the dean of the medical fraternity in Weymouth, and was one of the most prominent physicians on the South Shore.

Dr. Tinkham was born in North Bridgewater, now Brockton, sixty-three years ago. He received his early education in the schools of North Bridgewater and after graduating from the high school entered the Harvard Medical school, where he was graduated in 1871. He at once began to practice.

In the coroner days in Massachusetts Dr. Tinkham held that position in the Weymouth district for a number of years. He was prominent in the famous Julia Hawks murder case, as the physician who performed the autopsy.

Dr. Tinkham was examiner for nineteen life insurance companies in the Weymouth district. He was a member of the Massachusetts Medical society and former president of the South Norfolk Medical society. He was also a member of Delta lodge. A. F. & A. M. He was married Oct. 20, 1874, to Miss Augusta L. Trask, daughter of Captain John Trask. His wife, a son. Dr. Oliver G. Tinkham of 527 Beacon street, and a daughter. Miss Maude Tinkham survive him.

DON'TS FOR AUTOMOBILISTS.

Don't throw paper bags, fruit skins and luncheon boxes on the roads as you pass through towns.

Don't cut corners, another chauffeur may be doing the same thing coming the other way.

Don't come out of a private avenue onto the main road rapidly or without blowing your horn, a carriage or another auto might be passing the entrance—having right of way on the main thoroughfore.

Don't speed through the villages, children and dogs are often in the streets.

Don't use the road as if you owned it, others are sometimes out for a pleasure ride.

Don't forget that certain laws exist—even if not always enforced. You never know when your turn may come.

Don't forget to think of others. Try to be reasonable, careful and cautious.

TODAY'S COURT.

This morning's session of the district court was a quiet one but two cases being heard. They were:

William H. Lyons who was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Lizzie Kendall who was fined $25 for disturbing the peace at Weymouth. She appealed.

MELLEN NOT TO RETIRE

Denies That He Contemplates Leaving New Haven Road

Boston, Sept. 12.—A report that President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad was to retire from the presidency of the road was emphatically denied by Mellen.

The rumor, which has been heard in various quarters during the past few days, seemed to assume the aspect of an official announcement when the press department of the New Haven gave out this statement:

"Mr. Mellen is to retire from the presidency, but the date has not yet been fixed."

President Mellen, in denying that he intended to resign, said: "No such official announcement has ever been made and no step of this nature is in contemplation."

SAYS THAT DEMANDS ARE NOT EXCESSIVE

Berlin Paper Points Out Germany's Attitude In Dispute

Berlin, Sept. 12.—The Lokal Anzeiger, in what is evidently an inspired article, emphasizes that Germany does not demand any special rights whatever in Morocco, but seeks mainly guarantees from France against monopolization of mining and trading rights and against certain practices in the customs administration—guarantees that would benefit all countries equally.

The only subject requiring a special arrangement between Germany and France would be, the paper says, a treaty ceding territorial indemnity. All other points would be covered by an amendment to the Algeciras agreement, provided the other signatories would accept the German proposal to commission France to take over a protectorate of Morocco along with the obligations involved to maintain order.

SUES WOMAN FOR $50,000

Doctor's Wife Is After an Alleged Wrecker of Homes

Seattle, Sept. 12.—To save homes from wreck due to the alleged attractions of Mrs. Gladys L. Lamberton-Woodward of New York city and to punish Mrs. Woodward are the aims of the wife of Dr. Putros Gliddon, in her suit for $50,000 filed against Mrs. Woodward in the New York courts, according to an interview given out by Mrs. Gliddon prior to her departure for the east.

Her divorce action against Gliddon, naming Mrs. Woodward, comes up in Los Angeles this month. Her action against Mrs. Woodward is set for trial in New York next month.

"I have taken on myself the punishment of this woman who has ruined my home, the home of Mrs. John Bryson of Los Angeles, and other homes on the coast. I will go to any expense to justify my action," declares Mrs. Gliddon.

CUCUMBERS ARE FRUIT

So Are All Products of the Vine, Says New York Judge

New York, Sept. 12.—Cucumbers, squashes, pumpkins, tomatoes, green peas, beans and, in fact, all things that grow on vines are fruit, according to Chief Magistrate Otto Kempner of Brooklyn in a decision from the bench.

For many years the bureau of licenses has been more or less at a loss to decide in just what class cucumbers should be placed, but Kempner declares in settling the problem that within the meaning of the law cucumbers are fruit and so are everything else that grow on vines.

A $9,500,000 Rice Concern

New Orleans, Sept. 12.—The Louisiana State Rice Milling company, succeeding the Louisiana State Rice company, will take over twenty-eight mills in Louisiana, and will have a capital of $9,500,000.

CITY COUNCIL

President Bryant then said that in behalf of the City Council he wished to congratulate Councilman Duffy, and was glad that he had set such a good example to some of the other members. It also gave him great pleasure he said, at this time to present Councilman Duffy with a little token of good wishes on the part of the Council. With this he handed the Councilman a case of table silver.

Councilman Duffy was visibly effected. He said that he was completely taken back by the gift. He tried to continue but was only able to say I thank you.

SIDEWALK.

Councilman Gardner offered an order for $340 to cover the extra cost over the amount appropriated for a tar concrete sidewalk on West Elm avenue, to make the sidewalk a granolithic walk. Referred to the Committee on Streets.

GAS REDUCTION.

That the Citizens Gas Light Co. of Quincy are requested to reduce the price of gas to the citizens of this city to a reasonable rate as compared with other cities and that a hearing be given said company at the next meeting of the City Council, at 8.30 o'clock, that the Council may be informed the amount of reduction to be granted and when such reduction is to go into effect.

CHARTER CHANGES.

Councilman Nowland offered an order for a committee of one member from each ward with the President of the Council to confer with the Mayor as to what changes, if any, are advisable in the City Charter and to report to the Council Nov. 6. Adopted.

The Committee: President Bryant, Councilman Nowland, Histen, Richards, Smith, Bailey and Sodergren.

NEW STREET.

Councilman Duffy offered an order that a private way running from Washington street to the Ward Two playground, known as Baxter avenue be taken as a part of the playground and that the same be laid out as an entrance to the playground. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Adjourned at 8.22 until Sept. 18.

A WONDERFUL STORY.

For more than a hundred years Taunton, has been famous for its stoves. The craft of molding, casting, and setting up a range seems in this busy city to have been handed down, father to son, for generation after generation. And yet, mention Taunton today, and the mind pictures a Glenwood range. Just thirty-two years ago three young men started making stoves in a barn at Taunton. One was a designer and pattern-maker, one a foundry boss, the third a skilled molder. They all turned carpenter long enough to add a shed to their barn in order to accommodate their melting furnace.

One of the first claims ever made by the Glenwood makers is set forth in the phrase, "Glenwood Makes Cooking Easy." This modest claim appealed at once to busy housekeepers, and it rang true from home to home as fast as Glenwoods were put in, until today 500,000 users know "Make Cooking Easy" means "Glenwood Range."

The guarantee which the makers give with each Glenwood Range or Heater is a model of sincerity and reads—"Our responsibility does not end with the sale of this range or heater, but continues until it gives the service and satisfaction that it was intended to give."

At present there is a Glenwood Range cast, set up and shipped every three minutes in the day. In a generation the business has increased from four ranges a day to one range in just the length of time it has taken you to read this story.—May Munsey's.

WHY CATCHERS SLOW UP.

Constant Stooping Harden Muscles of Legs and Interferes With Running.

Why do catchers slow up after several seasons' service in the big league? asks a fan. A logical reason is given. It follows: "Few catchers are fast on their feet after they have been in the game a few years, and this falling is attributed to the fact that the man behind the bat does a lot of stooping and thus hardens the muscles of his legs in such a way as to interfere with his running. Now and then a young catcher breaks in who can step around the bags at a good clip, but as a rule he loses his speed after a short time and becomes slow. Today there are few catchers who have speed on the bases. Ainsmith is perhaps the best runner of any of the catchers in the major leagues, and Eddie has not been in the game long enough to slow up."

CONSERVATIVE
AS WELL AS BUSINESS REASONS
WHY
JOHN F. MERRILL
PRESENT CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS
SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED TO OFFICE

The American people have repeatedly insisted upon the fact if a public servant has faithfully performed his duty and real experience gained by years of service is of the utmost value to the taxpayer and to the County, he should be continued in office, (notwithstanding the fact at the present time there are people seeking the office who think that they have all the qualifications without the experience). Conservative business men, particularly in an office like the County Commissioner, where experience gained by holding office and the faithful conservative fulfillment of the duties of the same, would seem to require a continuation, there can be no reasonable argument made at the present time why the present incumbent, Mr. John F. Merrill, who holds the important position as Chairman of the County Commissioners of Norfolk County, should not be re-elected to office.

The most important reasons why he should be are the fact that some very important matters which are partially under way will have to be completed within the next two years, namely, the County Building at Quincy, involving an appropriation of $100,000, the rebuilding of Fore River Bridge involving an appropriation of upwards of $65,000 and the re-building of the Weymouth Back River Bridge involving an appropriation of $80,000.

In all these matters where the Land and Harbor Commissioners and other parties necessarily under law, have the detail of these matters under consideration, they have in every case elected Mr. John F. Merrill as Chairman of the board. That is an unqualified endorsement of his ability and integrity with his experience to fill the office, to the satisfaction of the various boards. This is a simple statement of facts to every business and thinking man, why it would be unwise to make any change at the present time by the election of anyone else to succeed Mr. Merrill to fill these important positions. Does it not seem particularly against the interests of the county to do otherwise than re-elect Mr. Merrill to this important position?

CHINESE WARSHIP VISITING NEW YORK

National Salute Is Given "Protector of the Sea"

New York, Sept. 12.—The "Protector of the Sea" steamed slowly up the Hudson river, flying astern a long yellow pennant, with a dragon of deep blue, while a very brassy brass band played a ragtime air that had not been heard in New York for five years. The visitor was the Chinese cruiser Hai-Chai, the first Chinese warship that had ever entered American waters.

Two gold ideographs embossed on her stern spelled her name, which signifies, the suave officers on board said, "protector of the sea."

As the sea fighter passed through the Narrows the guns of Fort Wadsworth sounded twenty-one times—the national salute—and the cruiser replied. The cruiser dipped her pennant in response to the battleship Utah's welcoming roar.

Chinatown's foremost citizens, aboard a launch, followed the Hai-Chai up the river and fairly swarmed over her sides as she came to rest in mid-stream. It was noted that neither among the delegation from Chinatown nor among the officers and men of the cruiser was a queue to be seen.

Iron Tower to Mark the Spot In an Indiana City

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 12.—Following the location of the exact centre of population of the United States at the site of the manufacturing company of which he is president, W. N. Showers has decided to erect a monument on the spot.

It is not unlikely that a large stone pyramid will be put up. On this probably will be mounted an iron tower to contain the words: "United States population centre, 1909 census."

The centre of population was located beneath a window of a furniture factory in this city.

Twenty-Five Thousand More Textile Operatives Return to Work

Boston, Sept. 12.—About 25,000 textile workers in New England went back to work Monday after weeks of idleness, but there is still an army of unemployed in almost every mill city in this part of the country. Dull trade has caused scores of mills to shut down or work on short time.

Mills began to resume after Labor day, and since then 85,000 operatives have returned to work. But the market is so stagnant that neither manufacturers nor toilers are satisfied with the situation.

MEETING OF CLAN MACGREGOR

Clan MacGregor No. 5, O. S. C., held a regular meeting last evening which was largely attended.

Chief Alfred O. Diack, presented Past Chief George M. Maver with a fine watch charm, for his splendid work in building up the membership of the organization.

A number of plans for making the aims and benefits of Clan MacGregor better known to the general public were discussed. It was the prevailing opinion that an organization with a membership of four hundred and eighty-five which has been in existence for thirty-one years, must be doing good work for its members. The matter will be more fully discussed next meeting.

Chief Diack promised to "set up" something good when the five hundredth member was initiated.

The amusement committee are planning to make the annual entertainment on New Year's eve the greatest ever.

DISAPPOINTED WITH BUSINESS.

Charles O. Peters, a Winthrop real estate dealer with an office at 10 Tremont street, was arrested today on a secret indictment charging the larceny of $500 from Alice B. Mooers of Brooks street, Wollaston, by false pretenses. He was arraigned in the Superior Criminal Court before Judge Lawton, pleaded not guilty and was held in $1,000 for trial.

The complainant claims that Peters sold her a half interest in his office for $500, saying that he was doing a good business. She claims that on June 29 she paid him $100 and the remainder on July 20, and that business has been very poor since and not as represented to her.

BEAUTIFUL DAHLIAS.

One of the ornaments of the Council Chamber at Monday night's meeting was a very handsome basket of dahlias from the gardens of George F. Elcock. The basket contained 57 varieties of these fall flowers which were presented to President Bryant by Mr. Elcock. Mr. Elcock makes a specialty of dahlias and nowhere in this vicinity can there be found such a handsome variety as at his residence on Copeland street.

VEGETABLE GROWERS INVITED

Officers and members of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America and members of the Boston Market Gardeners' Association of America invite every vegetable grower and market gardener to attend the fourth annual convention of the organization in Boston, Sept. 19, 20, 21 and 22 and become a member.

The purpose of this association is to promote and encourage the advancement ofall vegetable growers to the end that the individual grower may secure better returns for his labor, to disseminate among its members useful and practical information in regard to vegetable growing, to hold meetings and exhibitions to promote the consumption of choice products. to co-operate with the national and state governments and regularly organized horticultural bodies in disseminating horticultural knowledge and to advance by all legitimate means the interests of vegetable growers and market gardeners. But the main value of the association lies in the fact that through its conventions it brings growers from different sections of the country face to face. permits them to get acquainted with other growers and to learn new methods and sends them back home better prepared for their own work by reason of their contact withtheir fellow growers.

A feature in connection with the convention is the vegetable show for which prizes amounting to more than $2,000 are offered. This show will begin Thursday afternoon, Sept. 21. The Boston management anticipates exhibits from many other states. Those who wish to send exhibits may ship them, express prepaid, to H. F. Hall, Massachusetts Horticultural hall. A copy of the schedule and prize list may be obtained by writing to W. P. Rich, 300 Massachusetts avenue. Boston.

In connection with the vegetable show there will be an exhibit of materials and supplies for greenhouse and market garden. These have not been large at the conventions held heretofore, but they have been instructive and successful. Better provision will be made this year for the manufacturers of and dealers in supplies for vegetable growers and all who are interested in making an exhibit should write to H .F. Hall, Brighton, for information.

RECORD LONG HEAT WAVE.

Spring and Early Summer Temperature Highest In Forty Years.

Not in the past forty years have temperatures in the United States during the late spring and early summer been so uniformly high for so long a period and over such a large portion of the country as this year, according to the weather bureau officials. The high temperatures were most pronounced over the more central and northern portions of the country, while the southern states were comparatively exempt from unusual heat.

The intense heat occurring over the more populous sections caused great suffering in the congested portions of the cities and resulted in the loss of probably thousands of lives.

Lack of rainfall over the great agricultural districts during much of the long heated period greatly retarded vegetable growth and threatened a serious curtailment of crop production. Opportune rains, however, with cooler weather greatly improved conditions, and the outlook at the present time is favorable for the gathering of the usual harvests of most staples.

The period of greatest discomfort was from June 22 to July 10. Higher temperatures occurred at other periods over much of the territory, but the resulting discomfort and loss of human life were doubtless augmented in the period just passed by the fact that the most intense heat occurred toward the close of a long heated period, when the animal vitality had been largely depleted, and people were therefore not in condition to further withstand the debilitating effect of still greater heat. The nearest approach to the recent hot waves was in 1901.

HYPNOTIZED A BURGLAR.

Luther S. Kauffman, a prominent attorney of Philadelphia, with hypnotism for a hobby, put a burglar under the spell of his eye in his residence and for twenty minutes kept the man rigid with arms upheld until the suburban police placed him under arrest.

When his four daughters and wife first heard noises in the house they aroused Mr. Kauffman, who went downstairs unarmed, and when the waiting feminine contingent of the household found the silence below stairs unbroken for some minutes they followed the father downstairs.

At the sight of the burglar standing with arms upraised, transfixed by the lawyer's gaze, they set up a howl that brought their milkman to the scene. In their hysteria the five women attacked the milkman so vigorously that he fled in terror to his wagon, the hypnotized burglar continuing to stand with "hands up."

TO ENCOURAGE SCHOLARSHIP.

Yale Eleven Captain Suggests Giving Football Passes as Prizes.

To stimulate scholarship in the public schools of New Haven the Yale Football association has decided to offer free passes to the Yale football games to the students who stand highest in the grammar and high school grades. The idea was conceived by Captain Arthur Howe of the Yale football eleven, who is in the senior class. Manager Kirk Kaynor of the football eleven will confer with the superintendent of schools here upon the details of the scheme.

Captain Howe believes that it is needless to try to stimulate interest in football, but highly desirable to strengthen interest in scholarship, and no easier means to do it seems available than through football. The New Haven board of education last winter deliberated for several months a motion to abolish football, but finally decided to let it remain.

WON TOO MANY GAMES.

Contract Called For Compensation In Number of Games Won.

A pitcher who lost his last job because he won too many games has just been signed by Joe Cantillon of the Minneapolis club and has joined the Millers. His name is Howard McClintock, and he recently worked for the Rockford club of the Wisconsin-Illinois league. He is a husky young man and throws with his right arm, relying mostly on a spitball which he thinks will soon land him in big league company.

McClintock wasn't satisfied with the salary offered him by the management of the Rockford club and proposed a contract which was accepted by the management. His contract read that he was to be paid for games he won and nothing for games he lost; also he was to be allowed to pitch whenever he felt so disposed.

The day after he made this contract he felt like pitching, and the manager sent him in. He won his game so easily that the next day he thought he would work again, and once more he won.

When he won two more games in three more days the management sent out a hurry call for him to go to the office, where a new contract was made out for him. He refused to sign and quit the team when not allowed to be paid for winning games.

Joe Cantillon, who used to manage the Senators, believes that McClintock will greatly help his team.

TAFT WILL INVADE INSURGENT TERRITORY.

President's Forty Day Trip Will Take Him to the Pacific Coast.

Plans for President Taft's coming trip through the west and to the Pacific coast have been completed. The journey will be almost as extensive as that taken by the president on his famous "swing around the circle" in 1909, when he traveled more than 13,000 miles and visited thirty-three states He will break ground for the Panama Canal exposition at San Francisco and attempt to scale the 14,000 feet of Mount Rainier's precipitous slope.

The president will be gone six weeks. In that time it is expected that he will make close to 200 speeches from platforms and from the rear end of his private car. Republican leaders look upon the trip as the most important, politically, that the president has mapped out since he entered the White House. He will go through all the states in the west dominated by the progressive Republicans, who are counted on to oppose his renomination next year.

Until the question of the adjournment of congress was out of the way the president was undecided whether he should be gone three weeks or six.

The president will leave Beverly Sept. 17, returning east about Nov. 1. He will go through Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Nevada to the coast. Most of the big cities in that section, including Des Moines, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver and Salt Lake City, will be visited, but the plans for the trip contemplate stops at scores of smaller places as well. From California the president will go north to Portland and Seattle. Three days are to be spent in Washington state, and the route eastward will allow him to stop in Idaho, Montana, the Dakotas and Minnesota.

While no spellbinders are to be taken along, it is probable that members of the cabinet or congressmen will become traveling companions of the president at various points.

LIGHTNING CALCULATOR DEAD.

Hutchings, Who Helped Make Barnum Famous, Passed Out at Eighty.

Professor William Street Hutchings, for more than fifty years a famous figure in the American show world, is dead at the age of eighty. Most of his fame came to him while with P. T. Barnum, where he was known as the lightning calculator.

He was born in New York Jan. 7, 1832, the son of a grocer. At twelve years he was graduated from Hubbs & Clark's academy, in West Washington street, and for a few years thereafter studied law. That not satisfying him, he went into a Massachusetts town and played a part in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Barnstorming wasn't overprofitable, and he migrated west, working on a farm. In 1860 he appeared at Barnum's museum, exhibited his ability as a calculator and was engaged. He remained with Barnum till the museum was burned the second time and then went on the road. In 1872 he was with Forepaugh's circus in Washington and gave a private entertainment to President Grant at the White House.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

Catania, Sept. 12.—The eruption of Mt. Etna has become more intense. The showers of ashes and cinders are heavier and the rumbling of earth shocks at short intervals is heard for miles around.

The shocks are growing in violence and panic prevails. The fear of the people is augmented by the great heat and the suffocating atmosphere.

The people of the villages on the slopes of Mt. Etna have abandoned their homes. Hundreds of men, women and children go about from place to place carrying pictures of the saints, crying and imploring mercy.

ARE PREPARING TO ADVANCE

Royalists Are All Ready For Invasion of Portugal

ONLY LACKING IN FUNDS

These Are Expected to Arrive In Few Days, When Operations Will at Once Be Begun—Count on Part of Republican Troops Going Over to Them—Powers Consider It Time to Recognize the New Regime

Lisbon, via Frontier, Sept. 12.—With a desire to know the exact strength of the positions and the intentions of the Royalists, the government sent Luz D'Almeida, chief of the Carbonarios, a secret political society, to the frontier to make a thorough investigation.

A report from this official has just been received. He says the Royalists now concentrated in the neighborhood of Orense are preparing slowly to advance. They number from 4000 to 5000, comprising infantry, cavalry and artillery. They have about forty pieces of artillery, for the most part quick-firers.

They also have two aeroplanes which are constantly flying over the camps of the soldiers of the republic, especially at Chaves, and the troops and the inhabitants are in constant fear that they may drop bombs.

The delay in the attack is due to the Monarchists' lack of funds, say the Carbonario chief, but they are expecting the arrival from Brazil and England, within a few days, of money to the amount of $2,500,000. Almeidia is of the opinion that unless something extraordinary happens the Monarchist invasion will take place within a week.

The Monarchists count on part of the Republican troops going over to them as soon as hostilities are opened, but, according to the best reports this seems to be a mistake, for apparently the whole 22,000 Republican troops lining the frontier are loyal to the new regime and intend to kill without quarter in order to avoid a civil war between the north and the south.

There is no doubt that a great part of the population of the north will rise in support of the Royalists, but the belief here is that they would soon be defeated. The whole country is awaiting results with anxious expectation.

A serious conspiracy has been discovered in the Lisbon state prison. In the last few days the sentries have noticed that visitors to the 800 Royalists incarcerated in this prison invariably carried packages. Yesterday a search was made and it was discovered that the Royalist prisoners, the chief of whom is a priest, Figueiredo, were armed with revolvers. It was ascertained also that the prisoners intended to murder the guards, as soon as the Monarchists in the north entered Portugal, and start a revolution in the capital. The guards have been considerably strengthened.

Will Recognize Portugal

London, Sept. 12.—Great Britain, Germany, Austria and Spain have agreed to simultaneously recognize the republic of Portugal. These governments consider that the new regime is now sufficiently established to warrant the formal recognition, which will be accorded without delay.

This information, the first news of bloodshed in the present disturbances, has just reached the state department.

The gravity of the conditions and the fearful responsibilities of the mammoth uprising has brought the central government of China to a quick decision to suppress the trouble with a strong hand.

Telegraph wires between Chengtu and Chunking have been cut and the developments since the clashes between the soldiers and the mob are unknown.

BURGESS' GREAT SWIMMING FEAT

After Fifteen Attempts He Finally Negotiates English Channel.

TWENTY-TWO HOURS IN WATER

Distance Covered Owing to Zigzag Course Was Close to Sixty Miles. First to Equal Feat of Captain Webb In 1875.

By TOMMY CLARK.

After a lapse of thirty-six years, in which numberless attempts have been made, Captain Matthew Webb's feat of swimming the English channel has been duplicated by William Burgess, a Yorkshireman by birth and a blacksmith in Paris. It was Burgess' sixteenth attempt, he having first essayed the task in 1904.

Burgess started from South Foreman, Dover, fifteen minutes past 11 o'clock the morning of Sept. 5. He landed at La Chatele, a little village two miles east of Cape Gris Nez, at ten minutes before 10 o'clock the morning of the 6th, accomplishing the passage in 22 hours 35 minutes. A motorboat accompanied the swimmer, and it is estimated that Mr. Burgess, owing to the zigzag course he was compelled to take because of baffling tides, covered sixty miles.

Throughout the trip Burgess was favored by a calm sea, but a strong tide was running, and a severe strain was put on the swimmer to get past the Goodwin sands. Twice he was attacked by illness and several times was held to his task only by the strongest will power and the encouraging words of the men in the boat.

For the trip across the channel Burgess was well greased. He wore a pair of goggles and a rubber bathing cap. A party of eleven accompanied him in the motorboat.

Swimming the English channel is not like taking a dip in the surf at some seaside resort, a dash through a nice calm lake or a swim from one side of the river to the other. Natation on a rough day in the tempestuous Atlantic ocean gives an idea of the European feat, but still it lacks some of the essential features that have made the aquatic Marathon unswum by so many.

The English channel is probably the best body of water known to thoroughly try the capabilities of a swimmer. First there is necessary the ability to swim, and swim well. Then comes endurance, a potential factor, as the sailors the world over know the channel as one of the stormiest bits of water to be encountered. The historic bay of Biscay is often peaceful, the English channel seldom so.

It is the strong and varying current in the English channel that renders the crossing so difficult, even, in fact, for vessels. While the distance from Dover to Calais is only a fraction over twenty miles, the tide and current sweep the swimmers back and forth, up and down the course, almost at will at times. Captain Webb is estimated to have covered almost forty miles when he swam the channel.

Of course no story is complete without mention of Captain Paul Boyton. The latter was the first man to cross the channel, but he did it in his famous rubber air inflated suit.

Statistics give a faint idea to the uninitiated of the hardships involved. Below are a few of the requisites:

Food.—Swimmers must be able to take food in the water without the admixture of salt water, in which case seasickness usually results.

Eyes.—The eyes must be accustomed to salt water, and in addition a canvas helmet with glass eyes is generally used, protecting the ears as well.

Head and Brain. — A thin rubber skullcap is generally used to keep the head and brain warm and prevent shivers.

Hands and Feet.—Because of the suffering from cold the hands and feet, together with the stomach, neck, back of the head and outsides of the ears, are usually anointed with tar, the inside of the ears being plugged with soft wax, held in by wadding.

Body.—The body is smeared with Russian tallow in order to retain the natural heat as long as possible, and lard is used as a second dressing.

MAIL BAGS SAVE HIS LIFE

Aerial Postman Has Both Legs Broken In a Drop to Earth

London, Sept. 12.—Hubert, one of the aviators of the aerial postal service inaugurated by the British post-office last Saturday, met with a bad accident yesterday. Only mail bags which the flying postman was carrying from Hendon to Windsor castle saved him from an almost certain death.

Hubert had just got away from Hendon with 200 pounds of mail when the machinery of his aeroplane went wrong, and the machine crashed to the earth, burying the aviator under a mass of debris.

Both of Hubert's legs were broken and he suffered other injuries, but the mail bags on top of him acted as a buffer and saved him from being crushed to death by the weight of the engine.

Here's Quincy testimony.
The story of a permanent cure.

Mrs. W. H. Lowe, 246 Washington St., Quincy, Mass., says: "We still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as strongly as we did in 1907. A member of our family was afflicted with kidney complaint. He suffered from lameness through his back and the least exertion tired him. Finally he began using Doan's Kidney Pills, which we procured at Cox's Drug Store, and they improved his condition in every way."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By
FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE DIPSOMANIAC.

FLEMISTER and the other man were not going out by the direct way—out of the door facing the moonlight and the mining hamlet. They were passing out through the storeroom in the rear; also there came to Judson other footfalls—cautious treadings, these—as of some third person hastening to be first at the more distant door of egress.

Judson was out of his dodge hole and flitting from pine to pine on the upper hillside in time to see a man leap from the loading platform at the warehouse end of the building and run for the sheltering shadows of the timbering at the mine entrance. Following closely upon the heels of their mysterious file leader came the two whose footsteps Judson had been timing, and these, too, crossed quickly to the tunnel mouth of the mine and disappeared within it.

Judson pursued swiftly and without a moment's hesitation. Happily for him, the tunnel was lighted at intervals by electric incandescents, their tiny filaments glowing mistily against the wet and glistening tunnel roof. Going softly, he caught a glimpse of the two men as they passed under one of the lights in the receding tunnel depths, and a moment later he could have sworn that a third, doubtless the man who had leaped from the loading platform to run and hide in the shadows at the mine mouth, passed the same light, going in the same direction.

BEATING UPON IT WITH HIS FISTS AND CURSING LIKE A MADMAN.

A hundred yards deeper into the mountain there was a confirming repetition of the flashlight picture for the ex-engineer. The two men, walking rapidly now, one a step in advance of the other, passed under another of the overhead light bulbs, and this time Judson, watching for the third man, saw him quite plainly. The sight gave him a start. The third man was tall, and he wore a soft hat drawn low over his face.

"Well, I'll be jiggered!" muttered the trailer, pulling his cap down to his ears and quickening his pace. "If I didn't know better I'd swear that was Hallock again or Hallock's shadder follerin' him at a good long range."

Judson was puzzled, but he did not let his bewilderment tangle the feet of his principal purpose, which was to keep Flemister and his reluctant accomplice in sight. This purpose was presently defeated in a most singular manner. At the end of one of the longer tunnel levels the ex-engineer saw what appeared to be a wooden bulkhead built across the passage and effectively blocking it. When the two men came to this bulkhead they passed through it and disappeared, and the shock of the confined air in the tunnel told of a door slammed behind them.

Judson broke into a stumbling run and then stopped short in increasing bewilderment. At the slamming of the door the third man had darted forward out of the shadows to fling himself upon the wooden barrier, beating upon it with his fists and cursing like a madman. Judson saw, understood and acted all with the instinctive instantaneousness born of his trade of engine driving. The two men in advance were merely taking the short cut through the mountain to the old workings on the eastern slope, and the door in the bulkhead, which was doubtless one of the air locks in the ventilating system of the mine, had fastened itself automatically after Flemister had released it.

Judson was a hundred yards down the tunnel, racing like a trained sprinter for the western exit, before he thought to ask himself why the third man was playing the madman before the locked door. But that was a matter negligible to him. His affair was to get out of the mine with the loss of the fewest possible seconds of time—to win out, to climb the ridge and to descend the eastern slope to the old workings before the two plotters should disappear beyond the hope of rediscovery.

He did his best, flying down the long tunnel reaches with little regard for the precarious footing. Then he darted out into the moonlight. But as yet the fierce race was only fairly begun. Without stopping to look for a path, the ex-engineer flung himself at the steep hillside, running, falling, clambering on hands and knees, bursting by main strength through the tangled thickets of young pines and hurling himself blindly over loose lying bowlders and the trunks of fallen trees. When, after what seemed like an eternity of lung bursting struggles, he came out upon the bare summit of the ridge his tongue was like a dry stick in his mouth, refusing to shape the curses that his soul was heaping upon the alcohol which had made him a wind broken, gasping weakling in the prime of his manhood.

For, after all the agonizing strivings, he was too late. It was a rough quarter mile down to the shadowy group of buildings whence the humming of the dynamo and the quick exhausts of the high speeded steam engine rose on the still night air. Judson knew that the last lap was not in his trembling muscles or in the thumping heart and the wind broken lungs.

The ex-engineer crawled cautiously to the edge of the barrier cliff, rubbed the sweat out of his smarting eyes and peered down into the half lighted shadows of the stockaded inclosure. It was not very long before he made them out—two indistinct figures moving about among the disused and dilapidated ore sheds clustering at the track end of the old spur.

What they were doing did not long remain a mystery. Judson heard a distance diminished sound, like the grinding of rusty wheels upon iron rails, and presently a shadowy thing glided out of one of the ore sheds and took its place upon the track of the old spur. Followed a series of clankings still more familiar to the watcher—the sound of metal upon metal, as of crowbars and other tools cast carelessly, one upon the other, in the loading of the shadowy vehicle. Making a telescope of his hands to shut out the glare from the lighted windows of the power house, Judson could dimly discern the two figures mounting to their places on the deck of the thing which he now knew to be a handcar. A moment later, to the musical click-click of wheels passing over rail joints, the little car shot through the gateway in the stockade and sped away down the spur.

While the clicking of the handcar wheels was still faintly audible a man—the door hammering madman, Judson thought it must be—materialized suddenly from somewhere in the undershadows to run down the track after the disappearing conspirators. The engineer saw the racing foot pursuer left behind so quickly that his own hope of overtaking the car died almost before it had taken shape.

"That puts it up to me again," he groaned, rising stiffly. "If I can get down yonder to Goodloe's wire in time to catch the super's special before it passes Timanyoni"—he went on, only to drop his jaw and gasp when he held the face of his watch up to the moonlight. Then brokenly: "I couldn't begin to do it unless I had wings. He said 11 o'clock, and it's 10:10 right now!"

A Useful Fall Coat.

For motoring and all kinds of outdoor sports nothing is more useful than a long coat of polo cloth. Last season this material was made up into a loose, belted garment, but next fall the lines will be closer and the coat smarter and more chic in design.

The illustration shows the newest cut in these coats, with a modish hood lined with a contrasting shade of silk. Polo cloth comes in gray and tan tones.

Jammaking.

Do not allow tin, iron or pewter to touch the jam, as the color will be spoiled.

Everything employed in jammaking must be scrupulously clean.

The sugar must be of the very best.

The jam should be boiled until on dropping a little on a plate it jellies. Boil fast to preserve the color and stir well.

All scum must be carefully removed as it rises.

Dry fruit requires the addition of a little liquid to prevent its burning. Water, rhubarb or currant juices may be used.

The jam must be stored in a dry, cool place, free from drafts and in an even temperature.

If any jam is spilled on the jars when pouring it in wipe it off at once with a damp cloth wrung out in hot water.

Iced Tea Pointers.

To obtain the best results in making iced tea remember, first, that it should not be too strong; second, provide cracked ice in abundance in each glass, adding a slice of lemon for those who prefer this acid flavoring to sugar. It must always be borne in mind that tepid tea is tea in its least palatable form. This beverage must be really hot or absolutely cold. Pulverized sugar naturally dissolves more readily than granulated in this as in all cold drinks. Some hostesses add either a sprig of mint or a cherry or two to each glass to give an additional flavor. Special glasses are now sold for iced tea, with spoons which are much taller than those articles usually are.

Canning String Beans.

Owing to their composition green string beans are particularly liable to fermentation, as they are inviting to the bacteria that cause this process. For this reason they are best canned by the sterilization method, which, although it requires a little more time, is many times more satisfactory than any other. It is accomplished in the following manner:

Select young and tender beans, string them and break them into short lengths. Pack them firmly in the jars, cover them with cold water and add one teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Put on the rubber and the top and boil for one hour on each of three successive days. At the end of the hour remove the cover of the boiler and allow the steam to escape. Press down the spring or tighten the lid on the jars, according to the kind used, to prevent any outside air from entering. The jars can be removed and cooled or allowed to stay in the boiler till the next day.

On the second day loosen the lid again. This will relieve any pressure from steam that might accumulate inside the jar during the second cooking. Place the jars again in the boiler and boil for one hour.

Repeat the operation the third day. In removing the jars from the boiler care should be taken not to expose them to a draft of cold air while they are hot, as a sudden change in temperature is likely to crack the jars. The lids should be tightened securely. If spring tops are used it is easy to test the completeness of the sterilizing process. This is done by releasing the spring at the side of the jars and picking up the jars by the top. If there has been the least bit of decomposition or if the sterilization has not been complete the top will come off. This is because pressure on the top has been released by the gas formed by the bacteria.

SUGAR REACHES THE TOP NOTCH

Potatoes and Coffee Are Also Near to Being Luxuries

OTHER PRODUCTS NOT HIGHER

Pork and Pork Products Somewhat Lower Than a Year Ago—Reasonable Prices For Butter and Eggs—Average Family Steak Expected to Go Higher—Drop May Follow Reduced Use of Expensive Articles

New York, Sept. 12.—While thousands are starving in China and France is being torn with riots in protest against the high cost of living, there is renewed attention in this country to the fact that sugar has reached its highest point in twelve years, that coffee is soaring and potatoes are selling as high as $1.10 a bushel in the field.

In view of this householders are asking themselves: Will this winter see a recurrence of the conditions of 1909-10, when the cost of living reached its apex and declined slowly only after many so-called boycotts against meat and other high-priced commodities were declared throughout the land?

To this question economic experts seen here today answer no. Prices will be higher, they say, in some instances above those of last winter, but they add that the man who sets his table with plain everyday fare, avoiding fancy brands and near-luxuries, may await the approach of cold weather without undue anxiety.

It is pointed out that, generally speaking, with the exception of coffee, sugar, potatoes and a few canned vegetables, the present month of September was ushered in with conditions more favorable to the consumer than was the case a year ago.

On Sept. 1 mess pork was quoted at $19 a barrel wholesale, as against $24 on the same date in 1910; the wholesale price of ham is a little more than 15 cents a pound as compared with 18 cents in the early fall of last year; western lard is selling at a fraction more than 9 cents as against more than 12 cents in September, 1910, and butter and eggs are both comparatively reasonable and a few cents cheaper retail than in last September.

Flour of good quality is selling at lowest retail prices at $5.95 a barrel, the same price that prevailed at this time last year, and bacon may be had at some stores for 20 cents a pound as against 23 and 25 cents a year ago. The "average family" steak costs about 28 cents a pound as it did last year, though experts say that with all feeding crops short, it is not unlikely that it will go higher as the winter progresses.

The cost of poultry will be largely determined by cold storage holdings, the mysteries of which the layman has not yet solved. Potatoes, it is held, are almost certain to remain a luxury.

In the fall of last year one could buy good potatoes in the field at 55 cents a bushel; today the prices range from 85 cents to more than $1. Canned peas, beans and tomatoes also will be higher, but rice remains cheap and unless there is a marked advance in pork, it is argued that the man of slender means can provide for his family without serious strain.

Sugar and coffee are both phenomenally high, but those who are studying the market predict that decreased consumption which invariably follows a prohibitive advance will soon restore these two breakfast table necessites to a more normal level. Failure of the European sugar beet crop and poor prospects in Cuba are given as the cause of the abrupt jump in the sugar market.

The price the consumer must pay is such a variable quantity throughout the United States that it is almost impossible to strike an intelligent average. Much depends upon the location of the retail dealer.

The campaigners did not relax their efforts until the very moment of the closing of the polls, particularly in the cities, and carriages and automobiles were busy all day long hauling the voters to the polling places.

The early vote was much smaller than was indicated, but as the day wore on the voters continued to straggle in, and in many quarters the last hour was as busy as any of the day. In several of the cities the manufacturing plants allowed their employes an extra half hour at noon in order that there might be plenty of time for them to cast their ballots. Fair weather was also a big factor in making the total a large one.

Little excitement marked the voting. Although the polls in some of the cities were crowded during much of the time that they were open, it was an orderly crowd and gave the officials little or no trouble.

What the Vote Means

The vote in Maine does not of itself change conditions throughout the state and the sale of liquor anywhere in the state is still against the law. The vote simply takes out of the constitution of Maine the provision forbidding the sale of liquor. There still remains on the statute books of Maine a law, now fifty-six years old, which forbids the sale of liquor.

The vote yesterday opens the way for the legislature to pass a local option law, which would allow cities and towns to decide whether or not liquor should be sold within their borders. The present legislature, now adjourned, is supposed to be in favor of such a law, and the governor is expected to call a special session and attempt to put a local option law on the statute books. Under the law of Maine three months must elapse before a new law becomes operative.

There is still another provision which would give the citizens of Maine a second opportunity to vote on the prohibition question. If 10,000 voters petition the legislature demanding a popular vote on the question of legalizing the sale of liquor the legislature must name a day. The popular vote will then decide the question as to whether Maine shall have prohibition, local option or other license law. Thus the people can sustain or veto the act of the legislature. Inasmuch as the prohibitionists would have no difficulty in getting the 10,000 signatures it is probable that another popular election will be held before any license law is placed on the statutes books of Maine.

Yesterday's vote simply opened the way for the people of Maine to change the liquor law if they so desire.

GREEN GETS 6242 MARRIAGE OFFERS

Remark Made in Fun Causes Big Accumulation of Mail

New York, Sept. 12.—"When I find the right girl I will marry her," said Edward H. R. Green, son of Hetty Green, to a reporter some weeks ago.

The remark was made in fun, but he says today his office is stacked high with love missives and he is daily bombarded with proposals from members of the fair sex from all parts of the country and Europe. His mail has swelled to such an extent, he says, that he will have to invent some device for handling it.

To date the colonel has received 6242 proposals and 1331 of these came from daughters of foreign countries.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Sporting Editor:

Herewith I inclose my selections of an All-Quincy base ball team. All fans who have seen the different teams of the city play, know who the stars are and I think that any fan would be willing to admit that the following would be a hard combination to beat.

FIRST TEAM.

Barry, South Quincy, catcher.
Rice. Makaria. pitcher.
J. Desmond, West Quincy. first base.
Hoyt, Atlantic. second base.
Gillis, Manets, short stop.
McKenzie, Makaria, third base.
T. Galvin, South Quincy, left field.
Curtis. Makaria, centre field.
Keohane, Atlantic, right field.

SECOND TEAM.

H. Chapman, Makaria. catcher.
Penley, Makaria, pitcher.
Creswell, Manets, first base.
F. Erickson, South Quincy, second base.
Manning, Makaria, short stop.
G. Erickson, South Quincy, third base.
O'Brien, West Quincy, left field.
W. Galvin, South Quincy, centre field.
R. Ganzel, Makaria, right field.

A Loyal Rooter.

The Wollaston A. A., is to have one of the fastest football teams in the state this year and the candidates will report for practice next Saturday. The team will be managed by J. S. Higgins, the well known base ball enthusiast and no endeavors have been spared to make the gridiron game prove a great attraction in local circles. The team will be comprised of the following: Ends, Hunter, Boyle, O'Rourke; tackles, Hawkes, Gerstel, Rice; guards, Gilrane, Bennett, Morton; centre, Hendricksen; backs, McDonald, Dannahy, Wood, and Cummings Any strong local team desirous of a game may be accommodated for the opening atraction, which is billed for September 30th.

All the fans are wishing for good weather next Saturday in order that they may see the Atlantic and Makarias, the two greatest rivals in local circles, come together in the first game of the series to decide the championship of the city. Never before has so much interest been stimulated over the national pastime and the coming contests are bound to be a fitting terminus to the baseball season.

The Water street grounds have been secured for the occasion and the managers of both teams are using every effort to place the strongest possible combinations on the diamond. Two umpires are to officiate and it now seems highly probable that Cuniff and Physical Director LaRose of the Y. M. C. A. will act in that capacity.

Fifteen cents will admit one to the place of battle, and no baseball fan should miss the attraction.

The announcement of Forest Smithson, to the effect that Dan Kelly's 9 3-5 seconds for a 100 yards, is a "fake" has caused many a one to cast a haggard eye over a reluctant shoulder, and as Arthur Duffey says, "At the coming meeting the A. A. U. in New York in November there is likely to be a thorough house cleaning all around for the A. A. U. rulers."

As a result, many suspicions will be cast upon other performances, and it is now high time that something was done to place such amateur matters on an honest and integral basis.

The candidates for the Quincy High football team were out in large numbers yesterday and it is expected that suits will be given out today in order that outdoor practice may be commenced at once. I understand that a permanent athletic organization is to be formed, and such being the case, the athletic movements at the local institution will be given a splendid boom.

I hope that circumstances will permit sweaters being awarded to the different players, instead of mere letters as heretofore. Other schools do it, and there is no reason why Quincy High, should be delinquent in this respect.

"Connie" Mack says that "Buck" O'Brien is a better pitcher than "Marty" O'Toole. When the athletic manager will make such a statement, you may rest assured that he comes very near being right.

The Italian American A. C. has started preparations for a grand indoor meet, to be held in the Coliseum at a near date.

The final game of the Heptasoph K. of C. series will be played at Merrymount Park, next Saturday. Each team now has a game to its credit, and the rubbers gives promise of being a struggle for blood.

POLITICAL POT BOILING IN QUINCY

Under the heading "Bad split in Quincy politics; three-cornered contest over County Commissioner," the Boston Record comments as follows:

"This city is badly split, so far as the republican party is concerned, over the contest for the republican nomination for county commissioner of Norfolk Co. John Merrill, the present chairman of the commissioners, a candidate for a fourth term, and ex--Senator Eugene H. Sprague, both Quincy men, seem likely to divide this city nearly on even terms.

Ex-Rep. Louis E. Flye of Holbrook. the "young men's candidate," is forging ahead so fast that he seems to be distancing both his rivals. Mr. Merrill has been a receptive candidate and Mr. Sprague's campaign can hardly be called active.

Commr. Merrill is a real estate man and the other two present commissioners are farmers. There has been quite a demand for a lawyer in the board.

But Mr. Sprague, who was induced to enter the contest early, is in the provision business. The Sprague party claim that Commr. Merrill has failed to demonstrate any particular fitness for the chairmanship, and it is time he gave up the job, especially as, they allege, he no longer really represents Quincy voters or the majority of republicans here. The salary is $1200.

Mr. Merrill is a sexagenarian, and Mr. Sragus is close to the half-century mile stone. Mr. Flye is only 30.

Flye was elected town clerk of Holbrook when only 21, and served five years with conspicious ability. Then he ran for the legislature in the Braintree-Holbrook-town district. A rival "stole the caucuses," and Flye had to run as an independent but he demonstrated his vote-getting abilities by carrying the election overwhelmingly. Next year—1908—he had a second term. He was the youngest member of the legislature in those years.

Flye worked his way through Boston University law school, earning money first as a grocery clerk and later as librarian of the law school. since graduating in 1902 he has been town counsel for his native town.

Flye's representation district has had no representative in the county offices for 48 years and is now solidly backing him."

BRIEFS

M. Joseph Burke, of Newton is visiting friends on Independence avenue.

Miss Lillie Collins of Quincy avenue has returned from Onset beach after a week's vacation.

Aloysius R Finn of Dedham is the guest this week of Miah J. Falvey on Hancock street.

Mr and Mrs. Edward Burns of Pearl street are being widely congratulated on the birth of a baby boy.

Copies of the acts and resolves of the legislature for 1911 have been received by the city clerk for free distribution.

It was rumored in Democratic circles Monday that a prominent young man of this city will be a candidate for senational honors against Senator George L. Barnes. IIt was said that stickers will be used to give the local man the Democratic nomination.

EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETING

The regular monthly business meeting of the Epworth League of the Hall place M. E. church was held in the vestry Monday evening, called to order by the first vice president who conducted the devotional exercises. The secretary's report and the treasurer's were accepted. Pleasing reports were received from the vice presidents on the work of their departments all showing that the League is in a flourishing condition. Several matters of interest and importance were brought before the League and favorable action toward the completion and perfection of plans was taken. The resignation of Miss Ada Williams as treasurer was accepted and Miss Edna Burke elected.

After the business session a social hour was enjoyed in charge of Miss Pauletta Kristofferson and Miss Hilda Francis. Fruit was served by the fourth vice president Miss Catherine Hodgkinson. Meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock.

HAS WOLGAST MADE AN ERROR?

McFarland May Have Fooled Him on Weight Question.

PAIR TO MEET IN MILWAUKEE.

Will Be a Battle of Ten Rounds, and Chicago Boy Expects to Win After a One Sided Bout—On Other Hand, Wolgast Says He'll Knockout Packy.

Has the world's lightweight champion, Ad Wolgast, made a serious mistake in consenting to meet Packy McFarland in a ten round contest in Milwaukee, Sept. 15? Sporting men who have followed the work of these crack boxers cannot agree in framing an answer to this oft repeated question.

Photos by American Press Association.

PACKY M'FARLAND AND AD WOLGAST WHO ARE TO MEET IN MILWAUKEE.

James J. Jeffries, for instance, declares that Wolgast has blundered in allowing McFarland to weigh 133 pounds at 3 o'clock, and even Tom Jones, Wolgast's manager, holds a similar opinion. Wolgast, on the other hand, is as stubborn as a mule and refuses to admit that McFarland will have even a slight advantage in physical strength, although he admits that Packy will enter the ring at least six pounds heavier.

Having induced Wolgast to agree to his terms, therefore, McFarland, in the opinion of those who knew his methods, has put one over on the world's title holder.

It is conceded that Wolgast has never met a boxer like McFarland. The stockyards pugilist is a marvel in point of science. He is the quickest man on his feet in pugilism, and for that reason he can put up a wonderful defense. Moving about the ring with dazzling swiftness, McFarland can shoot in blows with either hand in such a manner that a slower opponent becomes bewildered. Wolgast is not a scientific man by a long shot, and McFarland is well aware of the fact. The champion's best work is done at close quarters by rushing in, covered up, and letting fly at his rival's body with a free hand in half clinches. McFarland never has allowed an antagonist to fight him that way, for he persists in keeping at long range, sacrificing hard hitting for speed.

Wolgast intends to fight McFarland just as he did Moran, but McFarland is Moran's master in every way, and the ring sharps believe that Wolgast will find it a difficult task to inflict severe punishment. Wolgast is what is known as a "rope fighter," because he persists in driving his opponents to the edges of the ring or the corners so that they cannot get away from his rough assaults. But not one of the men Wolgast has conquered could begin to compare with McFarland in footwork. As a matter of fact, nobody has possessed sufficient cleverness to know how to fight the lightweight champion, but McFarland says he has studied his man with great care and has hit upon a plan to offset his rugged assaults.

If Wolgast is outpointed by the Chicago phenomenon he will have himself to blame, but he has an anchor to windward in McFarland's promise to meet him again in a twenty round contest in California. If they hook up on the coast the weight will be the same, but McFarland will insist that the lightweight title shall be at stake. Packy always has contended that so long as a man can make 133 pounds during any part of the day of the fight the championship is involved, but on this point there may be a serious hitch.

Football to Be Regular Study.

Leland Stanford university will teach Rugby football as a regular course, for which one unit of credit will be given. This action, just announced by the California college, will do much to strengthen the varsity team and will go far in replacing the loss occasioned by the abolition of the freshmen intercollegiate game. The instruction in the game is to be given under direction of Captain Kenny Dole of last year's team, and some good men are expected to be developed from the gymnasium classes.

PLAYERS FOUND RUBE MARQUARD AN EASY MARK.

Rube Marquard wasn't quite sure he had been bought by the Giants from Indianapolis three years ago until he was on a train bound for New York. The big southpaw had been beaten out of $2 in McGraw's name two years before and, once bitten, was twice cautious. John Henry Myers, a teammate of Rube's on the Capton (O.) team, Marquard's first one, got the $11,000 beauty's $2. Here's the story:

MARQUARD.

Myers showed Rube a fake telegram from McGraw, asking Myers to report to the Giants at $500 a month. Myers borrowed 50 cents of Rube to pay for the message. He borrowed another half dollar to wire McGraw that he could bring Marquard with him.

Later Marquard paid 50 cents for a telegram supposed to have been sent by McGraw, saying he would give Marquard $400 a month. Rube gave Myers 50 cents to wire McGraw his acceptance.

Myers told Rube they would jump the Canton club that night.

Rube was nervous at the park. Myers told him to act natural, pack his clothes after the game. check his trunk at the depot and wait at a certain poolroom.

Bade Myers, Canton manager, found Marquard at the pool room. "How much did John Henry work you for?" Bade asked.

"Two dollars," said Rube. "Why, what's the matter?"

"Oh, nothing," said Bade, "except that those messages are written on sending blanks, and you were receiving them."

ENGLISH OPPOSE BIG FIGHT.

Think Johnson-Wells Bout a Slaughter and May Call It Off.

Opposition to the proposed "fight" between Jack Johnson and England's alleged champion, Bombardier Wells, is increasing to such a degree that the promoters may decide to declare it off. English sporting critics say that Wells hasn't had sufficient ring experience to tackle the grinning negro, who stands to draw down a small fortune for his end of this affair.

In pointing out reasons why Wells cannot hope to make a respectable showing if Johnson tries, attention is called to the interesting fact that Eddie McGoorty of Oshkosh, Wis., a middleweight, outpointed Petty Officer Curran in a twenty round bout in Dublin. Then Curran knocked out the much abused Gunner Moir in two rounds, and, sad to relate, Moir put Wells to sleep in three rounds. On that sort of pugilistic dope it's no wonder that Englishmen do not relish the Johnson-Wells match, so called.

SHERIDAN TRAINING HARD.

Great Athlete Trying to Rid Himself of Some Extra Weight.

For the first time since he last worked to fit himself for the all round championships Martin Sheridan, who is rated as the greatest athlete in the world, is down to real hard training. Sheridan has taken up his abode at Celtic park, New York, and is working faithfully to get rid of some of the extra weight that he has accumulated during the past twelve months. In less than two weeks' time Martin has shaken off twelve pounds, and, being full of enthusiasm, it is more than likely that he will easily get down to a weight that will enable him to be spry in the discus circles once more.

BASEBALL POINTERS

Umpire Johnstone says that in the last nine years he has seen only three games in which but one ball was used.

Experts declare that Barry of the Athletics gets in front of batted balls better than any other shortstop. Not only does he get in front of them, but he gets them.

Titus, Philly outfielder, wears a toothpick in his mouth when at bat, and Umpire Johnstone declares if a ball ever hits the ornament he will call a foul strike on the sorrel top.

Frank Bowerman, the veteran catcher, says Larry Cheney, Louisville pitcher, is the best spitball pitcher in the game. Bowerman has caught many spitball pitchers. He caught Cheney when both were with Indianapolis last season.

George Jackson, the new outfielder of the Boston Rustlers, who has been making things hum since breaking into the majors, is no relation to Joe Jackson, save that both belong to the brotherhood of swat.

Nick Maddox has been pitching so well for the Kansas City club that the Pirates, who have an option on him, will submit him to the recall. Maddox pitched three two hit games in succession and in the Missouri valley is regarded as a greater twirler than O'Toole.

MACK SAYS THOMAS IS BEST CATCHER.

"Best catcher in the business." This is high praise, even if it is sententious, and the man who made the remark is none other than Cornelius McGillicuddy. The person to whom this tribute is carried is Ira Thomas. "Ira this year has it all over any of them in either league, I think. He has never been given proper credit, anyway," continues Connie, "because he is such a big fellow. People like to be with the little men and often slip by the big fellows and never hand them out what's due them. That's the way with Ira. I wouldn't swap him now for any catcher in the business, and there are a number of first class backstops in both leagues. His work in the world's series was the best ever witnessed in those contests, and this year he is even better."

PROHIBITIONISTS WIN FIGHT IN MAINE

Early Majority For Repeal Is Completely Overturned---Majority 465

Blunders From Rural Districts The Cause

Portland, Me., Sept. 13.—Consternation that reigned among the prohibition forces Monday night now stalks in the camp of the "wet" supporters, for revised figures show that the 904 majority credited to the license workers was the result of blundering in the collection of the state vote. Corrected returns from all the 521 cities, towns and plantations of the state give the prohibitionists a margin of 465.

Fifty votes that the warden of precinct 2, ward 9, Portland, failed to count in his total will swell the total to 515 in case a recount is secured. With the exception of 196, the veracity of the returns has been attested to by the wardens or town or city clerk.

It is stated by compilers that the 196 have been unofficially corrected, but the official statements which come by mail are being awaited. The total vote now stands: Dry, 60,696; wet, 60,231.

Prohibition leaders declare their triumph is secure. Plunged though they are in gloom, the license workers have not given up the fight.

Frederick G. Fassett, the secretary of the Non-Partisan Local Option league, and the man who directed that organization's movements in the most bitter campign this state has ever had, declares that he will ask for a recount.

"I refuse to concede the victory to the prohibitionists," said Fassett. "There have been so many changes in recording the ballots that I shall certainly ask for a recount."

The vote of the cities as registered Monday night remained unchanged. It was in the town totals that the flaws came to light.

The largest difference was contributed by the towns of Sanford and Wells. In these places the "wets" gained 400 votes. Bethel gave the prohibitionists a gain of 200. Up in Aroostook county there was discovered an error of 101 votes in the town of Limestone. Rumford Falls in the corrected count gave the "wets" a gain of 63.

An instance of some of the errors made by the telephone system of collecting returns was presented in the count of the town of Hanover. In the statement that was issued Monday night this town was given a "yes" total of 88. The real vote of the town for license is 8.

Another error, one that caused much comment, was found in the vote of precinct 2, ward 9, Portland. Persons who were present when the vote was being recorded said that the clerk read the total for dry as 187. But the vote was officially recorded as 137. The warden of the polling place admits that the vote should properly be 187. Inasmuch as the vote has been in due form sworn to as 137 it can be changed only by the board of aldermen.

LITTLE GIRL INJURED

Emma Boetcher Run Down By Bicycle on Way From School

TREATED AT HOSPITAL

While returning from school shortly before noon today, little Emma Boetcher, the seven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Boetcher, of Wild place, met with a rather serious accident as a result of coming in conflict with a bicycle. The accident happened in the vicinity of Chestnut and Hancock streets. It seems that three boys were riding on bicycles and that the little Boetcher girl, in order to escape injury, was at a loss to know which way to turn. The result was that she was struck by one of them with such force that she was thrown to the ground. She sustained a deep gash over the right eye and suffered considerably from loss of blood.

The boy who was riding the bicycle kept on going and the little girl started for home. Mrs. Edward Harnish of Braintree, happened to be near the scene and carried the child to her mother. The little girl was taken to Doctor Jones' office, but he happened to be out at the time. The police auto was called and the child was taken to the city hospital, where she was attended by Dr. D. R. Reardon.

The little girl felt very faint from loss of blood and nothing definite concerning the accident could be ascertained from her. She is a pupil in the third grade of the Coddington school and is considered very bright for her age.

ROBINSON—WILLS.

On Tuesday, Sept. 12th, at the home of the bride's brother in Waltham, occurred the wedding of Miss Agnes M. Wills, only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William R. Wills of Hollis avenue, Braintree, and Ralph Parker Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace P. Robinson of Somerville. Owing to the recent deaths of the bride's parents the ceremony was witnessed only by the immediate members of both families and there was no reception. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Robinson left for New Hampshire and after November 1 will be at home on Hollis avenue, Braintree.

"STATE OUTING."

About 100 members and guests of the Massachusetts Daughters of the American Revolution attended the "state outing" held Tuesday at South Natick. The visitors were welcomed by Mrs. Nellie Rice Fiske of Cochituate, chairman of the state outing committee, and Miss Sarah F. Whitney and Mrs. Julia N. Sutherland of Natick.

Souvenir programs bearing a picture of the famous Eliot oak, under which the apostle Eliot preached to the Indians were distributed. Just before 11 the party assembled in the Eliot church, where the present pastor, Rev. J. F. Meyer, welcomed them and gave an interesting historical sketch of the famous site upon which it stands.

PLAYGROUND MOVEMENT IS LAUDED

Meeting Tuesday Night of Committee of 100 Shows Great Possibilities

A meeting of the Quincy Playground Committee of One Hundred was held Tuesday evening at the Y. M. C. A., and from the reports presented and the various possibilities discussed, it looks as if the playground movement is to receive a strong impulse this coming year. The reports, Tuesday evening, consisted mainly of a brief resume of the work accomplished this summer in the interests of the younger element of the Ward One section.

Physical Director L. F. La Rose, of the Y. M. C. A. read his report concerning what had been accomplished, and in all, it showed that fully five hundred children had been accommodated on the playground in the rear of the Coddington school. The project was pronounced a complete success by Mr. LaRose and he predicted great things along the same lines in the future.

The chairman of the committee, Delcevare King, gave a report concerning the financial matters and other minor details relative to the execution of the movement. A total of $450 was expended, but Mr. King asserted that it was well worth spending, when the benefits that have accrued to the children are taken into consideration.

It is expected that Robert North, the New England Representative of the Playground Association of America, will come to the local Y. M. C. A. in January, to give a series of talks on the playground movement and incidentally to take an active part in furthering the playground situation in Quincy. Unless Mr. North shall decide otherwise a playground will be again in evidence next summer in the rear of the Coddington school.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

On Sept. 15 the silver anniversary of the ordination of Rev. Henry C. Alvord as pastor of the Old South Church of South Weymouth will be observed and appropriate services in the church will take place on Sunday, Sept. 17, when Mr. Alvord will preach an anniversary sermon. The following Tuesday there will be other exercises in connection with the fall meeting of the Norfolk Association of Congregational churches, at the Old South church. There will be an anniversary gathering in the church the following evening.

Mr. Alvord's pastorate of a quarter of a century has been highly successful. The church membership has increased fourteen per cent. Mr. Alvord was born in Bolton, Conn., April 30, 1854, and was graduated from the Hartford High school in 1873 and from New York University in 1876, with the degree of A. B., receiving in 1879 the A. M. degree. He prepared for the ministry at Hartford Theological Seminary, graduating in 1879, and was ordained pastor of the First Congregational church of Montague on Sept. 10, 1879, remaining there until 1886, when he resigned to accept his present pulpit.

LADIES' NIGHT L. O. L. LODGE

Large Attendance Tuesday Night At Electa Hall

CLERGYMEN SPEAK

One of the social events of Quincy L. O. L. lodge, to which the ladies of the members look forward, is the annual ladies' night of the lodge. The event this year was held Tuesday evening at Electa hall and was the occasion for an unusually large gathering of members and their fair friends.

Dr. J. H. Anderson presided and among the guests of the evening were Rev. A. A. Rideout of New Brunswick, Provincial Grand Master, James James, State Grand Master, Rev. A. M. Thompson, State Grand Chaplain, Rev. John L. Gardner of Cambridge, Rev. R. J. Davis of Quincy and Rev. J. F. Woodsum of East Milton. Each of these clergymen were in turn called upon for addresses. The trend of their remarks was the teachings of the order. Any man who was true to the teachings o fthe Loyal order of Orangeman was a true citizen. The order was doing a good work and while it had its secrets, its ritual was founded on the Bible and its teachings exerted an excellent influence on not only its members, but the community at large. What we want today is the support of men who, when standing alone, will be true to the principals of the order and to themselves.

Rev. A. A. Rideout told of the work which the order was doing in the Provinces and how raiddly it had grown. The State Grand Master James James brought the greetings of the grand lodge and told of the work of the order throughout the state.

In addition to the speeches there was a pleasing entertainment, including selections by Littlewoods fife and drum corps, readings by Miss Beatrice Budd, always a favorite at Orangemen's gatherings, piano solos by Miss Mildred DeBore, and William Wilson and readings by Miss Louise Prout.

At the close of the entertainment ice cream and cake were served, after which, with William Wilson at the piano there was dancing until midnight.

The committee in charge of the affair, to whom its success was due were Andrew Stewart, chairman, Gus Lundberg, Murdock Gillis and John B. Whiteway.

On their arrival, they will inspect the plant of the Knox Automobile Company, after which they will visit the several fire stations in the city. All of the fire apparatus there is of the auto type and the department is said to be the most modern in the state.

CARELESS WORKMEN CAUSE FIRE SCARE AT CHURCH

Allowed Fire To Remain In Stove On Staging Around First Church Cupola

Danger Quickly Averted By Plucky Firemen

There was considerable excitement in City Square, early Tuesday evening, when a shower of sparks was seen coming from the top of the cupola of the First church. It gave the impression that the staging which had been erected there, in order to recopper the dome, had taken fire. An alarm was sounded from Box 26 at 6.51 and a large crowd was soon collected about the square, watching the sparks which were blown about by the high wind.

No key could be found to the church and a couple of firemen made an entry through the window and the door was opened from the inside. Here Officer Murray was stationed to keep out the crowd.

The staging about the cupola was built by George and Grover Williams, two sons of Chief Williams, so that they were perfectly familiar with its construction. Seizing a lantern and a hand extinguisher, these two young men, with firemen Murphy and Robinson, who had also been at work on the staging, went up through the church to the belfry and thence by the staging to the top of the cupola.

It is bad enough to climb to this height in the day time, but to do so at night, is a dangerous piece of business. These men never faltered however, and as they could be seen climbing about the staging at the dizzy height, many of the spectators held their breaths expecting any minute to see them fall. The men were experienced climbers, with cool heads, and it was not long before they were seen making their way back to a safe place.

It seems that some of the men engaged in coppering the top of the cupola had left a solderers stove on the staging and had neglected to extinguish the charcoal fire in it. The high wind that sprung up during the early evening had fanned the charcoal into live coals, causing the sparks that were seen blowing from the cupola.

It was a spectacular fire, but all over in a few minutes after the firemen arrived on the scene, although the careless workmen who left the furnace on the staging came in for a great deal of just criticism.

Andre Jagerschmidt got around the world in 39 days, but had he remained quietly at Paris, he would have gone around the earth's axis in 24 hours.

MAYOR SAID TO BE ENGAGED ?

MYSTERIOUS COOK SAID TO BE INVOLVED !!

BRIDLE FLOUR, KIDSVILLE, (DREAMLAND), SEPT. 13, 1911

At a late hour, early this morning the mayor was seen walking down Main street, of this city, with a vivacious soubrette in full costume as if both had been chums for years. Our citizens were much surprised, and immediately started an investigation. After following the pair for ten miles our police captain discovered a pocket handkerchief which the young woman dropped, with the initials N. H. which when dissolved spelled Neck's Hough.

GROCERY CLERK SOLVES MYSTERY

Late this afternoon, a courteous clerk from Berry Brothers Market in Quincy, Mass., told the excited citizens who had gathered in front of city hall that the young lady in question was a cook, and a good cook, one who knew good meats when she saw them, and that he could prove that she was economical because she bought her goods from "The Market with a Reputation."

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The curtailment of the cotton mills having ceased, perhaps the girls can get enough clothes so they won't have to wear these low necks

Senator Lorimer's hat was knocked off by a bi-plane, but if, as some expect, his official head comes off soon, he won't need any hat.

As Mr. Burgess got away across the English channel, his mother would undoubtedly discover by the condition of his hair that he had been in swimming

It is again announced that Senator Bailey will retire, but our poor human nature is constantly being deceived by the illusory visions of hope.

President Taft was entertained at the Connecticut state fair and we trust he was not so impolite as to find fault with squash pies seasoned with wooden nutmegs.

"Equal work, equal pay, equal say" was a woman's banner in the New York Labor day parade. If Woman could be held down to "equal say," there would be no kick coming from Man.

The maritime committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce has entered its protest against abolishing one of the twin lights on Thatchers island off Cape Ann. So extensive has the protest become it looks as though the light would be saved. These lights have been the most prominent guides in entering Boston Bay from the north and east. The shiping people believe that the extinguishing of one of the Twin Lights will confuse that light with others along the coast.

CHANGE IN THE COUNTY FAIR.

The autumnal "cattle shows" that have become such a feature of our American life, got their start solely through the desire of ambitious farmers to get recognition for good work.

A man who was conscious that he was producing a high type of domestic animal, or of fruit or vegetables, naturally wanted to get some official certification for his achievement. Furthermore the competitive spirit urged him to try conclusions with his neighbors.

The award of agricultural fair premiums therefore became a means by which the scientific farmer could make known the excellence of his methods, and secure a recognition fitted to the value of his product. It also became a means of stimulating his less ambitious neighbors, by the comparison between their lean and scrawny animals and the fat aristocrats of the more successful neighbor's breeding.

The county fair was thus the original and primitive attempt of the farm community to elevate its industrial methods. Its educative influenec was necessarily only very general and spasmodic Its educational phrases have today been largely succeeded by the more systematic and thorough training of the agricultural college and high school.

Today the agricultural fair has become largely a rural festival holiday. The farmer boys instead of hanging around the cattle sheds to see who is producing the best milkers are more likely to be found at the strength testers or throwing little rings over canes, or competing to see which shall get the company of the pretty girls of the neighborhood on the grand stand for the races.

All this does not necessarily mean degeneracy. All work and no play used to make Jack Corntassels a dull boy. Even if the agricultural fair has lost something of its primary mission as an educative force, the gospel of technical training for the farm boy is preached at every cross roads, and new schools for his benefit are opening daily. Give the farmer's boy his hour of jocund and care free merriment!

THE GAS QUESTION.

Following the request by the City Council to the Gas Company that it sends a statement as to when the price of gas at Quincy was to be reduced, the following makes interesting reading It is taken from a Salem exchange:

That was both good policy and good business which led the Salem Gaslight company voluntarily to reduce its tolls to the dollar a thousand basis. Perhaps by agitation, and finally by appeal to the proper authorities, consumers might have obtained such a concession But the company itself happily took the initiative in lowering rates, and has done so in a spirit well calculated to promote friendlier relations with its patrons Some people may urge that in view of the monopoly which the corporation enjoys—a monopoly which the policy of Massachusetts has declared to be, within proper limitations, best in the long run both for the companies and for the constituencies they serve—the rates ought to be lowered. While that may be true, the fact nevertheless remains that the course of the company's directors is a praiseworthy one. Regard for ordinary conventions points out therefore proper acknowledgment of an act that is not so entirely responsive to pure business considerations that the equality of commercial courtesy is lacking

That shows the proper spirit and there is no good reason why Salem should have cheaper gas then Quincy. We are under the impression, however, that the proper way to regulate such affairs is to go before a state commission appointed for just such purposes. Of course agitation always helps and the councilman may have had that in view. He only spoke about gas, however. In comparison is electricity furnished at a reasonable figure?

LOWER THE STEPS.

By all means let us all get together in the campaign that is in progress for lower steps on trolley cars. There is not a woman patron but will welcome the movement and hope for it a successful outcome, says an exchange.

At the height at which steps are now maintained women are notoriously inconvenienced. Why is it that the nuisance thus created is persistently maintained? Can it be that pride of opinion among designers of street cars leads those having the final word to insist upon the higher steps, or shall people conclude that because of the expense involved, purchasers of these cars decline to meet the heavier cost of steps which will enable women to enter or quit a street car with something approaching comfort? The open cars naturally offer the more conspicuous objections, since for every row of seats the only entrance is by way of the long running board The movement here referred to has for its object the comfort and safety of women passengers, who make up the overwhelming majority of patrons, and it ought to meet with success.

TEACHING MORALS.

Teaching morals in the public schools was strongly recommended as a necessity to the recent convention at San Francisco, by a committee composed of some of the leading educators of the nation who have had the question under consideration for a year, says the Haverhill Gazette

"Disregard for the law," says the report, "is fast becoming an American characteristic" and then follows an enumeration of some of the most pronounced systems of this evil, such as "giving rebates and discriminating against shippers, the prevalence of graft, boodling and bribery, the white slave traffic, mobs, riots, whitecapping and lynching." The committee has a remedy in the proposition to teach certain elemental virtues in the public schools. It proposes to begin in the kindergarten in the impressment upon tender minds of the lessons of tidiness, obedience and self-sacrifice and to follow this through the primary and grammar grades with instruction of pupils in the individual virtues of patriotism, courage and determination In the higher school courses, the committee recommends teaching "covering the relations of the individual to society, to a vocation and the state and the study of the family as the foundation of society." No question will be offered touching the merit of the recommendations. The surprise is that such a phase of essential education has so long been ignored in the public schools. Too much stress apparently has been placed in the effort to quicken and sharpen the minds of the public in the schools and too little in shaping their thoughts and energies in right directions for the benefit of society and the state. There is no better work for the schools than making good citizens of the pupils.

PRIMARY LAW INSTRUCTIONS

Republican Ballots Are Blue---Democratic, Salmon

SEVERAL INNOVATIONS

Detailed instructions as to the method of holding primaries under the new direct primary law, which becomes effective Sept. 26, were issued to election officers throughout the state Sept. 8, by Sec. of State Albert P. Langtry, involving several innovations.

Republican ballots this year areto be light blue, while the democratic ballots will be salmon colored and democratic progressive ballots lilac.

The instructions are as follows:

"Primaries are to be conducted in general accordance with the provisions of law relating to elections. Section 20, chapter 550, acts of 1911, provides that 'All existing provisions of law relating to primaries not inconsistent with this act shall apply thereto as far as practicable."

"Section 151, chapter 560, acts of 1907, provides that the laws relating to election officers, voting places for elections, election apparatus and blanks, calling a nd conduct of elections, manner of voting at elections, counting and recounting of votes at elections, . . shall apply to primaries, except as otherwise provided in sections 144 to 160, inclusive, of said chapter. ,

"Sections 152, 153, 154 and 200 to 214, inclusive, of chapter 560, acts of 1907, provide for the appointment and designation of election officers.

"Sections 248 to 258, inclusive of chapter 560 acts of 1907, provide for the conduct of elections. Section 3, chapter 550, acts of 1911, provides that 'the polls at every primary shall be open during such hours, not less than nine in cities or two in towns, as may be designated by the board of election commissioners in Boston, the aldermen in other cities and the selectmen in towns.'

"When a voter presents himself to vote he shall, after his name has been checked be asked by the ballot clerk in charge of the ballots with which political party he desires to be enrolled, and the ballot clerk upon reply shall distinctly announce the name of such political party and give the voter the ballot of that party (Acts of 1911, chapter 550, section 13)

"A separate set of tally sheets for each political party should be prepared for use prior to the day of the primary by printing or writing thereon the names and offices as printed on the specimen ballot; allow one line for each candidate, as many lines as may be needed for scattering votes and one line for blanks for each office.

"The envelope and tally sheet for each block of ballots for each party should be numbered from 1 upward, viz:—One envelope and tally sheet to be marked No. 1; the next envelope and tally sheet to be marked No. 2, etc

"The ballots for each political party will be printed on paper of a different color: Republican, light blue: democratic, salmon; democratic progressive, lilac.

"Section 15, chapter 550, acts of 1911 provides that 'No ballots cast at a primary under this act shall be counted until the close of the polls.' Sections 157 and 269 to 274, inclusive of chapter 560, acts of 1907, provide for the counting of votes.

PERILOUS JOURNEY BY A COLLEGE MAN

Found In Exhausted Condition Beside His Balloon

Auburn, Me., Sept. 13.—Exhausted and almost unconscious, H. P. Shearman, president of the Williams College Aeronautical society, was found lying beside a balloon on the farm of H. B. Estes, on the outskirts of this city. Shearman had flown nearly 200 miles in the balloon Springfield, from Pittsfield, Mass.

So weak was the aeronaut that he could barely whisper his name, then fell into a stupor. Physicians who examined him said that they found no evidence of injury and that his condition was due entirely to exhaustion and exposure. No serious results are anticipated.

Shearman, who started out in an attempt to fly to Canada as one of his qualifying trips for a pilot's license, encountered a pronounced current of cold air which sapped his strength.

Shearman's flight is believed to have been the longest ever made by a single person in a balloon in New England.

DISAGREE ON ALASKA

Price Not In Accord With Fisher's View Concerning Coal

Washington, Sept. 13.—Geological survey experts are not inclined to comment on the view attributed to Secretary Fisher that the value of Alaskan coal fields have been much exaggerated. The fact that Fisher is their superior officer doubtless explains their disinclination to do so.

At the headquarters of the National Conservation association, however, there is less reticence. Overton W. Price, former assistant forester and one of the right-hand men of Gifford Pinchot, made it plain he took little stock in the alleged exaggeration. He suspects, too, there is a disposition in administration quarters to try to minimize the importance of Alaska for obvious political reasons.

YOUNG GIRL INDICTED FOR CHILD MURDER

First Degree Is Alleged In Norfolk Jury Report Against Elizabeth Savoy

Long List Of True Bills Reported At Dedham

The Norfolk grand jury made its report Tuesday and true bills were found in a number of cases from Quincy. The most important case is that of Elizabeth Savoy of Quincy, against whom an indictment of murder in the first degree was returned and Vincenzo Bagarozza for murder in the second degree.

The Savoy girl, it is alleged, murdered her newly born child at Quincy June 30th. There are three counts in the murder charge and also three counts in which she is alleged to have concealed the death of the child.

The girl who is but 17 years of age, was arrested at her home in Atlantic, on the morning of July 1. She failed to go to work on the morning the murder is alleged to have been committed, and it is charged that after giving birth to the child, in desperation, for fear that people in the house would hear the child's cries, she smothered it to death. To Medical Examiner Jones, who was called, it is claimed she denied that the child had been deprived of its life. She is said to have admitted to Inspector Goodhue however, that she killed it. The girl came to Quincy from New Brunswick about a year ago and had been at work in a factory at Wollaston.

The indictment against Vincenzo Bararozzo is for the murder of Joseph Meir, which took place on Penn street, South Quincy, on the night of May 21.

The murder of Meir grew out of a quarrel over a girl to whom both Bararozzo and Meir were paying attention. During a wordy war between the two men, it is alleged that Meir was stabbed to death.

The stabbing took place early Sunday evening, near the home of the girl and Meir died shortly after receiving the fatal stab. Baragarozzo made his escape after the assault and the police call was sounded on the fire alarm circuit, which called out a large party of searchers. He succeeded in getting out of Quincy, however, but was arrested later in the evening at East Boston, where he had sought shelter with a friend.

Vincenzo Bagarozzo of Quincy is indicted charged with the murder, inthe second degree, of Joseph Meir by stabing him with a knife at Quincy, May 21.

The indictments returned before Judge Quinn and pleas of those present are:

Jacob Kipinham of Boston, breaking and entering and larceny at Milton. Plea of not guilty.

Jacob Kipinham of Boston, breaking and entering at Milton and larceny. Plea of guilty.

Rufus Peck of Chicago, alias Frank Williamson, alias George Williams, breaking and entering with intent to steal at Needham. Plea of guilty.

Gideon Goodac of Quincy, attempted felonious assault at Quincy. Plea of not guilty.

James Shea of Quincy, breaking and entering with intent to steal at Quincy. Plea of guilty.

John W. Mahoney and John F. Leary, both of Quincy. robbery at Quincy. Pleas of not guilt.

Joseph A. McDonald of Quincy, four counts of breaking and entering and larceny at Quincy. Plea of not guilty to each.

The other indictments are:

Eugene Murphy and Raymond Donahue of Boston, breaking and enterin gat Milton.

Marinus Christense of Weymouth, larceny at Weymouth.

Julia Gay of Weymouth, breaking and entering at Weymouth.

Daniel Jones of Foxboro,robbery at Foxboro.

Guiseppe Fagariette of Dover, assault with intent to murder at Dover.

Eugene Murphy and Raymond H. Donahue of Boston, breaking and entering with intent to steal at Quincy.

Gaetano La Vina of Braintree, burning a building with intent to defraud an insurance company at Braintree.

John E. Anderson of Quincy, breaking and entering at Quincy.

James McGuinness of Quincy, felonious assault at Quincy.

The no bills returned were:

Frederick Sampson of Braintree, charged with maliciously injuring a freight car at Braintree, July 3 by setting fire to it.

John Malminek of Walpole, charged with statutory offence at Walpole.

Anty Drudge on Teaching 'Rithmetic.

Teacher (in arithmetic class)—"Now, Mary, if your mother spent two hours boiling the clothes, three hours in rubbing them, and an hour to hang them out, how many hours would that be altogether?"

Little Mary—"Yes, but my mama doesn't boil the clothes. She washes them with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, and she doesn't have to rub them hard, either."

Anty Drudge—"You'd better make the time shorter, Mistress Schoolteacher, when you give an addition question like that to a little girl whose mother knows the advantage of washing with Fels-Naptha."

Easy on the woman and easy on the clothes.

That's why progressive women are washing their clothes with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, in summer or winter.

It's easy on the woman because it does away with fires for heating water, makes hard rubbing unnecessary and takes less than half the time of the old way of washing.

It's easy on the clothes because there is no boiling to make the clothes tender, and no hard rubbing to wear them into holes before their time.

In using it follow directions printed on the red and green wrapper.

MISHAP TO FOWLER

Aviator's Machine Is Smashed In His Trip Across Continent

Auburn, Cal., Sept. 13.—Robert G. Fowler, who rose from the ground here to begin the second day of his transcontinental aeroplane flight, fell while flying at full speed near Alta. His machine was demolished.

Fowler escaped with a few minor bruises. He said the accident was caused by the rudder failing to work.

Things Nobody Knows.

There are many strange facts about animals which no one has ever seemed able to understand or explain. Here are a few of them:

A fly will crawl to the top of a windowpane, fly back to the bottom and crawl up again. Hardly ever does it fly up and crawl down.

Hens scratch for food always with the sun behind them so that its rays will reflect on the tiny seeds. Yet a blind hen, for which this reason does not hold, always manages to get the sun behind her also when she scratches.

Cats hardly ever lie with their feet to the fire. In most cases they lie instead with their left side turned toward it. But dogs invariably lie with their fore paws to the fire.

A mouse overlooks a perfectly safe food supply, sufficient for a meal or two, to enjoy the perilous pleasures of an unlimited store. It will hide near the food and come out to nibble when it is hungry, for it is not true that a mouse runs to its hole at the first alarm.

LEASE ILLEGAL IS THE CHARGE

Indictment Against Crown Cork And Seal Co.

BY NORFOLK JURY

DEDHAM,—The feature of the Norfolk grand jury list Tuesday afternoon before Judge Quinn was the returning of an indictment against the Crown cork and seal company of 226 Congress street, Boston, on the charge of an illegal lease of machinery to the Cliquot club company of Millis.

This is the first indictment of the kind under the law in this state and is the first criminal action under chapter 469 of the acts of 1907, making it a criminal offence to make a part of the conditions of the lease that the lessee shall be restricted in the use, purchase or lease of other machinery or merchandise.

There are five counts in the indictment, each descriptive of the same alleged illegal act, which is specifically charged to have taken place at Millis on March 14, 1910, and that the Crown cork and seal company "did insert and make it a condition and provision of a lease to the Cliquot club company of a certain machine, to wit, one automatic power crown soda machine, that said Clinquot club company should not use certain merchandise, to wit, crowns other than that bought from the said Crown cork and seal company."

The act under which this indictment is drawn and the outcome of which will be the first test of the law is entitled "An act to regulate the lease and sale of machinery, tools, implements and appliances."

It is to the effect that "No person, firm, corporation or association shall insert in or make it a condition or provision of any sale or lease of any tool, implement, appliance or machinery that the purchaser or lessee thereof shall not buy, lease or use machinery, tools, implements or appliances or material or merchandise of any person, firm, corporation or association other than such vendor."

The penalty for a violation of the act is a fine not exceeding $5000 for each offence.

PROHIBITIONISTS WIN

fication of the vote was entered upon Tuesday the errors cropped out.

Some towns were five short in the total of the "dry" vote. Others showed errors. Corrections on the other places took blocks of 8, 19 and upwards to 50.

As the totals of the different towns kept shifting the majority that the "wets" boasted of diminished.

A tabulator would call out a "lost," and slash would go the pencil through the slender margin that separated the "wets" from the revived "drys."

Little by little, sometimes in jumps, the "drys" crept toward the "wets." Scouts from the "wet" headquarters hovered around the tables where the vote was being rectified.

And when, late yesterday afternoon, they were informed that the "wet" lead had been wiped out, they gazed blankly about as if they doubted their hearing.

Of the three referendum questions, aside from the constitutional prohibitory amendment, those proposing to make Augusta forever the capital of the state and the direct primaries act were carried by large majorities in the special election, according to returns received last night from towa and city clerks.

The referendum on the proposition to increase the debt limit of cities of over 40,000 persons, which concerns Portland alone, did not fare quite as well, these returns giving it but 2491 majority in favor. With no cities missing the vote on the propositions was as follows:

Capital—Yes, 48,295; no, 30,419.

Debt limit—Yes, 43,413; no, 31,-922.

Direct primaries—Yes, 55,540; no, 17,751.

SIXTEEN NEW FISSURES

Great Streams of Lava From Mt. Etna Are Rapidly Spreading

Catania, Sept. 13.—The activity of Mt. Etna increases. Sixteen new fissures have been opened and from the two nearest the base of the volcano a great stream of lava issues. It is moving at the rate of 1250 feet an hour and has covered several miles.

The earth shocks continue and the rumbling of the volcano fills the people with fear and many may be seen in the streets weeping and offering prayers.

The river of lava has invaded the centuries old forests of larch and pine and appears about to destroy the beautiful vineyards and nut woods.

PUNISHMENT BY PROBATION.

A boy of twenty-one connected with a Los Angeles theatre stole $5000 and was caught. Tried and convicted he received the following sentence: "You shall stay at home nights. You shall remain within the limits of this county. You shall not play billiards or pool, frequent cafes or drink intoxicating liquor and you shall go immediately to work and keep at it until you have paid back every dollar you stole. Violate these terms and you go to prison." This is making very broad use of the reformative theory and the application of the probation system. It will be interesting to see whether it results in the reclamation of the youth and benefit to society in general. On its surface it seems wise, generous, practical. Sentenced to prison the boy would be ruined. There would be no chance for the losers to recover their money. The State would pay for the support of a non-producer and turn him loose at the end of his term, incompetent and dispirited. As it is the young man has every chance to return to the ways of honor and respectability. But would the general adoption of such mild discipline provide sufficient protection for society? Some of the more advanced members of the Prison Congress think so, but it is doubtful. It would markedly lessen the risk in being dishonest. And what an instrument of corruption it could become. Imagine some of New York city's political magistrates endowed with such wide powers of discretion in sentence!—Waterbury American.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

CONSERVATIVE

AS WELL AS

BUSINESS REASONS

WHY

JOHN F. MERRILL

PRESENT CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED

TO OFFICE

The American people have repeatedly insisted upon the fact if a public servant has faithfully performed his duty and real experience gained by years of service is of the utmost value to the taxpayer and to the County, he should be continued in office, (notwithstanding the fact at the present time there are people seeking the office who think that they have all the qualifications without the experience). Conservative business men, particularly in an office like the County Commissioner, where experience gained by holding office and the faithful conservative fulfillment of the duties of the same, would seem to require a continuation, there can be no reasonable argument made at the present time why the present incumbent, Mr. John F. Merrill, who holds the important position as Chairman of the County Commissioners of Norfolk County, should not be re-elected to office.

The most important reasons why he should be are the fact that some very important matters which are partially under way will have to be completed within the next two years, namely, the County Building at Quincy, involving an appropriation of $100,000, the rebuilding of Fore River Bridge involving an appropriation of upwards of $65,000 and the re-building of the Weymouth Back River Bridge involving an appropriation of $80,000.

In all these matters where the Land and Harbor Commissioners and other parties necessarily under law, have the detail of these matters under consideration, they have in every case elected Mr. John F. Merrill as Chairman of the board. That is an unqualified endorsement of his ability and integrity with his experience to fill the office, to the satisfaction of the various boards. This is a simple statement of facts to every business and thinking man, why it would be unwise to make any change at the present time by the election of anyone else to succeed Mr. Merrill to fill these important positions. Does it not seem particularly against the interests of the county to do otherwise than re-elect Mr. Merrill to this important position?

Question of Mellen's Retirement Will Soon Be Definitely Settled

Boston, Sept. 13.—Continued talk of the forthcoming retirement of Charles S. Mellen from the presidency of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad is persistent in financial circles.

Most significant of all reports is the statement of Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, who has been named as the probable successor of Mellen, that he is to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road on Sept. 21.

Mr. Willard does not explain his intended attendance at the coming meeting, the result of which may settle the question of Mellen's retirement.

MADE COUNTERFEIT MONEY IN PRISON

Convict Is Sent to Federal Penitentiary For a Year

Boston, Sept. 13.—Mira Johnson, an electrician, was sentenced to a year and a day in the federal prison at Atlanta by Judge Dodge in the United States district court for counterfeiting 50-cent coins while a convict in the Charlestown state prison.

Johnson tapped an electric wire in his cell and ran the current to a small oven he hid under his cot. He had a copper pot for a crucible to melt scraps of metal picked up around the prison. He bought tobacco with the bad money and bet on ball games with other prisoners.

TO CALL ON PRESIDENT

Chinese Admiral Pays Respects to Officials at Washington

Washington, Sept. 13.—Rear Admiral Ching Ping Kwang of the Chinese cruiser Hai Chi paid his respects to the officials of the national government today. He arrived in Washington last evening and called today upon the acting heads of the state and navy departments, Huntington Wilson and Beekman Winthrop, respectively.

The admiral will leave Washington this afternoon for Beverly, where he will be received by the president tomorrow. A few days later the Chinese admiral will pay a second visit to Washington for the purpose of visiting the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon. He will be entertained by the acting secretaries of the state and navy.

NEW YORK BROKERS FAIL

Liabilities Are Estimated at Something Over $3,000,000

New York, Sept. 13.—Van Schaick & Co. of the New York stock exchange, the oldest house in the street, failed with liabilities of $3,000,000 to $4,000,000, according to the estimate of Elliot Norton, assignee. The firm was started in 1858.

Slow collections are said to be the primary cause of the failure. The present organization, John B. Van Schaick and Derby Crandall, was formed in 1907. Their offices are at 7 Wall street, with branches in Jersey City and Baltimore.

PERSECUTED BY A WOMAN

Doctor Who Finally Shot Her Enters Plea of Self Defense

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 13.—Dr. O. R. Spigler, who shot Mrs. Lillian McCulloch in his office, surrendered to the officials. He was released in $3000 bond.

Dr. Spigler declared that for several years he had been troubled by the woman and forced to pay her more than $3000. He declared he shot Mrs. McCulloch only after she had fired at him.

AUSTRALIANS TOP CUP AVERAGES

Antipodeans Lead World In Playing For Davis Tennis Trophy.

ALWAYS STRONG IN SINGLES.

Americans Show Way to Englishman In International Contests—Hugh Doherty Was Greatest of All Lawn Tennis Players.

A resume of the history of competition for the Davis cup, the famous lawn tennis trophy now held by Australasia, shows that America has been much the most prolific in playing contests and leads England in its general average of wins and is in turn led by Australia. England shows a marked superiority in the doubles game to both the United States and Australia, due almost entirely to the wonderful ability in this style of play and perfect team work of the "big and little Do's," as the Doherty brothers were affectionately nicknamed, while Australia's strong showing in singles and relatively poor work in doubles are accounted for in like manner, for the great Brookes and scarcely less great Wilding are not so invincible as a doubles combination as when in their true element, singles competition.

Our own average in both branches was seriously affected two seasons ago when America's youthful representatives, Long and McLoughlin, suffered that overwhelming defeat at the hands of the Australasian stars, winning but one set in five matches.

Have Won 96½ Sets.

Again, lumping preliminary and final matches together for the purpose of analysis, a closer study shows that America has won a total of 96½ sets and lost 82½ in singles, the unusual half a set resulting from an unfinished tied match in the first contest with England, and has won 27 and lost 25 in doubles, leaving a balance in our favor of 16 sets.

In her six ties Australasia has captured 49 and lost 39 sets in singles and won 12 out of 25 in doubles, her balance being only nine, but having in singles an average far better than our own.

England has 56½ sets to her credit in singles and has lost 61½, while her record in doubles is 21 wins to 16 losses, or a total of 77½ each defeats and victories.

In games the total score reads: America (singles), won 828, lost 853; (doubles), won 222, lost 191.

England (singles), won 548, lost 554; (doubles), won 222, lost 191.

Hugh Doherty a Wonder.

Turning now to the more personal and therefore interesting statistics of individual records, it appears at a glance that that of Hugh L. Doherty, "the little Do," stands in a class by itself. He not only won the English singles title five times (1902-06) and paired with his brother, the doubles championship eight times (1897 to 1901, 1903, 1904 and 1905), captured countless less important titles on the other side and in Europe, but won the American championship in singles in 1903 and in doubles in that and the following year.

His remarkable ability was used quite as effectively in the service of his country, for he engaged in eight international contests and was never defeated, although Larned almost turned the trick once and twice forced him to five set matches, as did Ward and Little.

Of the other English players S. H. Smith and F. L. Risley also kept their slates unsmirched, winning four and two international matches respectively, with no defeats, but the latter's victories were against the weak Belgium team.

COACHERS IMPORTANT COGS.

Manager Hugh Jennings Says They Play Important Part During Game.

"Coachers are important cogs in baseball," recites Manager Hughie Jennings.

"Particularly is this true of the coach stationed at third base. At some stage of almost every game this man must decide instantly whether a scoring chance is presented. To do this he must know his men and their opponents. He must prepare in advance for an emergency. When the time comes he must act without hesitation.

"The third base coach must keep constant watch on the infielders, with a runner on second. The runner watches the ball. The coach must warn him when an opponent slips behind him.

"Every baseball crowd likes clean, legitimate coaching—coaching free from senseless yelling, blackguard pitchers and the like."

Unique Golfing Record.

Major J. L. Morrow, head of the navigation division of the navy department at Portland, Ore., and Jordan Zan, a Portland golfer, recently set what is said to be a new American record for long distance golfing with a total of 119 holes, walking forty-one miles. The mark was made on the Waverly links. The best previous records were 90 and 101, both made on the Columbia golf links at Washington.

MINISTERS POORLY PAID

Indiana Clergyman Gives His Plain View on the Matter

Lebanon, Ind., Sept. 13.—"The business world today does not know the condition of the financial affairs of the ministry," declares Rev. E. T. Greenleaf, who recently resigned the pastorate of the Lebanon circuit of three rural Methodist Protestant churches because the salary was insufficient for his family. Because of the publication of the reasons he was left without an appointment for the year.

"The manner in which pastors in rural communities have to eke out miserable existence on their pitiable salaries is a disgrace to Christianity, a reproach to American civilization and a reflection upon present day church government," he continued.

"The Methodist Protestant conference of Indiana paid to pastors $23,133 in salaries, an average of $215. The highest salary in the conference was 750. These figures tell an eloquent story."

PASSING OF PORT ARTHUR

Great Stronghold Has Become of Secondary Naval Importance

Washington, Sept. 13.—Purely strategic reasons have induced the Japanese government to decide upon an abandonment of the naval station at Port Arthur, in Manchuria, representing an investment of many millions of dollars.

This station was built by the Russians when they were in control of the Liaotung peninsula and fell into the hands of the Japanese as an incident to the Russo-Japanese war.

But the acquisition of Korea by the Japanese has made the Port Arthur station secondary in importance from a naval point of view. It was too near inland to be of any use in the defense of Korea, so the decision has been reached to abandon the place as a naval station.

NEW ORLEANS HAS FLOOD OF MOLASSES

Streets Are Inundated When Great Storage Tanks Burst

New Orleans, Sept. 13.—The sweetest thing that ever happened in New Orleans occurred when tanks containing 5,000,000 gallons of molasses burst in the warehouse of the Sugar Planters' Storage company.

The sticky fluid rolled out in a vast gush and spread in all directions. Its depth just after leaving the reservoir was more than ten feet and it reached Magazine street, a third of a mile away, with a depth of ten inches.

The weight of the molasses came upon two big city water mains and the heavy pipe crumbled, adding great streams of water to the molasses and swelling the volume of the flood.

In the streets the fire companies, the police and the white wings fought vainly. Many residences were two feet deep in the sticky mass. Bartenders and small merchants scrambled to the tops of counters.

Men and women, overtaken in the streets, were rescued with difficulty and many who fell barely escaped suffocation.

GOVERNORS IN CONVENTION

Welcomed to New Jersey by the State's Chief Executive

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 13.—About a score of the thirty or more governors who are coming to attend the annual conference of the executives were present when Goveernor Wilson of New Jersey called the meeting to order and welcomed them in behalf of New Jersey. Following this, organization was perfected and then Governor Wilson of Kentucky delivered an address on the posibilities of the governors' conference.

After that Governors Norris of Montana and O'Neal of Alabama delivered addresses on "Strengthening the Powers of the Executive."

New Haven, Sept. 13.—Charles Creaton, 19 years old, Frederick Willett, aged 22 years, and Charles Russell, aged 20 years, whose depredations along the Connecticut and Massachusetts shores gained for them the name of "sound pirates," were sentenced to state prison after pleading guilty to charges of theft.

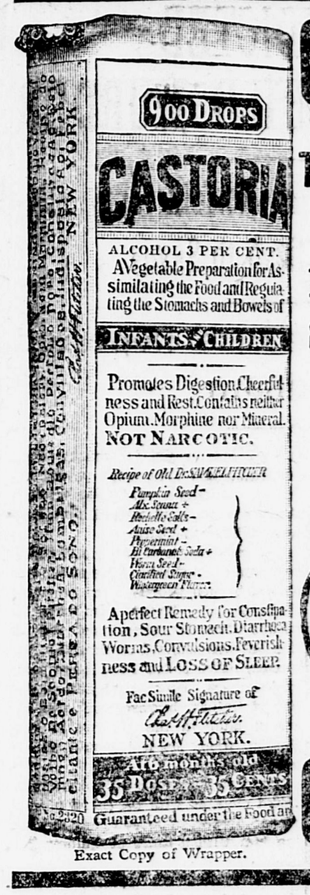

Creaton and Willett were given from two to four years in state prison. Russell was sent to prison for from one to two years.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By

FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Kumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

There was the beginning of a frenzied outburst of despairing curses upbubbling to Judson's lips when he realized his utter helplessness and the consequences menacing the superintendent's special. True, he did not know what the consequences were to be, but he had overheard enough to be sure that Lidgerwood's life was threatened. Then at the climax of despairing helplessness he remembered that there was a telephone in the mine owner's office, a telephone that connected with Goodloe's station at Little Butte. Here was a last slender chance of getting a warning to Goodloe, and through him, by means of the railroad wire, to the superintendent's special. Instantly Judson forgot his weariness and raced away down the western slope of the mountain, prepared to fight his way to the telephone if the entire night shift of the Wire Silver should try to stop him.

It cost ten of the precious fifty minutes to retrace his steps down the mountain side, and five more were lost in dodging the mine watchman. After the watchman was out of the way five other minutes went to the cautious prying open of the window least likely to attract attention—the window upon whose drawn shade the convincing profile had been projected. Judson's lips were dry and his hands were shaking again when he crept through the opening and dropped into the unfamiliar interior, where the darkness was but thinly diluted by the moonlight filtering through the small dingy squares of the opposite window.

The precious minutes were flying, and he knew that by this time the two men on the handcar must have reached the main line at Silver Switch. Whatever helpful chain of events might be set in motion by communicating with Goodloe must be linked up quickly.

He found the telephone without difficulty. It was an old fashioned set, with a crank and bell for ringing up the call at the other end of the line. A single turn of the crank told him that it was cut off somewhere, doubtless by a switch in the office wiring. In a fresh fever of excitement he began a search for the switch, tracing with his fingers the wires which led from the instrument and following where they ran around the end of the room on the wainscoting. In the corner farthest from his window of ingress he found the switch and felt it out. It was a simple cut-out designed to connect either the office instrument or the mine telephones with the main wire, as might be desired. Under the switch stood a corner cupboard and in feeling for the wire connections on top of the cupboard Judson found his fingers running lightly over the bounding surfaces of an object with which he was, unhappily, only too familiar—a long necked bottle with the seal blown in the glass. The corner cupboard was evidently Flemister's sideboard.

Almost before he knew what he was doing Judson had grasped the bottle and had removed the cork. Here were renewed strength and courage and a swift clearing of the brain to be had for the taking. At the drawing of the cork the fine bouquet of the liquor seemed instantly to fill the room with its subtle and intoxicating essence. With the smell of the whisky in his nostrils he had the bottle halfway to his lips before he realized that the demon of appetite had sprung upon him out of the darkness, taking him naked and unawares. Twice he put the bottle down, only to take it up again. His lips were parched, his tongue rattled in his mouth, and within there were cravings like the fires of hell, threatening torments unutterable if they should not be assuaged.

"God, have mercy!" he mumbled and then in a voice which the rising fires had scorched to a hoarse whisper, "If I drink I'm damned to all eternity, and if I don't take just one swallow I'll never be able to talk so as to make Goodloe understand me!"

It was the supreme test of the man. Somewhere deep down in the soul abyss of the tempted one a thing stirred, took shape and arose to help him to fight the devil of appetite. Slowly the fierce thirst burned itself out, the invisible hand at his throat relaxed its cruel grip, and a fine dew of perspiration broke out thickly on his forehead. At the sweating instant the newly arisen soul captain within him whispered, "Now, John Judson, once for all!" and, staggering to the open window, he flung the tempting bottle afar among the scattered bowlders, waiting until he had heard the tinkling crash of broken glass before he turned back to his appointed task.

His hands were no longer trembling when he once more wound the crank of the telephone and held the receiver to his ear. There was an answering skirl of the bell, and then a voice said: "Hello! This is Goodloe What's wanted?"

Judson wasted no time in explanations. "This is Judson—John Judson. Get Timanyoni on your wire, quick, and catch Mr. Lidgerwood's special. Tell Bradford and Williams to run slow, looking for trouble. Do you get that?"

A confused medley of rumblings and clankings crashed in over the wire, and in the midst of the interruption Judson heard Goodloe put down the receiver. In a flash he knew what was happening at Little Butte station. The delayed passenger train from the west had arrived, and the agent was obliged to break off and attend to his duties.

Anxiously Judson twirled the crank again and yet again. Since Goodloe had not cut off the connection the mingled clamor of the station came to the listening ear, the incessant clicking of the telegraph instruments of Goodloe's table, the trundling roar of a baggage truck on the station platform, the cacophonous screech of the passenger engine's pop valve. Then came the conductor's cry of "All aboard!" and then the long drawn sobs of the big engine as Cranford started the train. Judson knew that in all human probability the superintendent's special had already passed Timanyoni, the last chance for a telegraphic warning, and here was the passenger slipping away, also without warning.

Goodloe came back to the telephone when the train clatter had died away and took up the broken conversation.

"Are you there yet, John?" he called. And when Judson's yelp answered him: "All right. Now, what was it you were trying to tell me about the special?"

Judson did not swear. The seconds were too vitally precious. He merely repeated his warning, with a hoarse prayer for haste.

There was another pause, a break in the clicking of Goodloe's telegraph instruments, and then the agent's voice came back over the wire: "Can't reach the special. It passed Timanyoni ten minutes ago."

Judson's heart was in his mouth, and he had to swallow twice before he could go on.

"Where does it meet the passenger?" he demanded.

"You can search me," replied the Little Butte agent, who was not of those who go out of their way to borrow trouble. Then suddenly: "Hold the phone a minute. The dispatcher's calling me right now."

There was a third trying interval of waiting for the man in the darkened room at the Wire Silver headquarters; then Goodloe called again.

"Trouble," he said shortly. "Angels didn't know that Cranford had made up so much time. Now he tries to give me an order to hold the passenger—after it's gone by. So long. I'm going to take a lantern and go along up the track to see where they come together."

Judson hung up the receiver, reset the wire switch to leave it as he had found it, climbed out through the open window and replaced the sash. Then he stumbled down the hill to the gulch bottom and started out to walk along the new spur toward Little Butte station.

FAMOUS BUNCO MAN IS CAUGHT

Potter Well Known to Police of All Large Cities

OFFERS $50,000 CASH BOND

Refused by Federal Officials, Who Object to Anything Less Than $150,000—Swindlers Said to Have Gathered $1,500,000 In Few Years by Means of Green Goods, Salted Gold Mines and Gold Brick Swindles

Chicago, Sept. 13.—S. A. Potter, said by federal officers to be one of the best known gold brick and green goods confidence men in the world, was arrested here by C. M. De Woody, division superintendent of the department of justice, on a charge of operating a confidence game.

Potter offered a cash bond of $50,000 for his release, but it was refused by federal officials, who declared that nothing less than a cash bond of $150,000 would be accepted. A year ago, it is said, Potter and Edward Starkloff forfeited a $23,000 bond in the United States court at Philadelphia.

Potter was arrested at his residence on the South Side, where he is said to have lived for several months.

After making the arrest De Woody remained in the luxuriously furnished apartment occupied by Potter and his wife for several hours in the hope of capturing Potter's companion. The telephone rang once, but when De Woody answered the man at the other end of the line became suspicious and hung up the receiver.

Potter and two companions came to Chicago early in 1910 and opened an office in the downtown district. By sending out literature offering to sell paper bills printed from forms alleged to have been stolen from the United States mint at Philadelphia at a discount of 50 percent they swindled credulous investors of large sums, according to De Woody.

The band of swindlers also operated in "salted" gold mines, according to federal officials. While Potter made his headquarters in Chicago or some other large American city, his companions went to London, Berlin and other foreign cities to interest wealthy men in the gold mine swindle.

After Potter and Starkloff were arrested in Philadelphia in 1910, charged with using the United States mails to defraud, they disappeared and were said to have flooded Wisconsin with green goods literature which was shipped from Chicago to New Orleans, where it was mailed.

Potter and Starkloff are under indictment in Chicago for illegally using the mails to defraud and operate a confidence game. An indictment charging illegal use of the mails is also pending against them in the federal court in New York.

Superintendent De Woody said: "Potter is the cleverest confidence man in the world, in my opinion. He and his companions have obtained $1,500,000 in a few years by means of the green goods, salted gold mine and gold brick swindles. They are known to the police of every big city. A certain percentage of their earnings was put aside for use in getting the members out of trouble in case of arrest, and as a result they always have a large amount of cash for immediate use.

"We have been after Potter and his companions for several years, but found no trace of them until several days ago. We have not decided on what charge we will prosecute Potter, as he is under indictment in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York for using the mails to defraud."

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 13.—The suit of Mrs. Anna Walker of this city against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary J. Walker, asking $5000 on the grounds that the latter has alienated the affections of her husband, Ferdinand L. Walker, is arousing considerable interest here.

the removal of ballots, the presiding election officer should divide the election officers into groups, and designate those who are to count, record and supervise viz: One officer of one of the two leading political parties to count and call off the votes, an officer of another political party to inspect or supervise; one officer of one of the two leading the two leading political parties to record the number of votes on the tally sheet, with an officer of another political party to inspect or supervise.

"It is suggested that the officer who counts and calls off the votes should be of a different political party from the officer who makes record.

"After the ballots have been taken from the ballot box, the election officer should sort the ballots into separate piles, one for each party. The ballots of each party should then be examined separately. Lay aside those irregularly marked to be counted last and count the remainder into blocks of 50. They should place the blocks of ballots in the block envelopes, with the flaps of the envelopes turned in on top of the ballots, the first block in envelope No. 1, the second block in envelope No. 2, etc, so that the last or fractional block will be canvassed last. The number of ballots in a fractional block should be written on the envelope and at the head of the tally sheet to be used in canvassing that block. One canvass of each block of ballots is all that is required.

"When all the ballots in a block have been counted, the vote for each office should be proved by adding the total vote for each candidate to the total number of blanks. When one person is to be voted for, the result should be 50, or the total number of ballots in the block; when two or more persons are to be voted for, the result should be two or more times the number of ballots in the block. If this does not prove, the ballots and tally sheets should be examined and the errors corrected.

"When the count of a block of ballots is completed and proved, the ballots should be replaced in the envelope with the flap of the envelope turned in on the ballots, the tally sheets should be signed by the group of canvassing and supervising election officers, and the block of ballots and tally sheets returned to the presiding election officer.

"Upon the completion of the canvass of each block of ballots the result should be reported to the presiding election officer, who should cause each result to be recorded on the total vote' sheet.

"When all totals have been entered on the 'Total Vote' sheet the figures in each column should be added together, and the figures showing the entire vote for each candidate and the blanks for each office and question should be entered in their appropriate places on said "Total Vote" sheet and on the records of the election and on the election returns.

"The presiding election officer should sign the certificate on the "Total Vote" sheet and he should return the 'Total Vote' sheet and all the tally sheets to the city or town clerk.

"The ballots of any one party must be counted, the result announced and these ballots placed in the proper envelope, and this envelope sealed before the ballots of any other party are counted. It follows, therefore, and it is the law, that votes for a candidate shall be counted only toward his nomination by the political party on whose ballots they appear.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES — NO SLATE — NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

SUBSTANTIAL TESTIMONIAL

Is Tendered John Johnson By Foresters of America

ORDER FLOURISHING

John Johnson of Buckley street was tendered a testimonial surprise in Protection hall, Tuesday evening, by the members of John Erickson Court Foresters of America of which he is a member. Ex-Councilman Otto Gelotte presided and during the evening there were remarks by a number of the gentlemen present. Some fine vocal and instrumental music was also rendered.

While the festivities were at their zenith the chairman, Mr. Gelotte, briefly alluding to the high regard in which Mr. Johnson was held by the brothers of the order, presented him with a purse of $165. Mr. Johnson was greatly taken back by this unexpected gift and was at a loss for words to express his thanks.

Refreshments were served during the evening and the festivities were kept up until a late hour.

The committee in charge were Charles Pierson, Charles A. Ericson, Samuel Cederstrom, Albert Ericson, Axel Glant, Lars Dahlberg, Charles Johnson, William Ericson and Charles Jackson. Ex-Councilman Otto Gelotte was the presiding officer of the evening.

It was announced that Court John Erickson would initiate 14 candidates at its meeting tonight, at Wilsons hall.

CRANDALL HANDY MAN.

New York Pitcher Can Play Any Position on Team.

Otis Crandall, some time pitcher, some time shortstop, some time outfielder and always a consistent hitter, is one of the most useful baseball players ever developed in the major leagues. The New York Giants are fortunate in having a man who can fill any position on the diamond with credit to himself and his team.

It is said that Crandall's chief ambition is to become a catcher, and be it said he can handle the elusive shoots of Matty and the cannon ball delivery of Marquard like a second Johnny Kling. Crandall is too good a pitcher, however, to be shunted off to other positions where there is danger of injury to his pitching hand or arm. In this light McGraw would do well to strengthen his team with another efficient utility player. One is needed and needed badly.

HERE'S A PRIZE GOLF YARN.

Every now and then you golfers, gathered about the fireplace in the clubhouse, hear strange stories of strange shots. Here's one from England that you can tell the next time the group gathers: "A golfer approaching the green from the rough cut too much under his ball, with the result that it rose a short distance and dropped into a pouch pocket in his jacket. Lifting his head quickly to follow the flight of his ball, he did not notice this fact, and his astonishment can be imagined when he was told to look for the ball in his own pocket."

Yours for a good choice,
Keenly Interested.

The Makaria Atlantic contest, scheduled for next Saturday on the Water street grounds, has already created much talk among local fans and if the enthusiasm and interest that are now manifest can be taken as any assurances, it is safe to say that the Old Colony grounds will be filled with base ball admirers as never before It is to be the first game of the series to decide which team is the champion of Quincy and as the lineup will include some of the best players we have, the game itself should prove to be a warm one. The Atlantics and Makarias are about the two greatest rivals that we have in base ball.

Manager Keohane says that he will have the same team on the diamond next Saturday as he did when his combination wrested the honors of supremacy from the hands of the West Quincy aggregation. Manager McKenzie, however, is no less confident that his team can defeat the Atlantics, than he was on the fourth of July, when the Makarias secured a decisive victory over the boys from the Ward Six section. The fans will appreciate a good game and such will prove a fitting terminus to a season which is slowly making its exit from the athletic pabulum.

Once again, it took "Buck" O'Brien to turn the trick and this time on the lowly Senators.

From present indications it is highly probable that a number of local players will be given a chance in the New England league next year. Many a scout has frequently cast his eye in this direction and Quincy is sure to come in for its share when the tryouts are in order in the latter part of the spring.

The candidates for the High school eleven went through some great work yesterday and all are more than pleased with the general efficiency which Coach Staff has attained. The prospects for a fast team are exceedingly good and Captain Johnson expects that the local boys will make a splendid showing.

The Manets may have a foot ball team in the field this year. If such is the case, the yshould have a good one as a strong nucleus is a hand from which to choose a fast eleven.

TROTTER UHLAN IS PARTICULAR PIECE OF HORSEFLESH.

Uhlan, the world's champion trotter, is a mighty particular piece of horseflesh when it comes to drinking water. Not so very long ago Tom Logan, who is proud of being Uhlan's valet, hit upon the plan of furnishing Uhlan with spring water to drink. Tom figured he would give the gelding a treat for a few days, but he had no intentions of continuing the practice. When Logan tried to change from spring water to the old variety for Uhlan there was nothing doing. The star performer positively refused to drink. That's why Logan makes a five mile trip on a motorcycle every morning to provide Uhlan with spring water to drink.

STYMIE IS DOOMED.

Old Feature of Golf Likely to Be Eliminated.

The gun fired recently in the west intimating a renewal of the attack upon the much abused stymie has been heard with conflicting emotions in the east. Just because a well known player in some important match happens to lose a hole at a critical point, through being laid a stymie, fails to change a situation or condition that has existed for generations, say the loyal supporters of the old school. When the rules of golf were drafted the stymie became part and parcel of the game. It is still such. Even so, there are those who go so far as to say that the stymie is doomed, and that it is only a matter of a year or two ere it will be banished in America.

BURKE HAS MADE GOOD.

Brooklyn Middleweight Entitled to Be Classed With Crackerjacks.

Why all the holler about Sailor Burke, lads? He cleaned Mr. Willus Papke just as well as any fighter was ever cleaned, and yet some writers refer to the tar as a third rater.

Hasn't the Brooklyn deck scrubber proved his worth? He defeated Montana Dan Sullivan handily. He also handed out a nice lacing to Tom Mc Mahon, the Pittsburg tiger. Then how about Ted Nelson, the Australian bear? Didn't the sailor flop him on two different occasions? Wasn't Mr. Burke pegged for a fine lacing by nearly every sport in New York, and didn't he make Papke look like a boob?

Of course Burke is not a Dempsey nor a Tommy Ryan, but you always

He forced the fighting and never refused to mix. If Papke had been willing to mix he would have had company, for the sailor was there with the heart of a lion and ready to stand toe to toe for the limit.

Burke is one pugilist who is always in condition. You never see him slopping in the brew around cafes, as many other fighters do. He never squeals about lack of condition as others do. Fighting is his business, and he is expected to be in shape. He always is.

KNABE'S HISTORICAL SPIRIT.

Traces Alexander Back to the King of the Macedone.

"Say, fellers, we've got a prince among us," squalled Otto Knabe of the Phillies during a quiet spell at the hotel in Cincinnati.

"Whatchu mean?" demanded Dave Altizer suspiciously.

"Why," explained Mr. Knabe, "here's a history book that distinctly says, 'Alexander the Great was the son of Philip, king of Macedon.'"

"Gee whiz," exclaimed Tom Downey, "I always thought there was something mysterious about that guy! He's a grand pitcher, just the same."

YACHT CLUB CELEBRATION

Will Be Held At Club House Houghs Neck Sept. 28th

TROPHIES PRESENTED

The Quincy Yacht Club announces that its second club cup celebration will be held at the club house, Houghs Neck, on Thursday evening, Sept. 28. At that time the cups and prizes won by yachts of the club during the past season will be presented. These cups include Quincy Yacht club challenge cup, the Thomas Fleming Day cup for the Inter-bay cat boat series and the Bermuda cup. Other prizes will be those won during the season's club races, and the penants and cups for the Marblehead run.

The celebration will start with a banquet, which will be served at 6.30 by Caterer Whittemore. This will be followed by addresses by members of the Quincy and other clubs, music by Monk's orchestra and the club chorus and the cup presentation.

As the capacity of the club house hall is limited to 225, members would do well to secure their tickets at an early date.

INJURED GIRL IS IMPROVING

The condition of little Emma Boetcher, of Wild place, who is at the Quincy Hospital as a result of the accident reported in Wednesday's issue of the Ledger, was said to be comfortable today. Inquiries into the accident by officer James Murray developed the information that the little girl was struck by a bicycle of Cyril Wrigley, son of professor Frank Wrigley, of 1187 Hancock street. When Mr. Wrigley was informed of the affair, he immediately told the mother of the injured girl that he would do all in his power to help her.

It seems that young Wrigley was in company with three other boys who were also riding bicycles. It seems that the boys were playing tag on their bicycles on Chestnut street and were just going around onto Hancock street when the little Boetcher girl came along and was struck by the bicycle, thereby sustaining a deep cut over her left eye.

One of the boys stated that the girl ran away so fast that he was unable to catch her, while the others did not seem to realize that the accident was of such a serious nature.

SO. BRAINTREE GIRL KILLED BY ELEVATOR

On the day that she was to return to her home on Pond street, So. Braintree, from the White Mountains, where she spent the summer, Miss Lillian Stocker was knocked down an elevator well by a descending car and was instantly killed. The body was taken to the home of an aunt in New Hampshire and the funeral was held from there.

Miss Stocker, who was formerly a resident of Randolph, came to South Braintree with her parents several years ago. She had enjoyed her stay in the mountains and had written to Mr. and Mrs. Stocker to expect her home last Friday. While details of the accident are lacking it is understood that she looked down the elevator well to see where the car was. The car descended, struck her on the back of the head and knocked her into the well. She died instantly, the medical examiner stated.

TO HAVE NEW QUARTERS.

Even though it be a good one, the habit of years is hard to break, and it will seem strange, perhaps, to the patrons and friends of the John W. Sanborn Co., optometrists and opticians at 3 Winter street, Boston, to change this habit of location and make the new Lawrence building, 149 Tremont street, at West, the mecca of their optical pilgrimages.

Twenty-eight years ago this business was inaugurated in its present location by John W. Sanborn of Quincy and they have been years of patient industry, study and fair dealing with the world. This has brought its reward not only in the magnitude of the present business—in the optical improvements devised and benefits conferred—but in the solid satisfaction of honest work well done.

The new home will occupy 1,300 square feet of floor space. The reception rooms will be spacious and airy—the examination rooms perfectly equipped for the testing of eyes—in the workshops will be installed every modern scientific device—the personnel of the office will be the same.

About Nov. 1 the John W. Sanborn Company will be at home in its new offices prepared to continue upon a broader scale the business which has been so successful in the past.

GEORGE A. RICHARDS.

The funeral of George A. Richards of Atlantic, for many years engaged in the jewelry business in Boston, took place at his home 193 Billings street. Wednesday afternoon. The services were conducted by the Rev. A. Z. Conrad, D. D., of the Park Street church, Boston, and the burial was at Forest Hills cemetery.

PRES. TAFT INVITED

To Visit Quincy At Celebration Next Year

WILL COME IF POSSIBLE

Although July 4th, 1912, is many months away, the energetic committee of the permanent organization is not idle, for they have already taken steps to secure the presence of President Taft in Quincy next year, and the best of it is, that the President has promised, if possible, to be in Quincy that day.

Wednesday, President Stone and Secretary Stetson of the Board of Trade were among those attending the outing of the State Board of Trade at Salem. In the afternoon the party, eighty string, motored to Beverly where they were received on the lawn of the summer capitol at Paramatta by President Taft. Each one was in turn presented to the President and were most cordially greeted.

After the general meeting with the President, President Stone of the Board of Trade was engaged in conversation. The President seemed to be very familiar with Quincy saying that he had visited the city in years past.

Mr. Stone, who is also president of the general July 4th celebration committee, told the President what the city had done in the way of a celebratiin during the past two years and extended to him a cordial invitation to be in Quincy.

The President thanked Mr. Stone for his invitation and said that he should like very much to visit Quincy at that time and he thought that it might be possible that he could come. It was a little early, however, to say definitely, but he promised that he would make an effort to pay Quincy a visit on that occasion.

RECORD YEAR AT REVERE.

The report of the metropolitan park commissioners shows that the state bath house at Revere accommodated the greatest number of patrons of any year under their jurisdiction, with a total of 175,478 from June 11 to Sept. 10. Last season the number was 168,496.

The busiest day at Revere was on July 2, when 7,061 persons entered the turnstile for suits.

Never was the plant at Revere so taxed, and a large tent was provided for men and boys who had their own suits. This was a failure financiallly and the commission has under way plans for meeting any extraordinary demand that may arise next year.

The bath house at Nantasket cared for 51,212 during its season from July 1 to Sept. 4, while at Nahant the number of bathers was 39,377.

OFFICIAL VISITATION

Was Made to Royal Arch Chapter Wednesday Evening

CHAPTER COMPLIMENTED

Ex Com. Eben H. Cain, District Deputy High Priest of the seventh capitular district, made an official visitation to St. Stephen's Royal Arch chapter Wednesday evening, the occasion being one that called out a large gathering of companions. The District Deputy was accompanied by Ex. Com. Gardner R. P. Barker as Grand Captain of the Host and the following suit:—Ex. Com. Arthur W. Burr and Ex. Com. Leavitt Bates of Pentalpha chapter, East Weymouth, Ex. Com. George W. Warren of Satucket chapter of Brockton, and Ex. Com. Eben Hardy and Ex. Com. Arthur W. Stetson of St. Stephen's chapter.

The grand officers were received with due honor, being escorted to the chapter room by a committee composed of Walter E. Piper, Captain of the Host and Ex-Com. Albert W. Fay, Ex. Com. Elihu T. Spear, Ex. Com. John Morgan, Com. James H. Webb and Com. Sheldon.

The first degree in capitular Masonry was exemplified by the officers of St. Stephen's chapter in a manner that called for many words of praise.

In his remarks the Grand High Priest congratulated the chapter upon having such an efficient secretary as Com. Webb, who had held the office for many years. He also complimented Com. Webb on the neatness of his records and hoped that he would be spared to the chapter, for its secretary for many years to come.

At the close of the work of the evening a banquet was served by Com. Henry P. Furnald.

LAUNCHING.

Another launching is scheduled to take pjlace at the Fore River shipyard on Sept. 25. The launch will be of the collier Newton, built for the New England Coal and Coke Co. It is understood that the Coal and Coke company are issuing the invitations for this launch.

—The widow of a Washington millionaire, who is dissatisfied with the allowance provided for her in her husband's will, has petitioned the court for an increase, and among other items, she asks for an allowance of $1200 a month for theatre tickets, $60 a month for candy and $15 a month for charity. With so little thought for charity it was hardly worth while to make a separate item of it. It might just as well have been included in miscellaneous or sundries.—Milford Gazette.

NEW EXPRESS IS POPULAR

Initial Business of Trolley Co. Beyond Expectation

THE NEW BUILDING

Although the trolley freight express has been in operation but a few days it is already doing quite a business and there is no question but as soon as the service, which the company is giving, becomes better known business will increase rapidly.

A visit to the trolley freight depot, finds an up to date office, capable of handling quickly and quietly a large amount of business. The express cars run into the yard on the north side and are unloaded directly into the freight house. On the south side is a wide space in which teams can enter and back up to the doors to receive the merchandise. The building is if concrete and everything about the premises looks up-to-date. The yard on the south side has been paved which does away with the possibility of mud on stormy days. In addition to this a neat fence has been built between the street railway property and the John W. Nash estate, so that instead of property being deteriorated in this section it has been increased.

One of the principal objectors to the ocation of the depot in this site was Charles H. Hardwick. Mr. Hardwick was at the freight house Wednesday and expressed himself as beiig very pleasantly surprised and pleased at the way the company had fixed up the property in that vicinity.

W. F. Loud & Son have the contract with the street railway to do its delivery in Quincy and they appeared on Wednesday with some handsomely painted delivery teams. At the present time four trips are made each day between Quincy and Brockton and Quincy and Boston.

The last car from Boston arrives at the freight house at 7 o'clock although the office proper closes at 6.

CLUB WORK BEGINNING.

Committees and members of the Quincy Women's club are beginning to renew their interest in matters pertaining to club work after a long summer vacation. On Wednesday afternoon the first meeting of the Legislative committee was held at the home of Mrs. W. Ward Whitcher in Atlantic. This committee besides its regular legislative work is arranging for a gentlemen's night at the clubhouse, which will be a part of the club's yearly calendar. It will be an evening entertainment of a musical and literary character to be held in January.

GOING TO LOWELL.

As a result of the success of the Lowell Board of Trade in persuading the Avery Chemical Co., of Boston to establish its lactic acid works in Lowell that city will have a new industry employing seventy-five skilled men. The factory is at present at Littleton, Mass. Members of this company are well known in Quincy living here at one time, members of the F. A. Claflin family of Elm street.

One of High School's First Pupils Dined At Squantum

THE GUESTS

Mellen C. Hight a former resident of Atlantic who is the guest of the Misses Clean of Walker street for the month of September, entertained a party of ten at Lee's Inn, Squantum, on Tuesday, where they enjoyed one of the famous fish dinners that the Inn is noted for. Mr. Hight passed his younger days in Atlantic, attending the Quincy schools, being one of the first fifty scholars to enter the High school in 1853 also receiving the first gold medal presented by Charles Francis Adams for good scholarship in March 17, 1854.

He left Atlantic 53 years ago, and it is a great pleasure to his friends to greet him again. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs William B. Glover, Miss Lizzie Glover, Mrs. Thomas Glover, Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Hall, Mrs. William Nelson, Mr. Hight and the Misses Clean.

Mr. Hight at the close of the dinner in his gentlemanly and genial way expressed a wish that he might entertain the same party at Lee's next summer.

VERY FEW WOMEN KNOW HOW TO COOK FISH

In cooking fish, as in cooking meat, your aim must be to keep in the juices, to develope the flavor, but not disperse it, and to make the dish a pleasing to the eye as well as to the palate.

To boil and keep in the juices, put it at first into fast boiling water made as salt as ordinary sea water. The great heat will seal up the pores, but after five minutes must be reduced or you will break the skin, and it must only simmer for the remainder of the cooking. The length of time depends upon the thickness rather than the weight. Dried fish must be laid over night in cold water with a tablespoonful vinegar in it to restore the moisture. It must be cooked in enough cold water to cover it. Baking fish is an excellent method for cooking fish, as it develops the flavor better than boiling or steaming and retains all the nutritive value. Fish may also be steamed, grilled or fried.

HINTS ON COOKING

STEAMED HALIBUT

Take a good thick slice of halibut, put it in a buttered dish, sprinkle on a very little salt and pepper, and a few drops lemon juice; cover with a buttered paper; set in a pan of boiling water, allowing the water to come only within one inch of the top of the dish. Steam twenty minutes to each pound. Garnish with lemon and parsley. Serve with parsley sauce.

Steaming is more economical than boiling, because the nutritive value is higher, and it is an excellent way of cooking fish for an invalid, when a small piece may be steamed in its own juices between two buttered plates.

BAKED HADDOCK.

Wash and dry two or three pounds of haddock, skin it, sprinkle a little salt over it and leave it for an hour. The middle cut of haddock is best. Dust the fish all over with a little flour. Beat up an egg and mix with it a little salt, pepper, cayenne and a pinch of thyme and marjoram finely powdered. Brush the fish all over with this, taking care to distribute the herbs all over. Then roll in fine bread crumbs, put in a roasting pan, lay some pieces of butter on the top. Bake in a moderate oven for three-quarters of an hour. Baste well with melted butter. Serve hot with oyster sauce.

TOMATO AND CAPE OYSTER SALAD.

Materials.—Four tomatoes, one medium sized onion, one stalk of celery, one pint can cove oysters, one tablespoon (heaping) gelatine, white leaves of crisp lettuce, salt, pepper, sugar, bay leaf.

Cook tomatoes, one-half stalk celery, one onion, small piece of bay leaf, one-half teaspoon sugar, one-half teaspoon salt and pepper to taste until thoroughly done. Strain through fine sieve and add one heaping tablespoon gelatine previously dissolved in four tablespoons cold water. Pour in moulds and set to cool.

Pour liquor off the one pint can of oysters. Chop fine and add remaining one-half stalk of celery chopped fine. Mix thoroughly and season to suit taste with salt and pepper. When ready to serve arrange crisp lettuce leaves on individual salad plates. Put moulds of tomatoes on and around the oyster and celery mixture. Put a tablespoon of mayonnaise on top to serve ice cold.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Boston's school children would make a good sized city—the registration being over 100,000.

Government receipts again fall off. Will Uncle Sam never stop putting $100,000 buildings all over the country to sort his letters in?

Fifteen hundred trees are to be set out in Boston this fall at a cost of $32,000 and it will be money well expended in making for a more beautiful city.

The government has just granted its millionth patent, but no one has as yet invented a device to extract the collar button from under the bureau.

There is still much discussion as to why Dr. David J. Hill resigned as ambassador to Germany, but probably he had a disinclination to spend $100,000 in order to earn a $17,500 salary.

Less than half the citizens of Omaha voted on the commission government plan, and how the men that stayed at home will paw the air when they talk about the tyranny of majorities.

If protected manufacturers are to name the amount of tariff protection which should be colleteed for their benefit, why not let the Consumer pay what ever tax he thinks would be about right?

One of the mysteries of the universe to mere man is, that when he sees untrimmed hats in milliners' windows for 25 cents, his wife should present him a bill for $20 for her fall bonnet.

PETTY LARCENY.

From all sections of the city come complaints regarding the stealing of fruit. The thefts occurring principally late at night, and in some instances meaning a complete stripping of the fruit trees. It is high time that something should be done by the proper authorities to bring an end to these annoying affairs, not taking into consideration the financial loss occasioned. In a great many instances an example being made of a couple of marauders has been sufficient to cause a cecession of such offences. Why not give it a trial? Now's a good time to nip such "petty larcency" in the bud.

HONOR IS DUE.

Like honesty, public work is, in a great many instances, its own reward. Many are satisfied to have it so and we are sure such is the case with the patriotic citizen who has labored so faithfully for the growth of the city during the vacation season just closed. We would indeed consider ourselves lax in our obligations to the public, did we not call to its attention the painstaking work of Mr. Delcevare King who has been largely instrumental in making this year's summer playground an unqualified success. From reports taken at a recent meeting it is learned that big things have been done this year, with much in anticipation for next. It is indeed a pleasure to congratulate the one who has displayed such zeal in the matter.

WHY THE BOY HATES TO GO TO SCHOOL.

Did you ever see a boy that would admit that he liked to go to school? If he did admit it, was he any good in after life?

From lusty juvenility a practically unanimous protest goes up against the call of the school bell.

This is true even with a great many children of a mature habit of mind. At home they will ask any amount of questions about facts in geography and history, indicating that the subjects they are handling in school seem to interest them.

The essential trouble undoubtedly comes from the attempt to convert the youngster over from the savage into the civilized state. It is the theory of educators that every young life goes through all the periods of development through which the entire human race has passed. Every boy has a period when he conforms very closely to the habits and ideals of the old American Indians.

When you reflect that it has taken 2,000 years to turn the untutored tribes of Europe into the civilized peoples of today, it is no wonder that it takes several years to convert a potential Sitting Bull into an ordinary hum drum merchant or mechanic.

THE HARVEST MOON.

As some of us middle aged people look at the fat and jocund face of the harvest moon and absorb the gorgeous beauty of a clear September night, most of us have to admit that our capacity for sensuous pleasure has been a bit dulled by the years that have flown.

What a glamor of romance used to surround a moon light night when we were just grown up enough to feel the witchery of it. How it seemed as if one never could do anything so absolutely prosaic as going home and going to bed. What an affront to the joy of living, to turn the cold eye of sleep on Mr. Man in the Moon, before the pale light of dawn should dismiss the mystic visions by a summons to the cold realities of life.

Our shallow human nature thus grinds away on its dull round of toil, throwing the mantle of the commonplace over the sweetest visions of earth and heaven. Something has gone that can't come back. But would we want it back, if we had to travel over the same dusty road again? Ay, there's the rub.

VACATIONS.

"The best investment that many men make during the year is represented by the expense of their vacation," says Success Magazine "They are paying out money and earning nothing, but they are putting themselves in superb condition for great business on their return. They are overhauling their physical and mental machinery, renewing, restoring, lubricating, polishing the delicate bearings and putting them in a condition to run smoothly and noiselessly for the balance of the year." Then they are investing their money well, with the good dividend return of improved physical condition. That is the right kind of a vacation. But it is not the kind of a vacation unfortunately, that a good many men and some women turn their days or weeks of leisure into. A thirst for excitement, novelty, and a round of pleasures of the emotional sort leads many to expend their energies even to the borrowing point, instead of accumulating a store in reserve for the business tax of the working days to come. The right kind of a vacation is described as one that "multiplies the power and effectiveness of all the faculties; increases courage. confidence, self respect; in fact, every success and happiness faculty." If it is not too late, think on this; or think about it for next season, if this year's chance for a sensible, helpful vacation has gone.

TRIP HELPFUL.

With the Boston Chamber of Commerce party that recently made a tour of the principal countries and cities of Europe was the mayor of Denver, Colo., Robert W. Speer. Since his return he has been telling his townspeople of the sights he witnessed and of the impressions they made upon him. The official publication of Denver, "Municipal Facts," a handsome illustrated and well-edited weekly, devotes considerable space in its current issue to Mayor Speer's European observations, as they were outlined in an address which he delivered at a welcome-home dinner given in his honor by the Colorado Electric club. The striking thing about his remarks on this occasion is the evidence they bear of the industry with which he pursued inquiries while abroad into municipal matters that gave promise of being useful to his own city.

He found, of course, much to interest and instruct him. He learned as all open-eyed and open-minded American tourists in Europe do, that many things are done better over there that they are done in this country. He kept Denver always in sight, as his aim was to apply his discoveries as far as practicable to that community, and he reached some very positive conclusions. One of these was that the removal of party politics from municipal government was one of the greatest needs of American cities. Another was that public utilities should be fairly treated under municipal regulations as to expenditures and service and rates. He found that most foreign cities are conducted on the principle that individual rights must give way to the public good. European municipal governments make laws that the citizens and all interests must observe. The city government in Europe is a city government in reality. It determines what is best for the citizens; everything else, even cost, is secondary. He saw nothing abroad to convince him that the form of city government was the main thing. In his opinion form counted for less than kind. He was most impressed with the government of German cities, and in his belief the German municipality was uniformly satisfactory because the German people honor their officials and in return receive honest service. Permanent tenure of office secures trained and efficient executive officers. The Germans have strict libel laws, with swift execution, which do not permit newspapers to make false statements about public officials, business men or private citizens. German cities have taken corporation influences out of politics. They have more power to do things, to experiment, and to work out municipal development along individual lines.

Manifestly, Mayor Speer is now even better fitted for the task of governing Denver, than he was before taking his European trip, and all the more so because he has brought back no illusions. He realizes that the United States is not Europe, that Denver is in Colorado, and that he must make application of the things he has learned with regard for conditions as they are and not as they might be.—Christian Science Monitor.

WINFRED POULIN.

After a very short illness, death has claimed one of Weymouth's well known young men. Although a resident of North Weymouth since childhood, Winfred Poulin will be remembered by many Quincy friends. Even though his life has been short, being only twenty-one, those whose pleasure it has been to know him have none but pleasant memories, as he was a young man of stirling principles and a christian boy. He was Superintendent of Pilgrim church Sunday school and an active worker at that church.

MAINE FIGURES ARE TANGLED

Result of Monday's Vote Not Yet Definitely Known

GOVERNOR IS HURRYING HOME

Portland, Me., Sept. 14.—The result of the vote on the repeal or retention of Maine's prohibitory clause is still in the balance.

There is a conflict in figures between The Associated Press and the office of the secretary of state at Augusta.

Secretary of State Davis estimates that the state voted to repeal the prohibitory amendment by 155 votes.

The Associated Press states on the face of returns in its possession that there exists a majority of 347 for the retention of the amendment.

The secretary of state estimates the total vote as "yes" 60,525, "no" 60,370. The Associated Press "yes" 60,241, "no" 60,588.

Among prohibition workers the claim that the wet workers are endeavoring to count them out is being widely circulated. This claim is branded as ridiculous by the state authorities.

From New Jersey came word last night that Governor Plaisted would return at once to help straighten out the vote tangle. In a message the governor said that on his arrival he would call a special meeting of his council so that canvass might be made of the official returns from the various voting places.

In the ordinary course of events this canvass would not be made until Sept. 28. A duplicate set of returns to be made public always accompanies that sent to the state house for the governor and council.

Figures of the vote may be compiled from the duplicate set, but the returns do not become official until attested by the governor and council.

Secretary of State Davis, in a letter which he made public last night, grilled J. R. Libby, one of the biggest merchants in Portland and a leader of the prohibition movement. Davis' ire was aroused by a letter which he received from Libby yesterday. This communication read:

"Your people better not attempt any count-out business. If so you will get yourselves into further disgrace." The letter was addressed to Davis at the state house, Augusta. Davis in his answer says:

"I am not surprised at your display of this yellow streak. It is worthy of the condemnation of every worthy citizen."

He called Libby a "hypocrite," and quoted an old poem in which a "coward" is referred to.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FREE PARKING AT AVIATION.

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger:

As there has been more or less comment on account of the paragraph in your paper of Sept. 5th in connection with the Aviation which reads as follows: "As for automobiles they were there without number. All along the line, the free parking places provided by the park commissioners, being crowded." I should like to state the facts as regards Ocean Park.

Ocean Park was opened for "free automobile parking" through no intercession or suggestion of, nor on account of any remuneration from either Park Commission. It was merely a courtesy extended to the public by Ocean Park and, as such, I believe it was accepted by the majority ofthose who availed themselves of the opportunity, if one may judge from the many expressions of appreciation received.

Trusting that his explanation may be sufficient to correct any wrong impression, I remain

Very truly yours,
C. C. Pope.

POSTERS ON TREES.

Editor of the Ledger:

Isn't there some law prohibiting the tacking of posters and flyers to the trunks of trees? I noticed this week several large posters of the Makaria base ball game nailed to trees not only along the highway but on private property. I think they are not only a disfigurement but bad for the trees.

DON'T ROCK THE BABY.

Chicago Health Board Finds That It Causes Aches and Ills.

Rocking the cradle is responsible for many of the aches and ills of the infantile population, according to the Chicago health department officials, who have begun an attempt to do away with it.

The sixty field nurses employed by the department in the summer to "save the babies" have reported a great increase in the practice, in many cases self rocking cradles being used.

"The best cradle in the world is not a good thing for a baby to rest in," said Dr. Caroline Hedger, in charge of the field nurses. "The place for a baby to rest is in a cot or a bed. It should never be rocked. There is no more reason for tossing a baby about in order to rest than there is for swinging about a grownup."

High School — Public Schools

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL.

A meeting of the members of the staff of the Goldenrod is called for this afternoon and it is expected that plans will be made for the first issue of the scholastic year. A number of new features have been contemplated and attempts to carry them out will undoubtedly be made this afternoon.

The staff for 1911-1912 is comprised of the following:

Prizes have already been arranged for a cover competition. The students of the school are all urged to send in drawings for the cover and the members of the staff will then make the selections deemed best. The prize for the best cover design will be awarded at the close of the school year. Bids for printing will be solicited and other minor matters will also receive due consideration.

The students of the school were all called into the hall last Monday at the close of the session, for the purpose of stimulating an interest in the various athletic enterprises for the coming year. Addresses were made by the headmaster and by Mr. Arthur Staff, the new coach, who is also a teacher of manual training. Great things were predicted for the success of the football team in the event of the student body lending its co-operation.

Subscriptions will be solicited from the students tomorrow afternoon and from present indications, it is highly probable that a goodly sum will be realized. In this way it is hoped that enough will be obtained to enable new uniforms being purchased.

A movement is already under way to form an athletic organization composed of certain students and members of the faculty. This body will decide on all points regarding eligibility of competition, games, and other matters pertaining to the athletic development of the local high school.

• • •

Philip Halvosa and Roswell Bill, both members of the senior class, are engaged in measuring the different rooms of the building. Later they will draw a plan of the same in order that it may be used for reference from time to time.

• • •

Those students who take manual training will have every facility at their disposal this year, now that a new room, containing lathes and machine saws, has been installed. Arrangements are also being made to provide drawing tables at a cost of about thirty dollars apiece. These tables will hold about six cabinet drawers and will be of inestimable advantage to those who have manual training in their curriculum.

CRANCH SCHOOL.

The grounds in front of the Cranch school present a very picturesque appearance, as a result of the flower beds set out last May by the different pupils. Diligent application in attention to the flowers, has caused much favorable comment from those who happen to pass by, or in any way have occasion to view them.

A number of trees were set out at the same time and with the exception of one, all have developed well. This one, however, has been replaced through the courtesy of City Forester Stewart, and the pupils of the Cranch school are now looking forward to the time when their school will rank foremost, at least from a horticultural aspect.

NEW PUPILS.

The following pupils have been admitted to grade one of the Gridley Bryant school.

DYER REUNION.

Recent discoveries have been made concerning the ancestry of Christopher Dyer of Abington.

Because of the interest taken in this history by the members of the family it has been thought that the present was a suitable time for a general reunion and family gathering.

At a conference of several members of the family held Aug. 10, it was decided to hold a Dyer Reunion on Saturday, September 16, 1911, in the vestry of the Congregational church, Whitman, Mass., at 10.30 o'clock. An afternoon session will also be held.

WEEKLY CLEANING.

Best Plan For Keeping the Home In Order.

Sensible furnishings and systematic weekly cleaning do away with the old time "housecleaning." There need never be a time when the house is torn up from attic to cellar. Decorating and repairs may come at easy intervals if one chooses.

The items below are suggestions as to order and method in the weekly cleaning of a room.

Clean movable draperies, ornaments and small furniture and take from room.

Dust and roll up shades.

Remove smaller rugs and clean them.

Brush, dust and cover larger pieces of furniture.

Brush higher woodwork and walls.

Dust picture frames and wipe backs of smaller pictures.

Shake out window and other large draperies and pin up.

Sweep heavier rugs and roll up.

Dust gas fixtures.

Clean the floor.

Up to a certain point a feather duster is allowable. When the dust has settled it should be removed by using a slightly dampened cloth. As ordinarily performed dusting simply whisks the lint from one place to another. Ideas of dusting are many and varied: some dust only what is in sight, others what might be seen and a few dust everywhere. They never fail to wipe the window sashes where they meet and lock. They open all doors and clean them on top and two sides as well as back and front. More than that, they dust the casing where the door touches when closed. One never finds a solid black line down their door casings.

Windows may be cleaned at any convenient time when in the shade. A little alcohol in the water keeps it from freezing on the glass in cold weather.

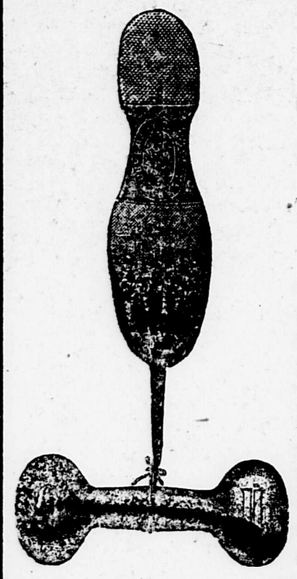

Mother's Hat.

When a woman has, in the polite euphemism, ceased to be so young as she once was it may be taken as a general rule that she will look younger if she wears a broad brimmed hat that shades her face. But there are other considerations, for by doing so she may lose dignity, may even become a little grotesque, while if she is stout her face will gain in youthfulness at the expense of her unfortunate figure, and she will look as if she had been squashed by having some one sit down on top of her and forget to get up for a very long time.

That is why a woman of uncertain age should be encouraged to the wearing of small hats and why women of forty should not go abroad in millinery that might have come out of their daughter's bandboxes. A woman of forty is not old, but neither is she jeune fille, and in dress she may surely be supposed to have arrived at years of discretion. Colors are often becoming, especially when the hair begins to turn gray, and Yedda tagal and rustic straws may any of them be worn with a chip for a best bonnet.

—The establishment of an information desk at the Somerville public library, where inquirers can get information about books and literary matters, is an excellent idea, says the Somerville Journal and visitors to the library have already shown their appreciation of the innovation. Librarian Hall is showing his fitness for the place, and is giving the best service that a librarian can render—that of making the library useful to those for whose use it is intended.

WRIGHTS MAY CONTROL AIR.

Their Suits Hit Nearly Every Aeroplane Maker.

NEW INJUNCTIONS SOUGHT.

Latest Legal Step Also Includes Majority of Aviators—Protecting Various Patents—Situation Complicated From a Legal Point of View.

Flying machine suits are again coming to the fore. The Wright brothers have begun a wholesale injunction campaign that, besides the original parties to the Wright suits, now includes the Moisant aviators, Rene Simon, Rene Barrier and Audemars, Tom Sopwith, the Englishman, who is now flying a Farman in this country; Joe Frisble, two of the Moisant managers and some aviators in Detroit.

Those who are interested in the flying machine litigation will remember that suits have been brought by the Wright brothers against Glenn Curtiss, Claude Grahame-White, Louis Paulhan and others. These suits are set for trial in New York state and city at the October term of the courts.

The legal aspect of the flying machine situation seems to have been lost sight of by the general public because so many people were flying apparently without let or hindrance from the Wrights. But the wide extension of the Wright suits will again call attention to the fact that the basic claims of the Wrights have never been adjudicated. If they are settled in favor of the Wrights it will mean practically the whole flying business of the world is in the hands of the Wright company unless somebody appears with a type of flying machine about which nothing is even suspected now.

French Makers Sued.

Wilbur Wright has been abroad all summer giving testimony for the prosecution in France. The suits in that country are not precisely Wright suits. The patents of the Wright brothers were sold to a syndicate in France, and in defense of their claims to the control of the air this syndicate has sued all the French aeroplane makers except the Voisins. The foreign machines such as the Bleriot and the Antoinette boldly use the warping wings identical with those developed by the Wright brothers. There are a score of other French manufacturers who use ailerons for lateral balancing or some other substitute for actual warping. The Voisins have never used either contrivance, balancing their machines by the rear rudder, so they are out of the field of fire.

The French court after hearing Wilbur Wright held that the Wright device was patentable, but appointed a commission and gave it a year in which to find any prior patents on wing warping. Such patents exist, but the Wright brothers were first in the field with a motor driven machine, and whether the old patents will be regarded as inoperative by the French court is not known.

The German courts, on the other hand, have already established a precedent by deciding the first suit in favor of the syndicate that bought the German patents from the Wrights.

In this country the matter has been very open. Curtiss, Grahame-White and Paulhan had been sued, and there was a general disposition to await the result of these trials as blazing the way for action in the other cases the Wrights might start were they successful. In the meantime, however, the Wrights had got one other manufacturing company in this country to accept a license from them, and they have stated that the new suits are being brought to give their licensee the worth of his money.

Another Patent Involved.

But the situation in this country is further complicated than by the adverse claims of "ailerons" and "wing warping." In the background there is another patent that may any time play an important part in the litigation. It was issued in 1903 to Professor J. J. Montgomery of California. Montgomery is a man well known in the aeronautic world. His patent was for flexing machine when the wings were curved. The patents granted to the Wrights were for flexing the wings of a flying machine when the wings were flat.

Now, a flying machine with flat wings will not fly without the application of much more power than is available even with a gasoline engine. The Wrights have never attempted to build a flat winged machine, but have always built under the Montgomery patent. The Wrights have never sued Montgomery, and he has never sued them, though it is stated that he has sent them letters of warning by way of keeping his legal rights alive.

The Montgomery machine was described as far back as 1893, when the aeronautical congress was held in Chicago, and there were public exhibitions of the machine used as a glider in California in 1905. What will happen if this fresh complication is injected into the flying machine legal controversy it is hard to say.

Even if an adjudication of the patent controlling the dominion of the air is made this winter the suits probably will be kept alive by legal motions two years longer.

EAR TRUMPET FOR DOG.

Performing Animal, Going Deaf, Becomes Beneficiary of Science.

Dominick, a handsome mastiff owned by United States District Attorney Thomas Ward, Jr., of Denver and known as a tree climbing and otherwise accomplished animal, has become the beneficiary of science. He is being fitted with an ear trumpet.

Recently Dominick became melancholy and failed to perform his tricks with customary alacrity. A veterinary was visited and it was found Dominick was going deaf. Now Dominick is to have an ear trumpet to correct his affliction.

That Yankee Dodge.

The description of the first operation under ether in Europe as given by Dr F. William Cook in the University College Hospital Magazine is reproduced in the London Lancet, and the scene is referred to as the "most dramatic ever enacted in which medical men grouped the stage." The operation was performed by Robert Liston on Dec. 21, 1846. "At 2:15 Liston enters, that magnificent figure of a man six feet two inches in height, and says, 'We are going to try a Yankee dodge today, gentlemen, for making men insensible,' so Liston introduced ether to a London hospital." The subject was a man, thirty-six years old, whose thigh was amputated. The operation was successful, and Liston uttered the epilogue, "This Yankee dodge, gentlemen, beats mesmerism holler."

FLIES BUT TWENTY MILES

Ward Makes Poor Beginning In His Coast to Coast Flight

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 14.—James J. Ward, the young aviator who started from Governor's Island, New York, in the race to the Pacific coast for the William R. Hearst $50,000 prize, landed here at 6:45 o'clock last evening, less than twenty miles from his starting point. He had planned to make Middletown, N. Y., his first stop, and to go thence to Buffalo.

A high wind and the fact that he lost his way twice over the many network of railroad tracks that enter New York's neighbor cities in New Jersey made it impossible for him to complete even half of the projected first stage.

WILL USE MOTOR CAR

Taft Won't Ride Behind Mule Team In Missouri Town

Sedalia, Mo., Sept. 14.—President Taft will not ride about town in a "chariot of state" drawn by eight big mules when he visits Sedalia Sept. 29.

The reception committee which had planned this feature of the president's visit received a quiet, unofficial tip from Beverly that the president really preferred to ride in a motor car.

It quickly changed plans, although one member of the committee remarked: "There never was a motor that could compare with a span of Missouri mules."

FAKE CHARITY APPEAL

Worked Upon New Yorkers Who Are Summering at Newport

Newport, R. I., Sept. 14.—Newport summer colonists have been victimized the past few weeks by two men soliciting aid for the "widows and orphans" of New York firemen.

Only New Yorkers were visited and in each case those appealed to have been given to understand that unless they contributed to the fund their property would not receive the same careful protection on the part of the New York fire department as otherwise.

The New York fire officials, in response to enquiries, declared the solicitors impostors and the police are now seeking them.

Setting Her Right.

The pretty and petulant wife of a congressman stood for a moment before the window of the receiving teller in a Washington bank, then tapped the window with her parasol, exclaiming: "Why don't you pay attention to me?"

"We pay nothing here, madam," was the reply. "Please go to the next window."—Denver Republican.

TAFT TO CALIFORNIA.

President Will Break Ground For the Panama Exposition.

President Taft has decided to extend his western trip to the Pacific coast for the purpose of breaking ground for the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco. His first intention was to limit his trip to four weeks, going as far west as Nebraska and Kansas, but he finds it will be possible to take two more weeks in October or early in November, thus giving him an opportunity to visit California, Oregon and Washington.

The directors of the Panama-Pacific exposition, commercial bodies in California and prominent citizens all along the coast have urged the president to visit the far west. The exposition directors are holding the date of the ground breaking ceremonies open to meet the president's convenience. It is expected that he will visit San Francisco in the latter part of October.

A big celebration will be held at San Francisco to greet the president and to celebrate the beginning of exposition construction. Special trains will be run from all parts of the coast. The Pacific fleet will be ordered to San Francisco bay.

The festivities will include a banquet to President Taft, a procession of historic floats, a military and naval parade, athletic and aquatic sports and fireworks.

BEACHEY TO BE AT BROCKTON

Lincoln Beachey, the daring aviator who was the sensation at the recent meet at Squantum, when he sailed around the Blue Hill observatory with the wind blowing 35 miles an hour, and all the other aviators refused to take their machines out of the hangars is to give exhibitions on each of the four days of the Brockton fair.

Lincoln Beachey is one of the new school of American aviators who has come up with a rush with Atwood and Ovington within the last few months.

At the meet in Chicago a few weeks ago Beachey established a new altitude record when he soared to a height of more than 11,000 feet breaking the old record by hundreds of feet. In addition to this wonderful feat, he won his share of prizes in the various events open to his type of machine.

Those who were at Squantum Sept. 5 will never forget the exhibition given by Beachey at that time. With a nasty wind blowing from the southwest, conditions were anything but favorable. It was the day of the race for biplanes to the Blue Hill Observatory and return.

Beachey was the only aviator to circle the observatory on Great Blue hill. Coming back to the field his Curtiss biplane travelled at the rate of over 65 miles an hour.

Shortly after the completion of the Blue Hill flight. Beachey started for Boston light, going down with the wind faster than the fastest express train.

In this race Beachey accomplished the almost impossible feat of defeating a monoplane with his machine, when Ovington in his high-powered Bleriot finished a poor second. No other aviator cared to risk life and machine under such conditions.

Shakers Help a Sister to "Pass Out of the Body"

OBEYED PATIENT'S REQUEST

Brother Gillette and Sister Sears Consulted and Prayed Together Before They Ended Woman's Physical Torture—Admitted to Bail After Being Held on a Charge of Murder—Jury Would Probably Acquit Them

Kissimmee, Fla., Sept. 14.—Sister Sadie L. Marchant, a Shaker, died—"passed out of the body"—on Aug. 22 last. Sister Elizabeth Sears and Brother Egbert B. Gillette, Shakers too, characterized like all their fellows by the attempt of perfect purity in thought, word and act, by gentleness, honesty and obedience to law, are now accused of Sister Sadie's murder.

For, seeing her death was inevitable from consumption, pitying her frightful sufferings, Sister Elizabeth and Brother Gillette administered chloroform to Sister Sadie, made her physical tortures end in euthanasia, in a peaceful, painless death.

And it was at Sister Sadie's prayer that her loving, sympathetic friends administered the anesthetic under which she passed from unconsciousness into the hereafter.

"Before God I think I did right," said Brother Gillette. "My conscience is perfectly at ease. If the act was unwise, only my great feeling for her prompted me to commit it."

At a formal hearing yesterday afternoon Sister Elizabeth and Brother Gillette were held on the charge of murder. Yet Judge Parker took an unprecedented step and admitted them to bail, Sister Elizabeth in $2000, Brother Gillette in $5000. Other members of the colony, which is near Ashton, about nine miles east of this city, furnished the bail.

Public sentiment already favors their dismissal by the grand jury, and even if indicted it is more than doubtful if a jury could be found to convict them. There is no doubt that Sister Elizabeth and Brother Gillette consulted and prayed together, before they yielded to Sister Sadie's prayers to end her misery.

That the magistrate admitted them to bail when accused of a capital crime makes it plain that in his opinion they were far from being actuated by any criminal purpose or intent.

The general opinion here is that Sister Sadie's death was by suicide; assisted suicide.

PROPOSES BY WIRELESS

Answer by Cablegram Brings Joy to Anxious Suitor

New York, Sept. 14.—"Won by wireless" is the story the ship news reporters sent in when they hurried to the telephone after interviewing James G. Haugh, a wealthy manufacturer of Indianapolis, upon the arrival of the French line steamer La Bretagne.

Haugh believes he is the first man to win a bride with a wireless proposal. Haugh and his fiance met on shipboard last June, and he visited her family in France soon after. On the way home he mustered courage to send back the following message:

"I love you. Will you marry me?"

When the ship reached New York the anxious suitor found awaiting him this cablegram:

"I certainly will."

HOME FOR INEBRIATES

Unfortunates Will Be Looked After by Gaynor's New Board

New York, Sept. 14.—Cases of habitual drunkenness in New York city will be taken in hand by Mayor Gaynor's new board of inebriety on Oct. 1. The board has decided to open temporary offices in the famous old Mulberry street building long occupied as police headquarters, but will shortly acquire a suburban site and establish a home there.

The police court records will supply the board with data from which it may pick its patients, who will be given treatment in an effort to reclaim them.

SCHOOLBOYS ON STRIKE

British Youngsters Object to Use of Cane by Schoolmasters

London, Sept 14.—Young England appears to be in a state of unrest, following the example set in the recent strikes by the laboring classes.

There have been strikes of schoolboys at London, Liverpool, Manchester, Hull, Sheffield, Grimsby, Llanelly, Bradford, Ashton-Under-Lyne, and even in Scotland, at Leith.

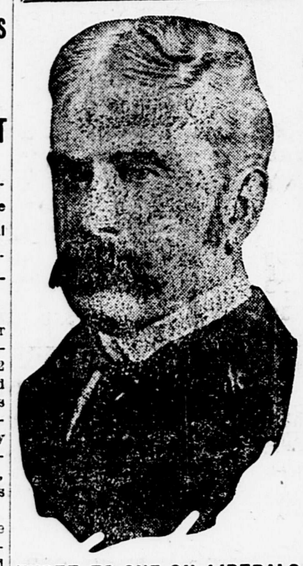

The boys object to the use of the cane by schoolmasters, and also want an extra half-holiday on Wednesday afternoons.

New Universities In Japan

Tokio, Sept. 14.—Two new imperial universities, accommodating a total of 1000 students, are to be opened by the new government.

Canadian Leader of the Fight Against American Reciprocity

THREE TO ONE ON LIBERALS

Indications That Borden Will Be Defeated In Canadian Election

Toronto, Sept. 14.—The election campaign is going on with increased intensity as the day of election draws near. The two leaders, Sir Wilfred Laurier and R. L. Borden, have now gone to their home constituencies in Quebec and Nova Scotia, respectively. But their lieutenants have taken up the work in all parts of Ontario.

The odds in favor of the re-election of Laurier have lengthened, and even money is now offered that the Liberals will have a majority of thirty in the general result throughout the Dominion, while three to one is freely offered, with few takers, that the government will be returned. That Ontario will continue to return a majority of Conservatives is admitted by both parties.

FARMER'S WIFE HELD IN VERMONT MURDER

Lumberjacks Who Were at Carousal Also Arrested

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 14.—James C. Baird, a South Fayston farmer, was found near the road, not far from his house, yesterday, with a head terribly battered. There was a carousal at his house Tuesday night, and George Watson and Edward Conway, lumberjacks, who were present, were brought to Montpelier last night by Sheriff Tracy and posse.

Mrs. Baird, wife of the murdered man, was found hiding in the woods back of the house and fled on the approach of the officers. She was brought to the county jail yesterday afternoon.

Watson admits he had two fights with Baird, whom he had accused of stealing his liquor.

PAYS $21.40 FOR CRUELTY

Young Man Tied Cats' Tails Together to Please Little Girls

Providence, Sept. 14.—Because, he says, two little girls, aged 4 and 5 years, respectively, wanted to see a tug of war between two cats, Walter Silva, 21, admitted in court at Hattisville that he tied the tails of two cats together and had the animals engage in battle.

Agent Smith of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals heard of the affair and began an investigation. This resulted in the arrest of Silva.

The young man pleaded guilty to a charge of cruelty to animals and was fined $15 and costs. The total assessment amounted to $21.40.

PRINCE ARTHUR TO WED

Niece of the Czar Is Said to Be the Lady of His Choice

London, Sept. 14.—An interesting report current is that Prince Arthur of Connaught, son of the Duke of Connaught, the newly commissioned governor-general of Canada, is engaged to marry Princess Irene, daughter of Grand Duchess Xenia-Alexandrovna, who is a sister of Emperor Nicholas.

It is stated that the formal announcement of betrothal will be made before the Connaughts sail for Canada.

Kansas City, Sept. 14.—Because his wife was a suffragette and was active in politics in Denver when he lived in that city, Thomas P. Zimmerman was given a divorce from her.

Zimmerman charged that his wife neglected her home and spent in politics money that he earned as a stonecutter.

In this column we publish from day to day receipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

USES OF ICE CREAM CONE

Something the Girls at a Luncheon Party Pronounced "Perfectly Wonderful"—Try Serving Ice Cream With Apple Pie.

Freezers of the smallest size have made it the work of a few moments to prepare a pint of cream or of custard for freezing.

This renders it possible to combine the frozen tidbit with other desserts during the warm weather to the great improvement of the latter.

To the children the little inverted cone of vanilla cream surmounting a baked apple or a saucer of berries is luxury exemplified, and even paterfamilias will smile upon the novelty.

The cream or water ice is so easy to do that Lizzie or Bridget will not object to the slight additional trouble if her own portion is carefully reserved for her.

Besides the fruit desserts just mentioned a cone of cream in vanilla or other flavor is extremely good on many kinds of pudding.

On brown betty, bread, fruit tapioca and even rice pudding it is highly preferable to fresh cream or sauce, to most minds, and is not more indigestible.

At a girl's luncheon the other day chocolate layer cake was served as dessert with a spoonful of coffee ice cream on each portion, and the young guests were delighted with it.

The improvement which a tablespoonful of ice cream makes in a portion of pie needs no mention here, and to many palates muskmelon is never quite so delicious as when filled with that of vanilla flavor, but few housekeepers perhaps are aware how much a small quantity of water ice adds to a salpicon of fruit served in glasses, whatever the flavoring employed for the fruit mixture.

Duchess cake, prettily decorated, is mighty good for a summer dessert. To make the cake trim a cake round, cut it in two, spread with butter icing and place together. Decorate with white frosting, angelica and cherries.

GARDEN LORE.

Water Lily Beds In Place of Ordinary Flowers.

It is a fad of the summer to have a water lily bed in place of an ordinary flower bed. And this is by no means impossible if an adequate supply of water is available, and with a little study and that degree of attention one naturally bestows upon anything in which one is interested there is every hope of success. An inexpensive plan is to arrange the tubs in connection with a rockery, a large tub in the center being placed a little higher than the others and connected by pieces of rubber hose, so that the overflow from the large one runs from one to the other, thus changing the water. Then the space around the tubs may be filled with rich soil held in place by large stones, in which foliage and flowering plants suited to the position can be planted.

Another arrangement for growing aquatics is a tank or basin built of bricks and cemented about two feet deep and six feet in diameter sunk in the lawn in a sunny position or on the south side of a wall or building. If means can be provided for emptying the tank from the bottom and a waste pipe near the top for overflow it is a simple matter to run in fresh water occasionally to prevent stagnation. When the surface is furnished with leaves, however, it is generally only necessary to replace what is lost by evaporation, and then it must be sun warmed before adding it. A compost of good rich loam is suitable for the growth of all kinds of aquatic plants. It should be about six inches deep in the tank and covered with a layer of clean sand or pebbles, the latter being sprinkled in some time after planting, and the water should be let in and allowed to remain several days before the plants are inserted.

Water lilies are generally planted firmly in small wicker baskets, the roots surrounded by soil, with moss strung round to keep the bunch together. The whole is then dropped to the bottom. If the growth is a little below the surface at first it is immaterial, as it will soon find its way up. The water violet (hottonia) has both its roots and leaves floating, so merely requires to be laid on the surface. There is an abundance of material in the hardy section of aquatic plants suitable for giving variety and beauty to homeland waters. The blue lily seen in the illustration is a particularly beautiful variety for use in the aquatic garden.

Some Points For Father.

Must study how to be his child's friend, thereby gaining control of all the strong forces in his life.

Must realize that to get the best results from fatherhood it is first necessary to make a votive offering of time and thought.

Must make a practice of giving one hour daily to his children.

Must take an active interest in everything that enters their lives.

Must realize that his opinions cannot possibly be imposed upon his children, that they are individual souls and that, though he may lead them, they can never be driven if they are worth their salt.

Must realize that one of the principal duties of a parent to his child is the duty of absolute truthfulness; that to exaggerate, state falsely, unduly emphasize, are faults that may destroy the character of the child forever.

That a good father's love has shaped many a life for noble ends and that as a father he should accept his responsibilities as the greatest opportunity life has offered him for influence, power and success.

The New Dinner Plates.

It has become the fashion to serve conversational service plates, as one woman called them. They create conversation among the guests at a luncheon or dinner table between courses. A certain set is known as the Jungle Folk plates. Each one illustrates one of the twelve stories which Kipling made famous not only for children, but for grownups.

One of the plates has the scene where Mowgli teases the Red Dog, and another one has the lullaby of the seal:

But splash and grow strong
And you can't be wrong,
Child of the open sea.

An American artist invented these plates and did the coloring and the designs, but the china was made in France. They are not cheap, for the work has genuine artistic merit, but it is probable that they will be widely copied in American households in more inexpensive forms.

Two Spot Eradicating Items.

Candle grease and sealing wax are two bothersome items when splotches of them accidentally fall on cloths or clothing. Candle grease comes out by light scraping with an old knife, which has been subjected to the heat of the oven, and the sealing wax will come out by the same manipulation, except that it might leave a whitish spot which will capitulate to a few seductive turpentine spongings.

Getting Rid of Flies.

"We do not use screens in our upper windows, yet are never troubled with flies and only occasionally by a mosquito," said a careful housekeeper. "For an hour each morning the windows and shutters are opened wide to air and sun, but very early the rooms are put in order. This means that all dust is carefully removed and that all crockery is dry and perfectly clean. Then the blinds are closed and the curtains partially drawn, leaving the room dark and cool and sweet—not at all attractive to flies. On retiring we leave the shutters closed and use candles for light, because they give sufficient light without diffusing much heat or attracting insects. I have never been troubled with moths in rooms so treated. I keep all the house rather dark during intense heat, as it is cool and refreshing after the hot glare outside, but several times each week I let in plenty of sunshine to dispel any possible dampness, and there is an abundance of fresh air at all times."

The Black Velvet Band.

Fashion has brought back into being the use of the quarter inch black velvet band around the top of the lace collar. It is ornamented with tiny slides of cut steel or brilliants. These can be bought ready to wear in the French jewelry departments of the large shops.

Down Pillows.

Those who have been troubled by the sifting through of down in pillows will be glad to learn of the following:

Iron the muslin interlining on the wrong side with a hot iron which has been well rubbed in beeswax. The wax will act like varnish on the smooth surface and thus prevent the down from sifting through.

THE ? of Heating

Of the four modern methods of heating—by gas, steam, hot water and wood or coal stove—gas is by far the most effective. Its heat is steady, brilliant, expansive; it is economical because it heats so quickly and evenly. It is more sanitary than the others; it is more cleanly. A Reznor Gas Heater is the proper heater for your home. Come in and see them.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES
NO SLATE NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By
FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Ridgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Ridgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Ridgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Ridgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Ridgerwood will regret this decision.

Trainmaster McCloskey, Ridgerwood and Gridley are called out on a wreck. Gridley tells Ridgerwood he has tackled a hard proposition. Gridley conspires with Flemister.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Ridgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Ridgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Ridgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Ridgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Bart shoots at Ridgerwood, whose life is saved by Dawson. Benson tells how his bridge timbers were stolen. The gang used the stolen engine.

Ridgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Ridgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Ridgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Ridgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Ridgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

Flemister invites Ridgerwood to meet him at Little Butte. Spies follow Ridgerwood. Eleanor and her friends wish to accompany Ridgerwood to Little Butte.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

CHAPTER XIX.

AT SILVER SWITCH.

RIDGERWOOD had thrust a bunch of letters and papers into his pocket to be ground through the business mill on the run to Little Butte.

It was his surreptitious transference of the rubber banded bunch of letters to the oblivion of the closed service car desk, observed by Miss Brewster, that gave the president's daughter an opportunity to make partial amends for having turned his business trip into a car party. Before the special was well out of the Angels yard she was commanding silence and laying down the law for the others.

"Listen a moment, all of you," she called. "We mustn't forget that this isn't a planned excursion for us; it's a business trip for Mr. Ridgerwood, and we are here by our own invitation. We must make ourselves small accordingly and not bother him. Understand?"

Van Lew laughed, spread his long arms and swept them all out toward the rear platform. But Miss Eleanor escaped at the door and went back to Ridgerwood.

"There, now," she whispered, "don't ever say that I can't do the really handsome thing when I try. Can you manage to work at all with these chatterers on the car?"

She was steadying herself against the swing of the car, with one shapely hand on the edge of the desk, and he covered it with one of his own.

"Yes, I can work," he asserted. "The one thing impossible is not to love you, Eleanor. It's hard enough when you are unkind; you mustn't make it harder by being what you used always to be to me."

"What a lover you are when you forget to be self conscious!" she said softly. None the less she freed the imprisoned hand with a hasty little jerk. Then she went on with playful austerity: "Now you are to do exactly what you were meaning to do when you didn't know we were coming with you. I'll make them all stay away from you just as long as I can."

She kept her promise so well that for an industrious hour Ridgerwood scarcely realized that he was not alone. When he came out on the rear platform Miss Brewster asked him how far it was to the canyon portal.

"Only a mile or two now," was Ridgerwood's rejoinder. "Williams has been making good time." And two minutes later the one car train, with the foaming torrent of the Timanyoni for its pathfinder, plunged between the narrow walls of the upper canyon and the race down the grade of the crooked water trail through the heart of the mountains began.

Miss Carolyn clung to the platform handrail, and once Ridgerwood thought he surprised Van Lew with his arm about her—thought it and immediately concluded that he was mistaken. Miriam Holcombe had the opposite corner of the platform, and Jefferis was making it his business to see to it that she was not entirely crushed by the grandeurs.

Miss Brewster, steadying herself by the knob of the closed door, was not overawed. She had seen Rocky mountain canyons at their best and their worst many times before. With her lips to Ridgerwood's ear she said: "Tell me, Howard, how soon should a chaperon begin to make a diversion? I'm only an apprentice, you know."

There was a small Pintsch globe in the hollow of the "umbrella roof," with its single burner turned down to a mere pea of light. Ridgerwood's answer was to reach up and flood the platform with a sudden glow of artificial radiance. The chorus of protest was immediate and reproachful.

"Oh, Mr. Ridgerwood, don't spoil the perfect moonlight that way!" cried Miss Doty, and the others echoed the beseeching.

"You'll get used to it in a minute," asserted Ridgerwood in good natured sarcasm. "It is so dark here in the canyon that I'm afraid some of you might fall overboard or get hit by the rocks or something."

"You can do the meanest things in the name of solicitude, Howard," Eleanor began, but before she could finish he had reached up and turned the gas off with a snap, saying, "All right; anything to please the children," after which, however, he spoke authoritatively to Van Lew and Jefferis. "Don't let your responsibilities lean out over the railing, you two. There are places below here where the rocks barely give the train room to pass."

"I'm not leaning out," said Miss Brewster, as if she resented his care taking, then for his ear alone, "But I shall if I want to."

"Not while I am here to prevent you."

"How?"

The special was rushing through the darkest of the high walled clefts in the lower part of the canyon. "This way," he said, his love suddenly breaking bounds, and he took her in his arms.

She freed herself quickly, breathless and indignantly reproachful.

"I am ashamed for you!" she panted. And then, with carefully calculated malice, "What if Herbert had been looking?"

"I shouldn't care if all the world had been looking," was the stubborn rejoinder, then passionately, "Tell me one thing before we go any further. Eleanor—have you given him the right to call me out?"

"How can you doubt it?" she said, but now she was laughing at him again.

There was safety only in flight, and he fled—back to his desk and the work thereon. The train came to a stand at Timanyoni, the first telegraph station in the shut in valley between the mountain ranges. A minute or two later the wheels began to revolve again and Bradford came in.

"More maverick railroading," he said disgustedly. "Timanyoni had his red light out, and when I asked for orders he said he hadn't any—thought maybe we'd want to ask for 'em ourselves, being as we was running wild."

"So he thoughtfully stopped us to give us the chance," snapped Ridgerwood in wrathful scorn. "What did you do?"

"Oh, as long as he had done it I had him call up the Angels dispatcher to find out where we were at. We're on 204's time, you know—ought to have met her here."

"Why didn't we?" asked the superintendent, taking the time card from its pigeonhole and glancing at train 204's schedule.

"She was late out of Red Butte; broke something and had to stop and tie it up; lost a half hour makin' her getaway."

"Then we reach Little Butte before 204 gets there. Is that it?"

"That's about the way the night dispatcher has it ciphered out. He gave the Timanyoni plug operator hot stuff for holdin' us up."

Ridgerwood shook his head. The artless simplicity of Red Butte Western methods, or unmethods, was dying hard—inexcusably hard.

"Does the night dispatcher happen to know just where 204 is at this present moment?" he inquired, with gentle irony.

Bradford laughed.

"I'd be willing to bet a piebald pinto against a no account yaller dog that he don't. But I reckon he won't be likely to let her get past Little Butte, comin' this way, when he has let us get by Timanyoni goin' t'other way."

"That's all right, Andy, but you'd better feel your way—pretty carefully too. From Point of Rocks you can see well down toward Little Butte. Tell Williams to watch for 204's headlight and if he sees it to take the siding at Silver Switch, the old Wire Silver spur."

Bradford nodded and when Ridgerwood reimmersed himself in his papers went forward to share Williams' watch in the cab of the 266.

Twenty minutes farther on the train slowed again, made a momentary stop and began to screech and grind heavily around a sharp curve. Ridgerwood looked out of the window at his right. The moon had gone behind a huge hill, a lantern was pricking a point in the shadows some little distance from the track, and the tumultuous river was no longer sweeping parallel with the embankment. He shut his desk and went to the rear platform, projecting himself into the group of sightseers just as the train stopped for the second time.

"Where are we now?" asked Miss Brewster, looking up at the dark mass of the hill whose forested ramparts loomed black in the near foreground.

"At Silver Switch," replied Ridgerwood, and when the bobbing lantern came nearer he called to the bearer of it, "What is it, Bradford?"

"The passenger, I reckon," was the answer. "Williams thought he saw it as we came around Point of Rocks, and he was afraid the dispatcher had got balled up some and let 'em get past Little Butte without a meet order."

For a moment the group on the railed platform was silent, and in the little interval a low, humming sound made itself felt rather than heard, a shuddering murmur, coming from all points of the compass at once, as it seemed, and filling the still night air with its vibrations.

"Williams was right!" rejoined the superintendent sharply. "She's coming!" And even as he spoke the white glare of an electric headlight burst into full view on the shelflike cutting along the northern face of the great hill, picking out the smallest details of the waiting special, the closed switch and the gleaming lines of the rails.

TIME IS RIPE FOR SEIZURE

Italy Prepared to Proceed With Arms Against Tripoli

HAS UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY

Ministry Backed by Press, but People Do Not Display Enthusiasm—Area Sought Comprises 400,000 Square Miles and Has Population of 1,000,000—Under Turkish Government Three and a Half Centuries

Rome, Sept. 14.—Premier Giolitti had a long conference with Minister of War Spingardi and Minister of Marine Cattelica regarding the Tripoli question. The prime minister, it is understood, said that if the Turkish government was not ready to recognize Italian influence over Tripoli under some form of a protectorate, the only recourse must be the military occupation of the province.

Both the minister of war and the minister of marine declared that everything was ready for an eventual expedition of troops, backed by the Italian navy. Indeed, the engineer corps already have made preparations to insure the occupation of the region should their services be required.

The Italian press urges the government not to allow the present occasion to sieze Tripoli to escape, pointing out that after a settlement is reached in the Mediterranean between France and Germany through Morocco, such an opportunity never will recur.

The Italian people as a whole do not display much enthusiasm over the prospects of Italy obtaining concessions in Tripoli, recalling former Italian colony disasters.

For a good many years Italian statesmen have been engaged in constructing a "Tripoli question," and it has been understood that in the event of the long anticipated division of the Turkish empire Italy would demand as her share at least that province (vilayet) which comprises about 400,000 square miles of desirable country bordering on the Mediterranean and bounded on the east by Egypt, on the west by Tunis and Algeria, and on the southeast and south by the Sahara.

The population is about 1,000,000, mostly Berbers, though there are many Jews. The Europeans number 5000, principally Maltese and Italians. There are practically no Turkish settlers.

The principal towns are Tripoli, the capital, with 30,000 inhabitants, and Benghazi, with 35,000. There are said to be about 10,000 Turkish troops in Tripoli. The capital is connected by cable with Malta.

Tripoli was settled by the Carthaginians and was captured by the Romans. Later it passed into the possession of the Vandals and the Greeks, and in the seventh century was conquered by the Arabs. Ferdinand the Catholic captured the city of Tripoli in 1510 and afterward it was the property of the Knights of St. John.

The country has been part of the Turkish empire since 1551, though for more than a century previous to 1835 the sultan's authority was practically non-existent and the country was a stronghold of pirates.

In 1815 an American expedition exacted reparation for injuries done to American commerce. In 1835 Turkey sent a strong expedition to Tripoli and has enforced her authority since then, though there have been several rebellions.

Another Aviator Killed

Paris, Sept. 14.—Lieutenant Chotard was killed while making an aeroplane flight at Villacoublay. A gust of wind capsized his machine. He fell from a height of 300 feet.

Proctor Beyond Recovery

Proctor, Vt., Sept. 14.—The condition of former Governor Proctor continues critical. Hope for his recovery has been practically abandoned.

MAY INVADE NEW ENGLAND

Insurgents Consider Opening of Headquarters at Boston

Washington, Sept. 14.—Opening of a New England headquarters by the insurgent Republicans is now being considered at the progressive headquarters here. Medill McCormick, in charge here, says the movement in New England is growing to such proportions and resulting in so much correspondence that it has become needful to open headquarters there. The proposed headquarters are likely to be in Boston if it is finally determined to establish them.

McCormick says that the reports that the progressives would turn to Justice Hughes has proved a protest against it are coming in from Republicans in such states as Ohio and New York, who are insisting on La Follette.

GREAT LAVA FLOOD POURS DOWN ETNA

Means Suffering For Hundreds of Thousands of People

Catania, Sept. 14.—The eruption of Mt. Etna is assuming the proportions of a real disaster. The lava stream, whose path crosses the railway line circling the volcano, is approaching the railway stations to the north, and especially threatening the depots at Molo and Alcantara, which have been abandoned.

A torrent of burning lava, estimated at 2000 feet wide and four feet deep, is pouring down the slope, moving about half a mile an hour. Everything in its way has been carried before it.

The eruption means great suffering for the peasantry. The slopes of Etna have an area of more than 400 square miles. There are sixty-five cities and villages in the entire area, and the number of inhabitants which obtain an excellent agricultural living from the fertile lava beds totals more than 300,000.

FAVORS COMPENSATION ACT

Foss Believes It Will Prove Beneficial to Both Sides

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 14.—There was a significant exchange of comment at the third annual governors' conference here when Governor Foss of Massachusetts, a multi-millionaire and an employer of thousands of men, had finished reading a paper on "Employers' Liability and Workingmen's Compensation."

Extremely radical in some of his expressions, there still was a broad current of sympathy with the trials of employers as they fight in modern competition for business; and at the same time an insistent demand that they do a larger measure of justice to their men.

NO REASON FOR IT

You are Shown the Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of serious kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that these ills can be cured. The following is convincing proof.

Calvin Porter, 150 Beaulah street, Whitman, Mass., says: "I am sorry that Doan's Kidney Pills did not come to my attention sooner for if they had, I would have been spared a great deal of suffering and expense. I suffered from a weak back for years and there was a constant, dull pain in my loins. I had to pass the kidney secretions too frequently, especially at night. As soon as I began to take Doan's Kidney Pills, I felt better and by the time I finished the contents of four boxes, I was entirely free from my troubles." (Statement given Oct. 6, 1908.)

A CONFIRMED ENDORSEMENT

Mr. Porter was interviewed by our representative on June 27, 1911 and he said: "I am always pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and you are welcome to continue the use of my former statement. I know that this remedy can be relied upon."

WAR ON CHINESE CENTRAL DYNASTY

Real Test of Power of Provincial Government

Washington, Sept. 14.—In the opinion of students of Oriental affairs, China is rapidly approaching a great crisis in her history. The uprising in Sze-Chuen province is expected to extend to other neighboring provinces and especially to the southward, where the Mongolian element has for many years been opposed to the reigning Manchu dynasty.

It is believed here that the government will be able to suppress the present disturbance, though the unforeseen disastrous flooding of the Yang-Tse valley is expected to drive thousands of the unfortunate natives, whose means of support have been destroyed, into the ranks of the revolutionaries.

But it is believed that the Sze-Chuen uprising is only the precursor of other outbreaks in different parts of the Flowery Kingdom, for the fact is that the struggle now going on is really a gigantic test of the relative strength and power of the central government as opposed to the provincial governments.

BRIEFS

George W. Jones is at Scituate beach for a few days' vacation trip.

The first meeting of the board of registrars of voters to revise the voting lists will be held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, Friday evening.

The Tuesday night trip of the Boston Floating Hospital was William B. Rice night in memory of the late William B. Rice of this city.

Harold Jennings, of Elm street, leaves this evening for Staunton, Virginia, to attend the famous military academy located there.

The funeral of Martin Coyle the workman who dropped dead at the Fore River yards Monday was held Wednesday afternoon from St. John's church. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

The Ledger has heard from several of the 500 young catalpa trees which it distributed last spring and most of the accounts are favorable as the trees are reported to be thrifty and growing finely. It will be only a few years before they will be good sized trees and in blossom.

A vote of thanks has been extended Robert Newcomb, A. Steward and Julius Fuller for their work in putting in a new bath room at the parsonage. Julius Fuller was appointed by the Epworth League to have charge of digging a trench from the house and did the entire work himself. All is now completed and is a credit to those who did it.

THE MOROCCAN IMBROGLIO

Reply of France In Hands of President For His Approval

Paris, Sept. 14.—The ultimatum of France to Germany's demand in connection with the Moroccan situation, which was prepared by Foreign Minister De Selves and approved by the cabinet, has been submitted to President Fallieres at Rambouillet, and when he has approved it, it will be sent to Germany.

The reply of France should be in the hands of Germany by the last of the week. It sets forth in the clearest possible manner France's position and pays particular attention to the necessity of maintaining commercial equality for all with the assurance to France of an absolutely free hand politically in Morocco.

PLACED ON PROBATION

Boy Charged With Breaking Before Court At Dedham

MAN SENTENCED

In the superior court at Dedham, Wednesday, Joseph McDonald, aged 17 years, of Quincy pleaded guilty to four counts for breaking and entering at Quincy and was placed on probation. McDonald agreed to make full restitution.. McDonald is the young man who broke into a number of places about City Square early in the summer, one of which was the five and ten cent store. He was arrested and quite a lot of the articles stolen were found on his person.

William J. Healey of Weymouth got a year in the house of correction for breaking and entering the house of Thomas P. Graney at Weymouth, June 3, and the larceny of a keg of beer valued at $1.50.

BIG FIRE IN COAL YARDS

Loss In Boston Blaze Is Upward of Quarter of a Million

Boston, Sept. 14.—Fire partially destroyed the wharf property of F. C. Warren and Batchelder Bros. on Fort Point channel, and the 80,000 tons of coal stored in the pockets.

After fighting desperately for more than an hour the army of firemen summoned by four alarms controlled the fire just when it seemed the flames would be swept by the brisk northerly wind through the heart of South Boston.

The damage to buildings and machinery is estimated at $50,000. Manager Hunter of Batchelder Bros. thought the loss to his firm alone would total over $250,000. The 80,000 tons of hard and canal coal belonging to both companies is saturated with salt water and still burning.

Seven firemen were overcome by smoke and gases. Four were knocked off into the water by bursting hose and falling debris, but were rescued uninjured by their comrades.

WILDING NOT TO PLAY.

Australia's Tennis Star Will Not Assist In Defending Davis Cup.

A. F. Wilding, who was a member of the Australasian defending team two years ago and who last July retained the British tennis championship title by defeating H. Roper Barrett at Wimbledon, announced recently that he would be unable to return to New Zealand to assist in defending the Davis cup this year.

Wilding is one of the greatest tennis players Australia ever produced. His absence will surely weaken the team.

Belmont Not to Race Abroad.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir: I beg to submit to you a feminine rooter's choice of a Quincy All Star Team. I find it hard to pick a pitcher to match the rest of the team, as most of Quincy's best pitchers have pitched away from home this season.

ALL STAR TEAM.

Barry, c, Manets Quincy.
Rice, p, Makaria.
Desmond, 1b, West Quincy.
Manning, 2b, Makaria.
Maccarty, ss, Manets.
W. Kane, 3b, Manets.
O'Rourke, lf, West Quincy.
Curtis, cf, Makaria.
Keohane, rf, Atlantic.
Substitutes: Galvin, O'Brien, West Quincy; Erickson, South Quincy.

Veritas.

Sporting editor;

The matter of picking an all Quincy team seems to me to be rather easy one, to anybody who has seen all the teams in the city play. All the stars are not included in my selection, for since only Quincy boys are to be picked, I think that the following are the best;

Allicon, Mohawks, catcher.
Williamson, Fore River Apprentices, catcher.
Comolli, South Quincy, first base.
E. Desmond, West Quincy, second base.
Gillis, Manets, short stop.
Fitzgerald, West Quincy, third base.
Berry, West Quincy, centre field.
Hoyt, Atlantic, right field.
Utility.
Curtis, Makaria.
McVey, St. John's A. A.
Fay, Atlantic.

Sporting Editor:

I think the following list of players is about the best that could be picked and it is safe to say that the members included would give a fine account of themselves, no matter who their opponents might be. All are local boys and would make a fast local team. They are as follows:

Duggan, West Quincy, catcher.
Knight, Adams A. A., pitcher.
Creswell, Manets, first base.
Nichol, Makaria, second base.
Mulligan, West Quincy, third base.
Gillis, Manets, thid base.
Curtis, Makaria left field.
Hoyt, Atlantic, centre field.
O'Rourke, West Quincy, right field.
Subs.
Grethe, Manets, pitcher.
McVey, St. John's outfield.

The coming contest at the Water street grounds is still the talk of the fans, and with favorable weather prevailing, a good crowd is sure to be on hand when the gong is sounded for the Atlantics and the Makarias to cross bats in the first game of the series to decide the baseball championship of Quincy. McIntyre and Fitzgerald will do the honors for the Ward six boys, while either Rice, or Penley will cover the mound for Charlie Ganzel's team, with either Troupe or H. Chapman on the receiving end.

Manager Keohane informs me that a large crowd of rooters will accompany his nine to the place of battle. "Ted" is anxious above all else to secure a victory over the Makarias, who have made his team suffer defeat twice this season.

The announcement to the effect that "Jack" Kolson will twirl for the Heptasophs next Saturday against the local council of the Knights of Columbus, has caused great anxiety among the members of this latter aggregation and every endeavor will be used to capture the cup which is at stake for the winner of the series.

Mullen will again do the honors for the chivalrous tossers and Allicon, who has played all the season with the Mohawks, will be on the other end to receive his benders. Considerable changes will be made in the lineups and the rubber game gives promise of being one of the best ever played at Merrymount Park.

The following, written by the sporting editor on the Herald, may be of interest to the many local fans who saw Nixon perform here last winter, when the boxing bouts at the Coliseum were in order. It may sound rather funny, yet it means much to Nixon, who is out to covet all the honors that lie within his power.

"Battling Nelson will not enter the ring to fight Billy Nixon with his wire whiskers in bloom next Tuesday night Nixon has been following the career of the battling Dane ever since he won the lightweight championship. Since Nelson lost the title there hasn't been much said about his wire-covered face but Nixon was not taking any chances and that he might not have to oppose the battler with his face framed in with barbed wire, he stipulated that Nelson enter the ring cleanly shaven. Nelson used to bring his face into great play in long distance contests, and the sand-papering that some of his opponents received form the battler's beard caused several of them to lose their heads and nerve.

A number of local runners will compete in the Brockton fair races next month. The local boys have done great work this year and it will not be surprising to see them capture honors at this coming attraction.

RUGG FOR CHIEF JUSTICE

Promotion For Youngest Member of Massachusetts Supreme Court

Boston, Sept. 14.—Governor Foss sprung a surprise on the public by sending to the executive council the name of Arthur P. Rugg of Worcester to be chief justice of the supreme judicial court, vice Marcus P. Knowlton of Springfield, who recently resigned because of failing eyesight.

Judge Rugg is a Republican and the youngest justice, both in years and in term of service, on the present supreme bench. He was appointed to that branch by Governor Guild, after a spirited contest between his friends and those of the late Justice Gaskill, also of Worcester, then on the superior bench, who thought that the latter ought to be promoted. Rugg is 49 years old.

ADDICTED TO OPIUM HABIT

Woman In a Chicago Court Puts Up a Lame Argument

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Mamie Cornell, 30 years old, arrested in a South Side place frequented by opium smokers, made an attempt to defend the use of the drug when arraigned before Municipal Judge Walker.

"I think everybody is entitled to a little pleasure in this world," the woman said. "I have used opium since I was 16 years old and it has never harmed me. It makes a person bright and clever and enables one to think quicker and clearer," she said, making a determined effort to control her trembling hands. She paid a $25 fine.

GIRL DRIVER THE FEATURE AT WEYMOUTH

Miss Grace E. Hagan Drove King Brino Mile In 2.21 1-2

The first day of the 47th annual cattle show and fair of the Weymouth agricultural and industrial society opened with a large attendance Thursday at South Weymouth. It was children's day and the public school officials allowed more than 600 children to attend.

The usual displays of a county fair, vegetables, fruits flowers, home cooking cattle, swine, and trotting horses were in evidence.

The trotting was a matinee cup meet under the auspices of the Old Colony gentlemen's driving club. A feature of the racing was the race against time of the gelding King Brino, driven by Miss Grace E. Hagan, 12 years old. The event was one mile to beat 2.28 1-4. After scoring twice Miss Hagan nodded for the word and the gelding went a mile without a skip in 2.21 1-2. Miss Hagan got a silver cup, a blue ribbon and a big ovation.

Altro L. made the fastest time of the day, winning three heats and a race in 1:09 1-2, 1:08 3-4 and 1:09. It took five heats in class B, the best racing of the afternoon, to decide the winner, and it required six heats in class D to decide who should have the cup. In the first heat of class B Budweiser was set back for interference and in the fourth heat India Panis was set back on account of an excessive use of the whip by the driver.

Today is Governor's day and both Gov. Foss and Lieut.-Gov. Frothingham were expected to be in attendance.

MEMBERS OF WARD FOUR IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION LISTEN TO STIRRING SPEECHES AT "SMOKE TALK" LAST NIGHT

Mayor Shea Says Co-operation Should Be The Standard For Future Development---Many Improvements Are Planned

St. Jean's hall in West Quincy was taxed to its utmost Thursday evening the occasion of a "smoke talk" given under the auspices of the Ward Four Improvement Association. Previous to the regular discussions that were scheduled for the event, there was a short business meeting of the organization, at which the reports of different committees were read and the general condition of the association put forth by the secretary. Stephen B. Little, a well known figure in that section of the city, was the presiding officer of the evening.

Before introducing the speakers of the evening, Mr. Little dwelt some length upon the many things that had been accomplished by the members of the organization during its short existence. He told of how enactments had been made by the Legisature to discontinue any further improvements on the section of the boulevard bordering on West Quincy. He then outlined the active work that was put into effect by the organization, with the result that the legislature reconsidered its action. He also mentioned an instance where the city council was forced to refrain from taking an action which the organization deemed disadvantageous tc the welfare of the ward four residents. Other minor things performed by the organization were dwelt upon at length and in bringing his remarks to a close he urged all to co-operate in the movement to better the ward.

The first speaker of the evening was Joseph H. Walker. Mr. Walker stated that he had not outlined any speech for the occasion, but that it would be a good thing to have as large a membership as possible in order that the organization might develop in a manner befitting it. He urged unity in action and warned the members against having recourse to any personal discussions. He predicted great things for the organization in the future and brought his remarks to a close by asking every member of the organization to put his shoulder to the wheel and help make ward four the banner one in the city.

He was followed by Albert Lakin, formerly a resident of ward one, but now a foremost agitator for the West Quincy residents. Mr. Lakin confined his remarks along the same lines as the previous speaker and exhorted the members of the organization to be as a unit whenever the interests of the ward four residents were at stake. He congratulated the members of the association in having among its list of members a number of men who were prominent in public life and he paid an especial tribute to the Mayor for the efficient manner in which he has performed the duties incumbent on his office, and for the interest, as well, that he has displayed in all the movements that concerned the development of the ward four section. He also insisted that efforts be used to have as many members as possible and asked all to lose no endeavors to lend their aid in the matters which were now before the body.

In the course of their remarks, all the speakers outlined the benefits that would accrue in the event of a car line being established from East Milton to the Granite street bridge. The matter of a five cent fare from West Quincy to Milton Lower Mills was given considerable attention, and from the arguments advanced, great anxiety is bound to prevail until something definite is done in this regard.

Ex-Representative Peter T. Fallon was the next speaker and proved to be very interesting in his remarks. He told of the action that had been taken by the Board of Trade in the matter and also stated that the afore mentioned organization was always considered the leading one when it came to a question of legislative controversy. He scored some of the members for not being present and took exceptions to a few remarks that had come to his ears. He told the members that they must be as a unit whenever anything is being contempated and said that all should adhere to whatever decision has been reached by the organization.

He was followed by Rev. T. C. Martin, the new pastor of the Hall Place M. E. church. It was Mr. Martin's initial appearance at the organization, but he assured the members that he would do all in his power to bring about any improvements that were conducive to the betterment of the section. He said he had heard much comment about the boys in that section of the city, but stated that he never came in contact with a more orderly crowd of youngsters. He congratulated the members that they belonged to a city whose voters did not tolerate the sale of liquor and to support his contention said that during his stay in Quincy he had not seen more than five or six men who were under the influence of liquor. Mr. Martin deplored the lack of civic pride that was rampant in that section.

The speaker told of the different methods of building adopted in Connecticut and of the pleasing appearance the state as a whole present. "I had heard so much about the Granite industry ofthis city, continued the speaker, that on my advent to it I expected to behold houses made of granite, fences supported by adornments of granite and granite steps in abundance. But imagine my surprise when my eyes encountered so many wooden houses, fences that had given evidences of careless regard and scarcely any granite steps at all." The speaker said that he did not want to censure the men, but thought that a suggestion along this line might be well worth consideration. He also said that the much talked of a missing link, the car line proposed. would mean much to him if it were established. He closed his remarks by urging all work along progressive lines and hoped that the organization would have a brilliant future.

Mayor William T. Shea followed him and proved to be the speaker of the evening upon whom the greatest attention centered. The Mayor took up the remarks advanced by Mr. Martin, and also said that there was a lack of pride too long evident among residents of that section. Whenever a visitor has occasion to visit this section of the city, we want him to go away with the satisfaction that he has seen the best part of Quincy, said the Mayor. Instead of having him feel inclined to criticise our buildings and the general appearance of our section, we desire to have every stranger feel that Ward Four has impressed him by its imposing appearance and the only way to bring this state of affairs about is to concentrate individual effort. Let every man of this organization stimulate an interest in such movements. Let him pay particular attention to the aesthetic beauty of the vicinity and let him devote his spare moments to the furtherance of this project. "His Honor dwelt at length upon many other improvements that could be effected by the organization. He urged all the young men of the vicinity to be enrolled in its membership. He advised that a committee be appointed to confer with the President of Bay State Street Railway. in order to secure the branch now called the "missing link." The Mayor also advocated a wide road leading to the centre of the city. "All other sections of the city are favored with a spacious entrance to the heart of the city," continued the Mayor." A

Crowley Heirs of No. Weymouth Receive Larger Award

In the United States court in Boston, Thursday, a verdict of $3,378 with interest from 1905, was returned in the case of the heirs of Nellie Crowley, of North Weymouth, against the United States government for damages for land taken in North Weymouth for the government magazine.

At the time the government seized the land, the estate was awarded $1,200. This award was unsatisfactory, however, and the case was taken to court, with the result above noted. At the hearing in the case, Frank Fessenden Crane and Frederick E. Tupper were the expert witnesses for the plaintiff.

Considerable interest was taken in this case, for the reason that all of the awards made by the government were considered very small but were accepted, in most cases, by the owners of land, taken, rather than to take an appeal to the courts. In the case of the Crowley heirs, however, the case was taken to the United States court.

INSTRUCTIVE TRIP OF COMMITTEE

The committee on Fire Department of the City Council, which visited Springfield, Wednesday, report a very fine trip. Leaving Quincy at 7.20 in a powerful automobile, the run was made to Springfield in about 4 hours. The committee saw much of interest. The return to Quincy was made in good order, home being reached at 11 P .M. The only drawback to the trip was the cold weather. Some of the party were almost frozen when home was reached.

LINEN SHOWER PROVES BIG SURPRISE

A jolly linen shower was given Miss June Collett, at her home on Wayland street, Thursday evening by members of the Dorothy Q. Lodge, I. O. O. L. and a few friends from Boston. The affair was given in honor of Miss Collett's approching marriage to Mr. Cook of Neponset and greatly surprised her. The gifts were many and combined beauty and utility.

During the evening Miss Clara E. Bennett read several fine selections and Miss Irma M. Douglass pleasingly rendered vocal solos. Ices, cake and punch were served and the party came to an end amid good wishes for the future happiness of the prospective bride.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mr. Bryan has called on Col Roosevelt and one can imagine the awkward and painful silences when two such diffident men get together.

Col. Astor is said to have offered clergymen $1,000 to perform his marriage ceremony, but any justice of the peace would do it for 50 cents.

Sugar is the highest in 22 years, butthis won't have much effect on some of the mixtures of sweetened flour that are worked off on the Consumer.

Upton Sinclair is charged with chewing a prune 20 minutes, but it's strange if a man can't practise the principles of fletcherism without being called to account for it.

Recent air ship fatalities are said to be due to mechanical defects, but also to the fact that when the Creator made man he supposed he would be satisfied to live on the ground.

Senator Bailey says a million a year would not tempt him to serve another term in the Senate. He well understands that a good name is better than great riches.

A dozen people are dead in New York from eating poisonous toadstools. This is the kind of thing that gives spice to the mushroom gathering fad.

Mr. Taft will deliver four speeches 115 times on his trip, but the one over which he should take the most pains is that delivered when the babies are brought on for him to kiss.

The New York World wants to have a special session of Congress called in October, but most of us are figuring on some way to nail up the capitol doors so that Congress can't get in and begin work Dec. 1.

WEATHER CHANGES.

Says the Boston Globe: Only about two months ago we were sweltering in torrid heat and now the season of frost is at hand. The weather varies in every climate, but sudden changes occur with startling frequency in New England and the variations this week are a good example of what may happen. The loss to the tobacco growers of Connecticut through frost is painfully illustrative of perils to the industrial and commercial world incident to the fluctuating mercury.

Growing crops are struggling to recover from the dry and hot weather of the early part of the season, and now that Jack Frost is attacking the fields the loss will be all the more keenly felt. It is to be hoped that corn and other important staple food crops will escape the icy nip for some weeks, as considerable growth is due in the rest of September.

TYPHOID VACCINATION.

After experiments covering several years the chief of staff of the United States army, Major General Leonard Wood, has issued an order to the effect that all officers and men in the army must be vaccinated against typhoid fever.

Up to the present time only about 17,000 officers and men have been vaccinated against the disease. No one was compelled to be, and many refused to voluntarily take the treatment. But under the new order it will be compulsory, and every member of the army will have to undergo the operation—if such it is.

The vaccination against typhoid fever is very similar to the process against smallpox A sort of viru s is used, and the person inoculated has a mild form of typhoid fever—so mild, however, that it is not noticeable to any degree save by the closest observation.

Of the seventeen thousand men so far vaccinated against typhoid, it is said that only in two instances were there serious results from the inoculation, and in neither case did death result. There have so far developed but four cases of typhoid fever among the seventeen thousand persons who have been vaccinated against it according to the reports, and not one of the four vaccinated persons who had the disease died. In fact, it is said that two of the cases were so mild there was some doubt about its being typhoid, while the other two patients quickly recovered.

The German army has been vaccinated against typhoid for some years and the English authorities have taken up the matter. Medical men generally are agreed that it is a good thing—almost a sure preventive of typhoid.

That there will be opposition in this country to so radical an order as that issued, goes without saying. There are a considerable number of people who do not believe in vaccination against smallpox and they have enough argument to back up their opposition. In every city where compulsory vaccination is proposed there is a fight between the authorities and those opposing it, and it is not reasonable to think that the authorities wil be able to enforce the order against typhoid fever than against smallpox.

THE BATTLES OF A WOMAN MAYOR.

The long controversy between Mrs. Ella Wilson, mayor of Hunnewell, Kan., and her refractory city council of men, have furnished much press copy from this once obscure Kansas town. Since Mrs. Wilson's election last spring the councilmen have declined to meet with her, or to confirm her appointments, hence no tax levy. Mrs. Wilson announces that she will fill the leading city offices with women.

The election of a woman to the chief magistracy of a city is an interesting experiment even from the view point of the anti-suffragist. A great many people who question the results of equal suffrage would still be disposed to place women in all elective and appointive offices to which they seem personally fitted.

Some people will be sincerely sorry that such an experiment seems to be going awry through a silly division of forces on sex lines. If Mrs. Wilson has encountered factious obstruction on the part of her council, she will find plenty of men who will espouse her cause, not only from chivalry, as because they want to see public business well done, and would just as soon have women mayors as women clerks, provided they could give the public cleaner streets and more efficient police.

Public sentiment has undergone a tremendous change since the time when a woman lost social caste even by so honorable an occupation as teaching, and since it was thought that girls would get brain fever, if they acquired the higher education of the colleges.

Now our office buildings in the cities are populated more largely by women than men. The girls show accuracy, speed, and personal business tact to a higher degree than the men whom they have outstripped. As farmers women display a peculiar gift for making things grow, and are handicapped only by physical limitations.

The chief obstacle in the way of women in public office will be their tendency to look at matters personally and from a viewpoint of sex. The world's work will never be more efficiently done by lining up one sex against another, as seems to be done in Hunnewell.

STRUCK BY TRAIN.

What came near being a fatal accident occurred at the South Braintree station Thursday afternoon when Miss Alice McAuliffe of Randolph was struck by a train about 5.45 o'clock. Miss McAuliffe who is employed as stenographer by the Rice & Hutchins Co. was hastening to the station to get a train for Randolph and while crossing the tracks just north of the Pearl street crossing was struck by the locomotive of a train coming in from the Plymouth branch. The young lady was thrown some distance and bystanders said her escape from death was miraculous.

Dr. F. W. Brett was called and after an examination ordered her removal to a hospital. The doctor accompanied Miss McAuliffe to Boston on the 6.03 train and at her request she was conveyed to the Carney hospital. At that institution the doctor found that the left thigh was broken about six inches above the knee and that there was some injury to her shoulder which could be determined only after examination by the x-ray. Miss McAuliffe is a popular young lady of Randolph and is highly spoken of by her employers.

TOWNS DESERTED AS LAVA ADVANCES

Discharges From Mt. Etna Increasing In Volume

Catania, Sept. 15.—The 20,000 inhabitants of Castiglione and Francaville have turned their backs on their homes, fleeing before the advancing flood of lava from Mt. Etna. Both towns are threatened with destruction.

The discharge from the craters and new fissures have increased in volume. The main stream pouring down the northeastern side of the volcano has made its way sluggishly about and over the foothills toward the base, crossed the railway and invaded the valley of the Alcantara.

Yesterday the front, fifty feet high and a third of a mile wide, broke over a long declivity, and gathering velocity forced the peasant dwellers in its path to make a hurried retreat. It spread through and burned the orange and lemon groves and, engulfing the many springs in the neighborhood, cut off the water supply of several villages.

FIGURES NOT YET STRAIGHT

Errors Attributed to Clerks of Seven Maine Towns

RESULT IS STILL IN DOUBT

Portland, Me., Sept. 15.—Hints of vote juggling are being made by members of the prohibition movement. The statement that the secretary of state has made as to the totals does not satisfy them. His figures give 134 against prohibition.

While no one has openly charged wrong doing, there have been insinuations of "dry" votes being "counted out."

The "dry" forces are the winners in last Monday's election, and the clause forever prohibiting the sale of liquor will remain in the constitution, according to a flat statement issued by The Associated Press.

This claim followed a day spent in comparing the press returns with the figures sent to the secretary of state at Augusta. The press majority is placed at 361.

Wth a single exception, the returns from the 521 cities, towns and plantations of the state have been verified. This exception is the town of Northport, which has 86 votes.

The total vote as given by the press tabulators is "for repeal" 60,280, "against repeal" 60,641 This finding, which has come after four days of suspense, is generally regarded as accurate.

Errors which the clerks of seven towns made in the reports they sent to the secretary of state are held to be responsible for the discrepancy between his figures and those of the press. Some declare that the methods in some of the polling places should be looked into.

The same tense feeling that has prevailed through Maine since the election is evident in the streets of Portland today. Just as they have done since Monday, the people clamor anxiously but vainly for definite information as to how the total vote really stood.

Governor Plaisted has hurried home from Spring Lake, N. J., that he might take a hand in the work of establishing the true vote.

When asked as to any difficulty that might arise over the claim that errors exisfed in the figures sent to the office of the secretary of state by some of the town clerks, the governor said: "The council and myself will desire but one thing, the choice of the people. It matters not which side it favors. When the votes are passed upon and given officially the people may rest assured they will be correct. The result will not be based upon any technicality that may arise."

Governor Plaisted stated that he would call a meeting of his council so that the canvass of the official returns might be made, and a report issued at the earliest opportunity.

"It may be several days before we can issue our official statement, for owing to the closeness of the election, the votes will have to be passed upon with extreme care," he said.

KING SENT TO HOSPITAL

Life In State Prison Does Not Agree With Boston Promoter

Boston, Sept. 15.—Cardenio F. King, former promoter in this city, was removed yesterday afternoon from state prison, where he was serving from ten to fourteen years for larceny after conviction upon many counts, to the state hospital at Bridgewater, for treatment.

King will be kept at the hospital for an indefinite period, or until his physical condition shows such improvement that is able to work. Then he will be taken back to the prison. He has served more than two years there. Ever since he was committed he has been suffering from a malady which can only be relieved by surgery.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

ABNORMAL WEATHER

Mercury Away Down In Maine and Away Up In the West.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The cold wave continued Thursday in the east, with temperatures of 26 degrees at Greenville, Me., and Northfield, Vt., the lowest reported. At many points in New England and the middle Atlantic states the mercury hovered within a few degrees of the record for September.

A warm wave is in the wake of this abnormal weather, and is expected by the weather experts to spread over the northern and central states east of the Mississippi river by tonight.

Meantime the hot wave continues in Kansas and in the western plains and gulf states, where almost the hot weather record for that section was scored.

CHINESE ADMIRAL GOES TO BEVERLY

Ching Makes a Formal Call on President Taft

Boston, Sept. 15.—Rear Admiral Ching Pih Kwang, commanding the Hai Chi, the first Chinese cruiser built, and holding the rank of second in command of the Chinese navy, went from Boston to Beverly yesterday afternoon and was received at Paramatta by President Taft. The admiral was accompanied by his staff, also by Yung Kwai, charge d'affaires at the Chinese legation, Washington. The reception by the president was marked by all the formal ceremony of official affairs.

Admiral Ching returned late yesterday afternoon and went to the Hotel Somerset, where he and his suite were quartered during their brief stay in Boston. They left this morning for New York.

The admiral is a small man, very quiet and extremely courteous. He speaks perfect English and is well posted on international affairs. The hustle and bustle that everybody in Boston seems to indulge in impressed him greatly. Boston appeared like a gigantic beehive to him, he said.

DE GOGORZA'S MARRIAGE

Church Doubts That He Was Free When He Wedded Emma Eames

New York, Sept. 16.—Unless the wireless has already broken the news, Mme. Emma Eames, the opera singer, and her husband, Emilio De Gogorza, will learn when they arrive in New York on the steamer La Lorraine that Archbishop Amette of Paris has ordered a new inquiry into the circumstances that preceded their marriage by a Roman Catholic priest on July 12.

The inquiry will revolve around De Gogorza, and has as its object to determine whether he was a single man in the eyes of the church, the presumption being that if his marriage to the first Mme. De Gogorza was only a civil proceeding he stands excused, but if it had the sanction of the Roman Catholic church the status may be different.

MRS. MONKS GETS DIVORCE

Husband Was Witness In Famous Bram Sea Murder Case

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 15.—Lester H. Monks, the principal witness in the Bram sea murder case fifteen years ago, is divorced from his wife by the decree of Judge Quinn, on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

The divorce was uncontested. She was granted the custody of their two children, David, 15, and Fredericka, 11. A physician appeared and testified to the cruelty allegation.

Monks was a sophomore at Harvard when he took a voyage for his health on the bark Herbert W. Fuller. His testimony resulted in the conviction of Thomas Bram for the murder of the captain, the mate and the captain's wife. Bram was sentenced to life imprisonment. The couple were married at Washington in 1895.

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day receipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

Changeable Effects In Soft Colorings Shown In Fall Modes.

FELT HATS CARRY OUT IDEA.

Gauzes and Thin Materials Lend Themselves Charmingly to These Soap Bubble and Rainbow Surfaces. Fichus to Continue Popular.

It looks very much as though the majority of our clothes this fall would be changeable in color. This idea is already beginning abroad and is quite the moment's madness among the women who are expected to exploit something new each month. At the coronation in London a great number of gowns, hats, wraps, parasols and stockings were worn that were changeable and iridescent.

There is no doubt that this novelty will be greeted with quite a good deal of enthusiasm. There may be many mistakes made in choosing unbecoming and ungraceful colors, but the amateur can be more safely relied upon to do this than she could to choose among the vivid colors such as red, blue, green and black, that have been forced upon her for the last two years.

Mind you, these changeable tones will not be vivid. There is no splash of opposing colors, such as in plaid or stripes or checks. The mingling is very well done by artistic dyers, and the fabric simply looks one color in one light and one color in another.

Women have been delighted with the effect as already seen in chiffon cloth and in gauzes. They prevailed last winter among those who dressed exceedingly well, and the effect was alluring. The gauzes lend themselves admirably to the changing lights and shadows of mingled tones, and as they were draped over solid colors the effect was not startling.

A soap bubble is always less vivid than a rainbow, and so it is that a changeable surface is far less conspicuous than a well defined one in more than one color.

Felt hats, it is said, will carry out the idea, and instead of being dyed in a solid color will be done in two or three mingled ones and then trimmed in changeable satin or velvet ribbons.

Extremely attractive is the fichu pictured—a new model that will be much seen during the fall and winter season.

A GIRL'S ROOM.

Should Be a "Homey Looking," Cozy Apartment.

A girl can learn nothing more useful than the simple trick of having her own room beautiful, attractive and clean. It is not always possible to have fine furniture, but one can have a "homey looking" room. One thing is absolutely necessary, a room must be clean. A few pictures, clean bedspreads, pretty linen dresser pieces and chair cushions are necessary. Cover the trunk (if kept in the room) with a cretonne cover, and have a scrap basket to hold little odds and ends, which must be burned. On the table have well selected books and magazines. Keep gay postal cards in a neat postal card book. Do not decorate the walls with them, for, pretty as many are, they soon hang crooked and make a room look untidy. Have a place for shoes, for if anything makes a room upset it is a pair of tan shoes lying pigeontoed under the bed and another pair of black ones under the dresser. Keep the closet in order so that when the door is opened you will not be ashamed to have any one see how you keep your clothes. If you put thing away as you use them you can have a room like this. Have one palm or fern grace your room, and if it dies get a new one.

Black In Furnishing.

Quite a number of people are using black largely in the furnishing and decoration of their rooms just now. Some of the wall papers with flowers on a black background are delightful, but as they are expensive they cannot be within the reach of all.

People who do not go in for black wall papers or customs or carpets contrive to get touches of black in some other way. Black iron stair rods, for instance, instead of brass ones look very well against crimson stair carpets.

The demand for old black lacquer furniture has sent the prices soaring up, and old black Wedgwood teapots are being taken out of china cabinets by people who are lucky enough to possess them and made useful as well as ornamental once again.

CLEANING HOUSE.

Practical Ways of Making Work Easy and Successful.

If floors are much stained and cannot be done over wipe off carefully with gasoline, then rub to polish with a mixture of half a pound of paraffin and a quarter pound of beeswax melted and mixed when hot with four tablespoonfuls of turpentine. Beat until cold. Apply with flannel, rub with another piece and polish with a woolen covered with wool padding and use velveteen if you have no regular floor polisher.

Dark woodwork should be wiped off with warm soapsuds or a little gasoline and water, wiped dry, then polished dry, then polished with a little liquid veneer or any good furniture polish or a teaspoonful of vinegar or two of olive oil. Apply polish with one cheesecloth and rub with chamois. This same polish is good for furniture.

Soap is apt to yellow white paint, and if soapy water is not rinsed well it will leave it streaky. Bad spots can be wiped off with a rag dipped in kerosene or with a little whiting damped with alcohol. Do not use ammonia on your woodwork.

If you do not superintend the washing of your own fine china insist upon the maid using a rubber pad in bottom of dishpan and not putting in too many pieces at a time.

Yellowed ivory can be whitened with safety by washing well with hot soapsuds and put white wet in hot sunshine for several hours. Repeat for days, if necessary. Rubbing with a fine emery paper and polishing with chamois are also good.

Have a good carpet soap for rugs and carpets or use a fine olive oil soap, scrub well with the lather, rinse twice, once in lukewarm water, then in cold. Rub until nearly dry, then hang in air.

Brass can be polished by rubbing with a mixture of powdered chalk—precipitate kind used for tooth powder—rubbed into a paste with lemon juice. Let it dry on and polish with a chamois. There is an excellent red pomade that is a good brass cleaner.

"You seem to have a good deal of faith in doctors," said the friend of the sick man.

"I have," was the reply;" a doctor would be foolish to let a good customer like me die."

"I don't see," said the old man, "why chopping wood isn't as good exercise and just as enjoyable as playing golf."

"It is the walking between strokes that makes golf so valuable as exercise," explained the boy.

"That equalizes matters and gives the legs the exercise that they need."

Thus it happened that the old man went out into the yard and placed sticks of wood at intervals all around it, after which he handed the boy an axe and told him to play the full course.—Chicago Post.

SISTER SADIE'S BODY EXHUMED

Autopsy Proves That She Was a Hopeless Consumptive

BEGGED FOR PAINLESS DEATH

Those Who Administered Chloroform Express Readiness to Pay Any Penalty Law May Demand—Hornet Stings and Fever Contracted but a Few Days Before Death Added to Misery of Sick Woman

Kissimee, Fla., Sept. 15.—The body of Sister Sadie L. Merchant, the Shaker, whose sufferings Sister Elizabeth Sears and Brother Egbert B. Gillette ended by killing her with chloroform, was exhumed. County Judge Parker, Sheriff Broatt and Prosecuting Attorney Jones went to the little Shaker colony near Ashton, nine miles from here, and the exhumation was made under their eyes.

An autopsy absolutely disproved some wild rumors about the woman, whose religion taught her first of all to be pure in thought and deed. It proved, too, that her body was filled with tubercles; that she had tuberculosis in an advanced stage.

The internal organs are being analyzed in an attempt to determine if any other poison than chloroform was administered to give her euthanasia, the peaceful, painless death for which she begged Sister Elizabeth and Brother Gillette. The inquest will be held in ten days.

The general impression is that the two Shakers told the truth about Sister Sadie's death. It was plain while they were free that they felt profoundly the position in which their act had placed them. Yet they declared composedly they had done only that which they believed to be an act of mercy and expressed their readiness to pay any penalty the law may demand.

Sister Elizabeth and Brother Gillette have returned to the colony and they will be permitted to continue the quiet routine of their lives until November, when the grand jury will decide whether they shall be put on trial.

Sister Sadie was buried in the colony grounds by Gillette, aided by Sister Amanda Tiffany, a Shaker. Sister Sadie formerly lived in Watertown, N. Y., it is said. A victim of tuberculosis, and one of her lungs destroyed, she came to this county about seven years ago.

For some months she was an inmate of a sanitorium at Narcosse. This institution, however, was abandoned and Sister Sadie, who had no money, was taken in by the Shakers, who seemed to vie with each other in giving her every comfort and attention that human sympathy could offer. The invalid's health improved, and she soon became a useful member of the colony, which had dwindled to but four persons beside herself.

The Shakers are noted for their thrift and they raise vegetables and pineapples that are the pride of the county, and in this work Sadie took active part.

Two or three days before her death Sister Sadie was in the pinery spreading poison to destroy rabbits which had been raiding the pineapples. She was stung by hornets and suffered so much pain that she took to her bed. Fever followed, and in her suffering, augmented by the ravages of tuberculosis, she implored Sister Elizabeth and Brother Gillette to let her "go out of the body" peacefully. They yielded to her prayers, finally.

Providence, Sept. 15.—For stealing 25 cents' worth of goods when he had $121 in his pockets, James Mackey, aged 35, a Westerly farmer, was fined $15 in the Sixth district court.

In his pockets at the time of his arrest were pencils valued at 10 cents and a cake of soap worth 15 cents, which a clerk of a Weybosset street store said had been shoplifted. Mackey pleaded guilty and was $106 to the good when he left the courtroom.

Charges of Accepting Bribes to Be Made by Opponents

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 15.—Leaders of the opposition to Governor Blease are getting evidence as a basis for impeachment proceedings which it is positively asserted will be filed against him when the legislature convenes in January.

It is said that the specific charges will be accepting bribes when a member of the state senate, and being a lobbyist in the employ of the whisky dealers and corporate interests while a member of the state senate. Other forms of moral turpitude are also mentioned.

In a speech at Spartanburg Blease said that if he were impeached and removed from the office of governor, he would run for and be elected to the United States senate.

The premier's assailant was arrested. The two bullets were fired from behind by a lawyer named Bogrof. The audience tried to lynch the assassin. Some reports have it that a musician also was wounded.

The minister of finance, M. Kokovsoff, was sitting beside the premier at the time of the attack.

"COPPER KING" IS BANKRUPT

Reginal Ward In Financial Distress In London

SAYS IT IS BUT TEMPORARY

Former Bostonian, Once a Pack Peddler In Hub Suburbs, Amassed Fortune as Daring Speculator—"Tips" to Titled Personages In England Quickly Gained His Entrance Into Exclusive Society

London, Sept. 15.—The financial affairs of Reginald H. Ward, who at one time, in the role of a "copper king," figured prominently in certain moneyed circles of this city, has been placed in the hands of an official receiver in bankruptcy. No statement of the assets and liabilities is available yet.

Ward explains that extensive declines in copper properties in which he is interested were responsible for his embarrassment, which he maintains is but temporary. He intends, he says, to continue in business.

The story of Reginald H. Ward reads more like fiction than fact; indeed, his life has been a romance of destiny, and there can be little doubt that his stars came of the kindes, for almost all good things came his way.

He has been one of the most conspicuous figures in London and bears not only the title of count, but also that of copper king, as he first floated copper stocks in London and made many members of the peerage rich. And he was a friend of King Edward of England.

He is now only 49 years of age, and thirty-four years ago he was tramping through the suburbs of Boston with a pack basket filled with pins, needles, thread and tape. Later he had reached a more ambitious stage of peddling and sold patent ironing boards from door to door.

He met with usual rebuffs that peddlers receive, but those who turned him from the door with a sharp word little thought that the young man would in a comparatively few years have all London at his feet and be himself a polished gentleman on the topmost wave of English high life, with even some kings and numerous princes at his bidding and holding a place in society so far above them that they could never hope even to be on its outermost fringe.

Ward is a Bostonian and a great-grandson of General Artemas Ward of revolutionary fame. In 1898 he moved to London, where he acquired the papal title of "count." By daring and successful speculation he materially increased his fortune. He married Miss Edyth Newcomb of Kentucky in 1889. Mrs. Ward obtained a divorce four years later.

Ward was born in Newton, Mass., in 1862. He is also a grandnephew of David Henshaw, one time secretary of the United States navy.

After his experience as a pack peddler, Ward soon found means wherewith to speculate in copper stocks on State street, Boston. Here began his meteoric financial career, which at one time gave him command over millions. Ward organized the banking firm of Clark, Ward & Co. of Boston and New York and later Ward & Co. of London. Successful in Boston, Ward went to New York, where he continued to be known as one of the most convincing of promoters of mining stocks. He was also famous for his dinners and for his extremely stylish dress.

In 1898 he left New York for London, where he was welcomed as the "copper king" of America and where his "tips" to titled personages in England quickly gained his entry into the best society. He was a most lavish entertainer, although his title of "count," conferred upon him by the pope, was never taken seriously in English society.

"What will his name be?" was asked Senator Crane. This question the senator refused to answer.

Trans-Atlantic Cable Business

Traffic Chart of Western Union, Anglo-American and Direct U. S. Cable Business, Showing Capacity of the Cables and the Proportion Now Utilized.

Proposed Modification of Existing Arrangements

A provisional modification of an arrangement which has existed for many years has been reached between the Western Union Telegraph Company, The Anglo-American Cable Company and the Direct U. S. Cable Company, under which the cable systems of these companies now worked exclusively in business connection with each other, but operated and maintained separately, will be operated in direct physical connection with each other and with the Western Union land system.

Two objects are to be attained by this arrangement:

First, more efficient and economical operation.

Second, the introduction of new forms of service to the advantage of the public.

The Trans-Atlantic Cable Situation and Competition

The trans-Atlantic cable situation is as follows:

The Mackay group of seven cables, including the German cables, owned by or worked in physical connection with the telegraph lines of that company form one system.

The French cables comprise an independent system, using both the Western Union and the Mackay land lines for their United States connection.

In competition with these is the Western Union group of cables, eight in all, owned by three separate companies, two of which are British companies owning five of the eight cables.

Two only of the British owned cables terminate in the United States and all of them are entirely dependent on the Western Union for their connection with any telegraph system, or for their reaching any centre of business, and are now worked exclusively, so far as business is concerned, with the Western Union.

Efficiency Increased, Waste Prevented

The proposed arrangement between the Western Union, the Anglo-American and the Direct U. S. companies will bring the eight cables of the three companies under one operating control. The consequent increase in effectiveness and economy will place the Western Union in a position to offer certain advantages in cable service not now enjoyed by the public.

The other way open to enable the Western Union to make such improvements and introduce such new services as it proposes to do, would be to lay new cables. This would seem to be the height of folly. Duplication of the existing trans-Atlantic cable facilities at a cost of many millions, when there are more than ample facilities for all business, would put an unnecessary financial burden upon an already fully burdened business and would probably postpone the reduction of rates or introduction of new services.

Limited Business Hours and Idle Facilities

As at present carried on, the trans-Atlantic cable business is practically all flash service, i. e. instantaneous. Owing to the difference in time, there are only a few business hours of the day common to both sides and during these hours at least 75% of the cable business is done. This is demonstrated by the accompanying chart.

In the interests of international business nothing should be done to interfere in any way with the so-called flash or instantaneous service, and the lines should be kept clear to accommodate such messages during the few business hours common to both countries; but to continue to confine the cables to this class of service, as at present, will utilize only about 25% of the existing capacity of millions of property and places on that limited service all the capital, maintenance and operating charges.

The limited time and the character of the business, if best results are to be obtained, demand direct cable circuits between principal centres of the two sides of the Atlantic, as well as special circuits devoted to special business.

Efficient Service Requires Sufficient Facilities

To meet these requirements it is essential not only that there be at all times sufficient cable facilities, under one control, but that they should be operated interchangeably with each other and in close physical connection with land lines as one system. Ample spare facilities are necessary to provide against the very frequent cable interruptions.

Neither the Western Union nor any one of the companies of the Western Union group has, independently of the others, facilities enough to handle the business which at times any one company might be called upon to take care of, because of some particular rush of business, or because of some cable interruption. Nor could any one company furnish all the direct circuits necessary for efficient service, although the combined facilities of these companies are ample if they could be used supplementary to each other and interchangeably.

As it is, each company operates its own cables through separate and distinct offices and under separate and distinct management. All interchange of business is by actual transfer of the business from one company to the other, with the consequent delay and interruption of a service in which seconds are valuable.

Daily and Week-end Cable Letters

So soon as the proposed arrangement goes into effect, the Western Union purposes, with the consent of the British Post Office Department, to introduce at least two new features or services in addition to the proposed deferred rate—the

DAILY CABLE LETTER and the
WEEK-END CABLE LETTER

at a very low rate for cable service only. This will enable the public to save the six to eight days consumed in the trans-Atlantic passage of mails.

Monopoly of Cable Business Impossible

There is no cable monopoly possible. The three systems—the Western Union, the French and the Mackay—will continue to exist.

The Mackay Companies is a holding organization with no physical property, but exercising through stock ownership, lease or contract, operating control of various companies owning land lines and cables which make up the Mackay System. Through this control all the various properties are operated as one system to great advantage in service over what could be given by these same companies if operated separately.

The French cables form another system.

The Western Union System, under the proposed arrangement for one operating control over the present segregated units, will be enabled to make two distinct advances in the trans-Atlantic cable business:

1—BETTER SERVICE. This will be insured by more efficient and economical working resulting from single direction over the operations of both cables and land lines.

2—PUBLIC ADVANTAGES. The greater part of the cable capacity has been and is now unutilized. It will continue to lie dormant and unutilized under existing conditions and traditions. The Western Union purposes to make these wasted facilities useful to the public by means of new kinds of cable service.

In addition, the Western Union intends to nationalize its land lines by opening them to all trans-Atlantic cable companies.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By

FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

With this powerful spot light to project its cone of dazzling brilliance upon the scene, the watchers on the railed platform of the superintendent's service car saw every detail in the swift outworking of the tragic spectacle for which the hill facing curve was the stage setting.

When the oncoming passenger train was within three or four hundred yards of the spur track switch and racing toward it at full speed, a man, who seemed to the onlookers to rise up out of the ground in the train's path, ran down the track to meet the uprushing headlight, waving his arms frantically in the stop signal. For an instant that seemed an age the passenger engineer made no sign. Then came a short, sharp whistle scream, a spewing of sparks from railhead and tire at the clip of the emergency brakes, a crash as of the ripping asunder of the mechanical soul and body, and a wrecked train lay tilted at an angle of 45 degrees against the bank of the hillside cutting.

It was a moment for action rather than for words, and when he cleared the platform hand rail and dropped, running, Lidgerwood was only the fraction of a second ahead of Van Lew and Jefferis. With Bradford swinging his lantern for Williams and his fireman to come on, the four men were at the wreck before the cries of fright and agony had broken out upon the awful stillness following the crash.

There was quick work and heartbreaking to be done and, for the first few critical minutes, a terrible lack of hands to do it. Cranford, the engineer, was still in his cab, pinned down by the coal which had shifted forward at the shock of the sudden stop. In the wreck of the tender, the ironwork of which was rammed into shapeless crumplings by the upreared trucks of the baggage car, lay the fireman, past human help, as a hasty side swing of Bradford's lantern showed.

The baggage car, riding high upon the crushed tender, was body whole, but the smoker, day coach and sleeper were all more or less shattered, with the smoking car already beginning to blaze from the broken lamps. It was a crisis to call out the best in any gift of leadership, and Lidgerwood's genius for swift and effective organization came out strong under the hammer blow of the occasion.

"Stay here with Bradford and Jefferis and get that engineer out!" he called to Van Lew. Then, with arms outspread, he charged down upon the train's company, escaping as it could through the broken windows of the cars. "This way, every man of you!" he yelled, his shout dominating the clamor of cries, crashing glass and hissing steam. "The fire's what we've got to fight! Line up down to the river and pass water in anything you can get hold of! Here, Groner"—to the train conductor, who was picking himself up out of the ditch into which the shock had thrown him—"send somebody to the Pullman for blankets. Jump for it, man, before this fire gets headway!"

Luckily there were by this time plenty of willing hands to help. The Timanyoni is a man's country, and there were few women in the train's passenger list. Quickly a line was formed to the nearby margin of the river, and water, in hats, in buckets improvised out of pieces of tin torn from the wrecked car roofs, in saturated coats, cushion covers and Pullman blankets, hissed upon the fire, beat it down and presently extinguished it.

Then the work of extricating the imprisoned ones began, light for it being obtained by the backing of Williams' engine to the main line above the switch so that the headlight played upon the scene.

Lidgerwood was fairly in the thick of the rescue work when Miss Brewster, walking down the track from the service car and bringing the two young women, who were afraid to be left behind, launched herself and her companions into the midst of the nerve racking horror.

"Give us something to do," she commanded when he would have sent them back, and he changed his mind and set them at work binding up wounds and caring for the injured quite as if they had been trained nurses sent from heaven at the opportune moment.

In a very little time the length and breadth of the disaster were fully known and its consequences alleviated so far as they might be with the means at hand. There were three killed outright in the smoker, two in the half filled day coach and none in the sleeper, six in all, including the fireman pinned beneath the wreck of the tender. Cranford, the engineer, was dug out of his coal covered grave by Van Lew and Jefferis badly burned and bruised, but still living, and there were a score of other woundings, more or less dreadful.

Red Butte was the nearest point from which a relief train could be sent, and Lidgerwood promptly cut the telegraph wire, connected his pocket set of instruments and sent in the call for help. That done he transferred the pocket relay to the other end of the cut wire and called up the night dispatcher at Angels. Fortunately McCloskey and Dawson were just in with the two wrecking trains from the Crosswater hills, and the superintendent ordered Dawson to come out immediately with his train and a fresh crew if it could be obtained.

Dawson took the wire and replied in person. His crew was good for another tussle, he said, and his train was still in readiness. He would start west at once or the moment the dispatcher could clear for him and would be at Silver Switch as soon as the intervening miles would permit.

CHAPTER XX.

THE CHALLENGE.

ELEANOR BREWSTER and her guests were grouped beside Lidgerwood when he disconnected the pocket set from the cut wire and temporarily repaired the break. The service car had been turned into a makeshift hospital for the wounded, and the car party was homeless.

"We are all waiting to say how sorry we are that we insisted on coming and thus adding to your responsibilities, Howard," said the president's daughter, and now there was no trace of mockery in her voice.

His answer was entirely sympathetic and grateful.

"I'm only sorry that you have been obliged to see and take part in such a frightful horror, that's all. As for your being in the way—it's quite the other thing. Cranford owes his life to Mr. Van Lew and Jefferis, and as for you three," including Eleanor and the two young women, "your work is beyond any praise of mine. I'm anxious now merely because I don't know what to do with you while we wait for the relief train to come."

"Ignore us completely," said Eleanor promptly. "We are going over to that little level place by the sidetrack and make a campfire. We were just waiting to be comfortably forgiven for having burdened you with a pleasure party at such a time."

"We couldn't foresee this, any of us," he made haste to say. "Now, if you'll do what you suggested—go and build a fire to wait by—I hope it won't be very long."

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

For the opening of the regular season at the Majestic Theatre, the Aborn Opera Company, for two weeks only, commencing September 18th, in the mammoth revival of the Paris version of Balfe's lyric drama, "The Bohemian Girl" (in English). This magnificent production was originally produced at Boston's new Opera House last year, and has since proved one of the truly great successes of the times, in every city where it has been presented, carrying a full grand opera complement—soloists, chorus corps de ballet, and upwards of one hundred and fifty people—for this, their twentieth century revival of one of the most famous operatic festivals of the French Second Empire, and which upon its original production at the Theatre Lyric, in Paris, won for the famous Irish composer, Michael William Balfe, the coveted decoration of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, bestowed upon him by Napoleon III.

Never before in the history of the American stage has Balfe's beautiful masterpiece been witnessed in the version prepared by the composer for the great sixty-nine in Paris some sixteen years following the first production of the old version in London, and so familiar to American audiences.

This engagement is for two weeks only beginning Monday, Sept 18, with matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

Capacity audiences have been the rule since the beginning of the engagement of "Over Night," and the rollicking farce-comedy is undoubtedly a pronounced success. Next Monday evening it begins its seventh week, with no evidence of abatement either in attendance or enthusiasm. Created for laughing purposes only, it certainly fills the bill to the limit, for from the moment the curtain arises on the first scene of the opening act until the finale the audience is convulsed. It all happens over night and hinges upon the blunders of two newly married couples on their honeymoon. From the moment that they set foot upon the steamer, and make the mistake about their baggage, whereby the husband of one and the wife of the other start up the Hudson, until the last curtain falls on their escapades are happily explained, there is laughter and fun in volumes, and the audience is over-whelmed.

Undoubtedly Little Margaret Lawrence and little Ernest Truex, two of the newlyweds, furnish the largest portion of the fun, but by no means all of it, for the other bridal couple and the hotel clerk contribute to the risibilities in no small grade. From first to last "Over Night" is funny—egregiously funny—and it is bound to get you for it "gets over the footlights" and twines itself about the audience as few farce-comedies have done in Boston for many a day.

NATIONAL THEATRE

Monday evening, the first preformance will be given at the new National Theatre, the largest theatre in the world. A great ministral street parade will start from in front of the theatre at noon and march through the streets. In the evening a band concert will be given in front of the theatre from seven to eight o'clock.

An all-star bill has been arranged for the opening week. It will be headed by the National-Boston consolidated modern minstrels with Hughie Dougherty and Lew Benedict, the two famous veterans of minstralsey. The National theatre has indeed been fortunate in securing these men for the opening week. By urgent request Mr. Dougherty will sing the famous and never-to-be forgotten melody "Evelina"

Out of town patrons will find the National Theatre easy to reach. All Tremont street cars pass the door, and the theatre is but a short distance from the Dover street elevated station and the Back Bay station. The seating arrangement of the theatre is such that an excellent view of the stage can be had from every part of the house. The five cent seats in the second balcony are unquestionably without an equal anywhere for the price.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

"Beverly of Graustark," a dramatization of George Barr McCutcheon's novel of the same name, will have its first production at the Castle Square on Monday. As its title suggests, it is a sequel to "Graustark," but it tells a complete tale in itself. Its scenes are laid in a mythical kingdom, and in incident and action it is of the class of "The Prisoner of Zenda," equalling that famous drama both in humor and in romance. It all concerns the fortunes of an American heiress who is travelling through Europe. On the way from St. Petersburg to Graustark, she is waylaid by a band of outlaws, and the leader having saved her life at the risk of his own thereafter plays a large part in the remaining acts.

The play as a whole is filled with incident and picturesque emotion, and its sentiment and love romance are among its most attractive features. Its production on the Castle Square stage will be an event, and the cast will be carefully selected and well arranged. John Craig, Mary Young, Gertrude Binley, Morgan Wallace and George Hassell will have important roles. "Beverly of Graustark" will be given for only one week.

B. F. KEITH'S

After a sensational three years' tour of the globe, during which period he has covered himself with fresh laurels in every civilized land under the sun, Harry Houdini, the world famous jail breaker returns to B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. Since his last appearance here Houdini has demonstrated that it is practically impossible for bolts, bars, locks, and stone of iron walls to hold him captive. During his stay in Holland Houdini escaped from a cell in the Amsterdam city prison where he had been shackled to the wall by the local police; in St. Petersburg he escaped from the steel van used for the transportation of dangerous political prisoners from the courts to the imperial prisons, and at a recent Chicago aviation meet he plunged headfirst from an aeroplane into lake Michigan with both hands and feet shackled together. Rising to the surface with his limbs freed, Houdini swam ashore. For this engagement Houdini has evolved a new feat, more incredibtable than any that have preceeded it. He is placed in an airtight galvanized iron can filled to the brim with water, into which he is securely locked with six locks. While Houdini is in this helpless condition, the can is placed and securely locked within a heavy hermetically sealed iron bound wooden chest from which the wizard escapes in an incredible short space of time. Aside from this extraordinary feature, the bill will be exceptionally strong. Among the big features are Little Lord Roberts, the wee singer and dancer who is only 22 inches high; the Four Huntings in "The Fool House;" the 3 White Kuhns, melody monarchs from the West; Sully & Hussey, two Quincy boys in "The Sportsman and the Valet;" Corinne Francis, singing comedienne; and other big features yet to be announced.

TREMONT TEMPLE.

The constant change of program and additional views make frequent visits to the Coronation pictures at Tremont Temple a pleasure. The seventh week beginning on Monday will find all the original popular features retained, together with many other pictures that disclose the scenes of the Coronation ceremonies and the beautiful scenic display of various parts of Great Britain. Not in many years has such a novelty, both scientific and historical, been seen in Boston as this, and therefore every reason why the longest possible engagement should be its reward. Two performances are given daily, with descriptive lecture by Eugene Farnsworth and special orchestral music.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom," the drama that has stood the test of time for over forty years, and has proven more popular than ever this season, will be next week's attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House, with a particularly strong cast of characters. The present play contains less pathos and more laughs than the old versions, but the moral lesson remains as strong as it ever was. It is a temperance piece, yet without the morbid element or any attempt at preaching, and tells the story of a man reduced to the gutter through his love of strong drink, of the efforts of his wife and child to save him, and how he finally promises his little daughter on her death bed to reform, and keeps his word. How the once prosperous rumseller and his son go from bad to worse, and ten years later the reformed drunkard is prosperous and happy, and the rum seller, prematurely old and shiftless, is killed by his own vicious and worthless son. While the play is written on strong temperance lines, and is intensely realistic, particularly in the barroom scenes, yet there is so much comedy intermingled with the serious and pathetic that it appeals to all classes of people and cannot offend any one. It is full of bright bits of wit humor and the ecruciating funny songs and antics of the tippling cut-up, Sample Swichel, and his rustic love, Mehitable Cartright. The play runs through five acts and eleven scenes, and the producers have given it very elaborate settings. There will be the usual matinees on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons.

LOCK WAS OUT OF ORDER

Something went wrong with the lock on the outer door of the big vault at the Mt. Wollaston bank Thursday morning and it was impossible to open the door. What made matters was that in addition to the funds of the bank being locked up, all of the books were also in the big vault. Try as they would the outer could not be opened. Finally an expert was telephoned and it took him several hours to get the door open. Then it was found that one of the pins in the lock had become worn, which prevented the tumblers from working.

Even then it was impossible to open the inner door of the vault, as it was secured by a time lock, which could only be opened at a certain hour.

The Savings bank came to the rescue and furnished the Mt. Wollaston bank with sufficient funds to conduct the days business.

GIRL'S PLUCK SAVES HER LIFE

Slipped on Tracks In Braintree And Was Struck By Train

HIP BROKEN

By sheer pluck and presence of mind Miss Alice McAuliffe a pretty 18-year-old operative in the Rice & Hutchins shoe factory, escaped a horrible death Thursday afternoon, after she had tripped and fallen in front of an approaching train.

Scooped up from between the rails by the cowcatcher of the engine attached to the 5 o'cock train from Boston, the young woman grasped the gridiron bars of the cowcatcher and held on grimly while she was dragged nearly thirty feet.

Before the train was stopped she had received a fracture of the right hip, the pain of which almost rendered her unconscious. The engineer and fireman, who leaped from the cab when the train came to a stop found her lying with her feet within there inches of the pony truck of the engine. But they had to use force to upclasp her fingers from the cowcatcher bars.

She was attended by Dr. F. W. Brett, who sent her to the Carney Hospital, South Boston, on the next train. She remained perfectly cool and collected after her escape. The doctors at the hospital said last night she would recover.

WARD FOUR "SMOKE TALK"

wide street is not only conducive to the interests of any vicinity from a point of beauty. but more especially from a point of business industry and general development." The Mayor also urged unity in organization effort and said that inevitable success will be the result if all combine harmoniously.

Other speakers were John Evans, who spoke at length on the "missing link" and urged a larger membership, Councilman John D. Smith who gave a very interesting talk along the same lines as the Mayor, ex- Councilman Michael Carey, who advanced a few brief arguents to the point, and Thomas Lamb.

At the conclusion of the speeches a vote of thanks was given by the organization to the speakers. A vote of thanks was also given to the Quincy Board of Trade for the endeavors used in advancing the cause of a line of cars from East Milton to Dorchester. A committee, consisting of Mayor Shea, chairman, Albert Lakin, John D. Smith, Iouis Badger and Edward J. Sandberg was appointed to interview the selectmen of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook, with a view to having a certain portion of Willard street accepted as a state highway.

A committee consisting of the Mayor, Rev. Henry T. Grady. Albert Lakin, John Evans and Joseph Walker, was selected to look into the matter of car extension. Letters of regret at being unable to attend were read from Rev. Henry T. Grady, who was feeling unwell, and James H. Elcock. who was called away suddenly on business. Cigars, sandwiches and coffee were given out in abundance and the gathering dispersed after one of the most enjoyable meetings ever observed.

Considerable discussion prevailed concerning the securing of the Willard school, wherein the meetings of the organization might be held. Similar suggestions have already been advanced by other improvement organizations and steps will be taken to have them allowed The affair will be taken up with the school committee and it is highly probable that something will be done in this respect in the near future.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Sporting editor,

Dear sir:

I have given the matter of a selection of an all Quincy team careful consideration and as I have seen about every team we have in local circles play, I think that I am in a position to pick a list of players that would be without peers in Quincy. The calibre of certain players is only a matter of opinion but I am of the conviction that the following would be a mighty fine combination. They are:

Barry, South Quincy, catcher.
Canavan, West Quincy, pitcher.
Desmond, West Quincy, first base.
Hoyt, Atlantic, second base.
Manning, Makaria, short stop.
Gillis, South Quincy, third base.
T. Galvin, South Quincy, left field.
Curtis, Makaria, centre field.
Keohane, Atlantic, right field.
Utility.
Kelley, Adams, A. A.
W. Galvin, South Quincy.
Knight, Adams, A. A.

Yours for a good choice,
Cum aequo animo.

For the first time in a number of years, Quincy High school will not appear on the football schedule of Dorchester High. What the direct object ofthis move is, cannot be definitely learned, but those who saw the Quincy High-Dorchester High game last year, can come pretty near giving the reason.

It will be remembered that the local high school boys secured a decisive victory over the Dorchester eleven last year, and that eventful day will linger for a long while in the minds of those who have the athletic interests of the local school at stake.

Dorchester High was beaten and beaten fairly, yet the members of the losing team could not refrain from giving vent totheir passions, and, (to say nothing of the sportsmanship displayed) took recourse to the so-called "rough-house" tactics, with the result that an affray of an almost unparalleled , nature ensued. The Quincy boys emerged with a victory all right, but they experienced great difficulty intrying to return home in safety.

Quincy High was the first team to make the Dorchester eleven taste, last year, the spoils of an inglorious defeat, and the fear that the performance might be duplicated this year, has undoubtedly caused the Dorchester management to erase Quincy High from its schedule.

The local boys, though they regret that the opportunity will not be afforded to encounter their old rivals, are. nevertheless, no less spirited, and will continue to play with the same undaunted courage that premeated the veins of their predecessors who lined up against Dorchester High on the occasion mentioned.

The Quincy High eleven this year promises to round out into a fast contingency and with the efficient coaching of Arthur Staff, should create an enviable record.

Although manager Joyce and his West Quincy team has gone behind the baseball curtain for the present season, still there is a game being played in the Ward Four section. which bids fair to be the attraction for hundreds of fans. The contestants will be the Station Outing club and the Colonials, two of the foremost opponents we have in local circles. The honors of chapion amateur team are at stake, and the struggle gives promise of being a game for blood. It will be the only game on in amateur circles tomorrow and a record breaking crowd bids fair to be in attendance.

Cold weather will not prevent the fans turning out in large numbers at the big event of the season tomorrow. I refer to the game to be played on the Old Colony league grounds, for the championship of the city between the Atlantics and Makarias. All plans have been arranged for the event and since this is the first of a series to decide the baseball supremacy of the city, all the fans about who want to see a real game of baseball should make an especial effort to attend.

And last, but by no means least, the Heptasophs, with "Jack" Kolson on the mound, will cross bats with the local council of the Knights of Columbus at Merrymount park, to decide which team is entitled to the cup which now shines forth in the window of Hearn's Drug store.

BASSEBALL TOMORROW.

Makaria vs. Atlantic at Water street grounds. (First game of series for championship of city.)

Heptasophs vs. Quincy Council K. of C., at Merrymount park.

Station Outing club vs. Colonials at Ward 4.

SOCCER FOOTBALL.

J. T. Coats of Pawtucket vs. Fore River at Fore River field.

COUNCILMAN CHERRINGTON'S PLAN FOR NEW EQUIPMENT FOR FIRE DEPARTMENT

In Letter To The Ledger He Outlines Plan For Something Strictly Up-to-date. One That Will Eventually Save Money

Councilman at large Charles E. Cherrington, chairman of the standing committee of the City Council on fire department matters, having made a study of fire department equipment, believes that the time is ripe to change the present fire apparatus of the city which is operated by horses, to the more modern method of operating by motors. His views on the subject are fully set forth in the following communication.

"His Honor, William T. Shea, has sent a communication to the City Council, asking for an appropriation to enable him to appoint, or have appointed, eight (8) extra men to the force of the Fire Department.

The Chief of the Fire Department has also sent a communication to the same body which calls attention to the poor condition of the buildings and apparatus in his department.

To the belief of the writer both the Chief Executive and the head of the Fire Department are right. It is hard to conceive of a difference of opinion on these two subjects.

The Department does need men and the buildings as a while, are in poor shape, and not only does the apparatus, withthe exception of the new Engine and Auto, need repairing, but at the present time is out of date.

However, to put eight extra men on the force would cost $8.000 per annum and it is a question whether the city can afford this increase. Yet it is no question, but a fact that the efficiency of the department is being crippled by the lack of men.

Last spring the Mayor asked for more men; the Committee on Fire and Police recommended an addition of four. The Finance Committee reported that the order ought not to pass and the original order was voted down.

At the time the writer presented to his committee a plan for the reorganization of the Fire Department, which plan increased the fire fighting force by six (6) men and necessitated that the Council petition the Legislature for the right to borrow $40,000 outside the debt limit However, the investment proposed showed a saving her annum large enough not only to pay the interest onthe money invested. but enough on the principal to wipe the debt out in seven years. In other words, this increase in the fire fighting force would not cost the city one cent.

Thetime to petition the Legislature for this year is now past and the only money obtainable would have to be from the straight borrowing capacity of the city.

The plan which follows is similar to the one previously presented:

To purchase the following modern apparatus to take the place of the old now in use:

1 Auto combination chemical for Quincy Point	$5,500.00
1 Auto combination chemical for Houghs Neck	5,500.00
1 Auto combination chemical for West Quincy	5,500.00
1 Auto leader for Ladder truck West Quincy	2,500.00
1 Auto leader for Ladder truck Wollaston	2,500.00
1 Auto combination and pump Wollaston	8,500.00
1 Auto combination chemical Atlantic	5,500.00
1 Auto leader for Ladder truck for Central Fire Station	2,500.00
Alterations in buildings	1,000.00
1 Auto wagon type for Superintendent Fire Alarm	1,000.00
1 Auto Chief of Fire Department	3,000.00
3 Auto District Chiefs Runabouts at $1,000	3,000.00
1 Auto Chief of the Police Department	3,000.00
	$49,000.00
Sale of old pieces of apparatus and horses	8,000.00
Net investment	$4,100.00
Cost of eight extra men per annum	$8,000.00
Cost maintaining horses for department year 1910	5,222.00
Total	$13,222.00
Interest on $49,000 for 1 year at 4 per cent	$1,960.00
Cost 3 extra men for annum	3,000.00
Cost of maintaining 11 autos at an average cost each of $75.00 per annum	$825.00
	$5,785.00
(not including repairs for accidents)
Balance to pay on principal	7.437.00
Add receipts for sale of old pieces and horses	8,000.00
	$15,437.00
This the city to pay off the first year about	$15,000.00
Second year	8,500.00
Third year	8,500.00
Fourth year	8.500.00
Fifth year	8,500.00
	$49,000.00

The sixth year and thereafter the city would save a little over $9,000 per

HEARING POSTPONED UNTIL DEC. 31ST

In Order To Get Settlement of Divorce Proceedings

The continued case of Catherine Lassen of Weymouth, who is charged with assault on her maid, Wilhemina Beaudine, about which the papers have had so much to say of late came up in the district court this morning before Judge Avery Mrs. Lassen was represented by J. J. McAnarney, while Guy Ham looked after the interests of the Beaudine girl.

There was quite a crowd in court. in anticipation of a spicy hearing, but they went away disappointed. Mrs. Lassen was kept out of sight in the probate court room while there was a long consultation between counsel. Just before court adjourned. the case was called and continued until Dec. 31.

It is understood that divorce proceedings have been instituted by Lassen and the long continuance is that the divorce case may be settled first.

When Mrs. Lassen was in court several days ago, she was held in $300 until this morning. Friends offered to give bonds for her, but she refused to allow it and went to jail. In the mean time stories have been published in which it is alleged that her husband refused to assist her.

Yesterday rather than be brought to Quincy by an officer, she allowed her friends to put up the necessary bail. Hardly had she been released when an officer appeared at Dedham to bring her to Quincy.

Mrs. Lassen said yesterday that she did not think that her husband would let her stay in jail and she as determined not to bail herself out. She declared that the statements published by her husband were untrue.

She also alleges that her husband so influenced her son Max that he did not appear to assist her.

She denies that she struck the girl that the girl acted toward her as she had no right to do and had even told her that she would be sitting in the parlor with her husband after she was dead. She declared she would not ask for a divorce which she said was just what her husband wanted.

From what Mrs. Lassen says, there will be something interesting when the divorce case is heard and some prominent people are brought into it.

Later the men were brought into court Milinazzo who was arraigned for assault, had his case continued until Sept. 23.

Mula was arraigned for carrying a revolver and was fined $50.

POST CARDS CAUSED TROUBLE

Voters Of Ward Five Received Word About Voting List

RUSH AT REGISTRARS

The voters of Ward Five were considerably stirred up, this week, by the receipt of a printed postal from A. Rohan, chairman of the Ward Five Republican committee stating that their names was not on the voting list. Immediately the city clerk's telephone became hot with inquiries as to the cause. Friday, many of those who had received the first card, received a second stating that their name was on the list and that the first card sent out was due to an error.

It seems that a voting list, with certain checks, was given to a mailing concern to send cards and through an error the card was sent to those whose names were on the list, instead of those missing.

What made the matter more complicated was the fact that the cards were sent to Democrats as well as Republicans.

MEETING OF REGISTRARS.

The first meeting of the Registrars was held in the Council chamber, City hall, lest evening and from 7.30 to 9.30 o'clock there was quite a rush. During these hours 59 names were added to the lists.

In the case of Ward Five, where there is quite a contest for the Republican nomination for representative automobiles were in use to transport voters.

Candidates for the representative nomination in other wards were also on hand with voters to be registered.

—Princetown has a sensible regulation that every boy entering the freshman class of the university must learn to swim and take a certain amount of physical exercise, or he will be dropped as if he had failed in a final examination. There is sound sense in the theory that a boy who is defective physically will be defective mentally in time.—Somerville Journal.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Cheer up! Golden October is yet to come.

These Ohio legislative grafters seem to be of the kind that can resist everything but temptation.

The cheerful glow from fires on the hearth and from the furnace has felt good the past week.

It is said that the Circuit judges made 62 errors on the Harriman merger suit. How in thunder do they ever expect to get a good fielding average?

If President Taft will discuss on his trip the great question whether New York or Chicago will get the National League pennant, the people will listen to him gladly.

Father Ryan of a Boston church criticised tight skirts, puffs, and cosmetics Sunday. Why does he not attack evils that might be remedied like murder or arson?

We had expected to subscribe for coal and groceries for the indigent holders of stock in the dissolved Standard Oil Co., but it now looks as if they would get through the winter unaided.

Aviator Sopwith dropped into the ocean at Brighton Beach and was rescued with difficulty. Although cleanliness is next to godliness, he should wait next time until he reaches his own bath room.

Places without a golf club are bothered as to how to entertain Mr. Taft, but if they give him a chance to hit a green apple with a crooked umbrella handle it might keep him contented for the time being.

Some of the local weather prophets assert that the weather of any month in the year can be accurately forecasted from the conditions obtaining on the last Friday of the preceding month. Whether that is so or not, the last Friday in August was decidedly moist and September thus far has certainly given us plenty of rain. A water shortage need not now be feared and the later vegetables as well as the fruits are going to yield well. It is an old but true saying that nature makes no mistake.

IT CERTAINLY IS.

An example of the thoughtlessness that makes fires so numerous in this country was shown at Quincy, where workmen on a church steeple went home and left a fire going in a soldering pot and started a fire which plucky firemen had to ascend 150 feet to extinguish. Carelessness like this is to all intents and purposes a crime.—Brockton Enterprise.

WATCH THE CHIMNEY.

And now we have reached the season of the year when the brave fire departments are usually driven to the limit. As with the big fire in Brockton the other day, fires in a large percentage of cases start with a defective flue—a worn out chimney. Just a little examination, a little cleaning, may be the means of saving property and what is more human life. Before starting the fire in the furnace this year why not take a peep and see that everything is right.

A DIGNIFIED TRIAL.

The conduct of the Beattie case is of more interest to thoughtful minds than the case itself. In the murder of a wife by a husband as a result of an illicit attachment for another woman, there is nothing especially new, says an exchange. The history of murder is filled with such incidents and there are those to whom they are always absorbing in their fascination. True, the Beattie case presented a few points of mystery,

GOVERNOR'S DAY AT FAIR DRAWS CROWD

Lt. Gov. Frothingham And Speaker Walker Attend

Governor's day drew a crowd to the 47th annual cattle show and fair of the Weymouth agricultural and industrial society at South Weymouth Friday. Gov. Foss was unable to get to the fair in time, but Lieut. Gov. Frothingham came to the grounds at 2.30 and was received with cheers. He watched the racing and ball game for a while and then left the field. Previous to this he was entertained by the Norfolk club at South Weymouth and made a short address with politics barred.

Speaker Walker arrived just after Mr. Frothingham left and made a short address on "Citizenship," in which he urged every voter to attend the primaries and vote at the election.

The horse racing was the best seen on this track for many years, with close finishes in every heat. In the 2:22 class it took six heats to decide the winner. In the first heat Camello beat Barker by a head. It was nip and tuck all the way around in the second heat between Lady Gwen and King Brino, with the former winning by a small margin. In the third heat King Brino came up from the rear and won by half a head. Willie John captured the fourth heat in a close finish, won the fifth easily, but was hard pressed in the sixth and final by Lady Gwen, but won by a head.

In the 2:30 class Duffy's Malt and Cochato Maid fought hard for first place, with Duffy's Malt taking the first heat and Cochato Maid the last three and the race.

but these weer not of the especially difficult variety.

But, compared with the methods of procedure which have been noted in other jurisdictions, the Virginia method shines as an example. As the Providence Journal admirably says: "Justice was speedy, to be sure; but more important than that, it was sober without cant, exact without pedantry, its forms observed without menace to the substance." A judge who presided with never-falling dignity, counsel whose intensity of feeling was not allowed to lapse into sensational posings, and a jury which reached a decision as in the presence of an Almighty God,—these were the elements which exhibit an American court in its best estate. The crime was terrible—but the court dealt with it solemnly, and not as a show.

THE SUGAR QUESTION.

Because sugar has risen in price just at the canning season, the lady of the house is sure that the trust did it. Sugar always goes up when she starts to buy fruit and Mason jars, and what explanation could be more natural than that he trust knows folks want more sugar than usual at this time of the year and takes advantage of the situation to squeeze some extra dollars out of a suffering people?

Along those lines the Detroit Free Press says:

The dear lady isn't by any means alone in her economic theories, for a great many lords of creation believe that trusts bring the high prices with no more solid foundation for their conclusions. It's a pity that things in this world aren't really as simple as they look, for if we could put two and two together in this way making laws would be as easy as calculating that the sum of the digits is four. Unfortunately, there are more numbers to be kept in mind before the process of figuring out big totals is finished and corrective legislation can be framed for our industrial conditions.

Theadvent of the canning season is one factor, but the highly interesting stories about the food riots in France lately indicate another. The French women raided grocery stores and compelled the shopkeepers to reduce prices. Why were prices high The hot wave of summer—remember it?—caused drought in Europe. Crops over there are generally failures, as a perusal of the wheat market reports tells. Now, the European production of beet sugar is a very important part of the world's supply, for mankind gets almost exactly one-half its sugar from beets nowadays and Europe contributes more than 6,000,000 of the 6,500,00 tons of beet sugar that comes into the world's markets every year. A practical failure of close to one-half the production of any food article cannot fail to push prices up rapidly, and that is what is happening this fall.

Perhaps it will help the good housewife to bear her tribulations if she will contrast her really enviable lot with that of the women in Europe. After all, the added cent or so on the twenty or thirty pounds of sugar used for canning by the average American family is not a life and death matter, and the shortage of all food supplies across the Atalntic will mean real suffering, possibly starvation, this winter. In comparison with the burdens laid upon other nations, a good many ofthethings we complain about onthis side are actually blessings for which we ought to be thankful.

MAINE PROHIBITION VICTORY.

The drought that has existed over the larger part of the Pine Tree state ever since Neal Dow got the first prohibition law passed in 1846, was almost broken by Monday's close vote. Showers of refreshing looked for by the expectant thirsty are now postponed.

However one may look at this controverted question, no doubt a great deal of energy in our eastermost commonwealth have gone into a systematic attempt to evade the liquor law, that might well have been devoted to tempting the nourishing codfish from the briny inlets of the deep.

Iron barred and planked doors would resist the utmost efforts of the officers for half an hour. When they finally broke in the "creeter" would have long since disappeared down the sewer pipe The sink holes would be thoroughly rinsed.

For months one peddler paraded the streets of Portland with the stuff concealed in dark colored bottles masquerading as ink. Milkmen used to conceal quart bottles in two quart measures filled with milk.

Women pocket peddlers used to carry the growler around in bustles. An alert little tribe of street Arabs acted as sentinels, ringing the door bell at first sight of an officer.

The advocates of the prohibitory law will attribute their narorw escape from overthrow to a change in the character of the population.

"Uncle Obed," a unique specimen in one of Maine's sea coast towns, where the shore is littered with the hulks of decadent commerce, thus tells the story of this change. "The heft of the old seed folks that made this law lays asleep up thar back uv the meetin' house. All the young fry that amounts to shucks hez struck out'n here ter git a livin'. What's left aint wuth the powder twould take to blow 'em to ballywhack. It's been ebb tide on this coast fer fifty year. It's dreened out and dreened out."

Where Neal Dow and the other old Romans used to sit upright in church listening to two hour sermons, the youngsters munch peanuts in the back seats, and distribute tobacco over the sanctuary floor.

At the same time this change can not be attributed wholly to degeneracy of population. Many of the clergymen and church people are sick of trying to see the will of rural communities enforced on the cosmopolitan population of the cities. With Bangor voting 3,052 to 919 against the law, it seems hopeless for the inhabitants of North Jay far away in the forest to govern an urban community. Every town that desires to be a dry town could continue to be so under local option.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!

The picture accompanying this sketch is that of Russell A. Sears, at the time he was Mayor in 1898. His features have changed somewhat since then, yet in personality he is the same jovial fellow that he was when he held down the Mayors chair in City hall, before it was remodelled. His election to the highest office in the gift of the citizens of Quincy, was somewhat of a surprise, for his opponents could not be made to believe that he could win, yet when the votes were counted it was found that he had a plurality of 300.

Mr. Sears was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. in 1869 but moved to Boston with his parents, when but little more than an infant, so that his early education was obtained in the public schools of that city. On his graduation he entered the law office of his guardian Samuel L. Powers and was admitted to the bar in 1880, being at that time but 21 years of age and one of the youngest men to be admitted to practice.

In 1891 he settled in Quincy and the following year was admitted into the law firm with Mr. Powers under the name of Powers & Sears. He soon became prominent as an attorney for the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., the American Bell Telephone Co.,, the Gamewell Fire Alarm Telegraph Co. as well as numerous insurance and granite companies, the Waltham & Newtonville and Newton & Boston street railway companies. While residing in Boston he was nominated for the common council in a strong democratic ward and received a very flattering vote.

In coming to Quincy he immediately became identified with the Republican City committee and was its treasurer for several years, as well as chairman of the ward one committee. He served the city as its Mayor one year in 1898 and as City Solicitor under Mayor John O. Hall in 1900 and 1901. Some years ago he became connected with the law department of the Boston Elevated street railway which position he still holds.

He built himself a handsome residence off Glendale road, where he now resides, surrounded by a happy family of children and a charming wife.

CONSERVATIVE AS WELL AS BUSINESS REASONS WHY JOHN F. MERRILL

PRESENT CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED

TO OFFICE

The American people have repeatedly insisted upon the fact if a public servant has faithfully performed his duty and real experience gained by years of service is of the utmost value to the taxpayer and to the County, he should be continued in office, (notwithstanding the fact at the present time there are people seeking the office who think that they have all the qualifications without the experience). Conservative business men, particularly in an office like the County Commissioner, where experience gained by holding office and the faithful conservative fulfillment of the duties of the same, would seem to require a continuation, there can be no reasonable argument made at the present time why the present incumbent, Mr. John F. Merrill, who holds the important position as Chairman of the County Commissioners of Norfolk County, should not be re-elected to office.

The most important reasons why he should be are the fact that some very important matters which are partially under way will have to be completed within the next two years, namely, the County Building at Quincy, involving an appropriation of $100,000, the re-building of Fore River Bridge involving an appropriation of upwards of $65,000 and the re-building of the Weymouth Back River Bridge involving an appropriation of $80,000.

In all these matters where the Land and Harbor Commissioners and other parties necessarily under law, have the detail of these matters under consideration, they have in every case elected Mr. John F. Merrill as Chairman of the board. That is an unqualified endorsement of his ability and integrity with his experience to fill the office, to the satisfaction of the various boards. This is a simple statement of facts to every business and thinking man, why it would be unwise to make any change at the present time by the election of anyone else to succeed Mr. Merrill to fill these important positions. Does it not seem particularly against the interests of the county to do otherwise than re-elect Mr. Merrill to this important position?

BANK DIGNITY

It looks well to use checks. Buying a money order or sending a registered letter to pay a bill is expensive, and it doesn't create the impression that you are particularly prosperous. Paying your bills by check helps give you standing. Don't forget, appearances do count for something in this world. For your pride's sake, open a bank account and pay by check.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

MY friends are asked: "Why does SPRAGUE want to be County Commissioner when he has a good business?"

BECAUSE the methods of conducting the business affairs of the County can be materially improved.

For some years County affairs have been so conducted as to build up a POLITICAL MACHINE.

A Ten Thousand Dollar bridge was recently built by the County Commissioners over Straits Pond at a cost of $20,800.00, absolutely without competition.

They place the contract for the granite in the new Quincy Court House at an excessive price, absolutely without competition. Their excuse is that there is only one quarry in Quincy that produces granite suitable.

"If true, 'tis pity."

Mr. Merrill "has been tried (for 6 years) and has been found wanting."

If I am elected I shall not forget I am your SERVANT.

Plenty of Them in Quincy, and Good Reason for it.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,

Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. E. H. Prouty, 85 North street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills completely and permanently cured me of kidney trouble and I am only too pleased to recommend them to anyone in need of a kidney medicine. I was subject to backaches and headaches and the secretions from my kidneys also bothered me. It required the contents of only two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills to effect a complete cure. Another member of my family who was afflicted with kidney trouble used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

HEAVY FINE FOR SELLING LIQUOR

One of the severest sentences ever given for violation of the liquor law was given Alex. Samarah, of Quincy. by Judge Quinn in the superior court at Dedham, yesterday. He was sentenced to three months in the house of correction and to pay a fine of $200. His cash bail of $300 was also forfeitted.

Samarah first came into the "lime light" in 1910 when he was given two months in jail for assaulting his wife because she would not sell liquor. In October that same year, his place at 56 1-2 Sumner street was raided and he was fined $50 and sentenced to three months in the house of correction.

He appealed but the superior court confirmed the sentence of the lower court.

Two weeks after he got out of jail. Samarah was again arrested for exposing and keeping liquor for sale. In that case the lower court imposed a fine of $200 and a sentence of three months. An appeal was taken and a cash bail of $300 deposited for his appearance before the grand jury

Samarah then skipped and nothing more was heard from him until last June when he was located in New York and arrested. Inspector Goodhue went after him and took him to Dedham jail.

The case came up yesterday, when Samarah retracted his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty. As stated above, his bail of $300 was forfeitted a fine of $200 imposed and a sentence of three months imposed.

BOSTON THEATRE

Klaw & Erlanger's production of "The Round Up" which for various reasons has made a special appeal to Boston audiences will enter upon the fourth week of its engagement at the Boston Theatre Monday night. It is one of those good, wholesome things and unlike so many plays of the day leaves no bad taste in any one's mouth. There are some features in "The Round Up" which it is hard for one to forget after once seeing it—such as the quaint make-up and the rollicking humor of Sheriff Holmes, the procession of the cowboys at the wedding and that famous combat with the Indians.

While it has all of the traits of a melodrama, it is a very high class melodrama, but it is more, it works out the problem of retribution and shows the agony which comes to the wrongdoer, and how, when his better nature is aroused, he hates his own offence and tries to undo the evil he has done. This part of the plot is strikingly original in this respect and makes a deep impression upon thoughtful folk.

The spectacular features are unique and hold the absorbed attention of the audience as the descent of the mountain trail by the mounted Indians and the coming of the morning after the battle. Matinees are given on Wednesday and Saturday.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

annum if the same amount of money was invested as contemplated namely $7,437.00 plus $1,960.00.

Upon arriving at the fire the driver of present apparatus is obliged to stay with his horses, but the driver of an auto can, after placing his machine. leave immediately to assist in the extinguishing of the fire.

The first eight pieces of apparatus listed take the places of the eight pieces at present in use. This change adds eight men to the fire fighting force and with the three others provided for in the plan would make 11 men all told.

At the present time Squantum is practically without fire protection. By placing the auto pieces of apparatus in the Atlantic station, Squantum could be reached inside of five minutes. Furthermore the house in this section is very poorly ventilated and at the present time is not fit for a man to live in. being nothing more or less than a stable. If the horses were done away with, this house would last for some years to come. But the probability is if the present condition continues a new building will be asked for. A fire house today should cost in the vicinity of $25,000.

The wagon for the Superintendent of Fire Alarm is very much needed, there being only two men to cover this work for the entire city. This small force employed could cover much more ground in a shorter time.

The car for the Chief of the Fire Department should be of the latest model, as it is necessary for him to be at the fire at least as soon as the apparatus and with a horse, this is impossible.

The car for the Chief of Police is very important, asthere is nothing adequate to take the place of the Police Patrol in case of accidents. It is a practical impossibility at present for the Chief to cover the ground he should without a car of this kind. Take the case ofthe Aviation Meet just past.

The ability of the auto style apparatus to get through deep snow has been doubted in the past but it is now an established fact that an auto can pull out of places where horses have been stalled during some of our severest storms.

As the present apparatus is fully as liable to accident as the more modern kind, the wear and tear of the auto is set against the life of the horses, sickness, extra horses needed in time of snow, and the wear and tear of the present apparatus.

Drawing from the reports obtained from cities and towns where the auto is now in use, the cost of $75 per annum for maintenance is high.

Chicopee Fire department report the cost of maintenance, including gasoline. oil and repairs oftheir auto combination—2 years and 5 months—$31.13.

Commissioner Waldo, New York Fire department reports one auto cost of maintenance, including repairs per annum,—$85.00

Chief Daggett, Springfield Fire department reports for everything outside of tire expense for auto combination per annum—$16.00.

The most important feature in the extinguishing of fires is the time consumed in getting to the spot and with a city like Quincy with its large area and hilly streets, this is of paramount importance, it being similar to the City of Springfield, where, during the year 1908, the first year autos were in service, there were 590 fires with a loss of $88,690.36. The previous year there were but 496 alarms with a loss of $535,549.74.

If eight men were appointed to the permanent force it would not add eight men to the fire fighting force. These men are entitled totheir one day in eight and the number would also be reduced during their meal hours. But if under an auto service department, a new running card were made and more pieces responded to each alarm than at present, the fire fighting force would be increased anywhere from eight to ten men.

It is said that by the appointment of the eight men contemplated, twenty-four call men could be dropped from the pay roll. Inasmuch as some of these men have made the boast that they have lost hardly five runs in the last five years, I do not believe in the dropping ofthem.

Is it likely that the Boston Finance Commission would have recommended the expenditure of $175,000.00 for forty pieces ofthis style of apparatus if they did not believe it to be in the interest both of economy and efficiency?

If the City of Quincy were a mercantile corporation and the City Council a board of directors is it likely that such a board would hesitate to make this investment?

Summed up in a few words the investment means a larger fighting force without further cost than contemplated to the city. more speed in responding to alarms and a consequent saving in the loss of property and a better condition of the house from a sanitary point of view."

Charles E. Cherrington.

SENT TO PRISON.

Judge Quinn, in the Norfolk superior criminal court yesterday, sentenced Jacob Kipinham of Boston to serve from five to seven years in state prison for breaking into the stable of Caspar Schindler at Milton, Sept. 7, and stealing a horse and wagon.

Rufus Peck was sentenced to serve from seven to nine years for burglary at the lodge on the estate of John T. Morse at Needham, April 9.

GEORGE ALBERT RICHARDS.

George Albert Richards who has resided on Billings street, Atlantic, for about eleven years passed away Sunday evening at the age of seventy-five. Mr. Richard's health has been failing for over a year and early in the summer he went with his family to Newton, New Hampshire, hoping that the change might be beneficial. For six weeks the pine groves and good air seemed to benefit him but on his return to Atlantic his strength seemed to fail and the decline was gradual until on Sunday evening he passed away.

Mr. Richards had been in the jewelry business at 5 Park street, Boston, for a great many years and was much respected and beloved by his business friends and also his customers, who found that his strong Christian character was shown in all his dealings and that his judgment at all times could be safely relied upon.

For many years he was a member of Park street church and the Rev. A. Z. Conrad who spoke most touchingly at the services held at the house on Wednesday afternoon testified to the helpfulness of his presence whenever he was able to attend church services.

He was a very quiet reserved man but strong in his love for God and his home and will ever live inthe hearts of his many friends as an ideal Christian.

A widow and one son Albert Richards of Winthrop, Mass., survive him.

MEMORIAL CHURCH, ATLANTIC

At the meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent society Wednesday afternoon, it was decided to use the proceeds of the annual fair to help purchase a new pipe organ. A committee was chosen to take charge of the harvest supper the second week in October with Mrs. Harry Read as chairman The meeting was well attended, and the women enthusiastic to begin their fall work.

The parish society has called a special business meeting for Wednesday evening to discuss the advisability of purchasing the organ and having it installed this fall.

The vested choir was received by a full church at Winthrop Sunday evening, and the Congregational church of that place hopes to profit by the work of this chorus.

The Sunday school will observe Sunday, September 24th, as Rally day and the church will then begin its evening services. Superintendent W. F. Blake will at that time grade the school. This will help the teachers to do the best work and also give the school a chance to develop. The girls of the school will serve a lunch and furnish an entertainment for the whole Sunday school Friday evening. Those who expect to be members of the school are cordially invited to this meeting.

Rev. T. W. Davison is spending a week at Springfield, and expects to return Monday.

You need the Ledger every day.

Anty Drudge Tells How to Economize on Coal.

Mrs. Thrifty—"My husband is in the coal business and it doesn't cost anything for fuel to boil the clothes."

Anty Drudge—"Your husband doesn't get his coal for nothing, does he? Besides it costs just half the wear of your clothes when you boil them, as they wear out just twice as fast. Use Fels-Naptha soap in cool or lukewarm water if you want to save time, bother and your husband's coal."

John D. Rockefeller says "it is not what we earn but what we save that makes wealth."

In washing clothes with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, either in summer or winter, you save:—

Fuel—No necessity for hot fire or boiling water.

Clothes—Your clothes last twice as long when washed with Fels-Naptha, because they are not weakened by boiling, nor worn out by hard rubbing.

Doctor's Bills—You don't risk your health by bending over steaming suds or a hot fire and then going into the cool outer air.

Time—The Fels-Naptha way of washing takes less than half as long as the old washboiler way.

Labor—Fels-Naptha takes three-fourths the work and all the drudgery out of washday.

If these savingsare worth while to you, follow directions for using Fels-Naptha printed on the red and green wrapper.

2 of Heating

Of the four modern methods of heating—by gas, steam, hot water and wood or coal stove—gas is by far the most effective. Its heat is steady, brilliant, expansive; it is economical because it heats so quickly and evenly. It is more sanitary than the others; it is more cleanly. A Reznor Gas Heater is the proper heater for your home. Come in and see them.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal. mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By
FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Ordinarily the mere fact of a destructive derailment leaves little to be discovered when the cause is sought afterward. But, singularly enough, the curved track was torn up only on the side toward the hill; the outer rail was still in place, and the crossties, deeply imbedded in the hard gravel of the cutting, showed only the surface mutilation of the grinding wheels.

"Broken flange under the 215, I'll bet," said Groner, holding his lantern down to the gashed ties. But Bradford denied it.

"No," he contradicted; "Cranford was able to talk a little after we toted him back to the service car. He says it was a broken rail; says he saw it and saw the man that was flaggin' him down, all in good time to give her the air before he hit it."

"What man was that?" asked Groner, whose point of view had not been that of an onlooker.

Lidgerwood answered for himself and Bradford.

"That is one of the things we'd like to know, Groner. Just before the smash a man, whom none of us recognized, ran down the track and tried to give Cranford the stop signal."

They had been walking on down the line, looking for the actual point of derailment. When it was found it proved Cranford's assertion—in part. There was a gap in the rail on the river side of the line, but it was not a fracture. At one of the joints the fishplates were missing, and the rail ends were sprung apart sidewise sufficiently to let the wheel flanges pass through. Groner went down on his hands and knees, with the lantern held low, and made another discovery.

"This ain't no happen-so, Mr. Lidgerwood," he said when he got up. "The spikes are pulled!"

Lidgerwood said nothing. There are discoveries which are beyond speech. But he stooped to examine for himself. Groner was right. For a distance of eight or ten feet the rail had been loosened and the spikes were gone out of the corresponding crossties. After it was loosened the rail had been sprung aside, and the bit of rock inserted between the parted ends to keep them from springing together was still in place.

Lidgerwood's eyes were bloodshot when he rose and said:

"I'd like to ask you two men as men what devil would set a trap like this for a train load of unoffending passengers?"

Bradford's slow drawl dispelled a little of the mystery.

"It wasn't meant for Groner and his passenger wagons, I reckon. In the natural run of things it was the 266 and the service car that ought to 've hit this thing first, 204 bein' supposed to be a half hour off her schedule. It was aimed for us, all right enough. And it wasn't meant to throw us into the hill neither. If we'd hit it goin' west we'd be in the river. That's why it was sprung out instead of in."

Lidgerwood's right hand, balled into a fist, smote the air, and his outburst was a fierce imprecation. In the midst of it Groner said, "Listen!" and a moment later a man walking rapidly up the track from the direction of Little Butte station came into the small circle of lantern light. Groner threw the light on the newcomer, revealing a haggard face—the face of the owner of the Wire Silver mine.

"Heavens and earth, Mr. Lidgerwood, this is awful!" he exclaimed. "I heard of it by phone and hurried over to do what I could. My men of the night shift are on the way, walking up the track, and the entire Wire Silver outfit is at your disposal."

"I am afraid you are a little late, Mr. Flemister," was Lidgerwood's rejoinder, unreasoning antagonism making the words sound crisp and ungrateful. "Half an hour ago"—

"Yes, certainly. Goodloe should have phoned me if he knew," cut in the mine owner. "Anybody hurt?"

"Half of the number involved and six dead," said the superintendent soberly. Then the four of them walked slowly and in silence up the track toward the two campfires, where the unhurt survivors and the service car's guests were fighting the chill of the high mountain midnight.

Lidgerwood was unpleasantly surprised to find that Miss Brewster knew the man whom her father had tersely characterized as "a born gentleman and a born buccaneer," but the fact remained. When he came with Flemister into the circle of light cast by the smaller of the two fires Miss Brewster not only welcomed the mine owner; she immediately introduced him to her friends and made room for him on the flat stone which served her for a seat.

But just now the "gentleman buccaneer" was not living up to the full measure of his reputation in the daredevil field, as Lidgerwood was not slow to observe. His replies to Miss Brewster and the others were not always coherent, and his face, seen in the flickering firelight, was almost ghastly. True, the talk was low toned and fragmentary, desultory enough to require little of any member of the group sitting around the smoldering fire on the spur embankment.

Yet Lidgerwood fancied that of the group circling the fire Flemister was the one whose eyes turned oftenest toward the sheeted figures across the track, sometimes in morbid starings, but now and again with the haggard side glance of fear.

Why was the mine owner afraid? Lidgerwood analyzed the query shrewdly. Was he implicated in the matter of the loosened fail? Remembering that the trap had been set, not for the passenger train, but for the special, the superintendent dismissed the charge against Flemister. Thus far he had done little to incur the mine owner's enmity—at least nothing to call for cold blooded murder in reprisal. Yet the man was acting very curiously. Much of the time he scarcely appeared to hear what Miss Brewster was saying to him. Moreover, he had lied. Lidgerwood recalled his glib explanation at the meeting beside the displaced rail. Flemister claimed to have had the news of the disaster by phone. Where had he been when the phone message found him? Not at his mine, Lidgerwood decided, since he could not have walked from the Wire Silver to the wreck in an hour. It was all very puzzling, and what little suppositional evidence there was was conflicting. Lidgerwood put the query aside finally, but with a mental reservation.

Fortunately the waiting interval was not greatly prolonged — fortunately, since for the three young women the reaction was come and the full horror of the disaster was beginning to make itself felt. Lidgerwood contrived the necessary diversion when the relief train from Red Butte shot around the curve of the hillside cutting.

"Van Lew, suppose you and Jefferis take the women out of the way for a few minutes while we are making the transfer," he suggested quietly. "There are enough of us to do the work, and we can spare you."

This left Flemister unaccounted for, but with a very palpable effort he shook himself free from the spell of whatever had been shackling him.

"That's right," he assented briskly. "I was just going to suggest that." Then, indicating the men pouring out of the relief train: "I see that my buckies have come up on your train to lend a hand. Command us just the same as if we belonged to you. That is what we are here for."

Van Lew and the collegian walked the three young women a little way up the old spur, while the wrecked train's company, the living, the injured and the dead, were transferred, down the line to the relief train to be taken back to Red Butte. Flemister helped with the other helpers, but Lidgerwood had an uncomfortable feeling that the man was always at his elbow. He was certainly there when the last of the wounded had been carried around the wreck and the relief train was ready to back away to Little Butte, where it could be turned upon the mine spur Y. It was while the conductor of the train was gathering his volunteers for departure that Flemister said what he had apparently been waiting for a chance to say.

"I can't help feeling indirectly responsible for this, Mr. Lidgerwood," he began, with something like a return of his habitual self possession. "If I hadn't asked you to come over here tonight"—

Lidgerwood interrupted sharply. "What possible difference would that have made, Mr. Flemister?"

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

White Kid Hats and Straw Gloves in Woman's Topsy-Turvy World—Charles River Basin Aglow with Carnival Lights and Colors—Boston's Tammany Sachem Converted to Squaw Suffrage—How to Get Around Beantown Interests Visiting New Yorker.

Will women wear straw gloves next? Behold, atany rate, the newest creation in the grey old Hub the white kid hat, trimmed with white kid trumpet lilies, and lined with white velvet. Again the feminine mind has taken one of its twists in the sudden and overwhelming popularity of white felt and velvet hats, worn as outing hats, though they are not primarily intended to be worn at the seaside, nor in cool weather. They are just for the September wear, you know, and probably for October there will be something quite different, and then again for November. Sky blue. lavender, orange, pink and the popular reseda give giddy coloring to the autumn maid, and the very streets seem to be taking on the colors of the woodland.

Those Bostonians, some tens of thousands of them, who witnessed the illumination and carnival on the Charles River Basin on a recent evening, agreed with our doughty mayor that more festivities of the kind should take place on that public pleasure bay, whose charms and facilities for recreation have been too little enjoyed thus far. Let the forecasted Venetian scenes be enacted, and brighten up the beautiful expanse of waters which should rival anything in this land, were its advantages availed of.

The invasion of an important and lively political meeting and its speedy transition into a suffrage rally stands to the credit of one of Boston's most energetic suffragists, Miss Margaret Foley. This clever advocate of women's rights completely won over the crowd of some 1,500 men who attended a rally at which leading candidates for the Senate and House of Representatives were the speakers. Although one of the representatives attempted to sidetrack Miss Foley's request for information as to the position of the candidates regarding the suffrage question, that young lady courteously and winningly insisted on recognition and succeeded in persuading the doubtful candidate to commit himself by promising to vote for suffrage when the question comes up on the hill. Not only that but the popular possible Mayor Curley stepped forward and made a rousing suffrage speech, giving his reasons for favoring it, and wound up by leading the assemblage in three cheers for Miss Foley and three more for "Votes for Women." In the enthusiasm of the men they even forgot to announce the big Democratic barbecue scheduled for the next day, and the audience had to be admonished to pay attention to one of the speakers, so intent were they on watching the charming suffragist in the gallery. Miss Foley finds that Americans are far more polite and generous in this matter than the English, for when this method of gaining recognition is attempted in an English political meeting, the lady in question is promptly, and sometimes very rudely, ousted from the hall by policemen, without a chance to get an answer. The effect of the meeting was briefly expressed by a youngster who had climbed up in a window He approached Miss Foley and said earnestly: "Lady, you are all right, that was the best Tammany meeting they ever had, don't you think so?" When she replied, "Why, I don't know. I never went to one before, aren't they all like that?" the youth snorted: "Well, I should say not. Why, no woman ever got up and told them what they had to do before."

"Will you kindly send me a booklet of points of interest in and around Boston?" So wrote a total stranger in New York City to a Hubbite young woman, who for the moment was in a quandary what to remit. The inquirer had enclosed postage and evidently was justified in expecting a reply. No means were at hand for knowing the stranger's tastes. Was she literary? Then Lindsay Swift's book on the literary and marks might be the thing—except that it would be giving a rather expensive present. The same statement might be made about any of Mr. Bacon's admirable guide books. It would be too much of a good thing to pay out a quarter or half a dollar on the chance of its being returned by the unknown in another city. As the Boston girl was pondering this question at one of the tunnel stations her eyes fell on a rack containing some of the Elevated Company's booklets entitled "Why not Go to Boston and See the Points of Interest?" "Just the thing to serve as guide to a stranger who is probably intending to spend a few days here and who wants to know how to find her way around a city which is generally believed to be very intricate and complicated," was the thought Accordingly one of the yellow booklets was dropped into the convenient Boston bag to be mailed later to the Gothamite correspondent. Incidentally the Bostonian herself was led to look carefully for the first time through the printed document and to marvel at the amount of valuable information stowed away in seven pages of moderate size: hints and helps for use of the most liberal transfers given anywhere, concise descriptions of the historic places to which everybody who visits Boston wants to go, detailed suggestions for trolley trips from place to place at a fixed rate for the whole tour. Three days after the booklet was forwarded an acknowledgment came from New York stating that the information was exactly what was wanted and that some of the suggested trips would be followed during a contemplated September visit to the Hub. Thousands of these pamphlets must be used inthis way for at every season strangers are to be noted in the subways or at elevated stations using them as efficient guides during their enjoyable wanderings among the historic associations of the American Athens.

TROLLEY FREIGHT A SUCCESS

The extension of the electric express service of the Bay State St. Ry. Co. between Brockton and Boston began operation on Monday of this week. This extension fills in the link between all the great territory in southeastern Massachusetts, Rhode Island and eastern Connecticut and Boston, now making it possible to ship by this service between 141 points.

This new service which offers so many new and novel advantages to the shipper received a warm welcome in the new territory and the business done during the first few days was surprisingly large. The handsome new cars which were put in service attracted a great deal of attention as they ran over the new territory.

Shippers who tried the new service during the first few days report that they were very much pleased and that they found it running with remarkable smoothness for a new proposition. They find that it provides a speedy service between Boston and the points south where it operates which they have long desired.

During this week there have been four trips a day in and out of Boston. As business increases, as it seems likely to do very rapidly judging from the start, it may become necessary to add to this number which will be done as soon as it is found advisable.

ROOSTER'S SERENADES CAUSE PROTEST

Someone Will "Get It In The Neck." The Rooster-May be!

Is a rooster, with strong lungs, that crows night and day, a nuisance to the health of George Thomas of 10 Moscow street is a question that the august body, known as the Board of Health may be called upon to decide in executive session.

The case came to public notice through a petition sent to the Mayor reading as follows:

To the Honorable Mayor and Board of Health, Quincy.

Gentlemen: Respectfully representing George Thomas of 10 Moscow street, Atlantic that he is the owner of and resides with his family on said premises that William McInnis, residing on Moscow street next to your petitioner, has for a long time been in possession and control of a certain cockeral, or rooster which he McInnis keeps and maintains on the premises occupied by him on said Moscow street that said rooster, not content with crowing during the hours of daylight as is the usual and natural custom of cockerels, continues to crow during the hours of the night in such a loud way and manner and with such frequency as to disturb and annoy the slumbers of those living in the neighborhood.

That your petitioner is so near the premises of said McInnis and the crowing of said cockeral is so peculiarly annoying and disturbing of the sleep of your petitioner that he is mentally distressed and in consequence of the loss of such sleep has been made sick and his health has been undermined; that his family has also suffered much mental and physical discomfort as a result of the nocturnal crowing of said cockerel.

Wherefore, your petitioner prays that such action be taken by your honorable body as will relieve the situation as hereinbefore set forth, so that your petitioner and his family may enjoy the peaceful repose and slumber to which they are entitled.

This document was signed by Thomas himself. Attached to it was another petition signed by seven Atlantic men, all of whom are prominent and well-to-do.

We, the residents of that part of Quincy known as Atlantic, suffering the annoyance and loss of sleep as hereinbefore described, join in this petition and prayer that your honorable board will grant the relief requested.

The signers were Charles A. Gould, and M. E. Gould, 359 Hancock street; Walter J. Burgess, 42 Holmes street; John M. Clements, 4 Moscow street; Royal S. Eastman, 357 Hancock street School Commissioner, Herbert S. Barker, 355 Hancock street and Arthur H. Stowers, 3 Moscow street.

In the meantime, Hugh McInnis of 14 Moscow street, the alleged owner of the rooster is saying nothing believing that he will be permitted to keep his pet.

The mother of the boy is alleged to claim that the petition is one of spite for a rooster that could not crow would be no kind of a rooster. Some of the neighbors claim that the rooster crows so loud during the lonely night hours, that sleep is an impossibility.

The case is similar to one that was brought before the courts several years ago, when a well known resident of the Quincy Point district had his neighbor in court for the incessant playing of a graphaphone.

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir:—You have asked the fans to send intheir choices of an all Quincy base ball team. I have noticed that a number ofthose who have submitted their choices have picked Keohane, Curtis and Galvin for the outfield and I think there is no fan who will deny that those boys are the best we have in the outfield. My choice is as follows:

Barry, South Quincy, catcher.
Grethe, Manets, pitcher.
Desmond, West Quincy, first base.
Hoyt, Atlantic. second base.
Kelley, Adams, third base.
Kelley. Atlantic, short stop.
Curtis. Makaria, left field.
T. Galvin, South Quincy, centre field.
Keohane, Atlantic, right field.

Yours truly.

As was the case last year, Cambridge Latin will be the first football opponent of the local High school team this year. The game is scheduled to take place at Merrymount Park Tuesday, September 26, and from all indications should prove to be a warm contest. Both elevens are evenly matched and those who witnessed the struggle of last year will remember well that it was only in the last few minutes of the game that the local boys were enabled to wrest away a victory.

The schedule for the local eleven is very near completed. Owing to a cancellation of a game by Dorchester High, there are now two open dates which Manager Starrett White expects to have filled within a short time. One game is pending with a prominent High school and it is only a matter of deciding where the contest will take place.

The list of games this year is an exceptionally good one. Everett High, Boston College High. which defeated the former last year, and Waltham High are among the leading interscholastic elevens that apepar as being billed with the local boys. All the teams on the schedule are fast and the local boys will surely be given ample opportunity to test their powers. Coach Staff is especially pleased with the progress Quincy High has made thus far and expects to have a very formidable aggregation on the field when the times comes to play the first game.

The schedule, as arranged to date herewith printed for the first time is as follows:

September 26—Cambridge Latin school at Quincy.
September 29—Hingham High at Hingham.
October 3—Dedham High at Quincy.
October 7—Everett High at Everett.
October 10—South Boston High at Quincy.
October 14—Medford High at Medford.
October 17—Pending.
October 20—Open.
October 24—Boston College High at Quincy.
October 27—Open.
October 31—Brockton High at Quincy.
November 3—Powder Point High at Quincy.
November 7—Melrose High at Quincy.
November 11—Worcester High at Worcester.
November 18—Waltham High at Waltham.
November 24—Lowell High at Lowell.

Physical Director L. F. LaRose of the Y. M. C. A. and Cuniff, are down on umpire the Makaria-Atlantic series, and I daresay that two better men could not have been chosen to officiate

The Ledger's selection of an all Quincy team will appear in Monday's edition.

"Link" Elcock has returned from the "Bushers" and is in the pink of condition.

Nearly all of the local amateur runners have expressed a hope that "Bill" Prout, the famous runner, may become the president of the N. E. A. A. U. Prout is now an avowed candidate and has scores of friends who are ready to aid him in his endeavors to covet the new honors. Prout is eminently fitted to fulfill the duties incumbent upon the office.

Three times he has been the quarter mile champion of the N. E. A. A. U. and is at present the junior A. A. U. champion for the same distance. He was a member of the famous American Olympic team in 1908 and is a practising attorney.

One of the officials of the amateur association was around this week and visited the Quincy A. A. and the American A. C. club rooms with the intent of having both these local organizations enrolled in the N. E. A. A. U.

George V. Tushey who conducted the wretsling bouts in the Coliseum last winter, is now managing Ali Hassan of this city, a wrestler who has already given promise of accomplishing great things on the mat. Both men are now in Salt Lake city and will remain there until Hassan tests his strength and skill against the champion Frank Gotch.

UNIQUE LAWN PARTY WAS GREAT SUCCESS

D. O. Club Of Wollaston Have Interesting Fete In Aid Of New Church

Many Novel Features All of Which Were Greatly Enjoyed

The double lawn party of the D. O. club, was held on the lawns of the Rev. William Bingham Ayers and William Atkins, Saturday evening and was a most novel affair.

On the lawn of the first mentioned stood the main railway station with its ticket office and information windows. Here tickets to the other stations might be purchased and articles were on sale such as flowers, fruit, magazines, among them copies of the Ledger and Patriot. In charge were Misses Lily Collier, Ruth Page and Mary Sass.

On the piazza of the minister's residence was the waiting room where, during the evening, piano solos by Mrs. J. L. Barney were enjoyed.

Upon each of the stations, including the main station and waiting room was an illuminated sign denoting its name while electric lights above the lawns and spanning the street made the whole scene light as day.

At "Sandwich" where that article was on sale. Miss Nellie Palmer was the fair station mistress.

"Waterville," with lemonade on sale was presided over by Miss Angie Rose.

"Icy Glen," with its frozen dainties, was in charge of Mrs. Olive Millbury, Miss Marion Hicks and Miss Ethel Turner.

At "Sugar Hill" a tempting array of sweets were displayed with Miss Marion Smith and Miss Geraldine Scott in charge, while at "Readville," in a gypsy tent, Miss Anna Pirt looked into the future ofthose who lent their palms.

The entertainment of the evening took place at "Tarringtown," where a pleasing program was given. First came the sad poem of "Auld Robin Gray" done in pantomine by Miss Clara Mansfield.

In the second number, a group of songs, Miss Winifred White pleased all with her sweet voice the open air giving an added charm. Among the selections were "Sing, smile and slumber," "The woodpecker," "The red, red rose" and "The clover song." She was accompanied by Mrs. J. L. Barney.

The concluding act was a pantomine in three scenes, of "Extracts from Miles Standish." In the cast were: Miss Clara Mansfield as Priscilla, Artemus Dingwell as John Alden and Russell Coldwell as an Indian messenger.

Thethree scenes included: "Alden's plea," "Priscilla's defense," and "Ye betrothal." The reading was by Miss E. R. Musans.

The affair was in aid of the new Park and Downs church which is now nearing completion and a respectable sum was netted. The D. O. club is a secret society of young ladies, with the interests of the church at heart, and in the past few years has been of great assistance. Much of the success of the lawn party was due to Miss Musans, who had it in charge.

Ridgways Teas

Are Distinguished by High Quality

These teas are winning their way into favorable consideration by reason of their undoubted superiority of flavor. The name Ridgways is known throughout the world. This firm claims "the largest sale of high grade tea in the world," nor is the claim an extravagant one.

We conceived the idea that teas which are used and liked by so many thousands of customers in different countries throughout the world would be appreciated by the discriminating tea drinkers of Quincy. Subsequent events have shown that our conception of the matter was correct.

Every year, about this time, when the horsehide is essaying to give way to the advent of the pigskin, there arise numerous discussions among the different fans, relative to the calibre of the various ball tossers in local circles and the selection of an all Star Quincy team has always proved a source of pleasure for discussion, whenever the admirers of the national pastime chance to congregate, To say that such and such a player is without a peer as a ball tosser in local circles is a rather presumptuous statement, yet it has not infrequently happened that such a topic has commanded the attention of some of our most enthusiastic lovers of base ball.

The situation in local circles has been a most inspiring one this year, and the game of games has received especial attention on the part of the Quincy fans, as has been evidenced time and time again by the large numbers that have gathered at the different contests advertised as headliners. Baseball received an added impulse here this year and the prospects for a most successful close one year hence, are exceedingly bright.

Every team we had this season was a good one and the players as a whole can be ranked favorably with the best in their respective classes. The stars, as in every other department, have been conspicuous and after much diligent application to the matter, the Ledger selection of the All Star team is found to appear in today's issue.

Some should be included in the list, were the players to be comprised of those who have tossed the horsehide in our midst, but since these few do not reside here, they have not been considered.

All who have seen the different teams play, will admit that the greatest youngster in the catching department, is George Barry, the former Adams A. A. player and South Quincy backstop. His work throughout the season has been consistent, his throwing has been very accurate, and his batting has also been good Duggan. of West Quincy Boyle of the Apprentices and Allicon of the Mohawks are all good backstops, but the honors of the position seem to belong to Barry.

In the pitching department it seems that Barry's partner "Charlie" Knight, is about the best we have. He has twirled for the Adams A. A. and seems to have the call for the position over "Phil" Rice, the Makaria slab artist.

"Joe" Desmond, is without doubt the leader of the first sackers, and his work all along seems to entitle him to that position Creswell, of the Apprentices, and Jenkins of Makaria, are all good men yet their records this season, cannot approach that made by Desmond.

For second base, the call undoubtedly goes to Hoyt, the Atlantic player, whose appearance at the bat generally elicits the expression "in the

HELD TONIGHT

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight and although it is but a week since the last meeting, there is likely to be considerable important business as several committees have met during the week.

One of the most interesting matters to come up will be the question of a reduction in the price of gas.

At the last meeting of the Council, a resolution was offered by Councilman Richards, to the effect that the gas company be given a hearing at 8.30 tonight, to inform the City Council what reduction the company proposed to give and when.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Washington state has just had its first experience with a jury of six men and six women.

The Prohibitionist who does not set 'em up over his triumph in Maine must be the real thing.

Our idea of a really independent man is one who wears his straw hat as long as he doggone pleases.

Once again, the great fight promoters will have to go out in search of the "white men's hope."

The howling season will soon be on and many a warm contest is sure to take place right here in our midst.

Aviator Fowler is trying to fly from one ocean to the country. Some men will take all kinds of trouble to save paying a railroad fare.

Mr. Taft has travelled 275,000 miles since going to the Philippines in 1900 and he cherishes for his hearthstone the fire box of a locomotive.

Nathan Strauss says clean milk would save 125,000 babies in this country, but think how homesick the dairymen would be if their barns were scrubbed.

Evidently Canadians are resorting to the American Language in their reciprocity campaign. Premier Laurier has recently called Henri Bourassi a "wilful liar."

A Brooklyn magistrate says that anything that grows on a vine is fruit. You can't persuade the small boy to excavate the potato vine by making him believe it's a fruit tree.

The governors look a lot bigger reading papers at their conference than they do at home when the bosses come around and ask for their helping of pie.

The governors are conferring at Spring Lake, N. J. Team work between the states is needful if they are going to wallop the trusts. Illinois should not try to steal second at the moment when New York has knocked a pop fly to J. Rockefeller.

Speaker of the House Walker candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor was looking very fit when he called at the Ledger Office Friday for a few moments' chat. He is proving a most popular man and is undoubtedly a strong man for the position.

EFFICIENCY OF ADVERTISING.

One of the principal reasons for the tremendous growth of modern advertising is its unobtrusive efficiency.

Salesmanship through the personal presence of one man or woman talking to another individual often suffers much from the obtrusive personality of the seller. It is a fine art to sell goods. Few are trained to do it just right.

One person lacks the self assurance to push his arguments to the point of persuasion. Wearied by the persistent reluctance of the customer his initiative fails. The customer leaves the store unsatisfied.

Life in a retail store for the clerks is a long series of trying contacts. The doubt and indecision of the customers, their inability to know their own minds, irritate the clerks. They become grouchy, the customer gets indignant and the result of the little tiff is that the buyer goes off angry, not to return.

One great trouble is that it is hard for customers to make up their minds what they want on the spur of the moment. They naturally hesitate before spending money. The salespeople do not always have sufficient patience with this hesitation.

Selling goods by the newspaper advertisement has the tremendous advantage that the human personality does not affront the person whose patronage is solicited. The advertisement never wearies the customer, and is never officious. Printers ink is never tired of telling its story. If the prospective customer hesitates, she can read over the facts and figures for 20 times until she gets some idea what she wants, where the clerk in the store would become snappish if he is asked the same question twice.

The newspaper advertisement finds people in the mood for thinking about purchases. They take up the paper in the quiet of their homes, compare the offerings of the merchants at their leisure. It is merely up to the merchant to see that the questions naturally to be expected are fully answered.

Hence it is that a large proportion of the sales of modern merchandise are practically made to people before they leave their homes.

MUCH RAIN AND MUCH SUN

Two Unusual Features Of August Weather, According To Blue Hill Report.

Pleasant weather prevailed during the first three weeks of August but the remainder of the month was almost continously cloudy with frequent, heavy rains. The mean temperature of the month of 66.6 degrees was 0.7 degree below normal and 1.0 degree below that of Aug. 1910. There were no marked extremes of temperature, the highest reached being 89 degrees on the 10th and the lowest 51 degrees on the 20th.

The total rainfall of 6.70 inches was 3.13 inches more than the average amount, the greatest in August since 1898 and the most for any month since September, 1907. No measurable rain fell until the 15th and by far the greater part of the total occurred during the closing week. Rain fell on each day from the 25th to the 31st, inclusive, and the total for this period was 6.00 inches, the most in any one day being 2.26 inches on the 29th.

There was about the average relative humidity and slightly more than the usual cloudiness. There was somewhat more sunshine than is customary the total amount of 220 hours being 14 hours more than normal. The mean hourly wind velocity of 12.9 miles per hour was 2.5 miles per hour below the average and the lowest on record for August. The minimum velocity was 40 miles per hour from the northwest on the 18th and the prevailing wind direction was south. Thunderstorms occured on the 18th, and 29th, neither being of great intensity.—L. A. Wells of the Blue Hill Observatory.

LOVE SONG WAS NOT ENTICING

As Amorita Did Not Appear, Bargain Was Broken

Frank DeSantis and Antonio Pagnerio fell into the hands of Officer Curtin, early this morning, who sent them to the police station on a charge of assault and battery. When the case came up in court, an interesting tale was told of how a serenade upon a young lady, ended in an assault and the smashing of a mandolin.

According to the story, Antonio had a sweetheart who resided in West Quincy whom he desired to serenade thinking that he might win her love through the strains of a mandolin. He did not have one so DeSantis who did was urged to do the serenading. West Quincy was a long way from home and De Santis hesitated, as he did not want to come back home again because the hour would be late.

This was easily remedied for Antonio agreed to take DeSantis home for the night if he would do as requested. The two repaired to the home of the young lady on Willard street and soon the air resounded with the strains of an Italian love song.

Whether the young lady appeared on the scene or not, was not told but evidently she did not, for after the serenade, Antonio refused to carry out his part of the bargain and furnish DeSantis with a place to sleep. A war of words followed, during which the mandolin was smashed into kindling wood. Then it was that the officers stepped in and placed both under arrest. The court tried to have the affair settled by the payment of costs, but both were firm that the other was to blame and the case ended by each being fined $10.

THIS HELPS SOME.

And these words were carved over his Mantel: "I am an old man and have had many troubles, but most of them never happened."

When the world seems dark and you seem to see trouble ahead—read the above.—The Boston Globe.

New York, Sept. 18.—Gaby Deslys, who is credited by common report with having overthrown the kingdom of Portugal by infatuating King Manuel and enticing from him what was left in the royal treasury, reached New York on La Lorraine, to fill professional engagements at a salary said to aggregate $4500 a week.

The actress was met at the pier by a private detective who is under orders to keep her and her jewels in sight during her stay in the United States. He said he would employ four assistants on the job.

TEN PERSONS KILLED

Thirteen Others Hurt When Racing Auto Plunges Into Crowd

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Ten people were killed and thirteen others injured, some of them seriously, as the result of an accident during the closing miles of a fifty-mile automobile race at the state fair track. A Knox car, driven by Lee Oldfield, leaped from the track, crashed through the fences and plunged into the throng that lined the other side of the speedway.

The accident happened in the forty-third mile. De Palma had been leading with a lap to the good, and Oldfield was trailing him as they entered the first quarter of the beginning of the forty-third mile. The cars, traveling, it is estimated, at seventy-five miles an hour, were running side by side as they swung around the turn.

For more than twenty miles, spectators declared, Oldfield had been driving his car with one of the shoes flapping. In the hope of beating out De Palma, he continued at high speed.

Oldfield is in a hospital guarded by an officer and, as soon as he recovers, will be arrested.

WILEY IS GRATEFUL

Felt Sure That He Would Be Exonerated by the President

Bluemont, Va., Sept. 18.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, speaking of President Taft's letter, in which the chemistry bureau chief was cleared of the charges made against him by the personnel board of the department, said:

"I have read the text of the president's letter and am deeply grateful for the sympathetic and comforting expressions contained therein. I rejoice, too, that Dr. Rusby has been found free of fault, and am sorry that it was found necessary to reprimand Drs. Kebler and Bigelow, both faithful and conscientious workers. Their offense was in the phrasing and not in the heart.

"I have felt sure that the president, with his high sense of justice, would follow the course which he did.

"I am grateful also to the press of the United States for the practically unanimous support which it has given me during this ordeal.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES
NO SLATE NO CLINKERS
ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL
ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size
Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.
First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.
Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.
Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.
Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.
Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.
Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

At the second service of the season, the pews of the Wollaston Unitarian church were well filled by a representative congregation and the Rev. Carl G. Horst preached a very helpful discourse, taking his text from Proverbs 29:18, "Where there is no vision the people perish."

"Life" he said "must mean growth, development, progress; and all good things must be first a dream in the mind of man, an ideal before it is a reality—"The vision restores courage and is an essential condition of progress. God is still in his world still creating as in days of old, still speaking to us of today as to the men of long ago.

The necessity for vision is as great in state and community as in church and individual, and to maintain progress, the church must turn its face from an Eden, which has been to a Golden Age of greatness which the future holds—the glory of a people is not in its possessions or achievements but in ideals, in a vision which shall guide and uplift all who catch a glimpse of it. We must learn of prophets, of great and wise thinkers, of those who have had visions of the grand mission of humanity and not by those who have gained transient fame by the amassing of treasure, which is of passing value.

The meetings of the Young People's Religious Union will be held the first and third Sunday evening at seven o'clock. The first meeting will be held Sunday, Oct. 1st and will be in charge of the ex-presidents of the Wollaston Y. P. R. U.,—F. N. Rollins, Miss Almira E. Simmons, Ernest W. Arnold, Miss Evelyn Cummings, Miss Dorothy Fay, J. Harry Hooper.

The first meeting of Wollaston Women's Alliance will be held Wednesday, Sept. 20, at 2.30 o'clock. Mrs. Saville of Quincy, will speak informally on Alliance work.

The Advisory Board of the Y. P. R. U. will meet with Miss Marjorie Fay, 52 Marlboro street, Tuesday evening.

The installation of the Rev. Charles Phelps Wellman as Minster of the Channing church in Dorchester, takes place Friday evening, Sept. 22.

The two vocal solos yesterday morning, so spendidly rendered by Mrs. Frank A. Page, were thoroughly appreciated by the congregation, many of whom would like Mrs. Page to accept the position as our regular soloist.

The floral decorations yesterday consisted of various varieties of asters from George W. Bishop's farm.

Mr. Wesley Rhodes, mechanical engineer of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., will speak at Y. P. R. U. meeting, Sunday evening, Oct. 15th.

The twenty-fourth Biennial meeting of the National Conference of Unitarian and other Christian churches will be held at Washington, D. C., October 23-26.

HALL PLACE M. E.

A good sermon was preached by Rev. T. C. Martin at the morning service at the Hall Place M. E. church. His text was taken from Dan. 1-8. "But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine that he drank; therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

Sunday school was held at the close of the service. Junior League met at 3 P. M. and the Epworth League devotional service was held at 6.15, topic "The perils of Spiritual Ignorance." The leader was Miss May Williams. A good number were present and the service was a very helpful one.

Rev. Alfred Wood of the Parkman street church, Dorchester, occupied the pulpit in the evening taking for his text Rev. 3-20. "Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come to him and will sup with him and he with me." The sermon was forceful throughout and showed the need of man for God, emphasizing the responsibility of man in accepting or rejecting Christ and the willingness of God to enter the heart life that is opened to him and complete it and care for it even through death into eternity.

Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30. Subject: "The Gospel of St. Mark.

Sunday will be "Rally Day" in the Sunday school. The pastor will preach a special sermon pertaining to the day at the morning service. All are cordially invited to attend.

FIRST CHURCH

It is doubtful if the people of First church will ever have the opportunity again of listening to so many able preachers of the Unitarian faith as is afforded them at the present time. The list for September, October and November is a remarkably brilliant one.

The breadth and scope of these men was shown in the unusual occurrence of Rev. A. W. Littlefield and Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, both selecting the same text; one preaching on "Worship" and the other on "Present Day Revelation of God."

There was a good attendance at the Sunday morning service to greet Mr. Hudson and to enjoy his sermon which was delivered without notes and in a forceful and convincing way.

Mr. Hudson also attended the Sunday school and was much interested in the work and attention of the pupils and they seemed to appreciate his interest.

The officers of the junior alliance are arranging an interesting program covering the work for the coming year which will be announced at an early date.

The Fragment society meets Wednesday and the Quincy branch of the National Alliance, the fourth Monday of the month.

CHRIST CHURCH.

The re-opening Praise and Thanksgiving service of Christ church, which has been closed for redecoration, took place yesterday.

The rector, Rev. R. E. Armstrong, preached at both morning and evening services. He did not have any special text but told in brief about the way in which the church was redecorated. Mr. Armstrong said as follows: The decorations are the memorial windows done by hand in lacquer and gold. A symbol is above each window, namely a dove, a lamb, and some jewish letters. The dove for God, the lamb for Jesus Christ and the letters for the Holy Spirit. The organ pipes are very prettily painted in gold.

The nave of the church is buff in color and the ceilings are very beautifully tinted. The lighting system has also been greatly improved.

Christ church now presents a very lovely appearance.

The funds for this extensive work were raised by the means of sacrifice banks which were distributed among the parishioners. Mr. Armstrong said that we should rejoice in the joy of achievement and purpose accomplished. He gave an example of the lofty beams, how different in appearance after painting. That is the way with our lives which are covered up, and the real good that is in us is not disclosed.

Both services were largely attended The Sunday school was held at twelve o'clock with a large attendance. A brief service was held in the church. Services will be held regularly from now on. Bishop Lawrence will make his annual visitation for confirmation on November 26.

MAINE'S VOTE ON AMENDMENT

Situation Appears to Be More Muddled Than Ever

COUNCIL TO CANVASS VOTE

Augusta, Me., Sept. 18.—A special session of the executive council for the tabulation of the returns of the special election has been called for this afternoon. How long it will take to do the tabulating is conjectural, but it is not believed that anything definite will be known until sometime tomorrow.

With the result still in doubt and with the chances about even that the amendment will or will not be repealed, everyone is wondering what the effect will be if the law is repealed, when it will take effect, whether Governor Plaisted will call a special session of the legislature and what the procedure will be.

The resolve passed by the last legislature proposing the repeal of the prohibitory law does not provide any special time when it shall take effect. The nearest approach to such a provision is contained in the passage "and the governor and council shall count the same and make return to the legislature." Under ordinary circumstances no legislature would meet in Maine again until January, 1913.

The resolve further says: "If a majority of the votes are in favor of said amendment, the constitution shall be amended accordingly." If this is taken to mean that the legislature must review the findings of the governor and council, in which event, according to the opinion of a number of lawyers, the law cannot take effect until the legislature meets, and if the legislature is not convened in special session, the amendment would not become effective until after January, 1913.

Governor Plaisted is inclined to favor a recount of the state if any legal way can be found to bring this about. Some leading lawyers have declared that there can be no recount, as applied to this special election. It is the opinion of others that the supreme court can order the preservation of the ballot and check lists at any polling place where sufficient cause is shown, and to order a recount of the ballots cast, as otherwise the people or candidates would be at the mercy of any corrupt or dishonest election officer.

As to the power of the governor and council to make corrections in the returns to conform to additional information received is uncertain in the opinion of some. It is thought that if manifest errors are pointed out to the governor and council by sworn record testimony they may ask the judges of the supreme court to inform them as to their duty in the premises.

RIOTING IN VIENNA

Cut In Cost of All Necessaries Is Demanded by Mob

Vienna, Sept. 18.—A critical situation has arisen in Vienna, owing primarily to the high price of necessaries of life. Riots broke out Sunday, and many were killed or wounded. Troops fired on the mob, which erected barricades in the streets. There was a fierce exchange of bullets and the soldiers were pelted with all sorts of missiles.

Following a huge Socianist demonstration yesterday afternoon to protest against the high prices of food, troops were called to disperse the rioters.

The agitation is the culmination of months of bitter discontent over the steady increase in the cost, not only of food, but of lodging, clothing and all the necessaries of life. Serious results are feared.

BEATTIE IN RICHMOND

In City Jail Until Time For His Removal For Execution

Richmond, Sept. 18.—Henry C. Beattie, Jr., the convicted wife murderer, who has been confined in the Chesterfield county jail since he was found guily of the charge against him on Sept 8, was brought to this city Sunday and placed in the Richmond city jail.

He presumably will remain there until he is removed to the penitentiary for execution. He is condemned to die Nov. 24.

LEDGER'S SELECTION OF "ALL STAR" QUINCY TEAM

meadow," from a number of fans. "Matty" Nicoll, and "Bill" Manning, both of the Makarias, are exceptionally good men, yet when it comes to a question of the best, Hoyt seems to be in a class by himself.

The selection of a short stop has proved a most difficult task. McCarthy of Manets, Manning of Makaria, G. Erickson of South Quincy and Fay of Atlantic rank so closely, that it is difficult to say who is the "King of them all." For general all round work, it does seem that McCarthy, the clever Manet A. A. player, holds the first position, and as such is given the birth. The others mentioned have all played a fine article of ball at times, but the work of young Vivian has always been the same and therefore he seems to have the call for the position of glory.

Our third basemen. as a rule, have been very good. McKenzie of Makaria, Kane of the Manets, Fitzgerald of West Quincy, have all accredited themselves in fine style, yet those who have followed the career of young Gillis this season, know very well that his work has been of the sensational order. The former Manet player has created an enviable reputation this year, and seems to have merited the position in which he is now placed.

In the outfield it would be hard to choose three better men than Curtis of Makaria, Keohane of Atlantic, and T. Galvin of South Quincy.

"Honey" Curtis is pre-eminently qualified, judging from his past experiences to occupy the position of left field, and in that capacity would make an ideal captain for the all star team. Keohane and Galvin, would make running mates of an equal calibre, and it is safe to say that a better trio could not be found in semi-professional ranks.

Lang, of the Apprentices, has also made a name for himself this year, although O'Rourke of West Quincy, W. Galvin of South Quincy, Ganzel of Makaria, (who can hit the best of them all) and McVey, of St. John's A. A. are all worthy of commendation.

The lineup of the team is given in the order deemed best, from a batting standpoint.

Not Complimentary to Berlin

Berlin, Sept. 18.—The vital statistics of the city of Berlin for the year 1909, just published, show that out of a total of 39,474 births not less than 10,008, or above 25 percent, were illigitimate. During the same period there were 1970 divorces in the capital. Berlin also had 705 suicides and forty-five murders in 1909.

EDNA GOODRICH BECOMES BARONESS

Husband Is Rich and Companion of Ex-King of Portugal

New York, Sept. 18.—Friends of Edna Goodrich, the fourth former wife of Nat Goodwin, are authority for the announcement that the actress has married Baron Keane, an English sportsman, who shoots at clay pigeons. In letters received on this side of the Atlantic the bridegroom is described as "a wealthy English nobleman and the shooting companion of the ex-king of Portugal."

This information is said to have come from Miss Goodrich herself. One of her confidants, Mabel Taliaferro, just from Paris, confirmed the report.

Miss Goodrich and the baron are now at Biarritz. The friends of Miss Goodrich say that she will never again return to the stage and that she takes great pride in being a simple baroness with a lot of money to spend.

LOVES AMERICAN WIDOW

Kitchener Is Said to Have Surrendered to Her Charms

London, Sept. 18.—Gossip is busy with the rumor that General Kitchener, field marshal, British agent in Egypt, and therefore its real ruler, has succumbed to the charms of an American widow, Lady Naylor-Leyland, who was Miss Jennie Chamberlain of Cleveland.

Kitchener has often been called a "woman hater." He is 61 years of age but he looks more like a man of 40 years.

Certain is it that society is very busy weaving romances around the gallant soldier and Lady Naylor-Leyland, whom, strange to say, he met only very recently at the house of some mutual friends. She is one of the most charming hostesses in the Anglo-American colony. She has a splendid London home.

NO CLUE TO SLAYER

Officers Probing Murder of Mrs. Giannetti Are In the Dark

Saugus, Mass., Sept. 18.—The Saugus police and the state police officers who are co-operating with them in the search for the murderer of Mrs. Carmella Giannetti are admittedly mystified.

Chief Thompson of the local police said the officers have absolutely no idea as to the identity of the person who stabbed the woman in her home last Friday. "Nor have we any clue, however slight," he added.

Women Treated Hens Cruelly

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 18.—Mrs. Sarah Morrison and Mrs. Bessie Finberg, arraigned in the police court on charges of cruelty to birds, explained that they had disjointed the wings of hens so as to keep the fowl quiet while they were being weighed. The women were each fined $3.

MOONLIGHT TRIP OF BALLOONISTS

Three Pilots Sail From Pittsfield to New York.

DRIFT OVER CITY AT DAWN

Drop Eight Thousand Feet In Seven Minutes to Prevent Being Carried Out to Sea—Did Not Know They Were In Vicinity of Metropolis Until Bronx Was Reached—But Two Persons Witness Finish of Trip

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 18.—Three Massachusetts aeronauts who rose from Pittsfield in the balloon Springfield a few minutes before midnight Saturday night were startled to find themselves directly over New York city when dawn broke Sunday morning. Then for an hour the balloon drifted down across the Bronx, and as block after block of the city's lights were seen to go out and the sun began to break its way through the mists to the east, the aeronauts drifted across the sound and dropped to earth at Auburndale in Queensborough.

The waters of the sound above the Queensborough bridge were found to be warm, for as the balloon crossed it shot rapidly upward and only with difficulty was stopped at 85,000 feet.

At this height the entire island of Manhattan was clearly visible below, and the aeronauts could see far out over the harbor to the Atlantic.

The drop from the more than 8000 feet was made in seven minutes, a quick descent being necessary to prevent being carried out to sea. The landing was made on Orchard street.

Notwithstanding they had flown over the city of New York and landed within the city limits, the only spectators aroused to witness the landing were one mounted police officer and a man with a wagon. The latter took the packed-up balloon into New York for shipment.

William Van Sleet of Pittsfield was the pilot of the balloon, and with him were Jay B. Benton of Boston and J. J. Van Valkenburgh of South Framingham, all balloon pilots.

The journey was down across Connecticut, after passing over Lenox and the southwestern corner of Massachusetts, and except for realizing they were going in a southerly direction, none of the party knew that they were in the vicinity of New York until the Bronx was reached. There was a clear moon, but the light was insufficient at the height the balloon was traveling to sufficiently trace the path over the country.

The distance, air line, of the trip was 125 miles, which was covered in 5½ hours.

BURIAL OF ROBBINS

Casket Too Large to Get Either Into His Home or Hearse

Middleboro, Mass., Sept. 18.—The funeral of Frederick K. Robbins was held from his late home here yesterday afternoon. Robbins was killed by machinery at Linwood farms Friday afternoon. He weighed 510 pounds.

It was impossible to get the casket into the Robbins home and the body was carried out of the house by the bearers and then placed in the casket. The funeral then proceeded.

There was no hearse large enough to permit the entry of the mammoth casket and so the wagon used by a local undertaking firm for transporting chairs and flowers was used.

The funeral services were at the First Congregational church. Burial was at Hill cemetery. Here it took fifteen men on a set of ropes as the casket was being lowered into the grave.

CREW ON HALF RATIONS

Steamer Arrives at Boston With $600,000 Worth of Sugar

Boston, Sept. 18.—When the steamship Northumbria, Captain Hadley, ten weeks out from Eekalongan, Java, dropped anchor in Boston harbor, there was not a scrap of grub aboard her and the mixed crew had been on half rations four days.

The steamship left Java June 30 and was eight days late. Bad weather was encountered almost all the way.

The Northumbria brought 12,535,100 pounds of sugar in her hold. This is worth $600,000, which is $100,000 in excess of its valuation when she left Java, the quotations having climbed meanwhile.

Aged Woman Burns to Death

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 18.—Flames that enveloped her so that she resembled a human torch, resulted in the death of Mrs. Annie M. O'Connell, a widow, 65 years old. While she was carrying a lighted match her clothing ignited.

AUTUMN OUTFITS.

Hat Pointers, All Over Coats, Afternoon Frocks and Tailormades.

The shops are all showing advance models for Fall and Winter wear and it is quite possible to supply any needed items in the outfit for school girls or travelling satisfactorily from these.

TAILOR WRINKLES

Many of the coat and skirt models show a coat that comes well below the hip line and is cut in decidedly square style with nothing approaching a curve at the waist line. An attractive suit in black and white invisible check, has this style coat, with collar facing of royal purple and buttons of the cloth with a velvet rim to match. The skirt has a wide band of the cloth, about eight inches above the hem, that ends under a panel pleat front and back and is ornamented with the buttons. The waistline is just high enough to dispense with a belt. A pretty bodice of changeable purple taffeta to go with this is finished with a two-inch pleated frill that hangs over the top of the skirt, and has a guimpe and under-sleeve of white filet lace edged with cordings of black and purple satin, and a side frill of Irish crochet lace over a ruffle of black chiffon.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

A DARK BLUE SERGE.

A very dark blue serge-raven blue is the shade—coat and skirt model has the same length coat, with long collar facings, cuff and wide band trimming at the front of the skirt in front only of beige silk striped in black. The coat is one of the cross over models that is one of the cross over models that fasten low in front with two or three large buttons. The buttons have centres of the serge and rims of silk. Striped velvet and satin in green and blue is similarly used on another blue serge suit. Velvet trimmings are to be increasingly used.

A LITTLE EVENING FROCK

A little evening frock of wide striped blue and white voile has three narrow ruchings of the material corded in the centre, one at the foot of the skirt the others at six inch spaces above. The simple kimono waist, has a wide frill of pleated organdie forming a fichu and frills at the bottom of the elbow sleeve. A black velvet sash forms a pump bow at the centre of the back and has rather short tab ends, one finished with silk fringe. A large pink rose of satin ribbon tucks into the belt in front just where the fichu ends. Cotton voile is an inexpensive, good-wearing material that makes very pretty home dresses, and fussy little frocks.

ANOTHER MODEL

Another dress of white voile dotted at wide intervals with pink, had three overlapping flounces of pink changeable taffeta at the foot of the skirt each done in scallops, edged with narrow velvet ribbon. The taffeta sash, similarly bordered, and a wide half fichu of lace on the left side of the bodice, with a band of black velvet on the right, edging the deep rounded opening which was filled in with square mesh net that had narrow velvet ribbon threaded through a beading at the collar line. A big rose of black velvet in the belt at the end of the fichu and a hat of black net with a similar rose of pink taffeta just over the left ear.

THE VOGUE OF VALENCIENNES

Valenciennes lace is having a great run both for dress and hat trimming, and is often used in conjunction with the Venise lace that remains decidedly faddish. A pumkin colored taffetta silk seen recently had ruffles of Valenciennes dyed to match at intevals on the skirt, each headed with a design done in rat-tail braid. Hat of the same lace with a flaming red poppy as the sole trimming, similar poppy worn tucked into the sash of black tulle that finished in rosettes at the ends.

SHADED TAFFETAS

Changeable taffeta is again very fashionable and makes pretty frocks that answer for any fussy wear. They are made in tailored styles of coat and suits, or the long one-piece tailor-frocks, or in fancy dresses as preferred. Long jabots, usually one sided frills, are smart with these as indeed they are with almost any dress. Every woman desires a plentiful supply of these becoming accessories that come in an endless variety of make up, with Val., Irish or Venise lace trimmings, with all sorts of embroideries, and with colored hems, or plain hemstitched ones.

Why is the soda cracker to-day such a universal food?

People ate soda crackers in the old days, it is true—but they bought them from a barrel or box and took them home in a paper bag, their crispness and flavor all gone.

To-day there is a soda cracker which is the recognized staple — Uneeda Biscuit.

Uneeda Biscuit are the most nutritious food made from flour and should be eaten every day by every member of the family from the youngest to the oldest.

Uneeda Biscuit—soda crackers better than any ever made before—made in the greatest bakeries in the world—baked to perfection—packed to perfection—kept to perfection until you take them, oven-fresh and crisp, from their protecting package.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By
FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Ridgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Ridgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Ridgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Ridgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Ridgerwood will regret this decision.

Trainmaster McCloskey, Ridgerwood and Gridley are called out on a wreck. Gridley tells Ridgerwood he has tackled a hard proposition. Gridley conspires with Flemister.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Ridgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumord, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Ridgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Ridgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Ridgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Bart shoots at Ridgerwood, whose life is saved by Dawson. Benson tells how his bridge timbers were stolen. The gang used the stolen engine.

Ridgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Ridgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Ridgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Ridgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Ridgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

Flemister invites Ridgerwood to meet him at Little Butte. Spies follow Ridgerwood. Eleanor and her friends wish to accompany Ridgerwood to Little Butte.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Ridgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Ridgerwood's train and a passenger train. Ridgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

"It was not a special weakness of Flemister's to say the damaging thing under pressure of the untoward and unanticipated event; it is rather a common failing of human nature. In a flash he appeared to realize that he had admitted too much.

"Why, I understood that it was unexpected sight of your special standing on the Y that made the passenger engineer lose his head," he countered lamely, evidently striving to recover himself and to efface the damaging admission.

It chanced that they were standing directly opposite the break in the track where the rail ends were still held apart by the small stone. Ridgerwood pointed to the loosened rail, plainly visible under the volleying play of the two opposing headlights.

"There is the cause of the disaster, Mr. Flemister," he said hotly, "a trap set, not for the passenger train, but for my special. Somebody set it, somebody who knew almost to a minute when we should reach it. Mr. Flemister, let me tell you something—I don't care any more for my own life than a sane man ought to care, but the murdering devil who pulled the spikes on that rail reached out, unconsciously perhaps, but none the less certainly, after a life that I would safeguard at the price of my own. Because he did that I'll spend the last dollar of the fortune my father left me, if needful, in finding that man and hanging him!"

It was the needed flick of the whip for the shaken nerve of the mine owner.

"Ah," said he, "I am sure every one will applaud that determination, Mr. Ridgerwood—applaud it and help you to see it through." And then, quite as calmly: "I suppose you will go back from here with your special, won't you? You can't get down to Little Butte until the track is repaired and the wreck cleared. Your going back will make no difference in the right of way matter. I can arrange for a meeting with Grofield at any time—in Angels if you prefer."

"Yes," said Ridgerwood absently, "I am going back from here."

"Then I guess I may as well ride down to my jumping off place with my men. You don't need us any longer. Make my adieus to Miss Brewster and the young ladies, will you, please?"

Ridgerwood stood at the break in the track for some minutes after the retreating relief train had disappeared around the steep shoulder of the great hill—was still standing there when Bradford, having once more sidetracked the service car on the abandoned mine spur, came down to ask for orders.

"We'll hold the siding until Dawson shows up with the wrecking train," was the superintendent's reply. "He ought to be here before long. Where are Miss Brewster and her friends?"

"They are all up at the bonfire. I'm having the Jap launder the car a little before they move in."

There was another interval of delay, and Ridgerwood held aloof from the group at the fire, pacing a slow sentry beat up and down beside the ditched train and pausing at either turn to listen for the signal of Dawson's coming. It sounded at length—a series of shrill whistle shrieks, distance softened, and presently the drumming of hasting wheels.

The draftsman was on the engine of the wrecking train, and he dropped off to join the superintendent.

"Not so bad for my part of it this time," was his comment when he had looked the wreck over. Then he asked the inevitable question, "What did it?"

Ridgerwood beckoned him down the line and showed him the sprung rail. Dawson examined it carefully before he rose up to say: "Why didn't they spring it the other way if they wanted to make a thorough job of it? That would have put the train into the river."

Ridgerwood's reply was as inconic as the query. "Because the trap was set for my car going west, not for the passenger going east."

"Of course," said the draftsman as one properly disgusted with his own lack of perspicacity. Then, after another and more searching scrutiny, in which the headlight glare of his own engine was helped out by the burning of half a dozen matches, "Whoever did that knew his business."

"How do you know?"

"Little things. A regular spike puller claw bar was used. The marks of its heel are still in the ties. The place was chosen to the exact rail length—just where your engine would begin to hug the outside of the curve. Then the rail is sprung aside barely enough to let the wheel flanges through and not enough to attract an engineer's attention unless he happened to be looking directly at it and in a good light."

The superintendent nodded. "What is your inference?" he asked.

"Only what I say—that the man knew his business. He is no ordinary hobo. He is in your class or mine."

"Fred, tell me—you've known John Judson longer than I have—do you trust him when he's sober?"

"Yes." The answer was unqualified. "I think I do, but he talks too much. He is over here somewhere tonight shadowing the man who may have done this. He—and the man—came down on 205 this evening. I saw them both board the train at Angels as it was pulling out."

Dawson looked up quickly, and for once the reticence which was his customary shield was dropped.

"You're trusting me now, Mr. Ridgerwood. Who was the man—Gridley?"

"Gridley? No. Why, Dawson, he is the last man I should suspect!"

"All right, if you think so."

"Don't you think so?"

It was the draftsman's turn to hesitate.

"I'm prejudiced," he confessed at length. "I know Gridley. He is a worse man than a good many people think he is—and not so bad as some others believe him to be. If he thought you or Benson was getting in his way—up at the house, you know"—

Ridgerwood smiled.

"You don't want him for a brother-in-law. Is that it, Fred?"

"I'd cheerfully help to put my sister in her coffin if that were the alternative," said Dawson quite calmly.

"Well," said the superintendent, "he can easily prove an alibi so far as this wreck is concerned. He went east on 202 yesterday. You knew that, didn't you?"

"Yes, I knew it, but"—

"But what?"

"It doesn't count," said the draftsman briefly, then, "Who was the other man—the man who came west on 205?"

CHAPTER XXI.

"IT WAS HALLOCK."

"I HATE to say it, Fred, but it was Hallock. We saw the wreck, all of us, from the back platform of my car. Williams had just pulled us out on the old spur. Just before Cranford shut off and jammed on his air brakes a man ran down the track swinging his arms like a madman. Of course there wasn't the time or any chance for me to identify him, and I saw him only for the second or two intervening and with his back toward us. But the back looked like Hallock's. I'm afraid it was Hallock's."

"But why should he weaken at the last moment and try to stop the train?" queried Dawson.

"You forget that it was the special and not the passenger that was to be wrecked."

"Sure," said the draftsman.

"I've told you this, Fred, because if the man we saw were Hallock he'll probably turn up while you are at work—Hallock, with Judson at his heels. You'll know what to do in that event?"

"I guess so. Keep a sharp eye on Hallock and make Judson hold his tongue. I'll do both."

"That's all," said the superintendent. "Now I'll have Bradford pull us up on the spur to give you room to get your baby crane ahead. Then you can pull down and let us out."

TAFT WILLING TO COMPROMISE

Would Allow Senate to Confirm Arbitral Board

HE MIGHT EVEN ELIMINATE IT

President Begins Long Series of Speeches With Talk of Settlement of International Disputes Without War—Better to Leave Important Questions to Body of Impartial Men Than to Settle by Bloody Battles

Erie, Pa., Sept. 18.—President Taft ended the first of his forty-six days of speechmaking with an address to a big throng in the Auditorium here, outlining a plan by which he hopes to wipe out objections in the United States senate to the recently negotiated treaties of arbitration with Great Britain and France.

These treaties have been held up and threatened with defeat, largely because a number of senators have contended that the proposed joint high commission which would determine whether or not a question should be sent to arbitration practically robbed the senate of its function of passing upon the question.

The president suggested as a compromise that the American members of such a joint commission should be confirmed by the senate. He said he saw no reason why they should not be, if congress, or the senate, thought it dangerous to trust the president only to make the appointments.

Mr. Taft indicated that he would go further than this and be willing to wipe out the joint high commission entirely, if need be, and leave the decision as to whether a question was arbitrable or not to the decision of a board of arbitration. Still further, he would be willing to have this board pass not only upon the merits of the question, but also upon the jurisdiction.

"Either we are in favor of arbitration of issues which are likely to lead to war, or we are not," exclaimed the president. "If we are in favor of war as the only means of settling questions of importance between countries, then let us recognize it as a principle, and decline all arbitration; but if we are really in favor of arbitration as a means of avoiding war, then why should we not be willing to submit to impartial men the decision upon a question rather than to leave it to the result of a bloody battle in which, with a fair cause, we may be beaten, or with an unjust cause we may conquer?"

The president said that the advance made in two treaties negotiated at his instance by Secretary Knox with England and France was noteworthy, in agreeing to arbitrate all questions except those which affected the vital interest or the honor of either country.

These treaties provide that all justiciable questions should be arbitrated between the two countries, and that justiciable was to be understood to mean any question of an international character arising between the two countries, in which one country made a claim against the other, and which could be decided by the application of the principles of law or equity.

"Everyone will agree," said the president, "that this is a long step forward toward the settlement of all questions arising between the two countries."

One of the most significant things the president said was at luncheon with the New York state fair commissioners at Syracuse, when he explained why he had not taken occasion in his outdoor address to several thousand of city folks and farmers to discuss reciprocity.

"I am not going to speak about reciprocity," said the president, "until after the matter is settled in Canada. We have done our part and we are waiting, and it is just as well for us to keep quiet."

THOMAS H. CARTER

Former Montana Senator Long Prominent In the Public Eye

EX-SENATOR CARTER DEAD

His Public Service Covered a Period of Twenty-Two Years

Washington, Sept. 18.—Former United States Senator Thomas H. Carter of Montana, once head of the Republican national committee and since last March chairman of the American section of the international joint commission, died at his home Sunday. He was 57 years of age.

Mr. Carter had been under the care of a physician for months. He was able to go about, however, and his ailment, a filling of the lungs with clotted blood, did not become acute until about a week ago. Mrs. Carter and their sons were with him when he died.

Mr. Carter's career extended over twenty-two years of congressional and official life at Washington. An Ohioan by birth, an Iowan by adoption and a Montanan long before that territory was admitted to statehood, he jumped to the front almost from the outset of his work in congress.

PAYMASTER IS KILLED BY TWO HIGHWAYMEN

Victim Falls Dead Into Arms of His Aged Father

Pittsburg, Sept. 18.—While driving to the mines of the Superior Coal company, near her, with the semi-monthly pay for the miners, David Steen was shot and killed by highwaymen. His father, William J. Steen, who was in the buggy with him, caught the body of his son as it toppled over. The money, $3400, was saved.

The frightened horse sprang forward and with a groan the dying man toppled over toward his aged father, who encircled him with one arm and, drawing his revolver, began shooting at the bandits. They did not reply, but ran swiftly toward the hills.

A posse was quickly organized and the police in adjoining towns notified. Troopers of the state constabulary took up the case and captured two men answering the general description given by Steen.

CONSERVATIVE AS WELL AS BUSINESS REASONS WHY JOHN F. MERRILL
PRESENT CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS
SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED TO OFFICE

The American people have repeatedly insisted upon the fact if a public servant has faithfully performed his duty and real experience gained by years of service is of the utmost value to the taxpayer and to the County, he should be continued in office, (notwithstanding the fact at the present time there are people seeking the office who think that they have all the qualifications without the experience). Conservative business men, particularly in an office like the County Commissioner, where experience gained by holding office and the faithful conservative fulfillment of the duties of the same, would seem to require a continuation, there can be no reasonable argument made at the present time why the present incumbent, Mr. John F. Merrill, who holds the important position as Chairman of the County Commissioners of Norfolk County, should not be re-elected to office.

The most important reasons why he should be are the fact that some very important matters which are partially under way will have to be completed within the next two years, namely, the County Building at Quincy, involving an appropriation of $100,000, the rebuilding of Fore River Bridge involving an appropriation of upwards of $65,000 and the re-building of the Weymouth Back River Bridge involving an appropriation of $80,000.

In all these matters where the Land and Harbor Commissioners and other parties necessarily under law, have the detail of these matters under consideration, they have in every case elected Mr. John F. Merrill as Chairman of the board. That is an unqualified endorsement of his ability and integrity with his experience to fill the office, to the satisfaction of the various boards. This is a simple statement of facts to every business and thinking man, why it would be unwise to make any change at the present time by the election of anyone else to succeed Mr. Merrill to fill these important positions. Does it not seem particularly against the interests of the county to do otherwise than re-elect Mr. Merrill to this important position?

Of the four modern methods of heating—by gas, steam, hot water and wood or coal stove—gas is by far the most effective. Its heat is steady, brilliant, expansive; it is economical because it heats so quickly and evenly. It is more sanitary than the others; it is more cleanly. IMPORTANT MATTERS AT MEETINGS

Quincy branch G. C. I. A. and also Quincy Polishers' branch of the same organization, will hold their regular monthly meetings in Clan McGregor hall, Wednesday, and Thursday. Business of great importance is to be transacted and some very weighty matters are to be voted on by the members.

A great many of the cutters have been interviewed in connection with the proposition of Milford, Mass., branch to revise the present constitution of the G. C. I. A. to have a clause inserted in same, to the effect that the minimum rate everywhere on and after March 1. 1916, shall be $4 per day, but the consensus of opinion seems to be that it would be decidely unfair to jump an agreement from $3.25 minimum to $4 minimum. There are very few exceptions to this idea and from what has been stated the membership of the three Quincy branches will go on record against the Milford. Mass., proposition.

This is probably as it should be, because there is no question but what the monuments produced in Quincy are practically non-essentials, and the reasoning that applies to localities where building work is produced relative to prices paid for same could hardly apply in Quincy. because as stated Quincy produces non-essentials, whereas in a building locality the work produced is practically a necessity.

One other matter on which the members will vote is that of selecting two delegates to attend the convention of the American Federation of Labor to be held in Atlanta in November of this year. Sec.-Treas. James Duncan acts ex-officio and the granite cutters' organization being entitled to three delegates, two members in good standing from the general membership have to be elected. The candidates apparently meeting with the most favorable consideration from the Quincy members are Michael J. O'Brien, financial secretary of Quincy branch and William W. Russell. a prominent member of Barre, Vt., branch. Mr. O'Brien has an excellent reputation in Quincy, being aggressive and progressive, and has held the office of financial secretary for a long time. Mr. Russell is also well known in Quincy, having learned the trade in this city and lived here until 1896, since which time he has worked as a granite cutter all over this country, but for the past seven years he has lived in Barre, Vt. The feeling is that he and Mr. O'Brien will get the great majority of the votes cast in the Quincy branches.

ATLANTIC WON FIRST GAME

In Series For Championship Of The City

WAS WELL CONTESTED

With the rays of "old Sol" beaming forth with great effulgence in the afternoon of a day which at first gave evidence of proving a sad disappointment to the local fans, the Makarias and Atlantics came together last Saturday on the Water street grounds in the first game of the series for the championship of the city, before a fairly large crowd of spectators. The game proved to be interesting from start to finish, and it was not until the last man had been retired, that it could be said that Atlantic had won, to the key note of 5 to 2. The contest was, without doubt, one of the best ever played in local circles, and when the condition of the grounds is taken into consideration, it must be admitted that the struggle was certainly most exciting.

The rain of last week caused numerous pools of water to be in evidenc and at times the movements of the different outfielders had a tendency to make the onlooker believe that he was witnessing a water polo game.

Manager McKenzie of the Makarias was sadly disappointed before the start of the game, when he received word to the effect that Curtis, Rice, and Eggleton, three valuable men, could not appear in the lineup, on account of being absent from the the city "Wes" Ganzel and "Link" Elcock were quick to come to the rescue and were immediately enrolled among the Makaria list.

Leo Fish the crack Notre Dame college player covered second for Atlantic, and "Charlie" Knight, well known locally, occupied the mound.

Penley was in the points for the losers and twirled his best game of the season, allowing but seven hits and causing no fewer than thirteen of the opposing batsmen to withdraw by the aerial route. His pitching was one of the features of the game.

Knight, however, allowed only five hits, and though he was wild at times he nevertheless mastered the situation at critical moments, and twice when the bases were full, he retired the batters on strikes.

As was the case in the West Quincy series, Hoyt and "Ted" Keohane contributed some spectacular work. In the fourth inning, Keohane pulled down a foul drive in a most sensational manner, and in eighth where Makarias had three men on bases and two out, Hoyt captured a line with his gloved hand, while on the dead run.

Fitzgerald proved to be the heavy hitter of the day and played well behind the bat.

All in all, the game was well worth witnessing and the next contest gives promise of being still more interesting. The umpires did their work well not a protest being entered during the entire game.

It is probable that he next game will be played at Merrymount pary.

FATAL SEVENTH INNING.

After blanking his opponents for six innings last Saturday "Marty" Cunniff, twirling for the Knights of Columbus team, seemed to lose his effective gallantry in the following inning, when three hits aided by two bases on balls, and an error, allowed the Hepasophag to cross the plate with four runs and incidently secure more than enough runs to covet the silver trophy that was a stake for the occasion. Up to that critical moment the Knights had kept a close lead of 1 to 0 and it did look as if the game would go for extra innings. It was the third and final series for the cup, and the 5 to 1 score rolled up by the "Heps" explains sufficiently where the laurels now rest.

The game was played at Merrymount park and was largely attended. It was a most exciting game throughout and was marked by many interesting features, conspicious among which was the pitching of Taber, who allowed but one hit in the two innings he twirled, and struck out five men. Clifford also twirled effective ball for the "Heps," striking out six and allowing but four hits. He gave way to Taber in the seventh when a safe lead had been acquired by his team mates.

Fallon and Geary played well for the Knights, while the work of G. Stevens and S. Mackay excelled for the winners, Allicon, the Mohawk catcher and the much heralded "Jack" Kolson, did the back stop work for the Knights and "Heps" respectively.

The Knights felt the loss of Mullen their twirler, very keenly but it is doubtful if he could have done better than "Marty" against the heavy hitting "Heps." The summary:—

HOME RUN HELPED TO DO TRICK

In the final game of the series for the amateur championship of the city, the Colonials defeated the Station Outing club last Saturday, the score being 9 to 5. The game was keen and exciting from start to finish and was attended by one of the largest crowds that have ever been congregated on the ward four playground.

Charles Hebert did the slab work for the victors, and besides twirling effective ball, secured a home run that enabled his team mates to obtain a good lead. "Ben" O'Brien, the Boston college player contributed a one hand catch of a line drive. The score by innings:—

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

MY friends are asked: "Why does SPRAGUE want to be County Commissioner when he has a good business?"

BECAUSE the methods of conducting the business affairs of the County can be materially improved.

For some years County affairs have been so conducted as to build up a

A Ten Thousand Dollar bridge was recently built by the County Commissioners over Straits Pond at a cost of $20,800.00, absolutely without competition.

They place the contract for the granite in the new Quincy Court House at an excessive price, absolutely without competition. Their excuse is that there is only one quarry in Quincy that produces granite suitable.

HEARING ON THE GAS QUESTION BY THE CITY COUNCIL

THE PONY EXPRESS LAW

Considerable Confusion Saved By New Ruling

LIQUOR TRANSPORTATION

One of the important changes in the laws passed by this year's legislature was that of the so called Pony express law.

Under the old law, all permits to transport liquor dated from the first day of May in each year. It was permissible under that law to grant permits anytime after that date, although they all expired on the thirtieth day of April the following year.

Under the law as amended, this year, it is provided that permits shall be granted in the month of April, to become effective on the first day of May following, and to be granted only to a person, firm or corporation regularly and lawfully conducting a general express business, and to no other person.

The latter part of the amendment is also important, from the fact that a person not in the express business at the time of applying for a permit can not be granted a permit.

Every year several persons have applied to the City Council for permits who were not in business at that time, it being their intention of going into the express business if granted a permit.

This very point is one that has been discussed by the City Council many times and now that the legislature has solved the question by the new amendment, it will save considerable confusion.

LAUNCHING ON THE 25TH

Of the Steel Collier "Newton" at Fore River

FOR N. E. COAL CO.

The S. S. "Newton" to be launched at the yard of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, on the 25th, will form a notable addition to the fleet of the New England Coal and Coke Company of Boston. Length over all	406 ft. 0 in
Breadth	54 ft. 6 in
Depth	31 ft. 0 in

This vessel, which has been especially designed for the rapid and economical loading and handling of the bulk coal freight carried between the South and Boston, has a deadweight carrying capacity of 7200 tons of cargo coal, together with bunker coal, fresh water and stores, all on a mean draft of 23 feet. She is of the single deck type with long poop, bridge and forecastle, constructed on what is known as the topside tank self-trimming system with scantlings in accordance with the rules of the American Bureau of Shipping and the British Corporation for the highest class awarded by these societies.

ENTERTAINED IN HONOR OF THEIR DAUGHTER

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Golden, 75 E. Squantum street, Atlantic, was the scene of a merry gathering last evening at a birthday party in honor of their daughter Miss Alice Josephine.

It was a most delightful affair and the hospitality of the hostess was dispensed in a most gracious manner. There were pianoforte selections by Miss Harding, interspersed with vocal solos by Mr. James Costello with Miss Louise Costello as accompanist. The Misses Glyn also assisted at the piano.

During the course of the evening, refreshments consisting of fancy ices, wafers, salted nuts and bon bons were served. The favors were in the form of minature aeroplanes.

Miss Golden who is prominent socially was overwhelmed with congratulations and was the recipient of many choice reminders of the day.

"That hat looks good to me, hubby."

"If it does, I know another thing about it."

"What?"

"The bill will look big to me."

Manager Nichols Of The Citizens Gas Company Promises Reduction In Price Within a Year. Other Important Matters Under Consideration. An Auto Fire Department

Monday night's meeting of the City Council was an important one in many ways. In the first place the Committee on Streets made a grand sweep of the matters before it, reporting orders on some of the matters and referring others to the next City Council.

The Committee on Fire Department recommended an increase of fire men in the permanent fire force and the Committee on Water Supply an order for $10,000 for an additional main to Houghs Neck and for other extensions. Aside from this, Councilman Cherrington offered an order carrying out the suggestions outlined in his communication published in Saturday's Ledger. Resolutions were also adopted for a committee to investigate the street car service and price of gas.

The hearing to the gas company asking when it would make a reduction in the price of gas was a prolonged one. MR. NICHOLS.

In opening Mr. Nichols said:. "In order to arrive at an intelligent understanding of the question of gas rates in this city, it is necessary to consider some facts concerning the Citizens Gas Light Co., since the change of owners in March 1906.

On July 1, 1906 the price of gas was voluntarily reduced 50 cents per thousand cubic feet.

The Company immediately inaugurated a policy of expansion to provide a plant that would properly supply a city of 30,000 people, covering an area of 15 square miles; and at the same time make provision for the growth of population in this large area.

The result is that up to July 1, 1911, we have expended $490,000.00 in our efforts to properly serve this community.

During the first three years ending with June 30, 1909, under the present management, the operation was carried on at a total loss of $17,282.50. No dividends. of course. were paid within that period.

During the two succeeding years a small surplus was earned after paying 2 per cent in the year 1910 and 5 per cent in the year 1911, said surplus amounting in the two years to $3,205.84. Deducting this surplus in the last two years of $3,205.84 from the net loss in the first three years shows that the operation of the Company during the last five years has been carried on at a net loss of $14,-076.66.

Prior to 1906 no dividends had been paid by the Company for many years, and as already stated the first dividend under the present management was 2 per cent for the year ending June 30, 1910; for the year ending June 30, 1911, a dividend of 5 per cent was paid; this is a total dividend declaration in five years of 7 per cent and makes an average of 1.4 per cent per year, which can hardly be called a fair return on the capital invested.

On June 30, 1911, we had 4,474 customers and 82 1-2 miles of main, this gives an average of 54.3 customers per mile; the gas sold for the year ending June 30, 1911. was 61,485,000 cubic feet, an average consumption of 745,000 cubic feet per miles of main.

On June 30, 1906. we had 589 customers and 16 miles of main, making an average of 35.7 customers per mile of main, and gas sold was 597,-000 cubic feet per mile of main.

Your attention is called particularly to these figures, for while there has been an increase in number of customers and gas sold per mile of main, the average is much lower than in the districts supplied by other companies and who are thereby enabled to supply gas at a lower price; I have taken a few of these averages from the Gas Commissioner report for the year ending June 30, 1910, the last published report:

	No. of customers per mile of main	Gas sold per mile of main	Av. price received
Cambridge,	173.5	4,375,000	$ .878
Brockton.	86.9	1,658,000	1.11
East Boston,	106.3	3,591,000	.927
Taunton,	71.3	1.722,000	1.04
Boston,	142.1	5,569,000	.801
Dedham,	60.5	1,256,000	1.04
Malden,	108.3	2,479,000	1.00
Newton,	67.8	1,749,000	.977

These companies are all growing concerns on a firm financial basis and paying fair dividends on capital invested; some of them have a smaller mileage of pipe than we have in Quincy, but practically all of them are selling more than double the amount of gas per mile of main than we are and some a great deal more than that, furthermore, these companies quoted have grown up gradually with the districts supplied and have not been compelled as we have, to lay so many miles of pipe (66.5) in the last 5 years and make such a tremendous investment in such a short period, an investment that should have extended

FOUND NOT GUILTY

A case that occasioned same interest among the 400 of Milton hill, was heard in court this morning, when Nelson H. Slater and John J. Higginson were arraigned for violation of the automobile law at Conasset. It was alleged that Slater in an automobile and Higginson on a motor cycle, had a race to see which could make the best time. The case was tried out this morning and both parties were found not guilty. Miss Slater, the millionaire's daughter, who figured in an automobile speeding case some months ago was an interesting spectator.

AVIATORS AT BROCKTON

World-Famed Birdmen to Be Features at Fair

WILL FLY DAILY

Harry N. Atwood, holder of the world's cross-country flying record, and Lincoln Beachey, the most daring aviator that ever stepped into an aeroplane, have been secured for the Brockton Fair, which opens Oct. 3 and closes Oct. 6.

Both will fly daily and unlike previous experiences at exhibitions of this kind, the weather is hardly apt to stop either of these experienced aviators.

The almost impossible stunts performed by Lincoln Beachey in this country have been witnessed by many Bostonians, while Atwood who has brought honor to Boston through his daring, is too well known in this section to need introduction.

Both are the leading biplane fliers in the world today and the Brockton fair is the only institution of its kind that has been successful in booking the two airmen for the same period. Each has contracted to fly each day of the meet.

The fair this year promises to surpass all previous exhibitions and the committees in charge already have received more applications for the various exhibits than ever before have been recorded.

Two distinct biplane types will be used by the birdmen. This will afford a comparison of the two most successful aeroplanes of their kind constructed today and under conditions of the most favorable kind.

FLYING MACHINES.

Although the aviators have gone the youths of Atlantic spend hours flying their toy machines, some of which are very simple consisting of a plane, which is sent whirling from a spiral at a rapid speed so that it lands sometimes near the house-tops. Boys from the first grade in school up to the second year in high school may be seen enjoying this pastime. It only goes to prove that the leaven in the meal is working and who knows but one of these bright boys in days to come may develop something that will add to the safety of traveling in the air?

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The hoboes recognized Washington as the ideal convention city.

It needs only opportunity to demonstrate that Canada has its full share of spell-binding jingoism.

When they begin to send the magazines by freight the Stuart Set will doubtless be in the fast-freight class.

Beef is almost as high as on that historic occasion when the cow jumped over the moon.

Jack the Hugger is abroad in St. Louis, and it is said the female patrons of excursions to that city have greatly increased in numbers.

The center of population has been moved from a rattlesnake den near Bloomington, Ind., into the city limits. We hope it is carefully conserved and safeguarded.

It used to be enough to advertise that a horse was "sound, kind, and warranted not to kick," but now you must show that he won't shy when an aeroplane alights in the next field.

Cape May, New Jersey has rejected the commission form of government. However, enough of the New Jersey cities are accepting it to demonstrate its worth.

Mr. Roosevelt says that arbitration might not result in "peace with righteousness." Yet if he felt that he had not got righteous judgment in a law suit he would probably not set out to lick the defendant.

President Taft may be coldly received at some points on his western trip, and at others he may get too warm reception. But in either case he "ain't afraid." Bill is used to facing the music.

LOCAL ADVERTISING.

Arthur Brisbane, editorial writer for the Hearst newspapers, in a recent letter to the editor of the Pacific Printer, has some things to say about the local newspapers, and especially about the value of advertising in it, which may be found interesting and of value to our local merchants. Mr. Brisbane says: "To begin with, the local newspapers in proportion to their circulation are in my opinion infinitely the most valuable advertising mediums that we have. I say this, naturally uninfluenced by the fact that the organization with which I am associated has no country newspapers, but only metropolitan dailies.

"The value of the local newspaper is based largely upon the fact that the man who reads it looks upon it as a neighbor and a friend, a personal acquaintance, and attaches to the printed statement and advertisements of the local newspaper far greater importance than the dweller in the big city attaches to the statement of the advertisements in the big city newspaper.

"As one friend talking to another about certain kinds of goods can influence a friend more than a stranger, so a local newspaper, standing on a footing of friendship with its readers, can talk to them about goods for sale or any other topic and impress them more strongly than the big metropolitan newspaper, which is really a stranger, an abstraction to its readers, can impress metropolitan readers.

"My opinion is, that the local editors, the owners of the newspapers in the smallest communities, will never come into their own, until the United States government shall introduce the parcels post system.

"As matters stand now, hundreds of men who would be glad to advertise in local newspapers to reach the local population, away from the big department stores are unable to do so, because the thievery of the express companies makes it impossible for the manufacturer to reach the consumer reasonably.

"Two thousand circulation in the country would be worth more than two thousand in the city to the owner of the paper, if this country had a parcels post. In the long run it would be far better for the local storekeeper. It might crowd out the man who is hesitating about failing and who is going to fail in the end, anyhow. But it would certainly help the able man, and make rich many struggling editors.

"I believe I could prove this to the satisfaction of any intelligent newspaper man if I had a chance to talk to him for five minutes. If the man who owns a newspaper in the country had the power, backed with parcels post, to distribute manufactured goods to his readers directly, his paper would be of the greatest possible value and infinitely more valuable per copy of circulation than any newspaper in any big city.

"This is good advice from the point of view of the advertiser, and it is still better advice from the point of view of the average citizen. It would be a very sad day, indeed, for this country if there were not scattered in every little hamlet a conscientious, clean newspaper man, willing for ridiculously small pay to watch and protect the interests of the neighborhood.

THE MUSHROOM FAD.

About a score of deaths have been reported within a week or so from eating poisonous mushrooms.

A certain romance lends fascination to this mysterious creature of the fields and woodlands. In childhood we used to read how the fairies danced on the toadstools and on the green rings of grass that often grow around them.

Assuming that a lover of edible mushrooms takes the short end of a 1,000 to 1 bet on a poisoning case, the game affords him that possibility of disaster that emphasizes his pride in his skill. Finding himself alive after eating mushrooms, he feels the sense of satisfied achievement in the way of research.

You never see men of a sporting temperament out gathering the humble and democratic berry. There is no tang of risk about such a commonplace pursuit, which is condescendingly relegated to women, children and the decrepit.

The gamy mushroom, however, arouses the lust of competition. Your antagonist is not so much the chance of getting the wrong mushroom, as your sense of superiority over your neighbor, whose ignorance and fears debar him from one of the choicest morsels in nature's larder, which is placed on your table by your own science.

There is something rather picturesque, too, in the thought of getting your breakfast in so unlikely a spot as one of the shade trees of your street, or the barren hillocks of your pasture. Like the boy who sticks his fingers in the jam jar, you seem to have extracted a goody from Mother Nature's pantry when she wasn't looking.

The careful student can undoubtedly eat mushrooms with safety. He naturally argues that no one declines to eat fruits or berries found growing wild merely because there are poisonous varieties, then why also veto the mushroom?

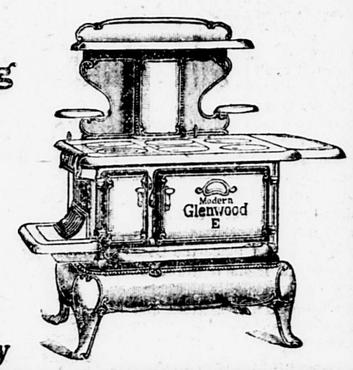

Nature seems to have expended some of her most vital juices in this exotic creation. Mushrooms are known to life asphalt pavement, and crack it in their desire to get light and air. It is no wonder that their fibre contains a powerful appeal to human appetite.

A well known scientist says that it is not possible for the amateur to tell whether unknown varieties are poisonous or not. As everyone is an amateur to begin with, and all varieties unknown, most of us regard the mushroom fad in the light that you should not go into the water until you have learned to swim.

—Human greatness is never measured by figures and dollar marks. But could the contrasts in life and the inscrutability of destiny be more strongly illustrated than by the circumstances of Abraham Lincoln's early life and the fact of a two-million-dollar monument to his memory in a great nation's capital?—Providence Bulletin.

CONVICT GETS AWAY IN WOMAN'S CLOTHES

Murderer Was a "Trusty" In Ohio Penitentiary

Columbus, O., Sept. 19.—Michael Soboleski, a murderer serving a life sentence, walked out of the Ohio penitentiary disguised in a tight-fitting coat and a white skirt belonging to the wife of Warden Jones.

His features were concealed under an old hat and a white veil. Under the disguise he wore a gray suit belonging to the warden's son.

Soboleski, who is 34, had been a "trusty" for the past five months and was accorded the freedom of the warden's apartments.

Soboleski's wife filed suit for divorce several weeks ago, and since that time he had been acting strangely. Authorities fear he may have escaped to Toledo on an excursion train with the intention of seeking out and killing his wife.

IN NEARLY EVERY ROOM USE CARPET RUGS

Use them in your parlor, living room, dining room, library, den, hall and chambers. Why not? They are taking the place of regular carpets because there are real reasons why they should.
Easily removed, consequently easily cleaned, therefore more sanitary. They look better and wear better than most floor fabrics, because they occupy, as a rule the centre of the room only, they are not subject to the scrubbing, wear in front of your entrances, which grinds out a regular carpet. Rugs need not lay on the floor until they absorb dirt and germs, as a carpet would, but they can be taken up and shaken every few days. Therefore we say, "Why not discard ALL your carpets, put down cleanly, durable woodoleum borders, where you have no finished floor. This will give you a suitable background for the display of your rugs. So far as bedroom use is concerned, we have today most beautiful linoleums, in regular straw matting effects. These may be used with small rugs. The effect will be artistic and satisfying.

vs.
Loretta B. Crane, Libellant,
Libel for Divorce.

Respectfully represents Loretta B. Crane of Quincy in our County of Norfolk that she was lawfully married to said Herbert N. Crane, recently of said Quincy, now of parts unknown to your libellant in said Quincy, on the eighth day of June A. D. 1908, that they continued to live in said Quincy ever since; that one child has been born to your libellant and libellee, Herbert N. Crane, a minor. That your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations but the said Herbert N. Crane being wholly regardless of the same and being of sufficient ability grossly, wantonly and cruelly refused and neglected to provide suitable maintenance for your libellant: that immediately after said marriage said libellee utterly deserted your libellant, said utter desertion continuing for more than three years next prior to the filing of this libel. Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Herbert N. Crane and that the libellant may have the care and custody of said minor child free from any interference on the part of the libellee. Dated this twenty-eighth day of August A. D. 1911.

GIRL LEADS IN CONTEST

Laura White Has 9202 Votes. Geo. Mahoney Leads Boys

GETTING EXCITING

While Laura Wight leads the other girls by a fairly large margin, there is still time enough before the contest closes for the girls to catch up or out-distance her.

George Mahoney is being closely pressed by Theodore Main and Patrick Stanton. We have no doubt that some of the other boys in the contest will make it very interesting for the present leaders before the polls close on Nov. 4th.

One thing is certain; there are six handsome gold watches waiting to be worn by the six most popular boys and girls of Quincy and vicinity

The following is the standing of the candidates as given out last night from the Sperry & Hutchinson Premium Parlor located at the Quincy Department Store

FARMERS TO CO-OPERATE

Intend to Organize Association For Sale of Products

Plainfield, Conn., Sept. 19.—The approach of the date on which new contracts must be made for supplying Boston and Providence dealers with milk has brought about a canvass through this section of the state and in Rhode Island in the interests of the formation of a co-operative association, which would handle not only milk, but other farm products as well, such as eggs, butter and poultry.

The idea is to eliminate the middleman. A meeting will soon be held at which definite plans are expected to take form.

CITY COUNCIL

over a period of 25 or 30 years, had the former owners of this Company properly operated the franchise they owned.

On February 1st last a further voluntary reduction of 10 cents per thousand cubic feet was made, and the result was that for February, March and April our net earnings showed a loss in comparison with the previous year; this is an invariable result, as it takes time to get back to former basis of net income after a reduction, depending of course on the growth of the business; but it should be borne in mind that the reduction already made represents a saving to our customers of $96,214.70.

SERVICE.

The earning power of a gas undertaking rests entirely on the gas sold per mile of main, and reductions in the price of gas necessarily depend on our ability to increase our sales, that this city is a rapidly growing one no one should realize more than you gentlemen who are called upon to provide appropriations to carry it on; and with the growth of this city we propose to keep pace. We have inaugurated a policy of making reductions in the price of gas as the growth of the business permits and we propose to continue that policy; to ask us to name the date and amount of the next reduction is to ask an impossibility, as from a careful perusal of the figures given, you must realize; it is asking us in fact to discount the future, which we most certainly are unable to do.

That we will reduce the price of gas and reduce it just as soon and just as much as the conditions warrant, you may rest assured.

Councilman Richards asked if there was any reason why Milton should pay but 80 cents and Quincy $1.40.

In reply Mr. Nichols said that in the early seventies, Milton was sold to the Dorchester company and was part of one large district, while Quincy was alone by itself. The company that originally controlled Quincy had the same opportunity to develop its plant as other places, but he regretted to say that the city government allowed it to go on as it did for so many years.

In response to other questions by Councilman Richards he said that something like $400,000 had been expended in development in five years, that usually extended over a period of thirty years. This sum does not include the amount needed for running expenses. In taking Milton, you are comparing a part of the consolidated district with Quincy, which is temporary. The saving to consumers this year, by reductions the present company have made, amount to $6,200. As stated before, the policy of the company is to make reductions in the price, as fast as possible and voluntarily.

Councilman Richards further asked if the additional price, paid by Quincy consumers, was not used to extend the plant of which the company had a monopoly in Quincy.

In reply Mr. Nichols said no. He further said that it was a well known fact that the Gas Commission would not allow two companies to serve one place, because the consumers have to pay for it in the end. The increase in price of gas in Quincy, over other places, is not used for extensions. At the start we reduced the price of gas fifty cents. We only took the plant at the earnest solicitation of the Board of Trade, and city, and we have tried to give you an up to date service which you did not have under the old company.

Councilman Richards further asked if he had any objections to the Council going to the Gas Commission at this time?

Mr. Nichols replied no, that he would be very glad to have any investigation asked for, made. We will be glad at any time to have a committee come to our office and see what has been done.

Councilman Bailey asked what the capital stock of the company was and was informed about $350,000. He then wanted to know how it was, if the capitol stock was but $350,000, how the company had expended $400,000 of its capital stock in extensions.

Mr. Nichols replied that in all companies of this kind, before it could obtain an increase of its capital, it was necessary to show that it had the amount in the plant asked for. For this reason it was necessary to expend the amount named before the Gas Commission would allow the increase in capital He further said that the receipts from gas used, was not used for extensions, but to pay current expenses and maintenance.

In reply to Councilman Smith, Mr. Nichols said if the company had made further reductions, it would have placed itself further in debt. It seemed better to make a small reduction, and make them often, and build up the buisness. It will again be reduced as soon as possible. As a business proposition the company would be only too glad to reduce price as soon as possible.

In reply to a further question by Councilman Smith, Mr Nichols said that if the company stopped extensions it would make no difference. As a matter of fact the city was now practically covered with the exception of Montclair and Rock Island. The increase of consumption per mile of main, was what reductions depended upon. We now have many miles of unproductive mains.

Councilman Leslie asked about the difference in price paid by Milton and that paid by Quincy, when the gas that supplied both places came from the same place?

Mr. Nichols then again explained that Milton was a part of one company controlling a large territory, while Quincy was alone by itself

In closing, Mr. Nichols said that based on the present output of gas in Quincy, the reduction of sixty cents made by the company since it had been in Quincy meant a saving to the consumers of $96,000.

At this point the hearing was closed.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies to-day that relieve, but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. Here is proof:

Mrs. F. J. Reid, 81 West street, Whitman, Mass., says: "After suffering for years from Kidney complaint and spending a great amount of money for medicine without being helped, I was indeed gratified when Doan's Kidney Pills cured me so quickly. The pains in my back never ceased and I could not sleep well, getting up in the morning as tired as when I went to bed. I had begun to look bad and was growing despondent when I happened to read about Doan's Kidney Pills. Procuring a supply I began to use them and the contents of three boxes cured me.

The above statement was given on Oct. 6, 1908 and when Mrs. Reid was inteviewed on July 27, 1911, she said: "I have no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills and I willingly confirm my former statement. I use this remedy occasionally when in need of a kidney remedy and always find relief."

WILL KEEP PLANT AT FORE RIVER

"There is nothing in the report," declared Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles yesterday regarding a reported change of part of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company's plant to a site on the Chelsea waterfront.

It was understood that the Metropolitan Coal Company had leased part of its present property to the Quincy firm, securing adjacent sites for its own wharves.

TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY.

Thursday the good old town of Dedham shire town of Norfolk county will have another birthday. Just 275 years ago the town was established and named by the general court upon a petition signed by 22 freemen.

Thereupon the Dedham Covenant was drawn up. Among its 125 signers were Jonathan Fayerbanke and his sons John, George and Jonathan Jr.

Jonathan Fayerbanke, with his wife and six children, came to the new world from England in 1633, landing at Boston, where he remained previous to his coming to Dedham in 1636. In that year he built his home at the corner of what is now East street and Eastern avenue, which today is generally believed to be the oldest frame house in existence in this country.

It has continuously been owned and occupied for this period by the lineal descendants of the sturdy old settler who built it. The late Miss Rebecca Fairbanks was the last to use it as a dwelling and since she ceased to live it has been in possession of the FFairbanks family of America association.

In honor of this 275th anniversary of the signing of the Dedham Covenant by Jonathan Fayerbanke, open house will be observed Thursday at the old homestead by the Fairbanks family association. Visitors will be given a cordial welcome and entertained by the association.

STOLYPIN DIES FROM WOUNDS

End Comes After Premier Makes Most Hopeful Rally

KIEV JEWS ARE DISTURBED

Outbreak of Anti-Semitic Feeling Is Expected—Assassin Gives Police Clues and Hundred and Fifty Arrests Are Made—Two Versions of Circumstances Leading to Crime—Premier Was Close Friend of Czar

Kiev, Sept. 19.—Peter A. Stolypin, premier of Russia, died last evening from an assassin's bullet, which had been fired into his body last Thursday night at the opera house while Emperor Nicholas and the imperial family looked on.

M. Stolypin had been hovering between life and death ever since. Yesterday the stricken statesman's condition became so acute that members of his family gathered at the bedside.

The patient experienced a long period of lethargy during the day. The development of unfavorable symptoms followed a few hours after the patient had made a most hopeful rally. The rally followed immediately the removal of the bullet by the surgeons in an effort to relieve the premier of the unbearable pain of which he had complained.

The Jewish residents of Kiev are in a panic and an outbreak of anti-Semitic feeling is expected hourly. Thousands of residents have fled since the exodus began on Saturday. Residents of the ghetto barricaded their homes last evening, fearing the worst from the Cossacks.

One hundred and fifty arrests of lawyers and other acquaintances of Dmitry Bogroff, the man who shot Stolypin, have been made at Kiev.

Bogroff talked freely yesterday of his past life and furnished the authorities with valuable clews. The original confident behavior of the prisoner has given way to despondency and he is now receiving medical treatment.

Among the versions of the circumstances leading up to the crime and which must be investigated is the assertion that Bogroff belonged to a new autonomous revolutionary group, the aim of which is to assassinate individual statesmen.

In the course of the questioning Bogroff declared that he held Stolypin as one of the most pernicious men of state. Another version is that the revolutionaries put Bogroff, who, according to the police, had been filling the dual role of revolutionary agent and police spy, in a dilemma where he had to kill Stolypin or be himself killed. Bogroff chose to attempt the first alternative.

When Stolypin accepted the premiership in July, 1906, he was perfectly conscious of his danger. He remarked at the time: "I have no doubt that attempts will be made upon my life, but I hope that order will be restored and stability established in Russia before they are successful."

As Stolypin outlined the policy of the government, it was to be one of "strong handed reform." He promptly issued circulars to the provincial authorities, directing them to spare no effort to prevent disturbances. As minister of the interior, prior to his taking over the premiership, he was assailed in the duma, in making his first speech, with cries of "murderer" and "assassin," when he defended the alleged illegal acts of police officials and provisional governors in the suppression of disorder. But during his incumbency he blocked the Russian outbreaks which threatened at one time to bring about a revolution.

DREW RAILROAD SPIKES

Four Men Implicated In Wreck of an Express Train

Middletown, Conn., Sept. 19.—An alleged confession by one of the Italians arrested for complicity in the derailing of the Saybrook express at Maromas on the night of Aug. 27 was given by Albino Allesio, a private detective from Boston, in the coroner's probe into the wreck.

Allesio claimed he got Lisi to tell of the preparations for wrecking the express. In effect it was that Lisi and three other men, all of whom were angry at having been discharged from section gangs, secured tools and under cover of darkness drew out twenty-five to thirty spikes and raised one end of a rail. They waited about until the train was wrecked, when they dispersed to their homes.

Secretary Meyer has just arrived at his summer home from England, where he spent some weeks studying the British navy yards and private shipbuilding plants by courtesy of the British admiralty.

The secretary believes particularly the navy yard at Charlestown and also the stations at Brooklyn and Norfolk should be developed into the great naval bases of the Atlantic.

TAFT DEFENDS THE TRUST LAW

Is Satisfactory as Interpreted by Supreme Court

TS CRITICS ARE CHALLENGED

Asked to Point Out Where the Statute Fails—We Can Get Along With Competition and Without Monopoly—President's Views In Accord With Court's Decisions—Opposed to Amendment of "Rule of Reason"

Detroit, Sept. 19.—At luncheon with the board of commerce here, President Taft made what may be termed the first of his political speeches of his six weeks' tour of the country. He took up the "trusts" and clearly outlined his views concerning them.

He defended with vigor the decisions of the United States supreme court in the Standard Oil and tobacco trust cases, and there was a distinct campaign note in Taft's challenge to his ancient political enemy, William J. Bryan, to point out what particular contract or restraint of trade he would condemn which would not be condemned within the definition of the statute as laid down by Chief Justice White. Said the president:

"We did get along with competition; we can get along with it. We did get along without monopoly; we can get along without it; and the business men of this country must square themselves to that necessity.

"Either that, or we must proceed to state socialism and vest the government with power to run every business."

Mr. Taft added rather significantly that persons who do not understand the decisions and really do not understand the law have had a great deal to say about them. It was not fair to the court, he declared, to say that it had read the word "reasonable" into the anti-trust statute.

"I am entirely opposed to an amendment of the anti-trust law," said the president. "It is now a valuable government asset and instrument. Tested and brought into beneficial use by twenty years of litigation and construction by the highest court, why should we imperil its usefulness by experiments?"

The outcry for amendments following the supreme court's decisions, the president said, had resulted in proposals prepared without a real understanding of the law, and he added that while this agitation might serve the purpose of promoting "unreasonable" and unreasoning discontent it certainly ought not to be considered seriously.

Mr. Taft referred to the fact that immediately after the trust decisions were handed down by the supreme court Senator La Follette spread on the public records a quotation from one of the president's messages as being at variance with the "rule of reason" laid down by the court. The president asserted that his views as expressed in the message were in exact accord with the decisions.

President Taft was greeted by a big throng at the state fair grounds, five miles from this city. Two of the granges of the state boycotted the fair this year because of the invitation extended to the president, basing their action on the president's reciprocity campaign.

The president's speech followed the lines of his Syracuse address, in which he urged the adoption of scientific methods in farming and the conservation of the soil.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By
FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Lidgerwood's watchfulness saves his train. The passenger train is wrecked, with loss of life. Lidgerwood suspects Flemister and Hallock.

The shifting took some few minutes and more than a little skill. While it was in progress Lidgerwood was in the service car trying to persuade the young women to go to his stateroom for a little rest and sleep on the return run. In the midst of the argument the door opened and Dawson came in. From the instant of his entrance it was plain that he had expected to find the superintendent alone; that he was visibly and painfully embarrassed.

Lidgerwood excused himself and went quickly to the embarrassed one, who was still anchoring himself to the doorknob. "What is it, Fred?" he asked.

"Judson; he has just turned up, walking from Little Butte, he says, with a pretty badly bruised ankle. He is loaded to the muzzle with news of some sort, and he wants to know if you'll take him with you to An"— The draftsman, facing the group under the Pintsch globe at the other end of the open compartment, stopped suddenly, and his big jaw grew rigid. Then he said, in an awed whisper, "God, let me get out of here!"

"Tell Judson to come aboard," said Lidgerwood, and the draftsman was twisting at the doorknob when Miriam Holcombe came swiftly down the compartment.

"Wait, Fred," she said gently. "I have come all the way out here to ask my question, and you mustn't try to stop me. Are you going to keep on letting it make us both desolate—for always?" She seemed not to see or care that Lidgerwood made a listening third.

Dawson's face had grown suddenly haggard, and he, too, ignored the superintendent.

"How can you say that to me, Miriam?" he returned, almost gruffly. "Day and night I am paying, paying, and the debt never grows less. If it wasn't for my mother and Faith— But I must go on paying. I killed your brother"—

"No," she denied. "That was an accident for which you were no more to blame than he was, but you are killing me."

Lidgerwood stood by, manlike, because he did not know enough to vanish. But Miss Brewster suddenly swept down the compartment to drag him out of the way of those who did not need him.

"You'd spoil it all if you could, wouldn't you?" she whispered in a fine feminine rage. "And after I've moved heaven and earth to get Miriam to come out here for this one special blessed moment! Go and drive the others into a corner and keep them there."

Lidgerwood obeyed quite meekly, and when he looked again Dawson had gone and Miss Holcombe was sobbing comfortably in Eleanor's arms.

Judson boarded the service car when it was pulled up to the switch, and after Lidgerwood had disposed of his passengers for the run back to Angels he listened to the ex-engineer's report, sitting quietly while Judson told him of the plot and of the plotters. At the close he said gravely, "You are sure it was Hallock who got off the night train at Silver Switch and went up the old spur?"

It was a test question, and the engineer did not answer it offhand.

"I'd say yes in a holy minute if there wasn't so blamed much else tied on to it, Mr. Lidgerwood."

"Yet you are convinced in your own mind?"

"I am."

"But the third man, Judson, the man you saw beating his fists on the bulkhead air lock—who was he?" persisted Lidgerwood.

"Now you've got me guessin' again. If I hadn't been dead certain that I saw Hallock go on ahead with Flemister— No," reading the question in the superintendent's eye, "not a drop, Mr. Lidgerwood; I ain't touched not, tasted not n'r handled not—'r leastwise, not to drink any," and here he told the bottle episode which had ended in the smashing of Flemister's sideboard supply.

Lidgerwood nodded approvingly when the modest narrative reached the bottle smashing point.

"That was fine, John," he said, using the ex-engineer's Christian name for the first time in the long interview. "If you've got it in you to do such a thing as that at such a time there is good hope for you. Let's settle this question once for all. All I ask is that you prove up on your good intentions. Show me that you have quit, not for a day or a week, but for all time, and I shall be only too glad to see you pulling passenger trains again. But, to get back to this crime of tonight, when you left Flemister's office, after telephoning Goodloe, you walked down to Little Butte station?"

"Yes; walked and run. There was nobody there but the bridge watchman. Goodloe had come on up the track to find out what had happened."

"And you didn't see Flemister or Hallock again?"

"No."

"Flemister told us he got the news by phone, and when he said it the wreck was no more than an hour old. He couldn't have walked down from the mine in that time. Where could he have got the message and from whom?"

Judson was shaking his head.

"He didn't need any message, and he didn't get any. I'd put it up this way—after that rail joint was sprung open they'd go back up the old spur on the handcar, wouldn't they? And on the way they'd be pretty sure to hear Cranford when he whistled for Little Butte. That'd let 'em know what was due to happen right then and there. After that it'd be easy enough. All Flemister had to do was to rout out his miners over his own telephones, jump on to the handcar again and come back in time to show up to you."

Lidgerwood was frowning thoughtfully.

"Then both of them must have come back, or—no; that must have been your third man who tried to flag Cranford down. Judson, I've got to know who that third man is. He has complicated things so that I don't dare move even against Flemister until I know more. We are not at the ultimate bottom of this thing yet."

"We're far enough to put the handcuffs on to Mr. Pennington Flemister any time you say," asserted Judson. "There was one little thing that I forgot to put in the report. When you get ready to take that missing switch engine back you'll find it choo-chooin' away up yonder in Flemister's new power house that he's built out of boards made from Mr. Benson's bridge timbers."

"Is that so? Did you see the engine?" queried the superintendent quickly.

"No, but I might as well have. She's there, all right, and they didn't care enough to even muffle her exhaust.

"We'll get Mr. Pennington Flemister, and before he is very many hours older," he said definitely.

"I've heard there was bad blood between him and Hallock. It was about that building and loan business, wasn't it?"

"Shucks, no! That was only a drop in the bucket," said Judson, surprised out of his attitude of rank and file deference. "Hallock was the original owner of the Wire Silver. Didn't you know that?"

"No."

"He was, and Flemister beat him out of it, lock, stock and barrel—just simply reached out and took it. Then when he had done that he reached out and took Hallock's wife—just to make it a clean sweep was the way he bragged about it."

"Heavens and earth!" ejaculated the listener. Then some of the hidden things began to define themselves in the light of this astounding revelation—Hallock's unwillingness to go to Flemister for the proof of his innocence in the building and loan matter; his veiled warning that evil and only evil would come upon all concerned if Lidgerwood should insist; the invasion of the service car at Copah by the poor demented creature whose cry was still for vengeance upon her betrayer. Truly, Flemister had many crimes to answer for. But the revelation made Hallock's attitude all the more mysterious. It was unaccountable save upon one hypothesis—that Flemister was able to so play upon the man's weaknesses as to make him a mere tool in his hands. But Judson was going on to elucidate.

"First off, we all thought Hallock would kill Flemister. Rankin was never much of a bragger or much of a talker, but he let out a few hints, and, accordin' to Red Desert rulin's, Flemister wasn't much better than a dead man right then. But it blew over some way, and now"—

"Now he is Flemister's accomplice in a hanging matter, you would say. I'm afraid you are right, Judson," was the superintendent's comment, and with this the subject was dropped.

When Lidgerwood returned to Angels it was morning. He found McCloskey waiting for him in the upper corridor with news that would not wait.

"The trouble makers have sent us their ultimatum at last," he said gruffly. "We cancel the new book of rules and reinstate all the men that have been discharged or a strike will be declared and every wheel on the line will stop at midnight tonight."

MAINE IS "WET" BY TWENTY-SIX

Official Figures Submitted by Governor and Council

RESULT BY NO MEANS FINAL

City and Town Clerks Have Twenty Days In Which to Make Corrections In Returns—Errors May Turn Tide In Favor of Repeal of Constitutional Prohibitory Amendment—Total of 120,948 Votes Were Cast

Augusta, Me., Sept. 19.—Official returns from the special election of a week ago Monday, when Maine voted on the question of the repeal of the constitutional prohibitory amendment, canvassed by the governor and council, show a majority in favor of repeal by twenty-six votes.

The tabulation of the vote was completed late last night after the council had been in session since mid-afternoon.

Some doubt still remains as to the correctness of the returns and Governor Plaisted announced that city and town clerks would be given an opportunity to make corrections during the next twenty days.

In more than a dozen instances the figures received by the governor and council did not agree with those sent to the secretary of state. His figures showed a majority in favor of repeal of 136 votes.

The returns from the town of Limestone and St. Francis and Matinicus Isle plantations, which have been questioned, compared exactly with those which were received by Secretary of State Davis, but in two instances, Limestone and Matinicus Isle, they are reversed from the unofficial returns received elsewhere. In the cases of Salem, Brownville, Bowerbank and Topsfield, the official returns agree with unofficial figures, but were reversed from the returns as received by the secretary of state.

With the result standing as close as it now appears a correction of the vote of any of the towns where a change was shown last night would have a considerable effect upon the majority and in the cases of Westfield and Athens would be sufficient to turn the tide against repeal.

For repeal	60,487
Against repeal	60,461
Majority for repeal	26

These figures do not exactly agree with the announcement made of a majority of twenty, but Councillor Turgeon, who had charge of the operation of the adding machine, stated that the figures were subject to verification.

The council will meet again today and the matter of receiving corrections will be discussed. Secretary Davis already has on file in his office a telegram from the town clerk of Limestone in regard to the incorrectness of his returns.

"This result is by no means final," said Governor Plaisted. "It is subject to correction by the town and city clerks."

FLUID IN PLEURAL CAVITY

It Shifts Boy's Heart, but Surgeons Put It Back In Place

Montclair, N. J., Sept. 19.—With his heart in the right place again Harry Baylies of Bloomfield, N. J., left the Mountainside hospital yesterday. The boy entered the hospital three weeks ago. Surgeons found that much fluid had accumulated in the cavity that contains his left lung; its pressure had pushed his heart out of its normal position, and to the right.

The surgeons tapped Harry's left pleural cavity and drew all the liquid from the cavity. Then Harry's heart, being relieved from pressure, returned to its proper position.

Literally, Harry breathed freer, but that had not so much to do with the heart as with the left lung; there was more room for air in it after the fluid was removed.

The surgeons advised Harry to keep as quiet as possible, else the fluid may accumulate again. But if it does they will draw it off.

RESIGNS TO AVOID A NAVAL SCANDAL

Lieutenant Smith Charged With Unbecoming Conduct

Washington, Sept. 19.—The resignation from the navy of Lieutenant Roy C. Smith was accepted by Acting Secretary of the Navy Nicholson, to take effect when Smith arrives at his home in Niles, Mich.

Smith's resignation is said to have been given at the request of Rear Admiral Murdoch, commanding the Asiatic fleet, after a court of inquiry had investigated charges of unbecoming conduct made against him.

He was attached to the gunboat Villalobos, and brother officers persuaded him to resign rather than cause a naval scandal that might result in his trial by court martial, it is said.

Cronin called Stromloff by name and caught him by the wrists, telling him he was wanted in Chicago, charged with burglary in October, 1905. Stromloff said he will go back to Chicago today without any papers.

Stromloff was convicted of having a burglar kit in his possession.

266,095 USED STATE BATH HOUSES

During the Past Season. Cheap Bathing Experiment

Bathers to the number of 266,095 patronized the Revere beach, Nahant and Nantasket state bath-houses during the last season, which was one of the busiest since the erection of the Revere beach bath-house in 1898, according to a statement issued yesterday by the metropolitan park commission, which follows:

"The Revere beach bath-house was opened temporarily for business May 30 and June 4, and permanently June 11. It was closed Sept. 10, having been open 94 days in all. The total number of bathers was 175,478, of whom 108,269 were men and boys. On the whole the season was one of the busiest in the history of the bath-house. It is significant, therefore, in connection with the criticism of inadequate bathing facilities, that every day during the last five weeks of the bathing season there were about 500 vacant rooms in the bath-house and not enough bathers at any time to occupy them.

"The result of the experiment in 5-cent bathing at Nantasket beach is even more significant. During the period 5-cent accommodations were offered, from July 22 to Labor day, 14,246 men and boys patronized either the bath-house or the 5-cent bathing accommodations, but of these only 220 preferred the 5-cent bath to the higher priced accommodations of the regular bath-house. In short, the figures seem to demonstrate that a comparatively small proportion of the public patronizing the bath-houses desire cheap bathing accommodations. The prices at the bath-houses are 10, 20 and 25 cents, according to the accommodations given. At Revere over two-thirds of the patrons preferred to pay the 25-cent rate, and only 18 per cent. preferred 10-cent baths. The percentage at Nahant and Nantasket is even less.

"The Nahant beach and Nantasket beach bath-houses were opened for business July 1 and closed Labor day. There were 39,377 persons who patronized the Nahant beach bath-house, of whom 20,545 were men or boys. There were 51,240 persons who patronized the Nantasket beach bath-house, of whom 27,983 were men or boys."

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Only one week now remains for the members of the local High school football squad to round into shape for the first contest of the year. Two cuts have already been made in the number of candidates who have tried for the eleven and at present the squad consists of about thirty aspirants. It was at first thought that the team would be rather light, but it now looks as if the line players will be as heavy and as formidable as last year.

Coach Staff seems to be very enthusiastic with regard to the progress that is being made, and although the eleven will be composed mainly of new material, he expects that Quincy High will prove to be the equal of any in interscholastic ranks. Cambridge Latin comes as the first attraction next Tuesday and as the boys from the University city have always had a good team, the opening game at Merrymount Park gives every evidence at the present time of being an exceptionally interesting one.

The boys are now engaged in scrimmage work while practising and much improvement seems to be noticeable every day. White received a severe bruise to his nose in yesterday's scrimmage, but it is hoped that he will be able to participate in the first game. The students at the High school have taken an added interest in the outlook this year and from present indications, athletics at the local institution bid fair to create great excitement and enthusiasm.

Tonight promises to be a gala one for the members of the Manhattan club, who hold forth in their first smoke talk of the season in Hibernian hall, Franklin street. The gathering will be addressed by three prominent athletes and addresses will also be made by a number of others who are interested in booming the athletic situation in Quincy The Manhattan club is composed of a number of well known local boys who are using every endeavor to promote the interests of those local boys who possess any athletic ability

It is now generally thought that William Hackett, the famous long distance runner, will not compete hereafter in any marathon races If such be the case, the long distance runners have lost a very valuable and efficient competitor

The Quincy A A and the Italian American A C, two progressive athletic organizations of this city, were admitted to the N. E. A. A. U., at the meeting held last evening. There are now forty-eight clubs enrolled in the amateur association. Ex-councilman William H. Flynn and Frank Bruce representing the above mentioned respectively, were elected members of the new board of managers.

This speaks well for the local clubs and we now hope to see great strides made in the interests of our many local amateurs.

If the writer can judge by talk there are a large number of fans in the ward 6 section of the city, and they are not all men either. Atlantic pride will be in evidence the same as heretofore when Makarias and Atlantics have contested. Certainly these two teams played an excellent game last Saturday, and with weather conditions favorable and the game played at Merrymount park the writer predicts a large attendance for Saturday.

RECEIVES GIFT FROM GRAND LODGE

At the last regular meeting of the Granite lodge No. 193, O. S. S. C., a beautiful "watch fob" was presented to Francis E. Hodge, W. P., a gift from the grand lodge for his success in bringing twelve candidates into the lodge during the past year.

The presentation was carried out by Bro. E. J. Warmington, D. G. P., in a very able manner. Mr. Hodge in responding mentioned the gold pin which the local lodge gave him some time ago for a like purpose. He told how he valued it, because it was given for services which he did for the welfare of the lodge. He would place the same value on this gift because it was presented by the grand lodge for services rendered.

LIVELY FIGHTER FROM MEXICO

Jose Rivers Looks Like Featherweight Champion.

HE WHIPPED COSTER EASILY.

This Puts Him In Line For a Go With Abe Attell, and Such a Scrap Would Be Worth While—Mexican Has Hard Punch and Is Good Ring General.

By TOMMY CLARK.

A new featherweight champion possibility has loomed up on the pugilistic horizon in the person of Jose Rivers, the strong little Mexican who has been cleaning up everything in sight in California. Rivers caused a big surprise in the fight world by clapping the lid on the championship aspirations of Joe Coster in twelve rounds at Los Angeles recently.

It takes a mighty good man to stop Coster, who, in addition to possessing a very long reach and no small degree of boxing skill, is looked upon as one of the toughest boys milling in the feather ranks. Not long ago Coster was credited with having had much the best of Abe Attell in a ten round bout before a New York club, and his friends at once began booming him as a possible candidate for first chop honors in the 122 pound class. But Rivers handed him the licking of his life in the recent meet and put him out of running for a chance at Abe Attell's title.

Rivers is the hardest hitter and best natural ring general that the 122 pound division has produced in a decade. He has appeared in the ring about half a dozen times, and every one of his battles has wound up with a victory for him on a clean knockout. Among his victims were Danny Webster and Johnny Reagan, both unusually clever lads, neither of whom was able to do anything to offset the terrific punching power of the dark skinned youth from Mexico.

Now that Champion Abe Attell declares himself rounding into trim again it would make a card well worth boosting to bring him and this new wonder into conflict.

Rivers' friends are already contemplating just such a match, and since the Mexican's knockout of Coster the promoters are after him hotfoot. Somebody, in the natural course of things, must annex Attell's scepter one of these days if Abe stays in the business long enough, and it is likely to be just such a young, strong fellow as this Rivers.

Although many Mexicans have taken to the prize ring, the only one besides Rivers who ever amounted to anything was Aurelio Herrera. He was credited with possessing the hardest punch of any man then performing in the lightweight class. It was a short deadly right, which traveled but five or six inches when the owner shoved it against an opponent's jaw, but a mule's kick wasn't in it for sudden and spectacular effect.

When Bat Nelson was climbing the ladder and just looming up as a championship possibility he met Herrera in a twenty round bout at Butte, Mont. During one of the earlier rounds the Mexican got home with the dreaded right on Bat's jaw, and the latter promptly stood on his head, giving an excellent imitation of a basket of cabbages hit by a motorcar. But, though badly scattered in his senses, Nelson pulled himself together and regained his feet. He clinched the round out and thereafter gave Herrera an awful mauling.

Nelson was given the decision, and the fact that he had outlived one of Herrera's punches without going under had much to do with the reputation he afterward gained as a man of iron.

Herrera also came near putting out Terry McGovern when the latter was in his prime. Terry had been warned of the Mexican's great right, but after a few rounds seemed to have forgotten all about it, when suddenly Herrera let it go and, landing flush on McGovern's jaw, sent him to the canvas. The surprised Terry got up immediately and clinched, and a few seconds after the gong saved him from a knockout. Terry recuperated rapidly and later put the Mexican out.

Herrera might have been a champion if he had only behaved himself, but he refused to be good, and the gay life he led put a finish to his ring career.

Is Jackson Faster Than Cobb?

George Dietrich, secretary of the grand harness racing circuit, says Joe Jackson is faster getting to first base than Ty Cobb or Wilbur Good. He held a stop watch on them, timing each player from the crack of the bat. Dietrich timed Jackson at 2¼ seconds. The best he ever timed Cobb and Good was 2¾ seconds. He has timed Jackson from the plate to second base in 6¼ seconds. Dietrich is an experienced timer.

"MILE IN 4:10 IS POSSIBLE."

So Says Mel Sheppard, Now Training For New Mark.

"The time will surely come when the mile will be run in 4 minutes and 10 seconds," remarked Mel Sheppard, the greatest middle distance runner the world has ever known, at the time John Paul Jones of Cornell established a new world's record by traveling the distance in 4 minutes and 15 2-5 seconds, which was exactly one-fifth second faster than that of Tommy Conneff's old mark.

Sheppard insisted that if trained especially for the mile and given a chance to run on one of the fast tracks he would be able to better Jones' time. Some of his clubmates laughed at the idea, and when Sheppard began regular hard training with the one object in view of having a try at the record some of them told him he would do better by sticking to the middle distances.

A request was made of the Harvard people that they allow Sheppard a chance to run the mile in the Harvard stadium, but permission could not be had. "Shep" kept up the most regular course of training he has ever followed and today is running in wonderful form.

"Just as soon as the Metropolitan championships are over I'll leave for Montreal, Canada. There I will have a whole week's training on one of the fastest tracks in North America. On Sept. 23 the Canadian championships take place, and the management has promised me that the track will be put in the very best of shape so that I may have a good try at the mile record."

Sheppard has been doing long work, running up to two miles every time out, and Coach Lawson Robertson says that within the past month Mel has proved his ability to perform in record style. He has been carefully timed on the Celtic park (New York) track, and the time showed clearly that he will be in record breaking form on the Montreal track.

Jackson a Quick Thinker.

Joe Jackson is not only a hard hitter and fast man, but a quick thinker on the ball field.

Shipbuilders may be interested to know that the work in prospect at the Mare Island Navy Yard, California, consists of the building of one collier and nothing else and, therefore, the time of employment of shipbuilders will be temporary. William St. Pierre Who Had Case Here About Three Years Ago Arrested In Chelsea

Released On Condition That He Would Leave State

William St. Pierre, formerly well known in Quincy as a repairer and dealer in bicycles, is again in trouble, all because he failed to keep his word and leave the state.

Some three years ago St. Pierre conducted a bicycle store in the Plummer block on Hancock street and one night there was a suspicious fire in his shop which started in the rear stairway. Prompt discovery prevented any serious loss.

The state fire marshal made an investigation of the fire, which smelled strongly of kerosene and an incendiary.

St. Pierre was placed under arrest, and when the case came up in Dedham, he made a great plea for freedom and as a result was allowed his freedom on condition that he would leave the country and never come back.

Recently the police learned that he had violated his agreement and was living in Chelsea. A capias was issued and Tuesday he was arrested at 457 Eastern avenue, Chelsea, and taken to Dedham.

He will now have to stand trial for setting fire to a building to defraud an insurance company.

While in Quincy, St. Pierre was coinnually in trouble and was frequently before the local court.

A District Court Building for Quincy, perfect in material and workmanship.

Much public work under way to be completed during the coming year with which Mr. Merrill is thoroughly familiar.

No private interests to promote.

A united vote of Quincy for Mr. Merrill means a continuance of a business man in a business office, other than that removes the chairmanship certainly and membership of the board probably from Quincy to some other town.

MRS. HARDWICK PASSES AWAY

Widow of Charles H. Hardwick Died on Tuesday Afternoon

WAS 89 YEARS OLD

Mrs. Lucia, widow of Charles H. Hardwick, one of Quincy's pioneers in the granite quarrying business, passed away at her home 50 Chestnut street, Tuesday afternoon, her death being due to infirmities incident to old age.

Mrs. Hardwick was born in East Bridgewater and was the daughter of Edward and Lydia Porter Vinton. She was married to Mr. Hardwick, Jan. 1, 1846, by Rev. William Allen Porter, pastor of the Orthodox church. She came to Quincy immediately after her marriage and has since made her home in this city.

Three children were the fruits of this union, being Charles Henry Hardwick, who met a violent death July 29, 1910 at the hands of Louis G. Restelli, C. Theodore Hardwick and Mrs. Elizabeth, widow of William E. Alden. The death of her eldest son was a severe blow to Mrs. Hardwick and she never fully recovered from its shock.

She had reached the ripe old age of 89 years, celebrating that birthday Sept. 12, in a quiet manner at her home.

Mrs. Hardwick's husband died June 17, 1894, since which time she has made her home with her daughter at the family homestead on Chestnut street.

Farce Given Under Auspices Y. P. S. C. E. of Pres. Church

LARGE ATTENDANCE

A very pleasing entertainment was given last evening under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Presbyterian church, Water street.

A farce entitled "The Red School House" was presented. Between the sessions of the school Misses Margaret Morrison and Nettie Miller rendered piano duets. There were also piano solos by Miss Miller.

In the first part was a school room and the teacher seemed to have no idea of how the pupils were doing, everything but their lessons, but finally got through the school session.

Then in the second part they all turned out to be old maids and bachelors and each one gave their reasons for not being married. Some had great talent while others seemed to think they had a different motive in life.

The entertainment was well attended and refreshments were served at close of play. Those who took part were Lillian McIntosh, Mary Morrison, Helen Kenn, Edith Elrick, Mary Barton, Georgie Michael, Wendall Clark, Lawrence Butler, Everett Clark, Charles Bishop, George McDonald and William Michael and Mr. Matheson who was the school master.

PROPOSITION TO RAISE SALARY

Shall the salary of the Mayor be increased to $2500 per year. The order to increase the salary of the chief executive of the city to that amount was one of the important matters that came before the City Council Monday night in an order introduced by Councilman at large Cherrington.

Many have long held the view that the salary of $1,000 per year as fixed by the charter was not sufficient. An attempt was made several years ago to increase the amount to $2,000 but met with defeat.

Section 28 of the City Charter provides that the salary of the Mayor for the first ten municipal years and thereafter shall be the same with such additional sum as the City Council shall by ordinance establish, but not to take effect until the year succeeding that in which it is passed.

It is a well known fact that the duties of the chief executive today are manifold and require many hours of his attendance at City Hall. A few years ago some of our Mayors put in but an hour in the morning and one hour or two in the afternoon at the office, but during the past few years, there have been so many demands upon the executive that he has to give a good part of the day to the duties.

Every day there are scores of people who call at City Hall to see the Mayor. Some have complaints to make while others come for various reasons, so that it is necessary for him to be where he can readily be reached. Then again under Quincy's so-called model charter the Mayor is solely responsible for every department. He has the sole power of appointing and removing department heads and administrative officers and it seems hardly fair in view of increased amount of work that has been thrust on the Mayor by such a rapidly growing city as Quincy to ask him to give so much of his time for $1,000 per year.

It has been pointed out that there are plenty of good men in Quincy who would be glad to take the office of mayor at the present salary which is doubtless true, but is it fair to ask them to do so?

TROLLEY WIRE BREAKS

Spectacular Display In Front of City Hall

NOBODY HURT

There was quite a display of electrical fireworks in City square shortly before 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, when one of the trolley wires directly in front of City hall broke and dropping to the ground went off with a series of reports that rivaled in brilliancy the display seen on the night of the Fourth of July. After a few loud reports the end of the broken trolley wire rested on one of the rails.

In a few minutes the rail became red hot and then in turn the trolley wire along Hancock street toward Neponset and on Depot street. Street railway men in the square shouted to people to look out. The warning came none too soon for several cars had just arrived and were discharging many passengers. The intense heat, however, soon melted the wire, it burnt off in front of the Hancock block and the fireworks display was over.

Red lanterns were placed along the track where the wire lay and street railway men kept people from getting too near the innocent looking but dangerous wire.

The wire gang was telephoned and arrived shortly after 7 o'clock and an hour later the break had been repaired. It occurred on the westward wire and only that part of the west track between the Hancock house and City Hall was out of commission. The double track permitted the arrival and dispatch of cars with but little delay.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

People are getting mighty sour over this increase in the price of sugar

Worcester which is a large city is to have 75 cent gas after Jan. 1. The present rate is 80 cents.

An Ohio policeman was put in jail for abusing his horse, and when later he abused his wife he was simply put under bonds.

Genevive writes to us to ask why so much is said about the Tammany machine, when you never see it on the street or at the automobile shows.

Senator Beveridge is spending some time in the Alps, which confirms the theory that his uppishness lost him the election.

It is not a discouraging fact that the voice of the people sounds a little louder than the voice of the politicians.

If they don't get that Maine vote counted right pretty soon, it will look as if they had had something beside Poland spring water.

The clerk of Marion county, Ind., gives away a cook book with each marriage license. He believes good cooking tends to reduce the size of the opposition vote at elections.

How can those Mexicans expect us to regard them as civilized, when they make such a fuss about the purchase of votes at their nominating conventions?

A Des Moines baby recently born is said to be the most perfect child in that state. We always said the commission form of government would do wonders.

Governor Hoke Smith is demonstrating how you can keep your pie and eat it at the same time. Hoke is senator and still holds on to the government in Georgia.

Gov. Harmon says he is not running for the presidency, but a man who is in the hands of his friends usually has other means of locomotion figured out.

People who are familiar with what happens when a poet walks into a newspaper office may get some idea of what may be anticipated when the Supreme Court gets the governors protest about interference with the states.

AUTO FOR A NAME.

In Detroit they are looking for a name for their annual Water Carnival. A handsome new Flanders automobile is to be awarded to the person suggesting the best name. There are no strings tied to this offer,—a few minutes of thought and a little originality and the auto may be yours. The contest is open to people everywhere.

The City of the straits is ideally situated for a gigantic water fete such as is proposed. The beautiful Detroit River with its crystal-clear water flows by on its way to Lake Erie, only sixteen miles away. Lying right opposite Detroit is her renowned fairy-land, Belle Isle, a great island park, which is generally conceded to be the most beautiful in all the world. Up stream, just ten miles, is Lake St. Clair and further on the Venice of America, Detroit's unique summer resort.

Detroit's water-front is twenty-four miles in length, and across the River, Canada affords a similar stretch of river-front. So, from the many vantage points, hundreds of thousands can see the magnificent river spectacle by day and by night. The Carnival of 1912 will be held during the week of July 24th. The Detroit Board of Commerce appreciates the magnitude of this event and so has offered the car as a prize. The name must be "catchy" and in some way characteristic of Detroit. The contest closes October 16th and all names must be sent to the Contest Committee of the Detroit Board of Commerce, Detroit, Michigan.

ADVERTISING EXPERTS.

In soliciting advertising the other day, we found a man who admitted thoroughly the power of this form of salesmanship but who said that advertising requires such expert study and experience that the ordinary merchant can not use it successfully.

It is very true that advertising is a deep subject, and that experts can accomplish larger results than novices. But the foundation principles on which experts build their success can be acquired by any merchant.

The first and greatest commandment of advertising is, "Be definite." Don't bother to look up long and brilliant descriptive words in the dictionary. Don't waste space and fatigue the reader with vague general phrases.

If you want to describe a shoe, tell the reader what kind of leather it is made from, whether the stock is soft or hard, whether it is water proof or not, whether it is single soled or double soled, and so on with these or other details which the shoe man can supply. Enable the reader to form a clear mental picture of your goods. You do this, and if, your price, which should always be given, is right, your goods are half marketed before the customer has left home.

THE INDEPENDENTS.

Some persons, not stopping to think precisely about what they are saying, are criticizing the new primary nominations law because no provision is made for the independent voter. Yet, there is no good reason why such provision should be made, says an exchange.

An entirely independent voter is not a member of either party, and so is not entitled to help make either party's nominations. There are party men who exercise independency of thought and action, but they occupy quite a different position from those who have no party affiliations whatever. These latter have no right to assist in determining party nominations, and should have no opportunity. One thing which the primary under the new form is intended to prevent is the practice which has prevailed in some localities of calling in help from outside the party to make the nominations of the party, and this is a good purpose.

The right of independents to be represented on the ballot at the final election is not hampered or infringed upon in any way A group of independents has the means of putting anybody's name upon the ballot for any office, if they secure a sufficient number of names upon the nomination paper. Or a single independent can write upon the ballot any name he chooses. No right is interfered with by the denial of participation in a caucus where the independent does not belong.

FARMER POLITICIANS.

Along with the big pumpkin and the fat cattle of the autumnal agricultural fairs, the politicians proceed to enter themselves among the exhibits and start for their annual effort to get next to the farm vote.

No man can ever succeed in politics who finds it irksome to make the round of the cattle shows and grasp hands with the farmer and his hired man. Most of our successful politicians realize this. Few men ever get to be governor of any state who has not served an apprenticeship of speaking from judges stands and cattle stalls to a cross roads audience.

The man who looks merely at exteriors may misjudge the force and power of this audience. Cross roads isolation throws a certain mantle of passiveness over a man's facial appearance. He does not have the alert face of the smooth shorn and dapper metropolitan.

At the same time his solitary life gives him the power of analytical thought. He sees the incongruities of profession and performance quite as well as the urban dweller who lives in an atmosphere of bluff. Hence political intuition tells the statesman that if he has not made good in the eyes of the audience around the cattle sheds, his work has been defective.

It is somewhat customary to laugh at governors and other high dignitaries when they start out on this rustic campaigning. It is suggested that they lower themselves by a pretence of interest in things from which otherwise they would remain aloof.

But the high official who remains in his office and sees only the manufacturer, the lobbyist, the politician, gets a very distorted idea of the life of the people. To the common run of mankind, government seems a remote and often an unfriendly force, difficult to influence. High officials need to get closer to the common man in order to find out his real needs.

Let the governors then get out to the cattle shows, and render a report of their work, and learn what the country man thinks about their ideas From the people who suffer the most from mistakes in government, they will get a judgment on men and measures that is directed by contact with the hard facts of life.

GRANITE MEN OBJECT

To New Rule of Railroad Regarding Boxing

AUGUST SHIPMENTS

Returns from the two railroad shipping terminals for the month of August, show that the total amount of rough and finished granite shipped from Quincy during that month was 17,797,528 pounds. This is an increase of nearly six million pounds more than the previous month. Of the grand total 11,533,842 pounds was forwarded from West Quincy and 6,263,686 pounds from Quincy Adams.

Granite manufacturers were considerably stirred up over the new rule of the railroad, which required shippers to stand the expense of boxing in the cars upon which granite was shipped. This rule was to have gone into effect Sept. 15, but owing to the general kick its enforcement has been held up.

Most of the granite shipped is loaded onto flat open cars and the rule has been to box the pieces with 4 x 4 lumber so that none of the smaller pieces of boxed granite would be thrown off while the train was taking a sharp turn. The difficulty with the new rule making manufacturers pay for this additional expense was to determine how much, or rather what portion of the expense of boxing they should pay.

On some cars there might be forty or more small blocks of granite coming from a dozen different firms and it would require an expert accountant to determine what each shipper should pay. It is said however that this rule about boxing is in force at Barre, Vt. and other granite centers in Vermont and New Hampshire.

PRODUCERS TO RAISE THE PRICE OF MILK

Action Despite the Indictment by a Grand Jury

Boston, Sept. 20.—Notwithstanding the fact that some of its officials are now under indictment for a similar action, the Milk Producers' association held a meeting in this city last evening at which it was voted to increase the price of milk for the coming six months.

The present producers' price per 8½-quart can is 35½ cents; the proposed increase to 37½ cents will be an advance of 2 cents per can, which is also 2 cents above the price charged last winter.

The cause of the increase is said to be due to a combination of circumstances, namely, the drought of the summer causing a shortage in crops, the rapid advance in the price of boughten foods and the early frosts, which it is stated have injured the fall crops.

RUN OUT OF ZION CITY

"Holiest Love Society" Cannot Remain Within Its Limits

Zion City, Ills., Sept. 20.—Eight members of the Holiest Love society were escorted to the city limits of Zion City by a vigilance committee and placed aboard an electric car for Chicago.

Marshal Hucfer led the party which forced the members of the alleged "free love" cult to leave the precincts of Zion, a city founded by John A. Dowie. No arrests were made.

When the vigilants reached the house of the members of the cult they had retired for the night. They were routed from their beds.

CLOUDS ARE LIFTING

Indications That France and Germany Will Soon Reach Agreement

Paris, Sept. 20.—A semi-official note says that the French negotiations with Germany entered a new stage during the conversation between German Foreign Minister Von Kiderlen-Watechter and Ambassador Cambon, promising an early agreement.

The conversation, the note adds, makes a satisfactory issue probable, but it would be premature to consider all divergencies as having disappeared.

Another interview will take place tomorrow and it is hoped that by the end of the week the negotiations will have reached a decisive turn.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB

October will see club life again become a more tangible object of interest. Although members have been widely scattered many committees have carried certain branches of club work through the summer with creditable results, among them being the Education with its summer schools; Visiting Nurse with nurse going her daily rounds ministering to the sick; the Civic the city playgrounds and the Philanthropic its work in social service and Associated Charities. The program committee and officers have also held meetings and early in October before the opening date of the club. Mrs. Arnold, chairman of the printing committee hopes to have the year books in the hands of each club member. The executive board meets Oct. 5 and the opening reception of the club will be on Oct. 9.

Anty Drudge Explains Why the Waist Went into Holes.

Mrs. Don'tno—"I must have been cheated in that woolen waist. It pulled right into holes in the washtub."

Anty Drudge—"You wouldn't think you were cheated if you got a leg of mutton which boiled that tender. It was the boiling that weakened your waist just as it makes meat or vegetables tender. Stop boiling your clothes. Wash them with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, and they'll wear twice as long."

What are clothes made of?

Wool, cotton or linen, animal or vegetable fibre.

What does boiling or scalding do to them?

Makes them tender just as it does meat or vegetables.

What does hard rubbing on a washboard do to them?

Wears them into holes before their time.

Are you abusing your clothes like that in the weekly wash?

Burning up fuel and working like a slave to do it?

There's a far better way to get clean clothes.

Let Fels-Naptha soap take the dirt out of them in cool or lukewarm water without boiling, without hard rubbing.

It saves the clothes—makes them last twice as long.

In summer or winter, it saves fuel, time, hard work, bother and discomfort.

Directions for the Fels-Naptha way of washing are printed on the back of the red and green wrapper.

Follow them carefully.

THINK KIND THOUGHTS.

In reflecting upon the different types of modern women one is struck by the fact how completely the morbid, reserved woman is out of date and how remorselessly the drooping, despondent type has been pushed to the wall.

The world of today has swung far away from any sort of morbid thinking, and the woman of a reserved, melancholy temperament finds herself peculiarly alone.

No matter how great the cause, nor how deep the sorrow the woman who persistently looks on the gloomy and depressing things of life is shunned. In this day of sunshine and laughter, of sane thinking and cheerful talk, a woman of this type has no place.

She has been forced to make way for a healthier, more inspiring and more appealing type, and this transformation has been accomplished by the simple power of thought.

Nearly every woman one meets nowadays is practicing new thought, mental science or some form of healthful thinking. We realize now that thought is power and women who are successful use that power in creating for themselves an atmosphere of strength and courage and friendliness.

Not every woman believes in the whole of any of these new cults. Much of it they may not even approve, but the power of thinking pleasant thoughts must make its inevitable appeal.

It spreads comfort to the darkest corner of the morbid mind, and gives an atmosphere of attraction to even unattractive women. It is a habit which, if practiced constantly, will rob an irritating situation of its sting, and turn a melancholy temperament from its brooding.

It possesses also a tremendous capacity for gaining friends. A young woman tells this experience of how she used the power of pleasant thinking to overcome an uncomfortable situation.

She accepted a position in an office where two other women were employed. She was inexperienced in office life and consequently was the victim at first of a morbid shyness. To this handicap she added another. She began by focusing all her energy on doing her work well, leaving scarcely a moment in which to make herself agreeable to her companions.

After the polite but perfunctory greeting of the day was passed she did not give them a thought. It never occurred to her to make friends of them. She was there to do her work, and for no other purpose.

Chatting with them and making herself agreeable, as she would if she had met them outside of office life, would have appeared to her unbusinesslike and an infringement of that office dignity upon which she was determined to model her conduct. Yet this young woman socially had tact and charm.

She soon realized that a spirit of antagonism surrounded her. It made itself felt in a dozen irritating, petty ways. It was even spreading to the desk of her employer. She suddenly woke up to the disagreeable fact that the women did not like her and that their antagonism was deep.

She asked herself what she had done to call it forth, but she could think of nothing. Her manner had always been polite, but she could not bring herself to unbend. She searched herself and found that sub-consciously she had been thinking unpleasant thoughts of them. Their coldness she had put down to jealously. Inwardly her attitude was one of condescension. She knew she had advantages they had not had, and she had unconsciously made them aware of it. The power of her unpleasant thoughts had made her disliked.

The situation became so annoying that she spoke of it to a friend, who said: "Why don't you give them a mental treatment?" Asked what she meant, she replied: Think nothing but pleasant thoughts of them. Do it deliberately and consciously each day, and you will soon find that their attitude toward you will change."

This she began at once. Each morning in going down to her work she thought of these women pleasantly; she opened her heart to them, and by the time they met her morning greeting was full of friendly feeling.

Day by day the situation thawed. At luncheon time she chatted with them pleasantly, with the soft accompaniment of kindly thought, instead of sitting in her corner with a book propped before her. While she did not find them interesting, she discovered a few agreeable qualities, and these she made much of.

Suddenly she found the antagonism and discomfort had disappeared, and she fitted into the niche in the work and in the office with comfort and ease. The friction had been wiped away by the simple power of pleasant thought.

Cultivate the habit of this kind of thinking, and you can work wonders, not only on others, but upon yourself. And the beauty of it is that it is so simple. All one has to do is to open one's mind and heart to beautiful and pleasant thoughts, and immediately the world about one is beautiful and pleasant.

It is a fact that you can change your temperament and make it what you like by the power of thought, and undoubtedly you can overcome most of the annoying situations in life by this happy process. Why should one endure friction and irritation when they can be overcome so easily?

HALE, HEARTY AND HAPPY

Man Who Has Worn No Clothing In His Sixty-One Years

Savannah, Ga., Sept. 20.—Word comes via the North Georgia mountains of a strange man named John Castellow, who has grown to be 61 years of age, hale, hearty and happy, without ever wearing a stitch of clothing. Says a traveler from Harris, describing the marvellous person:

"He lives four miles east of Windsor, N. C., and his health is perfect. He has not missed a meal in fifty years.

"When I visited him he was entirely nude. He is the strongest man I ever saw. His body is normal and well shaped, but his strength is prodigious. He is gentle and has never been known to hurt a living soul intentionally. He cannot speak a word except the one monosyllable 'Gee,' which he uses in various intonations to express all his desires and emotions."

In this column we publish from day to day receipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

Playtime Dress.

Rompers are ideal garments for the small girl's playtime when worn indoors, but on the street they are anything rather than becoming attire for little girls.

Indeed, many small tots object to rompers because they make them look like boys. One little girl whose mother is fond of the romper costume for her daughter is named Tucker and when tricked out in the trousered garment is referred to by the family as Tommy Tucker of nursery fame.

Now, the little dress pictured of checked gingham, box plaited and made in one piece, is a sensible style for a playtime costume, and the sunbonnet of the same material is a picturesque addition to the outfit.

The Barber's Chair in the Nursery.

Every mother knows how impossible it is to make the little folks stand still while tangled tresses are straightened

An Economical Cake.

The following will make an excellent as well as an economical cake, which may be used either in loaf form or in layers: Have on hand a third of a cupful of butter, a cupful of sugar, an egg yolk, half a cupful of milk, three egg whites, one cupful and a half of flour, sifted, with one teaspoonful and a half of baking powder. Cream the butter in the usual way with the sugar, add the yolk and milk, then stir the mixture into the flour and baking powder. Last of all, fold the flour through the whole and bake in greased pan.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

Next time you get stair carpet buy a yard more than you really need and turn it under at each end when you are laying it. Then, as it grows worn, it can be slipped either up or down and thus the wear will be equalized.

An excellent cleaner for painted surfaces is made as follows: Two quarts of hot water, two tablespoonfuls of turpentine, a pint of skimmed milk and enough soap to make a weak suds.

In sewing sheer lawns or lightweight silks, if they gather under the machine foot, slip a piece of newspaper under the goods and sew through it, too, and the gathering will cease. The paper is easily removed and leaves no trace.

All cake tins should be lined with evenly buttered paper before baking and all rich cakes should have a sheet of paper placed on the top.

Plants will grow more quickly if a few drops of ammonia be added once a week to the water with which they are watered. The water should be lukewarm, not colder than the atmosphere and the leaves of the plants should be kept free from dust by being sponged or syringed.

Don't stitch the skirt seams all in one direction; the bias side should be held under the straight edge, which means that the seams of half the skirt should be stitched from top to bottom and the other half from bottom to top.

A brick pincushion will prove to be a great convenience for the sewing table. Cover a clean brick with flannel or cretonne and pad the top for a pincushion. Being broad and heavy it will not be easily knocked over, and may be used also to hold down paper patterns.

To clean a comb take a coarse linen thread, three quarters of a yard long, double, tie one end to a nail and hold the other end taut with the left hand. Take comb in right hand and move back and forth on thread. This is very effective.

For rinsing or washing dishes, a short piece of hose, fitted to screw on the hot-water faucet at the sink, with a spray nozzle, will greatly facilitate the work, says the Ladies Home Journal. The force of the spray is greater than the ordinary flow, and the water may be applied to any part of the article. Two feet and a half is a good length for the hose.

BRIEFS

Thomas Fallon of the Boston Ice Cream Co., is enjoying his annual vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Gould of Adams street left Monday night for a week's visit with relatives in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Samuel Oxford of River street left Monday on a three days' auto trip with her daughter and husband of Waltham.

It looks now as though the public landing, which Houghs Neck people have so long desired was to be granted. It will be a great public convenience.

Eunice W. Studley of Norwell has been assigned by Mrs. Nellie F. Libbey, department president of the Women's Relief Corps, to inspect Paul Revere Corps of Quincy.

Experts from the bureau of statistics at Washington, have been at City Hall during the past few weeks auditing the city books. They have found everything all right up to date.

The September meeting of the Charitable Tens Circle of the Kings Daughters will be held on Monday the 25th, at 3 P. M., at the home of Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, 1061 Hancock street.

Many favorable comments have been made regarding the clear statements made to the City Council by Manager Nichols of the gas company Monday night and it was evident that the company was willing to give all information possible and that they had nothing to hide.

Henry P. Furnald entertained the Galahad Brotherhood of the Episcopal church at his home on Newcomb street Monday evening. After a social hour and a musicale entertainment all adjourned to the dining room where a fine collation consisting of salads, ice cream, frappe and coffee was enjoyed.

It is a little early for the City Council to begin to refer matters to the council of next year but as all the matters referred were for street improvements and this year's council has spent all the city can afford in one year, for new streets, it appears to be just as well to send them over to next year.

GRAVE DOUBT OVER REPEAL

Prohibition May Have Substantial Majority In Maine

CORRECTIONS WILL BE MADE

Attorney General Finds Vote of Three Towns Was Reverse of What Had Been Recorded at State House—All Four Questions on Ballot at Special Election Officially Tabulated by the Governor and Council

Augusta, Me., Sept. 20.—After having completed the tabulation of the official returns on all four questions which appeared upon the ballot at the special election the governor and council last night adjourned until Sept. 28, when they will meet to consider corrections. There is grave doubt over the repeal measure.

The results, as announced, were as follows:

On repeal of the constitutional prohibitory amendment:
Yes, for repeal 60,487
No, against repeal 60,461

Majority for repeal 26

On question of forever locating state capitol at Augusta:
Yes 59,671
No 41,294

Majority in favor 18,384

On question of increasing the debt limit of cities of 40,000 and over:
Yes 39,242
No 38,712

Majority in favor 530

On adoption of state-wide primary system:
Yes 65,819
No 21,774

Majority in favor 44,036

All of these returns are subject to correction," but there is little possibility of such steps being taken except in the case of the prohibitory amendment.

Attorney General Pattangall yesterday communicated with the town officials of three of the disputed towns and learned for himself the exact condition of affairs as regards the prohibition vote. He found, he stated last night, in the towns of Porter, Athens and Westfield that the municipal officers insisted that their vote was reverse of what had been recorded at the state house. These and other towns leave the matter still in grave doubt, but Pattangall believes corrections will show a majority against repeal of considerable size.

Mr. Pattangall found from his investigation that in Athens at least there was a proper and correct record, which is what the law requires to allow corrections. In Limestone, he said, he has learned that there is no record, but he is satisfied that the vote can be established. Either place, if corrected, would throw the majority onto the prohibition side.

At their meeting next week, the council will receive notice of any intended corrections, and will then set a date on which a hearing will be held, this hearing to be open to all interested parties. The time for receiving corrections will not expire until Oct. 9.

Governor Plaisted, in discussing the situation last night, said that although the apparent result had been announced, showing twenty-six votes in favor of repeal, he anticipated that corrections would be made in the returns from several towns which might materially alter the result.

The question of a possible special session of the legislature is being held in abeyance, pending the outcome of the corrections, which may be made next week.

LOW PRICES OF SEED

Texas Cotton Growers Lay Blame on Alleged Oil Mill Trust

Austin, Tex., Sept. 20.—Texas cotton growers complain of the low price of cotton-seed. The remarkable slump in prices compared with last year is not understood.

The oil mills in Texas are alleged to be in a trust and are now being investigated by the state attorney general's department. It is charged that they have arbitrarily fixed prices without reference to demand and value of products manufactured from the seed.

It is claimed that it is impossible for an independent oil mill to successfully do business in Texas.

Canadian Bets Favor Reciprocity

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—More than $1,000,000 has been bet in this city, Montreal and Toronto on the result of the election Thursday in which reciprocity is the chief issue. Reciprocity candidates are strong odds on favorites.

Leishman, Jr., Takes a Bride

Milan, Sept. 20.—John G. A. Leishman, Jr., son of the American ambassador to Berlin, and Miss Helene G. Demarest of New York were married at Cadanabbia, on Lake Como.

GROSSCUP TO RETIRE

Federal Judge Is Held to Be a Friend to the "Interests"

Chcago, Sept. 20.—United States Circuit Judge Peter S. Grosscup, one of the judges who reversed the action of Judge Landis in fining the Standard Oil company $29,000,000, announced that the would retire from the bench Oct. 1.

The retirement of Grosscup will be hailed with delight by opponents of the real or fancied practices of the so-called interests.

Again and again, from the bench and from the platform, Grosscup has ruled, and has spoken on the corporation side of the case.

One of the chief criticisms against Grosscup has been the fact that he has been heavily interested financially in various corporations, principally public utilities in Illinois.

PROTECTION BEING AFFORDED THE JEWS

Thirty Thousand Troops In Kiev to Prevent Excesses

Kiev, Sept. 20.—Following the death of Premier Stolypin the Russian government is taking severe measures to preserve order. The authorities at first decided to conceal the news of the premier's death for a while, fearing anti-Jewish outbreaks. This was found to be impossible; and after the announcement was made all the attenton of the authorities was centered in the protection of the Jews.

Representatives of the Jewish community were panic stricken and begged for protection and 30,000 troops were poured into Kiev to prevent excesses.

M. Kokovsoff, the minister of finance, who was appointed acting premier after M. Stolypin was shot, has sent a peremptory circular to the various governors on the maintenanc of order.

REFEREE STOPS CONTEST

Nelson-Nixon Bout Awarded to Battler In the Tenth Round

Boston, Sept. 20.—Last night, at the Armory A. A., Battling Nelson, once king-pin in the lightweight class, demonstrated to Billy Nixon that he had a lot more to learn about the fighting game, for after ten rounds of a generous mixture of everything that is in the boxing calendar, and a great deal more that is not, Referee Sheehan stopped the bout to save Nixon from further punishment.

Nixon was all in when the referee ended hostilities. Nelson displayed his old-time stamina, but it was plain to be seen that he had lost his dreaded wallop.

FAVORS UNIFORM DIVORCE

New York Senate Adopts a Resolution to That Effect

Albany, Sept. 20.—Without a dissenting vote the senate passed a resolution requesting New York's representatives in congress to use their best endeavors to secure the adoption of a resolution to submit to the legislatures of the several states an amendment to the federal constitution delegating to congress power to establish uniform divorce laws throughout the United States.

KILLED IN TRIAL FLIGHT

Aviator Wanted to Prove That Aeroplane Would Fly

De Witt, Ia., Sept. 20.—John W. Rosenbaum of Chicago was killed here when his aeroplane fell from a height of fifty feet. He had been in the air only twenty minutes when he lost control of the machine.

Rosenbaum was making a trial flight when met death. He was using a Curtiss biplane which had been at the De Witt fair last week. At that time an aviator failed to make a flight. Rosenbaum declared he would prove that the machine would fly. He had just started a descent when he lost control.

SPAIN UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Strikes Are Attributed to Plot to Aid Revolution

THE MONARCHY IN DANGER

Authorities Adopt Radical Measures When Designs of Anti-Monarchists Become Known—Strike on All Railroads Is Ordered—The Atmosphere Throughout the Country Throbs With Intrigue and Revolution

Madrid, Sept. 20.—Martial law has been formally declared throughout Spain on account of the labor unrest and the threatened revolution against the government. All constitutional guarantees have been suspended.

The federation of labor unions voted to call a general strike, tieing up every industry, railroad and other institution employing labor throughout Spain. The strike on all railroads is in effect today.

So turbulent has become the spirit of unrest, which had its inception in the general strikes in Bilbao, Saragossa, Huelva, Cadiz, Valencia, Seville and Cijon, that universal martial law was considered imperative by the ministry.

Fierce fighting and bloodshed have marked the spread of the strike, the bitterness being intensified by the action of Premier Canalejas, in declaring martial law in the local centres where the greatest unrest arose from the labor troubles.

That the anti-monarchists have masked their activities behind the curtain of labor difficulties is becoming more and more evident. Using this effective cloak to hide their real designs, Republican leaders have so inflamed the workmen against King Alfonso and his government that the overthrow of monarchy is thought to be only a matter of time.

The sinister designs of the radicals have become known to the authorities and 115 arrests were made yesterday. Some of the prisoners were charged with political offenses, while others were accused of inciting disorder.

The port of Valencia is tied up and constant fighting between mobs and soldiers is going on.

The atmosphere in the labor war throbs with intrigues and revolution. A plot has been discovered for the assassination of General Weyler, known as "the butcher," who is in command of the troops in that hotbed of anarchy about Barcelona. Weyler is advocating immediate death for all plotters against the government without the formality of trial. The Republican press is boldly advocating civil war.

Fall of Monarchy Feared

London, Sept. 20.—The overthrow of the Spanish monarchy was insured against at Lloyds yesterday afternoon when the high rate of 25 guineas (approximately 126 percent) was being paid for the policies.

SERIOUS RIOT IN DUBLIN

Railway Strikers Have a Clash With Police and Soldiers

Dublin, Sept. 20.—A serious clash between police and soldiers and a mob of strikers occurred here when railway companies attempted to put Scotch strikebreakers to work.

The strikebreakers were escorted by guards of police and troops. Strikers attacked the cavalcade and in the battle which followed many were hurt by flying missiles. The rioters were finally dispersed.

A great mass meeting of the railway employes adopted a resolution in favor of a general strike on the three principal railways in Ireland.

MARTIAL LAW IN VIENNA

Disorder Quickly Reappears After Troops Are Sent to Quarters

Vienna, Sept. 20.—For the first time in sixty-two years martial law was proclaimed here yesterday afternoon following an unexpected outbreak of bread rioting.

The city had apparently resumed its tranquility and much of the artillery had been removed from the plazas when disorder unexpectedly broke out. Men and women with banners paraded the streets singing revolutionary hymns and calling for cheaper food. The mobs threatened demonstrations before a number of shops.

PEASENTS CAUGHT BY LAVA

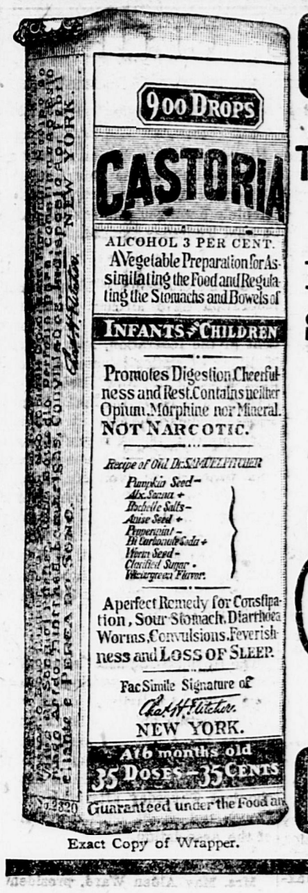

Fear That They Were Overwhelmed on Mt. Etna

Catania, Sept. 20.—The eruption of Mt. Etna, which seemed to be calming down, yesterday resumed its former activity.

It is feared that eight peasants have been cut off by the lava. Shots from their guns, evidently to attract attention, were heard, but no aid could be given, as nobody was able to approach the spot because of the floods of lava.

Spain Won't Part With Canaries

Madrid, Sept. 20.—Premier Canalejas categorically denied there was ever a question of Spain ceding a part of the Canary Islands to Germany.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rufford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

weary to the point of mental stagnation, Lidgerwood still had resilience enough left to rise to the new grapple. "Is the strike authorized by the labor union leaders?" he asked.

McCloskey shook his head. "I've been burning the wires to find out. It isn't. The brotherhood won't stand for it, and our men are pulling it off by their lonesome. But it'll materialize just the same. The strikers are in the majority, and they'll scare the well affected minority to a standstill. Business will stop at 12 o'clock tonight."

"Not entirely," said the superintendent, with anger rising. "The mails will be carried and perishable freight will continue moving. Get every man you can enlist on our side and buy up all the guns you can find and serve them out; we'll prepare to fight with whatever weapons the other side may force us to use. Does President Brewster know anything about this?"

"I guess not. They had all gone to bed in the Nadia when the grievance committee came up."

"That's good; he needn't know it. He is going over to the Copperette and we must arrange to get him and his party out of town at once. That will eliminate the women. See to engaging the buckboards for them and call me when the president's party is ready to leave."

"Was this passenger wreck another of the 'assisted' ones?"

"It was. Two men broke a rail joint on Little Butte side cutting for my special and caught the delayed passenger instead. Flemister was one of the two."

"And the other?" said McCloskey.

Lidgerwood did not name the other.

"We'll get the other man in good time, and if there is any law in this desert we'll hang both of them. Have you unloaded it all?"

"All but one little item, and maybe you'll rest better if I don't tell you that right now."

"Give it a name," said Lidgerwood crisply.

"Bart Rufford has broken jail, and he is here in Angels."

McCloskey was watching his chief's face, and he was sorry to see the sudden pallor make it colorless. But the superintendent's voice was quite steady when he said:

"Find Judson and tell him to look out for himself. Rufford won't forgive the episode of the S wrench. That's all. I'm going to bed."

CHAPTER XXII.

STORM SIGNALS.

THOUGH Lidgerwood had been up for the better part of two nights and the day intervening, it was apparent to at least one member of the headquarters force that he did not go to bed immediately after the arrival of the service car from the west, the proof being a freshly typed telegram which Operator Dix found impaled upon his sending hook when he came on duty in the dispatcher's office at 7 o'clock in the morning.

The message was addressed to Leckhard, superintendent of the Pannikin division of the Pacific Southwestern system, at Copah. It was in cipher, and it contained two uncodified words —"Fort" and "McCook"—which small circumstances set Dix to thinking. Fort McCook being the army post twelve miles as the crow flies, down the Pannikin from Copah.

Now, Dix was not one of the rebels. On the contrary, he was one of the few loyal telegraphers who had promised McCloskey to stand by the Lidgerwood management in case the rebellion grew into an organized attempt to tie up the road. But the young man had for his chief weakness a prying curiosity which had led him in times past to experiment with the private office code until he had finally discovered the key to it.

Hence, a little while after the sending of the Leckhard message, Callahan, the train dispatcher, hearing an emphatic "Gee whiz!" from Dix's corner, looked up from his train sheet to say, "What hit you, brother!

"Nothing," said Dix shortly, but Callahan observed that he was hastily folding and pocketing the top sheet of the pad upon which he had been writing. Dix went off duty at 11, his second trick beginning at 3 in the afternoon. It was between 3 and 4 when McCloskey, having strengthened his defenses in every way he could devise, rapped at the door of his chief's sleeping room. Fifteen minutes later Lidgerwood joined the trainmaster in the private office.

"I couldn't let you sleep any longer," McCloskey began apologetically, "and I don't know but you'll give me what for as it is. Things are thickening up pretty fast."

"Put me in touch," was the command.

"All right. I'll begin at the front end. Along about 10 o'clock this morning Davidson, the manager of the Copperette, came down to see Mr. Brewster. He gave the president a long song and dance about the tough trail and the poor accommodations for a pleasure party up at the mine, and the upshot of it was that Mr. Brewster went out to the mine with him alone, leaving the party in the Nadia here."

Lidgerwood let it go at that for the moment. The thing was done, and it could not be undone. McCloskey went on with his report, his hat tilted to the bridge of his nose.

"Taking it for granted that you mean to fight this thing to a cold finish, I've done everything I could think of. Thanks to Williams and Bradford and a few others like them, we can count on a good third of the trainmen, and I've got about the same proportion of the operators in line for us. Taking advantage of the twenty-four hour notice the strikers gave us, I've scattered these men of ours east and west on the day trains to the points where the trouble will hit us at 12 o'clock tonight."

"Good!" said Lidgerwood briefly. "How will you handle it?"

"It will handle itself, barring too many broken heads. At midnight in every important office where a striker turows down his pen and grounds his wire one of our men will walk in and keep the ball rolling, and on every train in transit at that time manned by men we're not sure of there will be a relief crew of some sort deadheading over the road and ready to fall in line and keep it coming when the other fellows fall out."

"That brings us down to Angels and the present, Mac. How do we stand here?"

"That's what I'd give all my old shoes to know," said McCloskey, his homely face emphasizing his perplexity. "They say the shopmen are against us, and if that's so we're outnumbered here six to one. I can't find out anything for certain. Gridley is still away, and Dawson hasn't got back, and nobody else knows anything about the shop force."

"You say Dawson isn't in? He did not have more than five or six hours' work on that wreck. What is the matter?"

"He had a bit of bad luck. He got the main line cleared early this morning, but in shifting his train and the 'cripples' on the abandoned spur a culvert broke and let the big crane off. He has been all day getting it on again, but he'll be in before dark—so Goodloe says."

"And how about Benson?" queried Lidgerwood.

"He's on 203. I caught him on the other side of Crosswater and took the liberty of signing your name to a wire calling him in."

"That was right. With this private car party on our hands we may need every man we can depend upon. I wish Gridley were here. He could handle the shop outfit. I'm rather surprised that he should be away. He must have known that the volcano was about ready to spout."

INDICTMENTS BY GRAND JURY

Result of Long Probe Into United Shoe Machinery

PROMINENT MEN IMPLICATED

Boston, Sept. 20.—After an exhaustive probe six prominent business men connected with the United Shoe Machinery company were indicted by the federal grand jury of the circuit court. All are charged with violations of the Sherman anti-trust act in maintaining an alleged unlawful combination in restraint of trade.

Those indicted are Sidney W. Winslow, Edward P. Hurd, George W. Brown, James J. Storrow, William Barbour and Elmer P. Howe, all prominent in the management of the so-called "shoe machinery trust," centering in Boston. There are two indictments against each of the defendants.

In the indictments United States District Attorney French has varied the charge in different counts to meet possible variations in the evidence at the trial and possible variations in the views of the trial court and higher courts as to the applicability of the different provisions of the Sherman law to the facts stated.

Both indictments charge that the six defendants have been working through the instrumentality of the United Shoe Machinery company, which they have dominated and controlled in a way to make them as individuals criminally liable under the Sherman act.

The indictments first describe the shoe manufacturing business and the shoe machinery manufacturing business as they existed prior to and on Feb. 7, 1899, and then set forth all the facts pertaining to the merger on that day of the three old shoe machinery manufacturing corporations—the Consolidated & McKay Lasting Machine company, formerly dominated by Winslow, Hurd and Brown, the McKay Shoe Machinery company, formerly dominated by Storrow, and the Goodyear Shoe Machinery company, formerly dominated by Barbour and Howe—under the new name of United Shoe Machinery company, and the subsequent carrying out of the business under that name.

Then he told the story of the oppressive uniform lease-provisions, requiring shoe manufacturers to patronize the United exclusively, upon pain of having all their leases cancelled and all the United machinery removed from their factories. It is further charged that this process drove other shoe machinery manufacturers out of business and effectually put all shoe manufacturers at the mercy of the United company.

One indictment, making no mention of patents, charges that this whole transaction was a monopolizing of the trade in shoe machinery, and a conspiracy to monopolize the same. The other indictment charges, in one count, that this carrying on of the business under the merger was engaging in a combination in restraint of the trade of the merged companies, in so far as their patent monopolies were extended under the merger; and, in another count, that it was a conspiracy in restraint of the trade of the manufacturers; and, in still another count, that the whole transaction was a monopolization of interstate trade and commerce in shoe machinery in that the monopolies permitted to the three old companies under their patents were extended far beyond their lawful bounds. Appropriate allegations are made to show the pernicious effect of all this upon the public.

SUIT FOR $5,000,000

Brought Against the "Powder Trust" by Independent Company

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 20.—The Buckeye Powder company, which formerly manufactured powder at Peoria, Ills., brought suit in the United States circuit court in this city for $5,000,000 damages against the E. I. Dupont De Memours Powder company and a number of its subsidiary concerns which are familiarly referred to as the "powder trust."

The Buckeye company claims that its business has been injured by the practices of the so-called powder trust and places its actual damages at $1,119,957 and also asks for $500,000 punitive damages.

Then again it asks that all these damages be multiplied by three as authorized under the Sherman act.

SENTENCED TO DEATH

Slayer of Wife and Father-In-Law Says Verdict Is Just

Anderson, S. C., Sept. 20.—Samuel H. Hyde, confessed slayer of his young wife and father-in-law, was convicted of murder in the first degree by a jury last evening after fifty-five minutes' deliberation, following a trial which began yesterday morning. The death sentence of hanging was pronounced. Hyde was unmoved by the verdict. He said it was a just one.

The crime for which Hyde will hang was committed July 18. He killed his wife as she lay sleeping, shot her sister and then killed his father-in-law, who attempted to disarm him.

SHIPBUILDING.

Shipbuilders may be interested to know that the work in prospect at the Mare Island Navy Yard, California, consists of the building of one collier and nothing else and, therefore, the time of employment of shipbuilders will be temporary. At the present time there is practically no shipbuilding on the West Coast; such ships as are building to coast orders are building on the Atlantic Coast so that there is no prospect of steady work for shipbuilders in California or anywhere on the West Coast. Some of our citizens have had experience in this matter in the past and are now appreciating the comforts of home. 19-2t

FIRST MEETING OF GALAHAD BROTHERHOOD

Was Held Tuesday Evening At Home of Henry P. Furnald

King Arthur and his table round, accompanied with his blameless Knights, their amour glittering, and their hearts aglow branishing lance with its point towards the foe, became the victor in promoting to its highest summit the Brotherhood of man. Wearied with battle strife, foot sore and exhausted they were one, by one gathered into the home of Brother H. P. Furnald and Mrs. Furnald who with kind forethought and untiring energy made the Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church their loyal friends.

The business for the coming winter was considered and the machinery put into motion. The work will be entirely new. The Brotherhood taking on new life has also taken on new ideas. These new thoughts will be put into action and will be largely intertwined with civic problems as well as religious. Man cannot live on bread alone so they are also going to furnish the water.

The business being completed they were led into a spacious room where the host and hostess and daughter had prepared a bountiful repast. The shields and battle axes were laid aside, the royal standard suspended over the table, and each Knight assigned a place at the round table. Grace was then rendered by the Rev. R. E. Armstrong, after which each consumed as much of the dainties that were constantly placed before him as he dare. Now being refreshed the rest of the evening was turned over to social enjoyment. Songs, sentimental, comic, stories and piano solos were rendered by various persons until father time struck the chime of midnight. Instantly the call to arms was sounded, the Knights assembled, then Sir Galahad and Sir Lancelot advanced and gave Mr. H. P. Furnald, Mrs. Furnald and Miss E. Furnald the warm thanks of the Brotherhood for their pleasant evening and kind hospitality.

Jesse must subsist on the meat diet and Warren on vegetables. Both must sleep on the roof when they stay at hotels. Each takes his turn at pushing a wheelbarrow which contains the luggage.

SPEAKS AT NEEDHAM

Charles Francis Adams Makes Historical Address

AT BICENTENNIAL

Monday's program of Needham's three day's celebration of its bicentennial was varied including children's entertainment, sports, historical exhibit during the day and historical addresses in the evening by Charles Francis Adams and George K. Clarke.

Mr. Adams confined his remarks to matter of general historical interest.

"The history of Needham," said Mr. Adams, "like that of many other towns and cities in New England, antedates their incorporation by more than eight thousand years." In explanation of this statement he said: "The effect of glacial action on New England soil at that time determined, in a large measure, the character of New England's industries and citizenship." As an illustration he referred to the granite industries in Quincy and the farming communities in various parts of New England, whose plains and broad fields resulted from glacial action. He urged upon his hearers the importance of forming an historical society and the preservation of present-day records for future generations.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES

Mrs. Theophilus King, Mrs. Dexter Wadsworth, Miss Hattie E. Turner and Henry M. Faxon.

Plans were discussed relative to the raising of $1000, with which to start the work of the association. A finance committee, to be selected by the chairman, was voted upon to look into the matter and a committee was also appointed to present at the next meeting qualifications of a trained secretary. The association has a wide field in which to work and bids fair to accomplish much.

The objects of the Association are: To secure advice, assistance and co-operation along charitable, philanthropic and social lines in the City of Quincy. To secure the concurrent and harmonious action of the different charities of Quincy in order to raise the needy above the need of relief, prevent begging and imposition and diminish pauperism.

To encourage thrift, self dependence and industry through friendly intercourse, advice and sympathy, to the end that the poor may help themselves.

To prevent children from growing up as paupers.

To aid in the diffusion of knowledge on subjects connected with the relief of the poor.

And to accomplish these objects it is designed:—

1 To provide that the case of every applicant for relief shall be thoroughly investigated.

2 To provide a confidential exchange of information between the overseers of the poor, charitable societies and agencies, and benevolent individuals.

3 To obtain for every applicant employment, if possible; if not, to obtain necessary and suitable assistance frm charitable socities, benevolent individuals, or public authorities.

4 To make all relief, either by alms or charitable work, conditional upon good conduct and progress.

5 To send each poor family under the advice of a district conference, a friendly visitor.

6 To hold public meetings and print papers for distribution.

McCormick and Spreckels to Confer With Bay State Men

Washington, Sept. 20.—Medill McCormick and Rudolph Spreckels, the former until recently editor of the Chicago Tribune and the latter the leader of the anti-graft forces in San Francisco, have gone to Boston in the interest of the Republican progressive movement. Both men are associated with the Washington headquarters of the National Progressive league and have been moved to experiment with the Bay State by letters received from Massachusetts men asking assistance in the Republican campaign against President Taft.

At headquarters information as to the names of these correspondents was refused, but it was stated that their purpose was to confer with disgruntled Republicans there in the interests of Senator La Follette.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

In Blackmur and "Pete" Chapman, Quincy High will have two of the fastest ends to be found in interscholastic ranks. Blackmur is exceedingly fast and aggressive and with a little more coaching should prove to be an exceptionally valuable man. Every one who witnessed last year's games, knows how "Butus" Chapman performed on the end of the line, but when it is realized that the present end tackles his opponent much harder than did his brother, it is not too much to expect that young "Pete" will bear much watching this year.

The only offset that seems to encounter Coach Staff thus far, is the lack of material for teh position of quarterback. Larkin still remains from last year's team, and though he bids fair to round out into a valuable player, he has not as yet attained the desired efficiency. It is expected that young Barry will try out for the position, and in this event, I think that the outlook for a good running general would be exceptionally bright.

As I announced in yesterday's edition, the second game of the series between Makarla and Atlantic will take place at Merrymount park, instead of Water street. The matter caused much discussion between the managers of the contending teams but the announcement made last night by "Mike" Shea, to the effect that he had let the grounds to a football team, dispels all doubt concerning the battle grounds for the game which gives every evidence of being a marm one.

Manager McKenzie is using every endeavor to turn the tables on this coming occassion, and with the regular Makaria nine in lineup,, hopes to land a victory. But Keohane, on the other hand, is no less desirous of having the championship question decided at the next game, and such being the case, Merrymount park should be the mecca of attraction for all the fans' in the city next Saturday.

The first smoke talk of the Manhattan club was a good one, and the evening as a whole was acknowledged by all to have been one of the most enjoyable ever spent. With such an affair billed as an opener the Manhat-members should be potent factors in advancing our athletic interests. Many things can now be done as a result of the words of advice given by the different speakers, and we now look forward to see things take a lively move.

About this time every year, the game of soccer football seems to loom forth very conspicuously, but strange to say this great game does not prove the drawing card here as it should. We are favored with teams that are second to none, and this fact alone should prove a sufficient incentive for all to rally to the interests of those who participate in soccer football. The boys at the Fore River have already started active work and there performances at the Quincy field cannot but prove most interesting to those who attended. Some have been inclined to censure the game, but I never yet saw anybody who ever witnessed a game, but was loud in his praises of its efficiently as a pastime.

A number of the local boxers are diligently training every day and within a few days we will have a chance to see them in action.

Many of the local sporting bloods have been inclined to wonder whether we will have any boxing bouts this year. One thing is evident, there will be none at the Coliseum, for the owners of the building will not allow any to be carded there.

It seems that amateur bouts could easily be billed in this city, and it is hoped that either the Quincy A. A. or the Italian American A. C. both members of the N. E. A. A. U. will take some definite action in this regard.

LEADER IN HAITIEN REVOLUTION DEAD

Deserted Post In London at Time of Recent Outbreak

St. Thomas, B. W. I., Sept. 20.—General Antenor Firmin, who deserted his post as Haytien minister at London to help overthrow President Simon of Hayti, died here.

Firmin led one of the two revolutionary parties and was a candidate for the presidency in succession to Simon. General Leconte, however, the other revolutionary chief, was the first to reach Port au Prince after the success of the revolution had been assured and he assumed the presidency before Firmin could muster sufficient strength to give him a fighting chance at the capital.

For a time a conflict between the followers of Leconte and the adherents of Firmin was feared, but on Aug. 4, two days after Simon had left Port au Prince, Firmin sailed for this city, where he had since remained.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

Heating

Of the four modern methods of heating—by gas, steam, hot water and wood or coal stove—gas is by far the most effective. REPUBLICAN LEADERS ASK FOR LARGE VOTE

Claim That New Direct Primary Law Is In Danger of Repeal Unless Voters Show Interest

What The Leading Candidates Say About It

That the new direct primary law is in grave danger of repeal by the next legislature, unless republican voters show their interest in it by attendance at the primaries next Tuesday, is the belief o fseveral of the leading republican candidates for office who were interviewed on the subject today.

For several days rumors have been going around the city that the republican state committee would not be greatly disappointed if the primary vote is light, because that would give an excellent excuse for going before the next legislature and arguing that the old convention system, and the interest which it awakened, should be restored.

Alarmed by the fact that no less than 139 towns have neglected to nominate delegates to the state convention, and that 53 cities ward have failed to fulfil this important duty, the machine is believed to be fearful that its very existence is threatened, if the direct primary law is permitted to remain on the statute books. Also is its anxiety lessened by the knowledge that 32 towns and 6 city wards have failed to nominate republican committees for the ensuing year.

While it seems almost incredible that the repeal of the law should be sought so soon after its passage, still the fact that leading republicans are willing to be interviewed on the possibility of such a course is somewhat significant and there can be no doubt that it will be the part of wisdom for all friends of the law to attend the primaries, and thus make certain that no excuse is given for its repeal.

The candidates interviewed on the matter today has this to say:—

Secretary of State Albert P. Langtry "There can be no doubt that the size of the vote cast this fall in the primaries will be a factor in determining whether the new system is to endure or whether the next legislature can be induced to repeal the act. I have already heard it suggested that if the people show no more interest than they seem to be taking, it would be better to return to the old system. If the people of the Commonwealth real-

AUTO IS DAMAGED

Defective Steering Gear Wrecks Car of F. E. Hall

ESCAPED UNINJURED

The failure of the steering gear to work properly, caused considerable damage, shortly before three o'clock Wednesday afternoon, to the automobile owned by Frank E. Hall of 20 Muirhead street. The accident happened in the vicinity of the Swallow residence on 1166 Hancock street. The driver had advanced along Hancock street towards the Square, and after passing Dimmock street, started to swerve from the car tracks.

He noticed that the steering gear was not working for the car kept going forward often as he tried to turn it He was travelling at a fairly slow rate, but even at that, before the car could be brought to a standstill, it had suceeded in getting up on the sidewalk. The front axil snapped and the right front wheel went into the lawn of the Swallow homestead.

The driver was not hurt. Repair men were called to the scene, and it was considerable time before the auto was ready to start. The car was equipped with the tires recently invented by Mr. Hall.

ARRESTED IN PORTSMOUTH

Chief Burrell Leaves for Man Who Made Assault

OVER CROQUET GAME

Word was received by Chief Burrell this morning, that a man supposed to be Domenico Milinazzo had been arrested in Portsmouth, N. H., for the Quincy police, by whom he is wanted for assault on Frank Mariana on Brackett street, on the night of Sept. 6.

At the time of the shooting the man succeeded in getting away but the police had a good description of him and have been close upon his tracks for several days. Wednesday he was placed in Portsmouth, N. H., and Chief Burrell telegraphed the police of that city to watch out for him. The Portsmouth authorities located the man wanted in an Italian colony and this morning shortly after midnight they visited the boarding house and arrested the man. The Chief secured the necessary papers to bring the man back to Quincy and this noon left for Portsmouth.

The shooting by Milinazzo was the outcome of a game of croquet, during which Milinazzo was either hit, or came near being hit by one of the balls while the game was in progress in a yard at 97 Brackett street.

This angered Milinazzo, who it is alleged drew a revolver and shot Mariana, the bullet entering the stomach and then, taking a downward course, fractured the hip bone.

It is also alleged that Luigi Milinazzo followed the wounded man into the house, where he was taken and attempted to complete the job started by his brother. A struggle ensued between him and the wounded man, during which Luigi was bitten on the chin.

It was sometime after the shooting before the police were informed of the affair which came to light when Dr. Hardwick was called to dress the wounds.

A general alarm was sent out by the police and later in the evening, three of the men alleged to have been concerned in the shooting, were held up by Officer Avery on Adams street and placed under arrest.

This week, the three men were taken to the City Hospital, where Marina is recovering from his wound. It is said that he identified Luigi as one of the men who asaulted him.

Domenico, the principal in the affair, got away and the police have had some trouble in locating him, from the fact that other Italians in the neighborhood, probably through fear, proposed not to know him and refused to give any information.

Mariana the wounded man will probably recover and when Domenico is arraigned in court tomorrow the case will be continued until such time as the wounded man is able to appear in court.

BOY'S WORK DIRECTOR

Cyril D. Bond Succeeds Mr. Clee At Y. M. C. A.

ASSOCIATION NOTES

Ever since general secretary Bromley of the Young Men's Christian Association was elected, the executive committee of the Association has been searching for a successor to Mr. Clee as boy's work director. To find the right man has been no easy task. At a meeting of the committee held yesterday afternoon, they elected a young man whom they feel will ably fill the vacant position. He is Cyril D. Bond.

Mr. Bond was employed until last May by the gas company and was a valued employee. He left their employ to assist at the state camp at Becket. From there he went to the Summer Institute of the Association, at Silver Bay on Lake George. He did this in order to get a training for the work of the Association whose ranks he intended to enter as an employed officer. Last year Mr. Bond acquired a great deal of knowledge and experience in assisting Mr. Clee in his work for the local Association. This experience together with the training he has received this summer fits him very well to undertake the difficult task that is before him.

Mr. Bond was born in Portland, Me., where his parents now reside. From 1904 to 1909 he was chief quartermaster of the Maine Naval Reserves. In 1910 he came to Quincy to enter the employ of the Citizens Gas Company This business experience will prove a valuable asset to him in his work in his new field. He taught a class in English last year composed of Finns. In this he was very successful. He will commence his work on Monday of next week. Now that the employed force of the Association has been completed plans for each department will be rapidly consummated for the work of the fall and winter.

The shower baths and the swimming pool will be closed three or four days next week in order that a new hot water tank may be installed.

NOTES.

Mr. L. S. LaRose, physical director of the Association, is attending the first meeting of the physical director's association, in Boston today.

For several days Mr. LaRose has been getting the gymnasium in order for the opening of the winter's work which will take place during the week of October first.

With the coming of the cool nights the bowling alleys have been crowded each night.

The first meeting of the Boy's Work Directors of the State will be held at the State office in Boston on Monday of next week.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Association which should be held next Tuesday evening has been postponed to Wednesday evening at 7.45 on account of the primaries which will be held on Tuesday evening. President Chase wishes every director would make it a point to be present.

TODAY'S COURT.

Clara Chisholm was arraigned for assault at Quincy Case continued until Sept. 23.

George P. Hayes was fined $15 for trespass at Milton.

. —One of the reasons why the moving picure shows are so popular is because the pictures are as a rule clean and wholesome. The mind of the public as a whole is clean and it resents that which is improper and suggestive. The idea that it is wise to picture vice to inculcate virtue is all wrong. The picture show is far cleaner today than the regular stage and it is far more instructive, The refusal in Cincinnati to allow the details of the notorious Virginia murder case in the moving picture shows shows a commendable regard for public decency.—Malden News.

RAILROAD PREPARES TO START IMPROVEMENTS

Street Closed While Bridge Is Widened To Make Room For Four Tracks

Friction Over Plans Will Make Corporation The Winner

Atlantic street between Hancock street and the boulevard is closed, as the bridge over the railroad is being widened to permit of the laying of four tracks, which are to be built as far as Braintree. The railroad has also commenced work filling in the marsh along its tracks between the Atlantic depot and Squantum street.

As the railroad has also purchased a strip of land along its track through the city, it looks as though it was the intention to commence work on the four tracks at a very early date.

While as far as known no definite plan has been adopted for the grades at the Saville and Water street crossings, it is pretty well understood that the original plans as submitted by the railroad will be approved by the special commission appointed by the superior court two years ago.

These plans call for the closing of Water street at the Quincy Adams depot. That is the street will be ended on either side of the present tracks and a new street cut under the tracks just south of the present station at Quincy Adams. This means that the street car tracks will have to turn into Presidents avenue near the station and then curve under the tracks with the new street. This plan is not what the citizens wanted but that makes but little difference.

At Saville street the street will also be closed and the tracks raised through the city.

The great trouble in Quincy was that it could not agree on plans. One faction proposed one plan and another something else. At the very first public hearing held, several speakers argued and urged the citizens to unite on one plan to present to the commission believing that if the citizens appeared before them as a unit there would be a good chance of getting the plan adopted. These arguments counted for naught for although several public hearings of the citizens were held before the hearing, they could not agree.

The result was that when the hearings before the commission were held, there were at least half a dozen plans presented for each crossing. All of the plans had merit but as there was no unanimity the result was what far sighted citizens predicted, the railroad had its way, or rather from what can be learned will have its way when the commission makes its report.

This much is almost assured, as ex-Governor Bates chairman of the commission stated as much in a recent interview with President Stone of the Board of Trade.

During all of the hearings it was frequently argued that such rich cities as Newton had its way when the grades were abolished in that section, but the arguers forgot to mention the fact that the citizens went before he commission as a unit instead of presenting numerous plans as was done in Quincy.

The Mikado has decorated President Jordan of Stanford university. We hope Mr. Jordan was properly provided with a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, and that his lingerie gown was stylishly trimmed with point lace.

Is the city setting a good example in civic cleanliness when it uses Mr. Faxon's land and the bush land on Valley street for a dumping ground for loose papers? Blowing about the length of the street are thousands of old tar receipt stubs, which look anything but tidy. If old papers are cleared out of city hall it would seem to us that the only proper thing to do would be to take them to the proper dump and burn them. The roadside is hardly the place especially when that road abuts Mount Wollaston cemetery.

AUTO FIRE DEPARTMENT

The concensus of opinion seems to be that this city is not quite ripe for the installation of an auto fire department. That is, too many things of a more important nature require the expenditure of the sum of money that would be required to purchase the new apparatus.

However, that in no way detracts from the good features of the excellent outline prepared by Councilman Cherrington. The following for instance, hits the nail on the head and is a cause for some good sound thinking. Says the councilman:—

The most important feature in the extinguishing of fires is the time consumed in getting to the spot and with a city like Quincy with its large area and hilly streets, this is of paramount importance, it being similar tothe City of Springfield, where, during the year 1908, the first year autos were in service, there were 590 fires with a loss of $88,690.36. The previous year there were but 496 alarms with a loss of $535,594.74.

Of course Quincy has been fortunate. But it is a fact that the men here are "on the job" getting on the street in short order and under way at the fires in a remarkably short time. An instance of this was shown not long ago when a call came for assistance from another place. The time of the steamer in reaching the fire seemed incredible. It merely showed what the men could do in a case of emergency.

Again Mr. Cherrington says:—

The car for the Chief of the Fire Department should be of the latest model as it is necessary for him to be at the fire at least as soon as the apparatus, and with a horse this is impossible.

The car for the Chief of Police is very important, as there is nothing adequate to take the place of the Police Patrol in case of accidents. It is a practical impossibility at present for the Chief to cover the ground he should without a car of this kind.

No one will try to deny these assertions. They are absolutely correct.

It therefore seems unfortunate that such good ideas should not be made use of immediately. Everyone will agree, however, that the present department is doing excellent work and with the increased number of men asked for, will be able to cope with the situation until the city is financially able to make the change.

HAVE A RECOUNT.

It will be well as Governor Plaisted advises to have a recount, unless the canvass of the votes in Maine on the prohibition question shows a decided majority one way or the other. The returns which the governor and council will examine are those on which the result will be officially proclaimed. They are not the statements forwarded to the secretary of state on which the present standing of the vote is based. The compilation to be made now may settle the question conclusively. If it doesn't, the actual ballots cast in every voting precinct should be counted anew.

REQUIRING THE FLAG SALUTE.

Two children of a British subject, who are attending school in Perth Amboy, N. J., declined to salute the American flag the other day. The school authorities of the state had to put their heads into the law books to see where they were at. The State Board of Education says the children must salute, if the rule has been adopted by a local school board.

The salute to the stars and stripes is a pretty custom. It is one of the many marks of respect that should be paid to the symbol of our nationality. Where it is regularly carried out in school, the next generation should not have the boorish indifference to the national flag manifested by many grown ups.

The stars and stripes have had the love and tears of dying soldiers and widowed women and fatherless children. The sight of the emblem has filled their hearts with consolation for the sacrifice made. But motions of the hands and head can never take the place of doing one's duty to one's fellow men. The man who doffs his hat the lowest to the stars and stripes may walk up to the polls and cast his vote subserviently for the meanest boss.

It is quite a problem to take a piece of red, white, and blue "textile fabric" as it has been called, and make idle and indifferent children feel affection for it. Some drony teachers march their youngsters up the steep hill of routine every day and must make the flag about as distasteful as the dish towel, by their failure to connect the symbol with any ideas of romance or adenture in the child's mind.

The case of these New Jersey children, who are British subjects, is a different one. If we were living in Great Britain for the time being, and our children were required to prostrate themselves before the symbol of English kings and potentates, we would say that John Bull was giving a notable specimen of his insular manners.

THE PRICE OF GAS.

Now that the Councilmen have taken up a subject that, in the end, affects a very important factor with the taxpayers—the pocketbook—they will be remiss in the duties to their constituents if they do not do everything possible to bring about results that were suggested at Monday night's hearing on the gas question. Councilman Richard's suggestion regarding the reference of the point of dispute to the Gas Commission was along the right line and the only one that can result in a satisfactory termination of the affair. It must be admitted that Manager Nichols had prepared a careful statement. It would, however, take an unending amount of argument to convince the average layman why he should pay $1.40 per thousand for gas when his neighbor pays only 80 cents for an article drawn from the same vat, as it were. But the finances connected with large moneyed interests are sometimes unintelligable to those in the ordinary walks of life and the state has deemed it wise to appoint commissions to deal with such questions. The proper thing to do therefore is to get a decision. In deference to the corporation having the gas franchise here, we feel sure that a reduction in the price may be had immediately if it can be shown a discrimination exists against the city of Quincy.

GOING AWAY TO COLLEGE.

The last two weeks of September are a period of breaking home ties in many a home, where the young folks start off for college for the first time.

To the anxious mother, who can not bear to give up her fledgeling to the tender mercies of a turbulent world, it seems like the setting out of the babes of the wood for the terrors of the darksome forest.

If the boy who has always stayed at home is set adrift at a later age through some need for business change, the break often seems pretty tough to him. The fellow who at thirty years of age is confronted by the need for setting out from home ties to try his luck among strangers, feels a timid shrinking from the experience that must handicap his success.

At home, a fellow is protected by family connections. His social position often gives him so good a time that his ambition for business success is dulled Out among strangers he realizes that in the long run a fellow only gets as far as his own industry carries him. College is an excellent school for teaching this lesson. Once thoroughly acquired he can then return and settle at home, full of confidence that if need be he could make a path for himself into the unknown and succeed.

THE PRIMARIES.

Next Tuesday, the primary elections will take place. The old fashioned caucus has been abandoned and the machines, local and general, are no longer responsible for nominations or elections, says an exchange.

The candidates for nominations have made known their wishes and the voters will do the rest. The important matter at present is the securing a full expression from the voters. The success of the experiment has much to do with the number who will participate in the coming primary election. The voters have always been urged to get out to the caucus, but under the new law there is more urgent need for a large vote. A full expression of the popular opinion is desired because that honest, independent and uninfluenced opinion as to the men who shall administer the laws opens a new era in politics in Massachusetts. The candidates that will be given the suffrages of the voters in November will have been selected by the people themselves, and that choice should be sufficiently strong and emphatic to make the officials who will be elected feel that a greater responsibility has been put upon them than was ever accorded to their predecessors. Every voter should plan to take part in the coming primary election. It is his duty as well as his privilege, and the Commonwealth expects him to do his duty.

POLICE CHIEF ARRESTED

Indicted With Three Others In Coatesville Lynching Case

Coatesville, Pa., Sept. 22.—The chief of police of this place, one of his subordinates and two residents of the borough were arrested as the result of indictments returned by a grand jury that investigated the burning to death of Zack Walker, a negro murderer, near this place Aug. 13.

The jury returned indictments against Charles E. Umsted, chief of police, and Stanley Howe, a policeman, charging them with involuntary manslaughter; Richard Tucker and Walter Markwad, the latter two being charged with murder.

The grand jury held that Umsted was lax in his duty on the night of the lynching, and that Howe, who was guarding the negro at the hospital from which he was taken by the mob, made no effort to prevent the lynchers from getting their victim. The other two men are charged with being active spirits in the mob.

ly wish to nominate their own candidate directly, they should come out at the caucusses and show their preferences."

State Auditor John E. White:—"I voted for the direct nomination law because I believe that the people of Massachusetts wanted it. I shall be greatly disappointed if they show their failure to attend the primaries, that they don't care enough about it to take advantage of it."

State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens: I shall be greatly interested in watching the returns from the primaries, to note whether the number of votes cast is more or less than under the old system. That is all I care to say on the matter."

Speaker Joseph Walker, candidate for republican nomination for Governor—I sincerely hope that the republican state machine will not be able to point to a light vote at the primaries next Tuesday as a reason for urging the repeal of the direct nomination law, the passage of which I have advocated and which was put through the legislature this year. I trust that republican voters will attend the primaries in such large numbers as to make it impossible for the machine to see the repeal of the law, in an effort to restore itself to its former position of determining the selection of candidates and the passage of legislation."

Rep. Norman H. White, candidate for republican nomination for Governor-direct nomination. The law has been nor:— Massachusetts has accepted demanded by her citizens. The general apathy of the voters is deplorable and if the citizens of the Commonwealth leave i nthe hands of a political machine the making of a republican governor the law is a failure, public spirited men will not run for office, and the responsibility for the failure of the law, its possible annihilation and the defeat of this liberal policy rests upon the shoulders of the citizens of Massachusetts."

Lieutenant Governor Louis A. Frothingham, candidate for republican nomination for Governor said he did not care to express his views. His campaign manager, Ex-Mayor Baxter of Medford said, "The people have been kicking for a direct primary law for several years. If they don't appear to want it after getting it, the law should be repealed."

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL

There is now a total enrolment of 816 students at the local High school.

• • •

The students were called into the hall last Friday for the purpose of stimulating an interest in the athletic outlook for the coming scholastic year. The football situation was given considerable attention and addresses were made by Headmaster Howlett and Coach Staff. A collection to defray expenses, was then taken up; and a little more than fifty dollars was realized, thus showing that an added interest in athletics has been taken by the student body.

• • •

A meeting of the Goldenrod staff was held last Thursday and various matters, looking to the welfare of the school magazines, were discussed at length, and no efforts will be spared to make this year's issue the best ever. Prizes are to be given for stories and a competition series will also take place among those who contribute cover designs.

Phillip Halvosa, joke editor, is to appoint two associates from each room, and in this way intends to make the joke column the most interesting feature of the goldenrod.

• • •

Considerable regret was manifested among the student body this week, owing to the fact that Starrett White '12, manager of the football team had sustained a rather serious injury to his nose. He is considerably improved, however, and it is hoped that his services in behalf of the football team will again be conspicious.

• • •

Miss Blanche Thatcher has returned from her summer vacation, and is now enrolled as one of the "grave and dignified" seniors.

• • •

There will be a physical test of all the football candidates next Monday. The test will be performed by Dr. Smith, physical instructor.

• • •

Many of her former pupils were sorry to hear that Miss Catherine Garrity, teacher of French and English, has severed her connections with the local High school and is teaching in the Roxbury High School.

• • •

The students were displeased to hear that Dedham High had cancelled its football game with Quincy High. This game is always looked forward to with keen interest and a number of Quincy students have always gone to Dedham to observe the annual event.

• • •

The "Tech" Freshmen have been substituted for Dedham High.

• • •

ATHERTON HOUGH SCHOOL

The boys at the school are exceedingly enthused over soccer football, and steps have already been taken to form a fast team.

• • •

Miss Elizabeth Powers, well known in local circles, has been assigned as assistant at this school.

• • •

Henry O'Brien has been elected captain of the team and Warren Baker manager.

CODDINGTON SCHOOL

The Coddington school will also be included in the soccer football league, and preparations are now well under way to round out a fast combination. Owen Cheverie is captain and Andrew Thompson is to do the managing.

• • •

GRIDLEY BRYANT.

Miss Augusta E. Dell, teacher of the second grade, is confined to her home by illness and her place is being filled by Miss Drislane, who started teaching this morning.

• • •

Two new soccer footballs have been secured and the boys start practice today.

• • •

WILLARD SCHOOL.

Chester Robinson has resumed studies in the seventh grade after an extended vacation in Canada.

• • •

Miss Jessie Shirley, teacher in the fourth grade, was unable to attend the school sessions last Monday, owing to illness. Miss Healey substituted for her on this occasion.

• • •

The two section plan of Divisions A and B has been inaugurated at the school and has been worked out to advantage.

Mr. Walsh, the congenial janitor at the school, has gone to Reading on a two weeks' vacation.

A new flag pole has been erected in front of the school and the stars and stripes present a very impressive appearance when unfurled to the breezes that blow across the Boulevard.

• • •

The pupils of the upper grades have subscribed to the "Current Topics" heretofore known as the "Current Events."

• • •

The printing press at the school has been kept busy this week printing bank notes and other such matters needed by the scholars.

HIS MUG IMPROVED.

E. V. Jewell told this one recently: "I have a very dear old housekeeper—she is aged, but she has been like a mother to me. A little while ago I noticed that my silver shaving mug was slightly tarnished, and I asked the old lady to polish it for me. The next morning I found it shining like the sun. I completed my toilet, and then went into the kitchen to thank her for her kindness.

"'Mrs. Gorman,' I said, my mug looks a lot nicer this morning.'

"'It surely does, Mr. Jewell,' she replied, glancing up at me. 'You always look a lot better with a clean shave.'" —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WONDERFUL FINANCIERS

Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth financier was talking about New York office boys who, working for brokers, speculated on the tips they picked up and accumulated fortunes of $30,000, $40,000 and $50,000.

"The twentieth century office boy is a wonderful creation," said Mr. McWade, admiringly. "'He is so clever, so daring, and, above all, so honest.

"A few years ago I had an office boy named Jasper. One day I sent Jasper out to buy me a post card. I have never seen him since."

"But, sir, you don't call that honest!" cried the reporter.

"Yes—listen," said Mr. McWade. "Last month I received a postcard containing these words:

"'Dear Sir—Here is your post-card. I started speculating with the penny you gave me to buy it, and am now worth $47,000. Thank you!'"—New York Tribune.

THE MOTORIST AT HOME.

"You have a fine lot of children, Binks," said Hawkins, after a spin through the country they returned to the house for dinner. "How many are there?"

"Seven," said Binks, proudly.

"I've often wondered," said Hawkins, "whether you people with so many children have any favorites among them."

"Oh no," returned Binks, hesitatingly; "that is to say, not consciously, but of course we are more interested in a 1911 model than in the earlier ones."

The husband on arrival at home to dinner found a note by his wife, a frequenter of hospitals, saying, "I've gone to get my kimono cut out."

In his innonce of woman's apparel, he rushed to the hospital thinking it was another terrible surgical operation.

CONANT ON HOME OWNING

Well Known Operator Has Issued Splendid Booklet

HINTS VALUABLE

Charles M. Conant developer of the beautiful suburb, Atlantic-by-the-Sea and president of the Squantum Improvement society has just issued, in connection with his property development, a little booklet which ought to prove very valuable to those who would like to own their own homes.

It states their case to a T. Beginning with the question: "Can I afford to own my own home? If so, how can I acquire one?" the booklet tells how any man, on a moderate salary, can secure the land, build the house and thus secure a home, complete.

A full description is given of how to secure a loan and where to build, as well as where not to build—a more important question. The following paragraphs give some idea of the sound advice which is contained in the book.

"It is taken for granted that you are to build by obtaining a loan on your own land, and your success in obtaining such a loan will depend upon the foresight shown in the selection of your home plot. Buy wisely and bear these fa cts in mind if you would pave the way for a loan.

"1 Buy near a railroad station or street car line, which should be within five or ten minutes walking distance, unless you are certain in advance that you can maintain a conveyance for station use.

"2. Be sure that your lot is protected from nuisances by proper restrictions. Take nobody's word but demand a copy of same and see that they are included, first in your contract, and finally in your deed.

"3. Do not buy lots without improvements, remote from water mains gas, electric light, etc. Demand city water, at least, without assessment for its installation. Take no verbal promise for this but see that it is already there when you buy. You can't hope to finance a building loan on a lot without improvements.

If you can't buy your home plot outright do not make the mistake of waiting until you have sayed its cost from your earnings. Make the start, buy at once, paying a small sum down and make arrangements for the balance to be paid in monthly or weekly instalments in proportion to your income. Buy in a growing suburb where values are advancing, because when paid for, your land becomes the margin the lender demands on the loan he makes you. The greater the margin the larger the loan."

Marvels of India.

What a wonderful country is India! There is only one India. Its marvels are its own. There is the plague, the black death. India invented it. The car of Juggernaut was also India's invention. So was the suttee, and within the time of men still living 800 widows willingly and, in fact rejoicingly burned themselves to death on the bodies of their dead husbands in a single year. And 800 would do it this year if the British government would let them. Famine belongs especially to India. India has 2,000,000 gods and worships them all. On top of all this she is the mother and home of that wonder of wonders, caste, and also that mystery of mysteries, the Satanic Brotherhood of the Thugs.—Churchman.

It is easy to take a joke in the spirit in which it is intended if it is on the other fellow.

FOLLOWED TEA EXPERTS' RULE

Treasury Department In an Embarrassing Position

COLORED TEA NOW BARRED

Washington, Sept. 22.—Tea containing artificial coloring or facing matter, shipped from abroad after May 1, 1911, will be refused admission at the custom houses, in accordance with a decision of the treasury department just made public.

The department thus reaffirms the position taken by it March 1, 1911, when it adopted the standards for 1911 recommended by the departmental board of tea experts, declared such standards to be "in every instance teas entirely free from artificial coloring or facing matter," and ruled that teas thus adulterated shipped from abroad after May 1, 1911, could not be entered for consumption by the American people.

The tea controversy presents something of an opera-bouffe aspect from the fact that after the samples were established and distributed among the tea trade, it was discovered that samples five and six contained some slight artificial coloring. The department thus unwittingly placed itself in the position of denying admittance to a grade of teas which exactly conformed to samples officially approved by the department.

The tea trade was aroused and Secretary MacVeagh directedthe solicitor of the treasury department to prepare an opinion covering the whole case. In this opinion Solicitor Thompson takes the ground that whether artificial coloring in the samples prepared by the board of tea experts were known or unknown to the board is immaterial to the present inquiries.

He holds that if samples of teas recommended by the board as standards were known by the board to be colored, it is quite clear from the language of the department circular that any standards recommended by the board which may have included artificial coloring did not receive the approval of the department.

"Thus I take it," says Thompson, "that the standard actually established for the year 1911 were the standards recommended by the board, modified so far as the artificial coloring is concerned by the act of the department March 1, 1911."

This is a reference to the order whereby the department forbade entry from abroad after May 1, 1911, of teas containing any artificial coloring whatever. The gist of the solicitor's opinion is that "samples must yield to standards and not standards to samples." The department today is busy instructing collectors to enforce the official ruling.

China will be the chief country to suffer from the muddle over colored teas. Japan, Ceylon and Formosa, the three other great tea producing countries, promptly conformed to the order of March 1, 1911, and cured their teas without coloring.

The Chinese growers, for some reason unknown to he department, failed to do this, hence the Chinese crop for this year was shipped colored as usual and cannot be marketed in this country unless the decision of the customs division, promulgated yesterday afternoon by Assistant Secretary Curtis, is reversed by higher authority. No doubt the importers will appeal to the board of general appraisers and the case may go to the court of customs appeals.

Eastern importers are less affected by the treasury order than western, as western consumers, generally speaking, appear to prefer the colored green teas, while the uncolored black teas are used more in the east.

LOCOMOTIVES WRECKED

Switcher Collides With Excursion Train In New Hampshire

Somersworth, N. H., Sept. 22.—An excursion train on the Boston and Maine railroad, bound from Boston to Lake Winnipesaukee, was run into by a switching engine here, and while one or two passengers were slightly cut, both engines were badly wrecked.

The collision was sufficient to send both locomotives up on end and the tender of the switching engine fell on top of the roof of one of the Great Falls storage sheds.

Burglars Flee In Auto

Lowell, Mass., Sept. 22.—Four burglars drove into the town of Westford in an automobile and entered the station of the Boston and Maine railroad. They secured only a small amount of money. A constable who saw them speeding away fired two shots at them, but the car did not slacken up speed and the men escaped.

Ex-Policeman Goes to Prison

Grosscup Declares He Would Rather Remain on Bench

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Judge Grosscup sprung another sensation when he announced flatly that in case an effort is made to make it appear that he is resigning under pressure he will not resign.

"There is no connection whatever between the alleged work of a detective in following me and my resignation," he asserted. "If any responsible officer of the United States government, if any responsible magazine editor, or publisher, or any responsible citizen will come to the front with the assertion that I am resigning under pressure, and will show reason for such an assertion, I will remain on the bench until such a time as a thorough opportunity has been given for an investigation of my acts by a United States judge."

FIVE BUILDINGS BURNED

Fourth of Business Section of Maine Town Is Destroyed

Corinna, Me., Sept. 22.—Five buildings on Main street, constituting one-fourth of the business section of this town, were destroyed by fire, the loss being estimated at $60,000.

For two hours it was feared that the entire town of Corinna was doomed, but the citizens, aided by fire-fighting companies from Dexter and Newport, succeeded at length in subduing the flames, women and even children lugging water to the volunteer firemen.

The cause of the fire has not been determined definitely. It is known to have started near a gasolene engine in the basement of the grist mill. The town's electric lighting plant was in the basement of the mill.

Toulon, France, Sept. 22.—A gun on the French armored cruiser Gloire burst and thirteen members of the crew were injured.

LARNED NEVER TRAINS.

National Tennis Champion Eats and Exercises When He Feels Like It.

Practically all athletic champions follow a rigid routine of training. For the average champion it is essential that he do so in order to be in condition to meet challengers seeking his crown and the glory of attaining a title. Now and then there is an exception. One of the most striking is W. A. Larned, the seven time national tennis champion.

Larned follows no stipulated program of training. In an interview he told his system of getting in shape for a championship match. "I never diet," said the champion. "I have no specified hours of practice, but I am always in good physical condition.

"Of course to reach the top step of the tennis ladder it is necessary for a man to practice often. And in addition to frequent work on the courts he must be in excellent physical trim. A tennis player is under great strain in a hard fought match. He covers many miles of ground in a contest. Then, too, practically every muscle in the body is called into play. The head must be clear and the eye alert.

"In my own case I have found out what is best for me. I never map out any special plan. If I feel like practicing I practice; if I don't feel so inclined I rest. That has been my routine of training, if you can call it training, since I have been playing tennis.

"I play tennis because I like the game," Larned says, and this is probably the reason why he is a champion. His heart has been in his work on the courts during the twenty-two years he has been a tennis player.

"There is one thing I wish corrected, and that is my age," continued Mr. Larned. "I'd like to see it stated correctly once. I'm not the grand old man of tennis that some people persist in thinking me. As a matter of fact, I'm far from the old man stage. I'm thirty-nine, and I've been playing tennis since I was about seventeen years old."

Of the four modern methods of heating—by gas, steam, hot water and wood or coal stove—gas is by far the most effective. BRIEFS

Joseph W. Stancomb of Hancock street is away on a weeks vacation.

The gypsy moth men are at work trimming trees along the public streets

Gen. Supt. Conway of the street railway is moving from Braintree to a new house on Merrymount road.

It looks as though the granolithic walk on the west side of Hancock between Saville and Dimmock streets would be completed today.

At the superior court in Dedham, Wednesday, Dominick Tanciedi was fined $100 and given three months in the house of correction for violation of the liquor law at Weymouth.

S. & H. HUSTLERS' CONTEST.

It is just two weeks since the opening of the S. & H. Hustlers' Contest for the six beautiful gold watches now on exhibition at the Quincy Department Store. The enthusiasm amongst the younsters is greater than ever.

Many changes have been made in the standing of the candidates, which adds greatly towards stirring new life into the contest. One little girl brought fifty votes to the Sperry & Hutchinson premium parlor yesterday afternoon, and she claimed she obtained them after a canvass in the neighborhood where she resides. Every boy and girl can do the same if he or she hustles.

INVENTORY FILED.

At the Dedham session of the Norfolk probate court, Wednesday, administrations were granted on the estate of Jeremiah J. Lyons of Quincy. Eliza A. Poole of Weymouth, Harriet E. Couillard and William H. Stevens of Braintree.

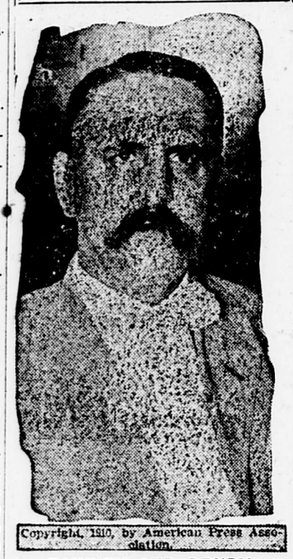

An inventory was filed on the estate of Lucretia A. Gill, late of Quincy, for $21,212.20.

Robbers In New Hampshire Village

Peterboro, N. H., Sept. 22.—A small amount of cash and a quantity of stamps, stolen from the postoffice safe, composed all the booty which burglars netted in a raid on the village of East Jaffrey. The men entered the Monadnock National bank and broke the knob off the safe door, but did not reach the cash vault.

—Two hundred and forty-six cities are maintaining playgrounds for their children, some of them keeping the grounds open in the evening under electric lights for the benefit of the young people who have to work in the daytime. Some cities have arranged for play leadership the year round, winter as well as summer and hundreds of thousands of dollars all together are being spent in the course of a year. Ten cities alone according to some figures compiled, spent last year eight hundred thousand dollars for maintenance. In the last 10 years Chicago has expended eleven million dollars and New York about sixteen million dollars in establishing play grounds. This is splendid. Playgrounds are an approved feature of city life with reference to the children. But once established, the question of importance is, are they being well conducted—Milford Gazette.

TAWNEY AND DENBY

Each Is Mentioned as Likely to Take Carter's Place

Washington, Sept. 22.—Before leaving Washington, where he attended the funeral of the late Thomas H. Carter of the international boundaries commission, Frank H. Streeter of New Hampshire stated his opinion that former Representative Tawney of Minnesota would succeed Carter as chairman.

The appointment of former Representative Denby of Michigan to the vacant place is expected here. Denby was a candidate when Streeter was appointed.

FRAUD IS CHARGED AGAINST IMPORTERS

Two New York Men Held In $7500 and $2000 Bail

New York, Sept. 22.—Sigmund L. Fleischer, a member of the dry goods importing firm of Naday & Fleischer on Fifth avenue, was arrested by United States Marshal Henkel on charges of being concerned in a conspiracy to defraud the government out of customs duties, through entering merchandise at less than the true value at the custom house. David R. Bratter, an employe of the firm, was also arrested.

The prisoners were arraigned before Commissioner Gilchrist, who set the examination in the case for Sept. 27. Fleischer's bail was fixed at $7500, and the bond in the case of Bratter was set at $2000. Pending the filing of the bonds the prisoners were paroled in the custody of their counsel.

CRAMPTON RETURNS HOME

Went Further Into Brazilian Jungle Than Any Other White Man

New York, Sept. 22.—Henry E. Crampton, curator of zoology for the American museum of natural history, has returned after having penetrated the Brazilian jungle for a distance of 220 miles, a point never before reached by a white man.

The only white man to explore this region was Elder Davis, a missionary, who was killed by Jeremiah, an Indian chief, at the base of Mt. Roraima. Jeremiah gave food to Crampton, but would not permit him to enter his hut.

Crampton carried as the reward for his hazardous trip a specimen case which he said was filled with botanical and geological wonders. He was in the jungle four months.

CRUISER RAMS LARGEST SHIP

Great Gash Is Torn In Side of Ocean Liner Olympic

NOT ONE PERSON INJURED

Inrush of Water Automatically Checked by Bulkheads—British Warship Hawke Comes Off Second Best, Twelve Feet of Her Upper Deck Being Twisted Beyond Recognition—Admiralty to Make Inquiry

Southampton, Eng., Sept. 22.—The great steamship Olympic of the White Star line, which left Southampton with a great crowd of returning American tourists, lies off Calshot castle, at the entrance to Southampton Water, with a gaping hole in her side as the result of a collision with the British protected cruiser Hawke. No lives were lost, and of the 2000 or more passengers and crews of the vessels, not one was injured.

The accident occurred a few miles from the spot where the American liner St. Paul and the British cruiser Gladiator collided nearly four years ago, and, as in the previous case, the warship came off second best, so far as can be ascertained.

The Olympic was steaming at a moderate speed eastward, on her way to Cherbourg, to pick up the continental passengers. She had on board nearly 1700 persons, excluding the crew.

The first cabin passengers were just answering the call to lunch when attention was attracted to the Hawke, which was undergoing steam trials.

The warship, moving at high speed, followed the liner, but apparently was clear of her. Suddenly the cruiser swerved in and struck the liner in the starboard quarter, near the stern, tearing through a section forty feet in extent. The Hawke is fitted with a ram especially designed to sink a vessel. The liner's frame stood the shock well and the water-tight doors, automatically closed, held the compartments hermatically sealed.

So far as can be learned the Hawke suffers more severely. Curiously enough, twelve feet of her upper deck was twisted beyond recognition. The stem appears to be completely gone. The plating was ripped open, exposing the forward torpedo tube, and the fore compartment filled with water. There was no panic among the passengers.

The Hawke sent wireless messages for tugs and remained alongside the liner until they arrived to convoy her to Southampton Water, where she dropped anchor to await the turn of the tide to enable her to proceed to her dock. The cruiser proceeded to Portsmouth.

Many theories are advanced as to the cause of the collision, but generally the warship is blamed. An inquiry by the admiralty will be instituted immediately.

The Olympic is the newest, largest and one of the most sumptuously fitted ocean liners in the world. This triple-screw leviathan, if stood on her stern rail, would poke her bow tip 132½ feet higher than the 750-foot Woolworth building in New York, which is the tallest building in existence.

The Olympic is 882½ feet long. She is a veritable floating palace, with all the grandeur and comforts of the modern hotel and clubhouse combined. Among the other innovations in her hold is a monster swimming pool, a squash and racquet court, gymnasium, sun room and elevators.

Nothing was spared to make life easy and attractive for travelers on the ocean highway. It cost between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 to build her and with furnishings, plate and linens her value is brought close to $10,000,000.

BECOMES MRS. MILLS

Daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr., Marries In France

Deauville, France, Sept. 22.—Ogden L. Mills of New York and Miss Margaret Rutherford, daughter of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., were married by Mayor de Launoy of Vauville, a village of 150 inhabitants eight miles from here. The civil rite was performed at the village office.

Later the party returned to the Vanderbilt place at the Chateau de Quesney, where a religious ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. Morgan in the chapel of the chateau.

BIG BERRY CROP IN MAINE

Has Brought $1,000,000 Into Washington County Alone

Augusta, Me., Sept. 22.—"Great interest is being shown in fruit growing and blueberry raising in Washington county, and it is estimated that the blueberry crop has brought into that county more than $1,000,000 worth of revenue."

This is the statement of State Horticulturalist Gardner upon his return from Cherryfield in company with Assistant Yeaton. The crop has held on remarkably late, and the canning factories are still running.

BREAKFAST PARTY TO GUEST

Women's Hats So Small Next Fall That Shoe Horns Are Needed to Adjust Them, Not Hatpins—Egyptian Styles In Vogue.

Dear Elsa—Isn't it perfectly ridiculous the fads some young mothers are subjecting their poor defenseless infants to nowadays? Why, do you know that Dorothy D. actually tried the phonograph treatment on her two-months-old baby the other night? Phonograph treatment! Naturally you fail to see the connection between a few months' old kid and a talking machine. Well, there is one. You know Dorothy has brought up her small daughter according to the most up to date methods, all except one. Young Margaret absolutely refuses to go off to slumberland unless lulled to sleep by her mother's song. Recently a brilliant idea occurred to Dorothy—to sing baby's favorite go to bed song into the machine and have a record made of it. Dorothy's argument was founded on the theory that the phonograph furnished entertainment for the rest of the family, so why should baby be excluded from the treat? Her idea was every night when Margaret was snug in her crib to turn the song on in this way and so save time and energy. Really Dorothy worked herself up into quite a frenzy of enthusiasm over the idea and actually began to imagine herself a benefactor of the human race.

FROCK FOR BREAKFAST PARTY OF SPOTTED SHANTUNG WITH NEW FICHU BODICE.

The day after her brilliant thought it went into operation. The record was made. She sat in front of the machine with the blank record in it and sang her song, putting in it all the sentiment she could express and trying to make it worthy of Schumann-Heink.

She tried it on Margaret that night, not having time for a rehearsal before bedtime. Margaret was laid in her dainty crib, and in another corner of the nursery the phonograph was "cranked up" and set going.

But, horrors! The sound that came forth was an awful shrieking, hissing, howling, wheezing song. It reminded the hearers by turns of a sewing machine, a cat, an old man with asthma, a college yell and an unoiled trolley car wheel.

The results were disastrous on everybody but the baby, who laughed and cooed at the strange noises. This comforted the inventor, who insisted that it showed a keen sense of humor on the part of her infant daughter. As a boon to humanity, though, the phonograph lullaby was not a success.

Looking over your last letter, I came across the paragraph where you ask for suggestions in the entertainment line. Of course when you have such a smart guest as Miss Van L. something must be doing in the social whirl that is quite worth while. I can think of nothing more fashionable than an informal breakfast. Such a function when you get the right people together is so "chatty" and intimate that it is sure to be remembered as one of the happiest events of a visit.

Ask the visitor to name any one she particularly desires to have included among the guests and fill out the list to the number of ten. Invite them over the phone or send a simple note of invitation naming 11 o'clock as the breakfast hour.

The table appointments need not bother you, for they must be very simple. A quite simple though exquisitely fine damask cloth, with a pretty centerpiece graced by a crystal vase, holds old fashioned kitchen garden flowers. A nosegay of a different blossom goes to adorn the table as a favor at each plate. Crystal trays for condiments, receptacles for seasoning and the breakfast covers complete the setting of the table.

When the guests are invited into the dining room they should find the fruit course waiting at each cover. Melons at this time of the year would be nice. A light fish delicately broiled, eggs with hot bread, broiled chicken or chops served on cress or lettuce or tomato salad may follow in the order named. If this menu is too elaborate one or two of the courses you could omit.

The French notion of ending the early morning meal with bar le duc and toasted crackers or thin pancakes spread with marmalade, then rolled up and dusted with sugar, is one that appeals to the woman with a sweet tooth. But why don't you substitute some of your delicious waffles in place of pancakes?

Have that old Spode china coffee service of your grandmother's brought to you at table and serve the morning cup from the steaming kettle into the dainty china receptacles. The grace of such a service gives the finishing touch of hospitality.

Now about hats for fall. They are the most absurd contrivances you ever saw, with high crowns and tiny narrow brims. The trade names are "sugar loaf," "steeple crown" and "Pierrot cap." All that is needed is a perfectly resistless mass of hair, sans rats, curls and puffs, over which to pull these chapeaux, and with a tip of your nose displayed to public gaze you'll be correctly hatted. Oh, yes; I forgot to say that the hair is arranged over the ears to conform to the Egyptian styles in millinery. A witty fashion writer says that women will not need hatpins next winter, but shoe horns, to extricate themselves from their headgear. Many of these tall shapes have the trimming at the back or a bow on top of the crown, and there are just lots and lots of wings to be used standing up in Indian headdress fashion, but that there will be saner models later on in the season there is no doubt, as the sensational hats are always the forerunners of better styles. My advice to you is don't buy your fall hat too soon; wait for another word from MABEL.

Stylish Coat Set.

The right coat set on the right suit looks well, especially in warm weather, when it gives a fresh touch to a dark linen, serge or pongee.

One that has the merit of being stylish and quickly worked is in black and white. The collar is shawl shaped, deep at back, and the cuffs are five inches wide.

The surface is closely covered with a scroll design worked with white cotton couched with black at short intervals. The entire skein is used for the underlay and a single thread for couching.

The edge is finished in a straight buttonholing, a quarter of an inch deep, with a fine chain stitch worked close to it in black, which also re-enforces the purl.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By

FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Ridgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Ridgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Ridgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Ridgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Ridgerwood will regret this decision.

Trainmaster McCloskey, Ridgerwood and Gridley are called out on a wreck. Gridley tells Ridgerwood he has tackled a hard proposition. Gridley conspires with Flemister.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Ridgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rufford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Ridgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Ridgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Ridgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Bart shoots at Ridgerwood, whose life is saved by Dawson. Benson tells how his bridge timbers were stolen. The gang used the stolen engine.

Ridgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Ridgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Ridgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Ridgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Ridgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

Flemister invites Ridgerwood to meet him at Little Butte. Spies follow Ridgerwood. Eleanor and her friends wish to accompany Ridgerwood to Little Butte.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Ridgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Ridgerwood's train and a passenger train. Ridgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Ridgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Ridgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

"Gridley's a law to himself," said the trainmaster. "Sometimes I think he's all right, and at other times I catch myself wondering if he wouldn't tread on me like I was a cockroach if I happened to be in his way."

Having had exactly the same feeling and quite without reason, Ridgerwood generously defended the absent master mechanic.

"This is prejudice, Mac, and you mustn't give it room. Gridley's all right. We mustn't forget that his department thus far is the only one that hasn't given us trouble and doesn't seem likely to give us trouble. I wish I could say as much for the force here in the Crow's Nest."

"With a single exception, you can today," said McCloskey quickly. "I've cleaned house. There is only one man under this roof at this minute who won't fight for you at the drop of the hat."

"And that one is?"

The trainmaster jerked his head toward the outer office. "It's the man out there, or who was out there when I came through—the one you and I haven't been agreeing on."

"Hallock? Is he here?"

"Sure! He's been here since early this morning."

"But how"— Ridgerwood's thoughts went swiftly backward over the events of the preceding night. Judson's story had left Hallock somewhere in the vicinity of the Wire Silver mine and the wreck at some time about midnight or a little past, and there had been no train in from that time on until the regular passenger, reaching Angels at noon. It was McCloskey who relieved the strain of bewilderment.

"'How did he get here? you were going to say. You brought him from somewhere down the road on your special. He rode on the engine with Williams."

Ridgerwood pushed his chair back and got up. It was high time for a reckoning of some sort with the chief clerk.

"Is there anything else, Mac?" he asked, closing his desk.

"Yes, one more thing. The grievance committee is in session up at the Celestial. Tryon, who is heading it, sent word down a little while ago that the men would wreck every dollar's worth of company property in Angels if you didn't countermand your wire of this morning to Superintendent Leckhard."

"I haven't wired Leckhard."

"They say you did, and when I asked 'em what about it they said you'd know."

The superintendent's hand was on the knob of the corridor door.

"Look it up in Callahan's office," he said. "If any message has gone to Leckhard today I didn't write it."

When he closed the door of his private office behind him Ridgerwood's purpose was to go immediately to the Nadia to warn the members of the pleasure party and to convince them if possible of the advisability of a prompt retreat to Copah. But there was another matter which was even more urgent. After the events of the night it had not been unreasonable to suppose that Hallock would scarcely be foolhardy enough to come back and take his place as if nothing had happened. Since he had come back there was only one thing to be done, and the safety of all demanded it.

Ridgerwood left the Crow's Nest and walked quickly uptown. Contrary to his expectations, he found the avenue quiet and almost deserted, though there was a little knot of loungers on the porch of the Celestial, and Bigge's barroom and Redlight Sammy's were full to overflowing. Crossing to the corner opposite the hotel, the superintendent entered the open door of Schleisinger's Emporium.

"How you vas, Mr. Litchervood?" was Schleisinger's greeting. "Don'd tell me you vas come aboud some more of dose chustice businesses. Me, I make oud no more of dem warrants, nichts. Dot teufel Rufford iss come back again alretty, and"— Ridgerwood broke the refusal in the midst.

"You are an officer of the law, Schleisinger—more is the pity, both for you and the law—and you must do your duty. I have come to swear out another warrant. Get your blank and fill it in."

"ME, I MAKE OUT NO MORE OF DEM WARRANTS."

"Oh, mein Gott!" was Schleisinger's protest. But he rummaged in the catch-all packing box and found the pad of blank warrants. Ridgerwood dictated slowly, in charity for the trembling fingers that held the pen. Knowing his own weakness, he could sympathize with others. When it came to the filling in of Hallock's name Schleisinger stopped, open mouthed.

"Donnerwetter!" he gasped. "You don'd mean dot, Mr. Litchervood; you don'd neffer mean dot! Nobody vould serve a warrant on Mr. Hallock, Mr. Litchervood. I"—

"I'll find some one to serve it," said the complainant curtly, and Schleisinger made no further objections.

With the warrant in his pockets, a magistrate's order calling for the arrest and detention of Rankin Hallock on the double charge of train wrecking and murder, Ridgerwood left Schleisinger's, meaning to go back to the Crow's Nest and have McCloskey put the warrant in Judson's hands. But there was a thing to come between, a thing not wholly unlooked for, but none the less destructive of whatever small hope of regeneration the victim of unreadiness had been cherishing.

When the superintendent recrossed to the Celestial corner Mesa avenue was still practically deserted, though the group on the hotel porch had increased its numbers. Three doors below, in front of Biggs', a bunch of saddled cow ponies gave notice of a fresh accession to the barroom crowd which was now overflowing upon the steps and the plank sidewalk. Ridgerwood's thoughts shuttled swiftly. He argued that a brave man would neither hurry nor loiter in passing the danger nucleus, and he strove with what determination there was in him to keep even step with the reasoned out resolution.

But once more his weakness tricked him. When the determined stride had brought him fairly opposite Biggs' door a man stepped out of the sidewalk group and calmly pushed him to a stand with the flat of his hand. It was Rufford, and he was saying quite coolly: "Hold up a minute, pardner. I'm going to cut your heart out and feed it to that pup o' Schleisinger's that's follerin' you. He looks mighty hungry."

With reason assuring him that the gambler was merely making a grand stand play for the benefit of the barroom crowd wedging itself in Biggs' doorway, Ridgerwood's lips went dry, and he knew that the haunting terror was slipping its humiliating mask over his face. But before he could say or do any fear prompted thing a diversion came. At the halting moment a small man, red haired and with his cap pulled down over his eyes, had separated himself from the group of loungers on the Celestial porch to make a swift detour through the hotel bar, around the rear of Biggs', and so to the street and the sidewalk in front. As once before and under somewhat less hazardous conditions, he came up behind Rufford, and again the gambler felt the pressure of cold metal against his spine.

"It ain't an S wrench this time, Bart," he said gently, and the crowd on Biggs' doorstep roared its appreciation of the joke. Then, "Keep your hands right where they are and sidestep out o' Mr. Ridgerwood's way—that's business." And when the superintendent had gone on: "That's all for the present, Bart. After I get a little more time and ain't so danged busy I'll borrow another pair o' clamps from Hepburn and take you back to Copah. So long."

By all the laws of Angels procedure Judson should have been promptly shot in the back when he turned and walked swiftly down the avenue to overtake the superintendent. But for once the onlookers were disappointed. Rufford was calmly relighting his cigar, and when he had sufficiently cursed the barroom audience for not being game enough to stop the interference he kicked Schleisinger's dog and turned his back upon Biggs' and its company.

ELECTION IN CANADA TODAY

Liberals Expect to Win by Majority of Twenty-Three

BETTING IS IN THEIR FAVOR

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—Today's battle of the ballots is a direct lineup between the farmers and the city dwellers of Canada. The rural population has aligned itself with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the candidates making their fight in the reciprocity, whereas the anti-reciprocity forces are devoting their attention to the cities which are the seats of manufacturers.

Heavy betting is going on throughout the dominion and books are being made in all the principal cities. Liberal candidates, the pro-reciprocity forces, are odds on favorites at 3 to 1.

According to the best information of Liberal leaders, who base their predictions upon the latest figures, the pro-reciprocity element will have a majority of 23 when the last votes are counted tonight. Their claims are as follows:

	Lib.	Con.
Maritime provinces	22	13
Quebec	48	17
Ontario	35	51
Western Canada	17	18
Total	122	99

The last speeches have been made, the ultimate meetings held. The annexation bogie, the cry raised by the Conservatives against reciprocity, has practically died out save in isolated districts.

Manufacturers who have been fighting reciprocity are making dire predictions of a business panic if the agreement goes through. Some went so far as to post placards in their plants warning the workmen that the mills would be closed down if the Liberals won.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is coolly predicting that he and his party will win and he shows not the slightest trepidation over Conservative claims that there will be a landslide against reciprocity.

The Canadian law forbids a political party to hire vehicles to convey electors to the polls, but the use of conveyances of all kinds is being donated for today. Elections are being held in 214 of the 221 constituencies.

Politicians were everywhere active on the closing day of the seven weeks' campaign which has stirred Canada from Vancouver to Halifax as never before. Final instructions were sent to the political workers and complete arrangements for getting out a tremendous vote today were made by both parties.

CREW NEAR STARVATION

Steamer Relieves Bark on Which the Food Had Given Out

Boston, Sept. 22.—When the Bucknall line freighter Bloemfontein arrived here from Calcutta her officers told a story of meeting the English bark Indian Empire in he middle of the Atlantic, her crew facing starvation, with their stock of provisions nearly used.

It was on Sept. 10 that the steamer sighted the signals of distress on the bark. A boat, containing the mate and three members of the crew, put off from the sailing vessel and rowed to the Bloemfontein. The men said they were so short of food that they were forced to grind wheat from their cargo in the coffee grinder to make flour for bread.

The Indian Empire had been out 169 days from Adelaide, Australia, to Falmouth, Eng., with a cargo of grain and she was continually battling with high seas and winds. The officers on the steamer gave as much food and water as they could spare and the Malays and Lascars in the crew of the freighter contributed tobacco.

MOTORMAN STUCK TO POST

May Lose His Life as Result of Crash of Trolley Cars

Holliston, Mass., Sept. 22.—A dozen persons were injured, three seriously, in a head-on collision between two trolley cars on the Milford and Uxbridge railway. Had it not been for the heroism of Motorman Livingstone, who was the most seriously injured and may die of his wounds, it is believed the list of injured would have been much greater.

He stuck to his post, holding the controller brake firmly on the cut-off notch until he was knocked through the partition and two seats by the oncoming car, a semi-convertible of great size. Both his legs were broken, his back is badly wrenched, internal injuries cause him great pain, and his body is marked by many cuts and bruises.

The cars met between two turnouts on a curve at the top of Whitney's hill, where a high embankment wall prevented them from seeing each other. A misunderstanding of orders is given out as the cause of the collision.

DE COURCY IS NAMED FOR SUPREME BENCH

Brown Will Supervise Bay State Small Loan Offices

Boston, Sept. 22.—Judge Charles A. De Courcy of the superior court was appointed by Governor Foss as associate justice of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Chief Justice Knowlton and the promotion of Justice Rugg.

Judge De Courcy is a native of Lawrence, where he was born fifty-four years ago. He attended the public schools in Lawrence and went to Georgetown university. He was admitted to the bar in 1881 and in 1886 he was married in Lawrence to Miss Mary E. Roberts.

Governor Foss also sent to the council the name of Elbridge G. Brown of Brockton, to be supervisor of small loans, under the act of 1911. The salary is $2500 a year.

REVOLUTION SEEMS NEAR

Spanish Government Orders Arrest of Political Agitators

Madrid, Sept. 22.—The general strike called by the federated unions to go into effect throughout Spain yesterday precipitated more revolutionary outbreaks in scattered localities.

The cabinet convened yesterday, after a long night's session, and the sternest repression measures were agreed upon. Labor agitators will be classed as political prisoners and will be tried by court martial.

The government has ordered the arrest of workingmen's committees and political agitators in the disturbed districts. Three hundred persons are now imprisoned, among them Largo Caballero, general counsel for and vice president of the General Union of Labor.

TROLLEYMEN ON STRIKE

Business In Detroit Delayed by the Tying Up of Cars

Detroit, Sept. 23.—The entire system of the Detroit United railways was tied up by a strike of the motormen and conductors. Business in general is delayed.

The men ask an increase of 2 cents an hour, with better working conditions. Two arbitrators have been acting for the men and company, but the third arbitrator has not been selected. About 2000 union motormen and conductors and 700 non-union men have gone out.

Mexico's Way With Women.

Woman's place in Mexican life is the inevitable mingling of the Moorish ideas of the Spanish conquerors and the savage ideas of the natives, the Milwaukee Sentinel says. The Castilian hides his wife and daughters behind stone walls and the picturesque lattices of romance, and he is their lord and master. On the other hand, the Indian tribes are, of course, still bound by the spirit of the ancient savage customs. Historians tell of one of the baptismal ceremonies of the Moshle tribes, who fought their way to supremacy long before the Spanish arrived on the scene. To each boy baby the priests chanted this command: "Thy profession and faculty is war, thy obligation to give the sun to drink blood of the enemies and the earth corpses of the foes." To the girl baby they said with far less ceremonial: "You are to stay within the house, as the heart does within the body. Our Lord enshrines you in that place, and your office is to fetch and to grind maize in the metate."

McCONNELL SUPERSTITIOUS BALL PLAYER.

Most ball players have queer mental stunts, and superstition is a regular fetish with them.

McCONNELL.

But in all the queer rinky dinks in the line of spookings and other similar things Ambie McConnell, the midget midsacker of the White Sox, has the pippin. He goes around looking to pick up pins wherever he is, as Mac figures that for every one of them he lifts from the ground he is bound to make a base hit. No matter where the little man is, Ambie is always on the lookout for pins, and whenever he finds three in one day he feels as tickled as a kid with a pair of bright red brogans. Seems as if the people have been pretty careful about dropping pins, judging from the complexion of Ambie's batting average.

FORTY YEARS HAVE ELAPSED

Since Alpine Accident of 1870 When 11 Were Lost

SOME FACTS

The fact that forty years have elapsed since the accident occurred, by which eleven persons lost their lives on Mt. Blanc, in Chamonix France, has revived interest in that tragic event. By estimate, from the known rate of motion of glaciers, it is wellknown, that any object imbedded in the ice will slowly travel downward, and eventually come to light, in forty years, more or less. At the time of the accident referred to, five bodies were discovered in a snow-cave on the French side, near the summit: no trace of the six other has been discovered, either at the time, or since. Among those lost, was Mr. John C. Randall of Quincy.

Mr. Edward Whymper, the English mountain climber, and author, an authority on all subjects of the kind, in a personal letter to a member of Mr. Randall's family, stated that he was of the opinion, that in forty or fifty years' time, there as a possibility of Mr. Randall's body being discovered.

For various reasons, Mr. Whymper judged it impossible to form any opinion as to where the bodies of the victims might appear, but from the direction of the wind, and the way in which it eddied round the summit at the time of the disaster, he thought it not improbable that discoveries might be made on the Italian side at the Glacier De La Brenva. This has actually been the case. The past summer a daughter and three grandchildren of Mr. Randall's visited Chamonix and saw some very interesting relics which have been recovered.

In 1910, an ice-axe was found at the lower end of the glacier mentioned by Mr. Whymper.

It was identified as having belonged to Edouard Simon, one of the missing guides. It had been travelling for forty years in the Brenva glacier. Two years ago an ice-axe, and coil of rope came down the Glacier des Bossons, on the Chamonix side; these belonged to Auguste Tairvez, another guide in the missing party. There were beside, a broken alpin-stock, or staff with the name McCorkendale (one of the travellers) cut upon it, and a guide's felt hat.

Within the past two months another ice axe has come down to the valley. These were all unmistakably identified, as belonging to the party of 1870.

A resident of Chamonix who had made a study of the various accidents which have occurred, told the writer that in his opinion, the party was lost too nearthe summit to be drawn into any glacier, and in that case, the bodies would never appear.

There has been no trace of the bodies of the missing men discovered up to this time.

Miss Edith Randall, a daughter of Mr. Randall returned from Europe last week. It has been her custom now for several years to take parties abroad and the past summer's route was no different or the object of the trip, from those of previous seasons and it was therefore a surprise and displeasing to her to find in her absence she had figured as the central figure in a sensational write-up in a Boston paper, which said she had gone in search of her father's body and was devoting her life to the work. The purported interview was false and a fabrication, written in yellow journalism style without regard to facts or truth.

Miss Randall always visits Chamonix not because her father lost his life there and the body is expected to come out of the glacier but because it is a place where all tourists go and naturally she takes her parties there. This summer Miss Randall was in Chamonix one day and visited the museum to see the articles found recently. In her party were a nephew and niece who were much interested in visiting the scene where their grandfather, whom they had never seen, lost his life. The visit was not the object of the trip to Europe and in no way to be regarded as a story for a newspaper write-up.

Miss Smith—"I see that the legislature has passed a law prohibiting the women from wearing stuffed birds or feathers on their hats."

Aunt Maria—"It ain't fair. I've heard of how the men in the cities wear swallow-tail coats, and they never say a word against it.—Bohemian.

BOWLING.

The bowling season was ushered in at the Granite street alleys, last evening, under most favorable auspices. The occasion was the first weekly roll off and one of the largest crowds ever in attendance at this popular sport, was present at the local alleys last evening.

The first prize was won by Bean, the second went to G. Erickson, while Blake captured the third.

The following are the scores of the twelve bowlers who qualified:—

Bean	100	103	79	282
G. Erickson	93	89	97	279
Blake	96	93	86	275
F. Erickson	90	86	90	266

Joe Gillis	74	72	70	216

Clarke Takes Many Chances.

Fred Clarke is one of the few outfielders who once in awhile dare shoot the ball in to second base when a runner turns that bag instead of always making the conventional return to third. The play calls for quick perception and some boldness and is a departure from conservatism which most outfielders haven't the rapid judgment to chance.

BASEBALL QUIPS.

John Dovey, former part owner of the Boston National League club, is now a scout for the Louisville team.

Connie Mack says he wouldn't pay $22,500 for a whole league. That's a roundabout way of taking a slam at Lefty Russell.

Harry Truby, the old Chicago player who is now an umpire, had a run in with a player the other day. When the player showed fight Truby said: "Go and sit down. I can give you rocks and I'll take buns and run you out of the park."

Silk O'Laughlin, the umpire, says more hits are made on bad balls than good ones. Silk has seen thousands of hits made and says a big majority were on balls that were too far out, too close or too high or too low to be strikes.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

"Young" Kenny, a well known local boxer, is carded to oppose Young Clancy of Boston, in an eight round bout at the Woburn club next Monday.

Phelan and Prout of the Quincy A. A. may compete in the coming events at the Brockton Fair.

The Italian American A. C. has already started arrangements for a monster indoor meet to be held in the Coliseum next month.

"Bill" Manning, the all interscholastic end, and Hill ,the clever captain of last year's eleven, are assisting coach Staff in developing the High school aggregation.

Should such weather as we are having at present continue until next Saturday, Merrymount park, the scene of the second baseball contest for the championship of the city, will be the mecca of attraction for all the sporting bloods of the city. The game itself promises to be a fitting climax to the baseball season Climax did I say? Ah! perhaps it were better not to be too hasty in making such an assertion, for if the Makarias annex a victory another game will be necessary.

Keohane wants to have the championship question settled definitely on this coming occasion. Therefore he is to use every effort to win the game. He told me that he will have the same team on the diamond next Saturday as he did last, and every one who was present at the first game of the series knows just what can be expected from the ball tossers from the Ward six section.

Manager McKenzie, on the other hand, says that a rubber game will be required and claims that his nine will be considerably strengthened for next Saturday. "Stan" Bates will in all probability be on the mound for the Makarias, and in this event the Atlantic boys will be up against a hard proposition. Bates has been twirling in rare form this season and the Makarias are now looking forward to see him win the honors of the day for "Charlie" Ganzel's crew.

At any rate the game will be well worth witnessing and every fan in the city should make an especial effort to be present at Merrymount park next Saturday.

And now the football management of Dedham High, pursuing a course of action identical to that taken by the Dorchester High management informs Manager Starrett White of the local High school eleven, that the interests of both schools would seem to demand that athletic relations be severed. Consequently there will be no football game this season between Quincy High and Dedham High, as the shedule at first would have us believe.

There has always been a growing disapprobation among interscholastic players as to the spirit of sportsmanship prevalent in these two schools. Dedham High and Dorchester High expect to win all games played, and whenever an outside team has secured a victory over either one of the afore mentioned, it has invariably been the case that such a team was erased from the schedule the fllowing year, unless perchance the team in question happened to be a member of the league to which either Dedham or Dorchester belonged.

This is not the proper spirit to display, for no team can be expected to win every game and even if it did, where would there be a chance to stimulate any enthusiasm? The students at the local High school can well feel proud of their athletic representatives for besides being good players, they are good sports, irrespective of whether they win or lose The victory of the local boys over Dedham High last year has undoubtedly been the cause of this recent action, which is to be deplored rather than censured

—What adds to the force of protests in India against the proposed visit of King George to that country, in Decembetr next, is the fact that the attendant expense of about $100,000,000 will be wrung from people afflicted with drought, famine and plague. The sum named would certainly go far in relieving public sufferings; while England's power, as represented in the person of the king, is neither so wavering nor so unappreciated as to call for the gorgeousness in pomp and pageantry, at enormous expense, which the suggested visit would command.—Salem News.

RECIPROCITY REJECTED BY LARGE MAJORITY

Veritable Landslide For Conservatives In Canadian Elections

Means Retirement of Premier Laurier

Montreal, Sept. 22.—The Laurier government and reciprocity suffered an overwhelming defeat in the Canadian elections. By a veritable political landslide the Liberal majority of 43 was swept away and the Conservative party secured one of the heaviest majorities, 50, that any Canadian party has ever had. Seven cabinet ministers, who served with Premier Laurier were among the defeated candidates.

The Liberals lost ground in practically every province of the Dominion. Where they won their majorities were small. Where the Conservatives won their majorities were tremendous. Ontario, the leading province of Canada, declared almost unanimously against the administration and reciprocity.

Robert L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party, will shortly become the prime minister of Canada. He will be supported in parliament by a working majority far more than ample for his purposes.

The government defeat means that the Fielding-Knox reciprocity agreement, ratified by the American congress in extra session, will not be introduced when the Twelfth parliament assembles next month, and that a revised basis of trade with the

Hon. W. PRENTISS PARKER

Candidate for Councillor

The friends of Hon. W. Prentiss Parker of Boston ask the support of the Republicans of this Councillor district for his nomination for that office this year.

Conceding all that may be claimed in behalf of Hon. J. Stearns Cushing, they ask consideration of these facts:—

(1). The Republican vote in this district for the last two years shows that Bristol county is fairly entitled to this office for almost two years terms, that Suffolk county is entitled to a little over three, but it has had none; that Norfolk is entitled to a little less than 5, and it has already had 5.

(2). To give Mr. Cusning a third term would, practically, endorse that period. Mr. Parker's friends agree that, if elected, he will not consider a third term.

(3). Mr. Parker's record of two years in the State Senate, 1909-10, clearly shows that he is in every way qualified to fill this position. He has also been an alderman of Boston and chairman of its board of Pauper institutions. He is a type of business man much needed in the public service.

Sensation In Select Local Circles When J. Barraja-Frauenfelder Is Charged With Selling Plans of Boats Being Built At Yard Where He Is Employed---Held In $3000 Bail

Quincy society people received a sudden shock early Thursday evening when it was learned that J. Barraja-Frauenfelder, had been arrested, at the instigation of secret service officers, on the charge of disclosing national defense secrets. His arrest was made by Deputy United States Marshal Ruhl, after he had been secretly indicted by the federal grand jury. His quick arrest came, as it was believed that he was about to leave the country. When arrested he had a ticket for New York in his pocket and it is believed that had his arrest not been made, he would have been among the missing today.

He was immediately taken before Judge Dodge in the United States District court and held in $3,000. He was represented by an attorney, who appeared to be a foreigner but who refused to give his name. This seemed to add to the mystery.

The first news of the arrest came to Quincy people late Thursday afternoon and it became the theme of conversation for the evening. Baron Frauenfelder, as he was known, has been in Quincy for about three years and was employed as a draughtsman at the Fore River. He was a skilled workman, well educated and soon became very popular with the younger set. He possessed an exceptionally fine baritone voice and has frequently been heard in concerts. He was also an enthusiastic athlete and took great interest in yachting, tennis and other out of door athletics.

Since his residence in Quincy he has been received in the best society and as he was a polished musician, poet and author, his society was much sought. His native place is Naples, where his parents are engaged in the jewelry business. His right name is Barraja, the name Frauenfelder being his mother's maiden name, which in Italy the eldest son of the family is allowed to assume.

United States Attorney Asa P. French considers the case a very important one. It is the first to come under the new act of congress passed last March, at the urgent request of the army and navy officials, because too much information of a secret and valuable nature had been learned by other governments and by the public generally in magazine articles.

INQUEST IS CONTINUED UNTIL SEPT. 30TH

The inquest on the death of Arthur F. Whitcomb, the 12 year old Holbrook boy, who was killed Sept. 2 by being run over by an automobile in which were Royal W. Gill and Edward W. Carr, to have been held before Judge Avery this morning was continued until Sept. 30. This is the day to which the complaint against Gill and Carr was continued. The witnesses summoned in the inquest were present in court this morning. They were Medical Examiner Jones, Fred E. and Mary E. Whicomb, the boys parents, Irma F. Smith, C. J. Duggan, Thomas W. Brennan and Marion J. M. McLaughlin.

BALLOTS RECEIVED.

The ballots for the joint caucuses next Tuesday, have been received by the City Clerk. The rumor in City Square Thursday night, that an error had been made by putting the ward committee of one ward under another was unfounded.

MAYOR OPTIMISTC.

Mayor Shea said this morning that it was by no means true that the railroad plan would be adopted for the separation of the grades at the Water street crossing. His Honor said that the city, through its City Solicitor, and expert engineer, Mr. Breed, with himself were putting up a strong fight to have the city plan adopted for the separation of the Water street grade and he believed that this was the plan that would be adopted. The city plan for this crossing calls for a slight depression of the tracks at this crossing and for the carrying of the street over the tracks by an overheard bridge.

Leon C. Claflin has returned from Detroit, where he went as a delegate to the national convention of the Order of Moose.

DEDHAM IS 275 YEARS OLD

The 275th anniversary of the founding of Dedham town passed with little notice, except for the open houe at the old Fairbanks homestead at the corner of East street and Eastern avenue. The original Dedham covenant was signed by Jonathan Fayerbanks, the settler who built the old house. Visitors were received by Henry S. Fairbanks of Somerville, president of the association, who showed them over the old mansion.

There was a general display of flags about the town, and in theevening a band concert was held at Stone park under the auspices of the Mill Village old home association.

FORMER RESIDENT INJURED

William H. Mears, a former well known resident of Quincy, was one of those severly injured Wednesday when two electric cars came together, head on, at what is known as Whitney's hill near Holliston. Mr. Mears was seated on the front seat which was badly smashed. He suffered a fracture of the right leg and right wrist and received multiple contusions. He was taken to the hospital at Framingham where he is in a serious condition.

Mr. Mears was about 60 years of age and always made his home in Quincy until a few years ago, when he removed to Chelsea where he has since resided. He still owns considerable property in Quincy, situated at Houghs Neck, and has several relatives in this city.

MAN TERRIBLY INJURED IN SLIDE DOWN FLAGPOLE

James Connolly of Houghs Neck Hurt At West Quincy In Yard of the Willard School---Removed to Hospital Where He Is Resting Comfortably

While sliding down the new flag pole in the yard of the Willard school, West Quincy, Thursday afternoon about three o'clock, James Connolly, 42 years, of 410 Sea street, Houghs Neck, sustained an injury that necessitated his removal in the police auto to the Quincy Hospital. Connolly had been to the top of the pole to adjust the halyards and when this work had been finished, chose to slide down the pole, rather than wait at the top till a boatswain's chair was sent to his aid.

The slide to the ground was about 75 feet and Connolly immediately assumed a rapid gait on his way to the ground. About eight feet from the ground, on the flag yole, projects a wooden cleat, placed there for the purpose of holding the halyards fast. Connolly evidently forgot about the cleat and struck on it with terrible force. His groans attracted the attention of the working men who happened to be in the vicinity. A step ladder was procured and Connolly was lifted down, suffering greatly from the injury.

He was taken to the hospital and it was said this morning that he had passed a satisfactory night and was, this morning resting comfortably. Connolly has been connected with the local fire department as a call man and was considered the most unfortunate man in the service. Time and time again he has been the victim of various kinds of accidents and on many occasions experienced narrow escapes from death. It is said that he has met with more accidents than have occurred among all the other members of the fire department.

CHIEF BRINGS MAN FROM PORTSMOUTH

The Chief of Police arrived back from Portsmouth, late Thursday night, with Dominico Milinazzo who is wanted in Quincy for assault with intent to kill Frank Mariana. When Chief Burrell arrived at Portsmouth, Milinazzo readily admitted his identity, but refused to say anything about the shooting. He was arraigned in court this morning for assault with intent to murder and was held in $1,500 for hearing until Sept 29. He will be taken to the City Hospital by Chief Burrell today to see if the wounded man can recognize him.

Quincy lodge Order of Moose at their regular meeting held in Electa hall Wednesday evening voted to reopen its charter list on October 4th.

TODAY'S COURT.

Dominico Milinazzo was arraigned for assault with attempt to murder at Quincy and was held in $1,500 until Sept. 29.

Benjamin C. Bannon was sent to the house of correction for ten days for drunkenness at Braintree.

—Richard T. Crane, a wealthy Chicago citizen, appears to condemn all American college education because he has discovered much debauchery and licentiousness among a certain class of undergraduates. Is the responsibility rightly placed? Is not the parent more to blame than the college? Surely no educational institution can altogether overcome the lack of proper home influences. Give a red-blooded youth a motor car and send him with too much spending money to Harvard or Yale or Brown and what will he do with his time and his money? If he goes to the devil, the parent may like to shift the blame upon the college, but it belongs on his own shoulders. —Providence Journal.

HINTS ON COOKING

Lamb should be small and fat; the leg joints being stiff and the vein in the neck blue denotes freshness. The kidney should be small and the fat white and firm.

Fine, well-fed beef is distinguished by the bright red color of the lean, which should be marbled with fat; by the pinkish whitness of the fat, and the suet being firm and white. When beef is lean, the flesh dark colored, and the fat yellow, it is not good. Old meat has a streak of horn running between the fat and lean of the sirloin and ribs.

CAPE OYSTER PIE.

Line a deep plate with rich paste or use that made as for pies, or made like baking powder biscuit and lay on two rims; fill loosely with broken bread. Cover with paste rolled thicker than usual, and bake till crust is done. Remove top and filling and pour in the creamed Cape oysters. Replace the top crust and serve at once. Cape oysters are worth 25c a pint.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

If it is true that Nevada permits roulette in one of its prisons, perhaps they think they must teach the prisoners to earn an honest living.

Alimony is now considered a rather improvident method of settling marital affairs. The New York Smart Set requires cash in advance of the wedding.

The healthy season for grandmothers now begins. Few will die before they are needed for funeral purposes during the next base ball season.

Although September is the proper time for asters, it is hoped that since a prominent Newport wedding they will cease to blossom on the front pages of the newspapers.

If the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company is allowed to divide the city with a high stone wall on which to run its trains it will be a disgrace to the present administration and the citizens generally.

Where is our civic pride? Considerable interest was aroused over the proposed location of the trolley express office which was a small matter compared to depressing or not depressing the tracks of the railroad. It is something every resident should be interested in.

Why should the tracks be elevated in Quincy when other places can have them depressed with attractive surrounding? Can it be possible that any one admires high stone walls? Do we want two distinct cities with a high division wall between? Wake up and become a city that insists on its rights and stands for civic beauty combined with utility. The trouble to be overcome before Quincy developes as it should, is lack of unity organization and civic pride. Get together and see what big things can be accomplished.

HIGH PRICE OF SUGAR

In all the chorus of complaint about high prices, the Consumer up to recently had lifted no voice about the cost of sugar. When he could buy a pound at the average American grocery for 5 1-2 cents and when he read that 100 years ago sugar cost 38 cents a pound at wholesale, there did seem to be one rift in the economic clouds.

Now short crops and speculators have run it for the time being up to eight cents—about the average retail price in the United States—and it may go higher. As the average family of five persons uses 400 pounds a year, the economical house keeper watches the sugar quotations quite as eagerly as the fashions.

People accustomed to the severer rigors of the simple life used to have many ways of saving on their bill for sweets. Wholesale dealers say that the bill for molasses increases proportionately as a place grows smaller More molasses will be sold relatively in Pittsburg than New York, in Youngstown, O., than in Pittsburg, more still in Lonesomehurst.

In the simple old days, when farmer Corntassel came to the table in his overalls and Mrs. Corntassel with sleeves rolled up and arms red from the wash tub, brown sugar harmonized perfectly with the coarse earthenware.

But after a time Miss Corntassel returned from college feeling conscious of a mission to elevate the manners of her home. Brown sugar, molasses? O, faugh, why not eat out of a horse stall while you are about it, 'twould be cheaper?

When white granulated sugar became general years ago, displacing to some extent maple or brown sugar and molasses, the family given to plain living has conscientious spasms about extravagance. But plain honest granulated sugar has grown too homely now. We gladly pay a cent or two more a pound for the peculiar effect of crispness that goes with cut sugar for our coffee and tea.

Then too it is only unimaginative persons lacking perceptions of the daintier niceties of life, who are satisfied to sweeten their fruits and preserves with the flat and sandy form of granulated sugar. Confectioners' floured sugar gives a certain flaky snowiness, which adds a note of sparkle and brilliancy to the concoctions of the house keeper.

As Dad has unlimited resources to meet these and similar needs along many lines, he always looks particularly pleased when the grocer's bill comes in.

CHARITY AND STAMINA.

It has often been observed that living organisms require for their fullest development a certain amount of resistance in their environments. The individual or the species for which things are made too easy loses the unused function. The butterfly helped from its chrysalis has imperfect wings; the man fed on soft foods has bad teeth. The parasite is always a weakling and sometimes a degenerate monster. The parasitic dodder, which draws all its sustenance from the sap of the host, is a plant without a root or a leaf. The hermit crab which, instead of growing a shell for itself like other crustaceans, makes use of the cast-off shells of mollusks, is atrophied in some of its members and enfeebled in its whole organism. So with the intellectual environment and the mental qualities of man. The Journal of the American Medical Association says that the pauper and the pampered child of wealth are alike deprived of those qualities of initiative and self-reliance on which their respective environments make no demand. Unnecessary charity is twice cursed; it curseth him that gives and him that takes; all of which goes to prove that abuse of medical charity is as bad for the public as it is for the profession.

AVERT THE DANGER.

In many parts of the country the unusual weather conditions have resulted in a serious increase in typhoid this year. Fortunately, this section has escaped any such threat, says the Advertiser.

The same care and watchful precautions which have rendered the water supply of Greater Boston immune from any typhoid dangers or any serious menace of enteric infection, have proved fully adequate even under the unusual conditions of the present year.

It remains to be seen, however, whether this immunity will be permanent.

The state has been fortunate, in the past, in having on the metropolitan water and sewrage commission, one of the leading experts of the world in matters of sanitation. Henry P. Walcott, for so long the head of the state board of health, was wisely appointed as a member of the water and sewerage commission, as well. But for weeks and months Governor Foss had refused to reappoint him, admittedly and avowedly for merely partisan reasons, as Dr. Walcott was appointed originally by a republican governor.

It is a pity that the governor does not or will not recognize that matters inseparably connected with the public health, should be wholly outside the domain of the spoils system. It is safe to say that, if he were about to undergo a serious surgical operation, it would be a matter of indifference to him whether the surgeon were a republican, democrat, progressive, socialist or even an anarchist, so long as he was the leading surgeon of his day. Yet he is willing to "play politics," apparently in a matter which directly concerns the lives and safety of more than a million people of Massachusetts. His veto of the pure milk bill offered another instance in point, where the demands of a few shiftless milk producers (the leading milkmen of the state favored the bill) led him to veto the measure designed to protect the health of the milk consumers an despecially the very lives of the little children of the tenements

HOME TRADE

One is often surprised to see for what slight reasons people will turn down an offer by the tried and true home merchant, to accept some more or less illusory bargain offered at a distance, says an exchange.

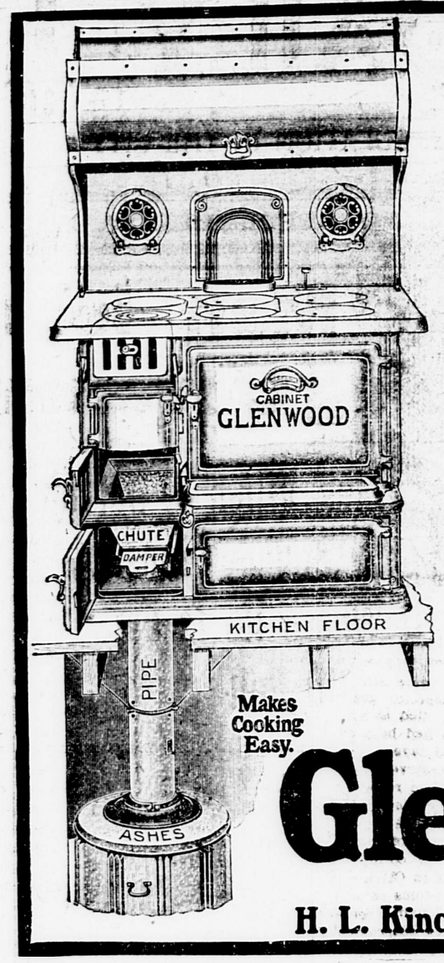

Frequently, the apparent gain of a nickle or dime is enough to lead people to send their money away from home.

It is one of the laws of life, that to get one must give You can't always be absorbing the good things of life from those around you, and never give anything in return. All life is a trade. Sooner or later the man who thinks he can get something for nothing always is found out, and he gets what he gives

The man who is not a familiar face in the business places of his home town is not a man who attracts many business friendships. He creates very little good will People buy of him if they have to, if they find that he has bargains that they simply can't resist but when things are about even they never go out of their way to serve him. Such a man gets a reputation for cold isolation and if he wins it is by sheer hard work and friendships never help him

A great many of the prizes in life go by favor. The fellow who feels interested in his townsmen, who takes every opportunity to throw a good business deal in the way of a neighbor, has created a host of friendly and willing debtors. These favors are not forgotten. They may seem bread cast upon the waters of a shoreless sea. Then some day, when he least expects it, along comes some man to whom he has done a business favor, to whom it is a pleasure to make some return.

Here is explained the mysterious case with which some fellows get along in life. They never seem to work as hard as others. But they have a genius for business friendship favors to friends whenever possible, they buy everything possible of their townsmen. They create such a host of business allies that by and by they find what a lot of people there are in life who enjoy and believe in returning favors and remembering mutual obligations.

CONTENTED.—"Catching anything?"

"Nope."

"You don't seem to mind."

"I'm just as well satisfied. I don't care to have cheap fish tangling up these expensive lines."

NOT ENOUGH.—"I see you advertise bent water crackers at a bargain," said the bride.

"Yes'm."

"Well, tell me. Are they seriously bent?"

FRIVOLUS.—"I'm glad I found her out in time."

"Did she throw you over for another?",

"No; but her father persuaded her to stop going with me by buying her a pug dog."

HARD.—The artist gasped.

"What on earth are you talking about?" he asked.

"Your picture! It's your uncle, of course!"

"My uncle?" cried the amazed wielder of the brush. "That—that my uncle? Why, it's the sunset. Don't you see the title 'Sunset and Evening Star'?"—Answers.

"Horse sick?" asked the man in the buggy.

"Yep," replied the man with a spring wagon.

"Hard luck, isn't it!"

"Oh, I dunno. It's gettin' so medicine is cheaper than hay."

Grosscup Changes His Mind About Tendering His Resignation

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Judge Peter Grosscup will not resign. He made this positive declaration after he had received information that facts concerning his business and private life gathered by Lawrence Ritchie, a former secret service operative, would be published in Chicago from day to day.

"I will not send the letter of resignation to President Taft on Oct. 3 as I intended," he said.

WILL NOT ALTER POLICY

President Taft Explains His Recent Vetoes of Tariff Bills

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 22.—President Taft made his first speech of his western trip on the tariff and his vetoes of the wool, cotton and farmers' free list bills here.

The president attacked the Democrats and insurgent Republicans in the senate and house who put those bills through congress at the special session, defending his own course in vetoing them and declaring that he was unalterably opposed to revision of the tariff except upon information secured by the tariff board.

He defined his own position with regard to tariff revision and made it plain that even if political defeat stared him in the face, he would not alter his policy. The president predicted that revising the tariff with "blacksmith's tools," such as he said the coalition of Democrats and "insurgents" used, will lead inevitably to a revulsion of feeling and a recurrence of the higher rates and the "old system of high tariffs."

The president said he favored lower tariff but with protection, as pledged in the platform of the Republican party.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

Louis Mann, the distinquished character comedian, will present his latest success, "Elevating a Husband," at the Hollis for two weeks, beginning next Monday. The play is by Clara Lipman and Samuel Shipman. Miss Lipman is Mrs. Mann in private life, and she has won enviable fame as a dramatist and actress. One of her notable plays was "Julie Bon-Bon," in which she and her husband jointly starred several seasons ago. "Elevating a Husband" is an American play, with the scenes laid in New York city at the present time. In most of his recent plays, notably "The Cheater" and "The Man Who Stood Still," Mr. Mann utilized a German dialect, of which he is master. In his new play he eliminates the dialect and gives us an entirely new creation. The story of the play deals with the efforts of an ambitious and "cultured" wife to "polish" her illiterate, but financially successful husband. The process is often ludicrously amusing, but it also has its sober side, and there are several dramatic scenes that are described as tremendous in their intensity. In the role of Charles Sample, the husband, Mr. Mann is afforded remarkable scope not only for the unctuous humor which makes his comedy work so delightful, but also for the delicate touches of sentiment and pathos which stamp him as a character actor of wonderful versatility. There will be matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Harry Houdini, the celebrated jail breaker who has successfully defied the police and prison officials of every clime to hold him captive, will begin the second and positively last week of his engagement at B. F. Keith's Theatre on Monday. It has been over three years since Houdini last appeared in Boston, but that his absence has only served to whet the public appetite is very evident from the packed houses that greet him twice daily at B. F. Keith's. During the past week Houdini has accepted and won several of the most difficult challenges ever prepared for him in Boston, and public interest in his marvelous powers has been kept at a fever heat. During the coming week Houdini will attempt to escape from several new and unusually ingeniously contrived shackles. Aside from Houdini, the bill will abound in novelties, both American and European. Les Marquads, two eccentric dancers from the Folies Bergere, will be seen in some new and startling whirlwind dances. Wilfred Clarke, the well known Anglo-American comedian, will present his latest farce, "The Dear Departed," and the Florentine Singers, a troupe of eight grand opera soloists, headed by Marion Littlefield, will sing the most popular operatic airs. Others will be Jarvis & Harrison, the jester and the girl; Ralph Smalley, the cellist of the Boston Symphony orchestra; Tim Cronin, the Irish alderman; and Bert Melrose, the clown with the tables and chairs.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

Boston's newest theatre, the Plymouth, on Eliot street, just West of Tremont, will be opened by Messrs. Liebler & Co. on Saturday night, Sept. 23. The Plymouth is to give to Boston what New York and Paris already enjoy, a theatre where only high class plays will be produced by the best actors and actresses. Messrs. Liebler & Co's policy is to give Boston through the medium of The Plymouth plays precisely as they are produced in New York and with the New York casts. The opening will be marked by a dramatic novelty presented for the first time in America. The famous company of players from the National Irish Theatre, Dublin, have been engaged for a season. William Butler Yeats, the distinguished Irish poet and dramatist, and Lady Gregory, whose comedies have made successes in all the capitals of Europe, are coming to America with the Irish players. Plays by Mr. Yeats and Lady Gregory will be produced at the Plymouth under the immediate direction of their authors.

The Irish players will produce during their season only Irish plays by Irish dramatists. Ireland within the past ten years has produced a new school of playwrights whose genius and stagecraft have been acclaimed by the critics of London and Paris. The plays reflect the life and hopes of Ireland in tragedy and comedy. The Irish players themselves have achieved distinction in London and Paris, as well as Dublin by the sincerity and realism of their art. Their ensemble work is matchless, for oddly the players are more devoted to their art than the "spotlight" so coveted elsewhere.

There will be a change of bill nightly during the Irish players' season. The program will usually be composed of a comedy and a tragedy ending with a comedy, three pieces. These will furnish Boston playgoers and critics with adequate material for the appreciation of the work of the genius of J. M. Synge, the poetry of W. B. Yeats and the bubbling humor of Lady Gregory and the other writers who have provided the Irish players with a fascinating repertory of comedies and tragedies. The opening night Sept. 23, will provide a novelty for Boston first nights. William Butler Yeats in a brief preliminary address will present his views on the new Irish drama and the new and successful school of Irish dramatists. Then will follow three plays: J. M. Synge's much discussed tragi-comedy in one act, "The Shadow of the Glen." "Birthright," a one-act tragedy by T. C. Murray, of Cork; and Lady Gregory's one-act comedy "Hyacinth Halvey." The company has a repertory of some forty plays. They bring with them their scenery and properties painted and made by Irish artists.

CORONATION PICTURES.

Six weeks of unbounded popularity are thus far the record of the Coronation pictures at Tremont Temple, and there would seem to be as many more in store for them. Thousands upon thousands of people have seen them, and all have been enthusiastic in their praise. They interest both the curious seeking entertainment and the scientifically inclined, for aside from their spectacular display of the great processions and ceremonies attending the Coronation of England's King and Queen, they are notable as an example of the latest results in modern color photography. They are far superior to the average notion picture, and they can be seen again and again with pleasure, especially as new views are added each week. They are given twice a day at Tremont Temple, at 2.30 in the afternoon and 8.15 in the evening, accompanied by lecture and orchestral music.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

It is rollicking farce that John Craig is to give at the Castle Square next week. "Why Smith Left Home," the work of George H. Broadhurst, well known also as the author of "What Happened to Jones" and "The Wrong Mr. Wright," was made for laughter, and how well the dramatist fulfils his purpose will be seen by two hugh audiences each day during the coming week. Mr. Smith really does not leave home until the end of the play, and then he leaves it in company with Mrs. Smith for a long deferred honeymoon. Why this honeymoon was postponed is what Mr. Broadhurst tells us, and the successive situations are persistently comic. So many things happen in the course of a single day to the Smith family that the entire three acts of the play are required to bring them to the attention of the audience and in the end after many tribulations in which relatives play no small part, the bride and bridegroom go for peace and rest away from those who have made their married life anything but cheerful for them. "Why Smith Left Home," is one of the few American farces that have succeeded in London, and in this country it has been played again and again during the past dozen seasons. At the Castle Square Mr. Craig will appear as John Smith.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

At the Majestic next week the Aborn Opera Company's big spectacular production of "The Bohemian Girl," announced as bigger, brighter and better than ever, will be presented for its second and last brilliant week at this popular Boston playhouse. This massive and realistic production of Balfe's great masterpiece proved one of few really big successes of the past season. Its appeal not only extended to the lover of music "worth while" but to all who enjoy magnificent stage settings and novel incidental features. The Messrs. Aborn have devoted much care to the selection of the present cast of grand opera soloists. The same mammoth scenic production, with all its realistic interpolations, including the great Fair and Gypsy Camp scenes, the wonderful whirlwind acrobats, and Ballet Dance of the Hours, in the famous "Marble Halls" scene of the last act will be presented. Matinees are given Wednesday and Saturday and the prices, not withstanding the fact that it is one of the most elaborate productions of grand opera ever made, are within the purse of all.

NATIONAL THEATRE.

All attendance records for a vaudeville theatre in America were shattered this week by the new National Theatre. For the first ten performances more than 25,000 people bought tickets to witness a performance in the world's largest vaudeville playhouse. Because of the great rush for seats at every performance, the management has decided to have reserved seats—the sale of which will commence on next Monday morning. Last week's show was a hugh success, especially the National Boston consolidated modern minstrels with Lew Benedict, Hughie Dougherty, Bob Evans, Eli Stone, Thomas Clifford and other big favorites. The immense popularity of this wonderful organization of singers, comedians and dancers has caused the management to hold them over for next week. They will have a score of new songs and jokes.

The vaudeville bill will be filled with great feature acts, and will be headed by the Great Santell, the man who is known as the "American Hercules" and said by experts to be the world's strongest man. The show at the National is the talk of the town. For the prices charged there never has been anything like it anywhere in America. The evening performance is over in plenty of time to allow out of town patrons ample time to catch their trains.

Horticultural Show Begins Saturday At 3 o'clock

SCHOOLS OPEN

All arrangements for the Horticultural show of the Milton Educational society which begins Saturday at three o'clock, continuing through Sunday, have been perfected, and it is expected that the affair will prove to be one of the best ever attempted by the society.

It was at first thought that this show would eclipse anything of its kind ever held in this vicinity but the frost last week played havoc with a number of gardens and flower displays that had been arranged for the occasion. However, all of the prospective displays were not injured, and it is expected that the leading horticulturists will contribute to the event.

Lieutenant Governor Frothingham was in town Thursday visiting frinds and incidentally making endeavors to secure a large vote from this section at the coming primaries.

The state primaries will be held in the Town hall Tuesday evening and the polls will be open from six o'clock until nine. All who attend the primaries, will be expected to enroll as Republicans, Democrats, or Democratic progressives, as the case may be. This method will be quite a change for the Milton voters.

All the classes of Milton Academy opened this week. The boys started in Wednesday and the girls on Thursday. Considerable increases have been made in the various classes and the total enrolment of students is the largest in the history of the school. A number of new teachers have been added to the staff.

The Milton Academy football squad was called out for practise this week. Frank B. Perkins is the captain and Robert E. Finlay is doing the managerial work.

Wednesday, Oct. 4, has been set aside as the day upon which the Milton Historical society will meet for its first fall session.

Percy Hodges and family of Columbine road have returned from Hull where they spent the summer.

Derby Eaton of Washington street is home from a two weeks' vacation.

The annual meeting of the Men's club of the Unitarian church will be held Oct. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazen B. Williams and family of Eliot street have returned after an extended vacation in New Hampshire.

Hon. Eugene H. Sprague, candidate for County Commissioner, was in Milton this week visiting friends.

CHEER UP BOYS AND GIRLS!

The list of standing in the S. & H. Hustlers' Contest will show a number of changes next Tuesday when the list will be published. Everybody has an equal chance and from the enthusiasm the boys and girls are showing the winners will not be known until the contest closes.

We wish to call your attention to the rules governing the contest that are being published daily on the second page of the Ledger. As each Green Trading Stamp counts one vote we think that some ofthe girls would be able to gather more votes if they made a canvass of their immediate neighborhood requesting neighbors and friends to vote their Green Stamps for them. We know of quite a few boys who are doing this with great success.

SIR ROBERT HART

Stood For Years Between China and Great Powers

SIR ROBERT HART DEAD

Long Wielded an Immense Power in the Chinese Empire

London, Sept. 22.—Sir Robert Hart, formerly inspector general of customs in China, died at his home near Marlow. He had been dangerously ill for several days.

Eastern story preserves the record of many careers more romantic, but there have been few more remarkable and few so beneficent as that of Hart under the government of China. Instead of a tissue of corruption, he has left behind him in China a splendidly organized customs service, the work of more than half a century.

His services to the Chinese are inestimable, not only from a financial point of view, but because of his smoothing out of many difficulties and misunderstandings which threatened the integrity of the loose-jointed empire. For many years he was the acknowledged intermediary between western nations and the Chinese government.

Sir Robert Hart was born in County Armagh in the north of Ireland on Feb. 20, 1835.

QUINCY MAN ARRESTED

His arrest came about through an article which it is said he sold to an English magazine Aug. 9. The article was sent to Harrison Suplee of the Cassian magazine company which publishes an English and New York magazine. The title of the article was "Articles, Notes and Designs of Submarine Boats." He told the publisher that he was engaged in the building of the submarines Norwhal and Octapus and his article was accompanied by photographs and drawings of these two ships, showing the gun machinery and other views below deck. After reading the article the magazine publisher sent a check for the contribution and then turned the article and photographs over to the government.

Under his contract with the Electric Boat Co. it is said that he was bound to secrecy and that the information he obtained was while he was in th employ of that company.

He was arraigned on six counts. The first four charge him with attemping to communicate knowledge of the defences of the United States government and the method of construction of United States submarine boats. The fifth and sixth counts charge him with communicating the information. The maximum penalty for the offense is $1,000 fine or imprisonment for a year or both.

Frauenfelder is said to be 29 years of age and to have been in this country nine years. He is an expert draughtsman and was employed by the Electric Boat Co. as a draughtsman. In his contract with the company it is alleged that he took an oath that he would not reveal any of the secrets of constructions of the United States ships the company was building.

His counsel said Thursday night that he had no intention of disclosing information, but intended to write a general article on the subject of submarine boats. It is said that when arrested he had a ticket for New York and it was believed that he intended to leave the country. He has a brother Joseph, however, who is at present on the way to this country and it is claimed that he was simply going to New York to meet him. It is also understood that it was the intention of the two brothers to set up a bachelor apartment in Quincy.

His brother will probably be held up by the immigration officials and will be questioned concerning his knowledge of the alleged offence.

Since coming to Quincy Frauenfelder has made his home with several different families but for the past few years with Mrs. Charles H. Burgess, 17 Whitney road.

PICKPOCKET GOES TO JAIL

Man Who Tried To Rob On Brockton Car Gets A Year

ARRESTED IN CHICAGO

Henry Miller, who it is said has a number of aliases, was sentenced to a year in the house of correction, by Judge Quinn at Dedham Thursday, for attempting to pick the pocket of Michael J. Walsh at Quincy July 21, 1910.

The alleged attempt was on a Brockton car. Walsh and Miller stood on the rear platform, the car being crowded. Just as the car reached City Square, Miller tried to get the pocketbook of Walsh, but was prevented in the scuffle. He jumped off the car and running to a Houghs Neck car just departing, made his escape.

A young boy on the car saw the fellow and told Lieut. McKay. The boy accompanied Lieut. McKay to Houghs Neck and pointed Miller out to him. As the officer approached, Miller stood leaning up against a public dance hall smoking a cigarette. On the policeman's approach he ran. Ther was a short chase Miller jumping fences and running through back yards. Dan McKay is a good runner however, and the man was overhauled and placed under arrest.

In the court the next day he was held in $1,000 for the grand jury. When the grand jury came in, Miller was among the missing and he was defaulted. This summer he was picked up by the police of Chicago, where he was going under the name of Henry Ross. Chief Burrell and Lieut. McKay went to Chicago and brought him back.

Thursday, Miller pleaded guilty and his counsel put up a strenuous fight for a light sentence as it was only an attempt. Judge Quinn however, said "There is no criminal more heinous and despicable than a pickpocket" and a sentence of one year was imposed.

—Fifteen jewelry firms in Providence have agreed with the superintendent of schools there to take boys for training while completing their high school courses. This is done for the purpose of equipping the high school pupil at graduation with a definite means of securing a livelihood and at the same time to provide for the trades a higher type of workmen. This idea might be extended beyond the jewelry trade, and seems to be an improvement on the old custom of apprenticeship.—Somerville Journal.

LASSEN ASKS FOR DIVORCE

Victor C. Lassen, a wealthy contractor of Weymouth, filed a divorce suit today with the clerk of the Norfolk Superior Court, against his wife, Catherine J. Lassen, alleging that on Sept. 9 of this year, and on divers other occasions, she treated him in a cruel and abusive manner.

The divorce suit is the outcome of the assault case which a week ago resulted in the arrest of Mrs. Lassen, who was charged with beating her servant, and went to Dedham jail because her husband refused to furnish $300 bail for her.

BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Pettengill are away on a few days' vacation trip.

A regular meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks will be held in Electa hall next Tuesday evening.

The first stated conclave of Quincy commandery, Knights Templar for the fall, will be held in Masonic apartments next Monday evening.

The registrars had a busy session Thursday evening at City Hall when they added 129 names to the voting lists. Candidates seeking nomination were on hand getting voters registered.

About the muddiest place in the city when it rains is City Square and probably the street in that vicinity is used by more foot passengers than in any other section of the city. It seems as though something could be done to remedy this.

It will be somewhat of a surprise to the Republican politicians of Wollaston to know that over 600 Democratic ballots have been received by the City Clerk for precinct one, for next Tuesday's caucus. The total vote of this precinct at the state election last November was but 385.

William C. Caldwell started a series of whist parties in Stones hall Thursday evening, twelve tables being in play. The highest scorers were: William D. Luce 51, Peter Hynes 49, Unknown 42, A. E. Thayer 41, J. M. Riley 41, James Murray 40 and E. M. Fisher 40.

EXPLOSION SAVES TOWN IN VERMONT

Flames Spreading When Tons of Dynamite Went Off

Bloomfield, Vt., Sept. 22.—An explosion of tons of dynamite, in the midst of a roaring fire which swept away the barns, storehouses and office buildings of the Connecticut Valley Lumber company and the local postoffice and grocery store last night, was all that saved the town from being wiped out by flames.

As the fire licked up the postoffice and grocery store and threatened to lay low the fifty or more remaining houses of the village the dynamite, several tons of which was kept in the storehouse, exploded and caused all the burning buildings to collapse and fall together.

Previous to the explosion the firemen had kept at a safe distance from the fire, owing to the danger, but, with the dynamite out of the way, work of extinguishing the flames began in earnest and the fire soon was under control. The loss is $100,000.

TALK OF REVOLUTION

Spanish Premier Declares His Intention of Checking It at Once

Madrid, Sept. 22.—"All those who wish to demonstrate in the streets will have their chance," declared Premier Canalejas. "I am determined once for all to finish with these mutterings of revolution."

The men employed in the building trades of this city obeyed the strike order and quit work yesterday. Thirty thousand men are involved.

The military holds the capital in a close grip. All suspected persons are under surveillance. Many houses have been searched, arms seized and the prisons are filled with political suspects and rioters. The premier has made it clear that if the employes of the public services quit without having given the notice required by law, summary measures will be taken to end the movement.

Southampton, Sept. 22.—The White Star liner Olympic, which was damaged in collision with the cruiser Hawke, left her anchorage yesterday and, assisted by tugs, made her way to the dock which she had left but a short time before on a voyage to New York.

As soon as her cargo has been discharged the Olympic will be patched up sufficiently to enable her to proceed to Belfast, where the repairs will be completed.

Pothier Will Again Be Candidate For Governor of Rhode Island

Providence, Sept. 22.—Governor Pothier will be a candidate for re-election this fall for a fourth term. This he announced after he had been induced by the Republican paty leaders to change his mind and consent to run for the office.

The governor had previously announced that he would retire from politics this fall, but decided to make the fight in the hope he might see the enactment into law of measures he has fathered and worked for.

GUARDED ONLY BY INFORMER

Aassassination of Stolypin Became an Easy Task

REVELATION OF INTRIGUES

High Governmental Officials Implicated In Plot Which Culminated In Killing of Premier—Police Would Have Allowed Assassin to Escape—Vice Director of Department Under Suspicion—Jews Fear an Outbreak

St. Petersburg, Sept. 22.—The inquiry into the assasination of Premier Stolypin at Kiev, with particular reference to the revolutionary and police elements involved, is being conducted personally by the minister of justice M. Chtchegiovitoff.

Already there are indications of many ramifications and complicity on the part of prominent officials. Greater sensations than those so far published are promised. Vice Director of the Department of Police Verigin is under strong suspicion by the authorities, who hold that he is in a measure responsible for the outrage.

The protection of the emperor and empress and the cabinet ministers at Kiev formed the subject of departmental discord. Governor General Trepoff demanded general oversight of the protective measures, but was overridden by the director of the department of police, M. Kurloff. Trepoff then tendered his resignation, which was not accepted. Kurloff, Verigin, Lieutenant Colonel Spiridovitch of the secret police service, and Colonel Kuliabko, chief of the secret police, organized the protection, which cost $100,000.

While Verigin and Kurloff were at Kiev on the eve of the emperor's visit, Dmitry Bogroff was consulted and given the responsible position of guarding the premier, as he promised to track the suppositious terrorists, Nina Alexandrovna and Nicholas Jacovilvich. It is incomprehensible to those engaged in the inquiry how a subordinate, as Verigin was, dared to disregard Stolypin's circular regarding revolutionary spies, and allow Bogroff, a spy and informer, to guard the premier without even setting other agents to watch him.

Only Trepoff's prompt measures in throwing a cordon about the theatre and checking the work of the secret police, says The Vremya, prevented the escape of Bogroff from the hands of justice. Chief Kuliabko made a strenuous but unsuccessful effort to have the prisoner kept at the secret police headquarters, instead of in the fortress. Had Trepoff surrendered Bogroff to Kuliabko, the paper declares, few details of the crime would ever have become known.

Many alleged accomplices have been traced to the revolutionary side and a vast number of arrests are being made throughout Russia.

Patriotic reasons forbid the full exposure of the scandalous criminal intrigues in high governmental circles leading to Stolypin's sacrifice.

Twelve thousand Jews have left Kiev since the assassination and the exodus continues. Another anti-Jewish outbreak is feared.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 22.—The statewide prohibition amendment was defeated by a majority of 6879, according to a canvass of the returns made by the state election board.

RECIPROCITY

United States, looking to closer commercial relations, will not be possible in the immediate future. The Conservatives are committed to a policy of trade expansion within the empire and a closed door against the United States.

Retirement of Laurier

Although re-elected in two constituencies in Quebec, the defeat of the Liberal party also means the retirement from public life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who for nearly two decades has directed the destinies of the Dominion.

Several times during the bitter campaign which preceded the election the venerable premier said that defeat of his party at the polls meant the end of his career; that he would never consent to lead a minority in opposition to a Conservative government.

A Liberal membership of 53 from Quebec was cut down to 36, which, taken alone, seriously threatens the supremacy of the party. But it was in Ontario that the Conservatives won their greatest victories. Spurred on by the appeals to patriotism and the cry that reciprocity was the entering wedge for annexation, the Conservatives swept nearly everything before them.

Landslide Was Unexpected

The results, with a few of the distant constituencies estimated, are: Conservative members elected, 129; Liberal members elected, 79. This is practically complete, accounting for 208 out of 221 members.

The landslide was not expected by either side. The Liberals were confident that they would be returned by the people with an increased majority, for they believed that reciprocity would be most acceptable to the Canadian electors. The Conservatives, although they claimed that they would have a majority, did not expect that it would be so large, or that the general verdict of the country would be so decisive against the government.

They feared that reciprocity would prove popular with the farmers of Ontario and the farmers and fishermen of the maritime provinces, and while confident that they would win in the cities, they were dubious as to the result in rural constituencies.

However, in Ontario especially, the agricultural vote went almost solidly against reciprocity, and in the maritime provinces it did not prove to be the popular issue expected.

Minister of Finance Fielding and Minister of Customs Paterson, who made the reciprocity bargain with the United States, failed to win their elections. Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia; MacKenzie King, minister of labor; Sydney Fisher, minister of agriculture; George P. Graham, minister of inland revenue, also went down to defeat.

The province of Quebec rejected one minister, British Columbia one, Nova Scotia two and Ontario three.

Jacques Bureau, solicitor general, who is regarded as a semi-member of the administration, was also defeated.

Conservatives' Big Majorities

Although the majority of seats won by the Conservatives is half a hundred, the popular majority against the government and reciprocity is even more overwhelming. Where Liberal seats were retained or won from the opposition, it was generally done by an exceedingly small margin. The Conservatives everywhere were returned by majorities larger than have ever been given before in a Canadian election.

The election results indicate that the Canadian electors were moved by sentiment more than by material consideration. Throughout the campaign the Liberal speakers and the government party press, in appealing for the support of the government and reciprocity, did so chiefly on economic grounds, maintaining that it would promote the prosperity of Canada and would never lead to annexation with the United States, or to any change in the political status of the Dominion.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, while arguing aginst the economic advantages of reciprocity, dealt with more emphasis upon sentimental consideration, insisting that the eventual result of reciprocity would lead Canada from Great Britain and to the United States, and calling upon the electors to prevent this.

It has been an axiom in Canadian politics that no party could succeed without a majority in the province of Quebec, but the result of the voting has destroyed this theory, for the government, though defeated, retained a majority in Quebec.

President Taft's Comment

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 22.—President Taft said at a banquet here last night:

"I have just been informed that reciprocity has failed in Canada. For me it is a great disappointment. I had hoped that it would be put through to prove the correctness of my judgment that it would be a good thing for both countries. It takes two to make a bargain, and if Canada declines we can still go on doing business at the old stand."

Soda crackers are extremely sensitive to moisture.

Before the advent of Uneeda Biscuit the only persons who ever tasted fresh, crisp soda crackers were the people in the bakeries.

Imagine their trip from bakery to your table; exposed to air and moisture—kept in grocers' boxes and finally in a paper bag on the shelf in your pantry. Could they be the same as they were the day they were baked?

Now that we have Uneeda Biscuit—we have perfectly baked soda crackers—perfectly kept.

No moisture can reach them—no contaminating influences can affect their flavor—their goodness is imprisoned only to be liberated by you for you when you open the package.

Always in the moisture proof package. Never sold in bulk. 5 cents a package.

Pothier Will Again Be Candidate For Governor of Rhode Island

Providence, Sept. 22.—Governor Pothier will be a candidate for re-election this fall for a fourth term. This he announced after he had been induced by the Republican paty leaders to change his mind and consent to run for the office.

The governor had previously announced that he would retire from politics this fall, but decided to make the fight in the hope he might see the enactment into law of measures he has fathered and worked for.

Aassassination of Stolypin Became an Easy Task

REVELATION OF INTRIGUES

High Governmental Officials Implicated In Plot Which Culminated In Killing of Premier—Police Would Have Allowed Assassin to Escape—Vice Director of Department Under Suspicion—Jews Fear an Outbreak

St. Petersburg, Sept. 22.—The inquiry into the assasination of Premier Stolypin at Kiev, with particular reference to the revolutionary and police elements involved, is being conducted personally by the minister of justice M. Chtcheglovitoff.

Already there are indications of many ramifications and complicity on the part of prominent officials. Greater sensations than those so far published are promised. Vice Director of the Department of Police Verigin is under strong suspicion by the authorities, who hold that he is in a measure responsible for the outrage.

The protection of the emperor and empress and the cabinet ministers at Kiev formed the subject of departmental discord. Governor General Trepoff demanded general oversight of the protective measures, but was overridden by the director of the department of police, M. Kurloff. Trepoff then tendered his resignation, which was not accepted. Kurloff, Verigin, Lieutenant Colonel Spiridovitch of the secret police service, and Colonel Kullabko, chief of the secret police, organized the protection, which cost $100,000.

While Verigin and Kurloff were at Kiev on the eve of the emperor's visit, Dmitry Bogroff was consulted and given the responsible position of guarding the premier, as he promised to track the suppositious terrorists, Nina Alexandrovna and Nicholas Jacovlivich. It is incomprehensible to those engaged in the inquiry how a subordinate, as Verigin was, dared to disregard Stolypin's circular regarding revolutionary spies, and allow Bogroff, a spy and informer, to guard the premier without even setting other agents to watch him.

Only Trepoff's prompt measures in throwing a cordon about the theatre and checking the work of the secret police, says The Vremya, prevented the escape of Bogroff from the hands of justice. Chief Kuliabko made a strenuous but unsuccessful effort to have the prisoner kept at the secret police headquarters, instead of in the fortress. Had Trepoff surrendered Bogroff to Kuliabko, the paper declares, few details of the crime would ever have become known.

Many alleged accomplices have been traced to the revolutionary side and a vast number of arrests are being made throughout Russia.

Patriotic reasons forbid the full exposure of the scandalous criminal intrigues in high governmental circles leading to Stolypin's sacrifice.

The 2 of Heating

Of the four modern methods of heating—by gas, steam, hot water and wood or coal stove—gas is by far the most effective. Its heat is steady, brilliant, expansive; it is economical because it heats so quickly and evenly. It is more sanitary than the others; it is more cleanly. RECIPROCITY

United States, looking to closer commercial relations, will not be possible in the immediate future. The Conservatives are committed to a policy of trade expansion within the empire and a closed door against the United States.

Retirement of Laurier

Although re-elected in two constituencies in Quebec, the defeat of the Liberal party also means the retirement from public life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who for nearly two decades has directed the destinies of the Dominion.

Several times during the bitter campaign which preceded the election the venerable premier said that defeat of his party at the polls meant the end of his career; that he would never consent to lead a minority in opposition to a Conservative government.

A Liberal membership of 53 from Quebec was cut down to 36, which, taken alone, seriously threatens the supremacy of the party. But it was in Ontario that the Conservatives won their greatest victories. Spurred on by the appeals to patriotism and the cry that reciprocity was the entering wedge for annexation, the Conservatives swept nearly everything before them.

Landslide Was Unexpected

The results, with a few of the distant constituencies estimated, are: Conservative members elected, 129; Liberal members elected, 79. This is practically complete, accounting for 208 out of 221 members.

The landslide was not expected by enther side. The Liberals were confident that they would be returned by the people with an increased majority, for they believed that reciprocity would be most acceptable to the Canadian electors. The Conservatives, although they claimed that they would have a majority, did not expect that it would be so large, or that the general verdict of the country would be so decisive against the government.

They feared that reciprocity would prove popular with the farmers of Ontario and the farmers and fishermen of the maritime provinces, and while confident that they would win in the cities, they were dubious as to the result in rural constituencies.

However, in Ontario especially, the agricultural vote went almost solidly against reciprocity, and in the maritime provinces it did not prove to be the popular issue expected.

Minister of Finance Fielding and Minister of Customs Paterson, who made the reciprocity bargain with the United States, failed to win their elections. Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia; MacKenzie King, minister of labor; Sydney Fisher, minister of agriculture; George P. Graham, minister of inland revenue, also went down to defeat.

The province of Quebec rejected one minister, British Columbia one, Nova Scotia two and Ontario three.

Jacques Bureau, solicitor general, who is regarded as a semi-member of the administration, was also defeated.

Conservatives' Big Majorities

Although the majority of seats won by the Conservatives is half a hundred, the popular majority against the government and reciprocity is even more overwhelming. Where Liberal seats were retained or won from the opposition, it was generally done by an exceedingly small margin. The Conservatives everywhere were returned by majorities larger than have ever been given before in a Canadian election.

The election results indicate that the Canadian electors were moved by sentiment more than by material consideration. Throughout the campaign the Liberal speakers and the government party press, in appealing for the support of the government and reciprocity, did so chiefly on economic grounds, maintaining that it would promote the prosperity of Canada and would never lead to annexation with the United States, or to any change in the political status of the Dominion.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, while arguing aginst the economic advantages of reciprocity, dealt with more emphasis upon sentimental consideration, insisting that the eventual result of reciprocity would lead Canada from Great Britain and to the United States, and calling upon the electors to prevent this.

It has been an axiom in Canadian politics that no party could succeed without a majority in the province of Quebec, but the result of the voting has destroyed this theory, for the government, though defeated, retained a majority in Quebec.

President Taft's Comment

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 22.—President Taft said at a banquet here last night:

"I have just been informed that reciprocity has failed in Canada. For me it is a great disappointment. I had hoped that it would be put through to prove the correctness of my judgment that it would be a good thing for both countries. It takes two to make a bargain, and if Canada declines we can still go on doing business at the old stand."

Soda crackers are extremely sensitive to moisture.

Before the advent of Uneeda Biscuit the only persons who ever tasted fresh, crisp soda crackers were the people in the bakeries.

Imagine their trip from bakery to your table; exposed to air and moisture—kept in grocers' boxes and finally in a paper bag on the shelf in your pantry. Could they be the same as they were the day they were baked?

Now that we have Uneeda Biscuit—we have perfectly baked soda crackers—perfectly kept.

No moisture can reach them—no contaminating influences can affect their flavor—their goodness is imprisoned only to be liberated by you for you when you open the package.

Always in the moisture proof package. Never sold in bulk. 5 cents a package.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES — NO SLATE — NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Lidgerwood's watchfulness saves his train. The passenger train is wrecked, with loss of life. Lidgerwood suspects Flemister and Hallock.

Lidgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Lidgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE CODE MESSAGE.

It was a bit of common human perverseness that kept Lidgerwood from thanking Judson when the engineer overtook him at the corner of the plaza. Uppermost in his thoughts at the moment was the keen sense of humiliation arising upon the conviction that the plucky little man had surprised his secret and would despise him accordingly; hence his first word to Judson was the word of authority.

"Go back to Schlesinger and have him swear you in as a deputy constable," he directed tersely. "When you are sworn in, come down here and serve this," and he gave Judson the warrant for Hallock's arrest. "Arrest him wherever you can find him and take him over to Copah on the first train that serves. He'll have to clear himself if he can; that's all."

When Judson, with his huge cowboy pistol sagging at his hip, had turned back to do the first part of his errand Lidgerwood went on around the Crow's Nest and presented himself at the door of the Nadia. Happily for his purpose, he found only Mrs. Brewster and Judge Holcombe in possession, the young people having gone to climb one of the bare mesa hills behind the town for an unobstructed view of the Timanyonis.

The superintendent left Judge Holcombe out of the proposal which he urged earnestly upon Mrs. Brewster. Telling her briefly of the threatened strike and its promise of violence and rioting, he tried to show her that the presence of the private car party was a menace alike to its own members and to him. Would she not defer to his judgment and let him send the Nadia back to Copah and to safety while there was yet time?

Mrs. Brewster, the placid, let him say his say without interruption, but when he finished the placidity became active opposition. The president's wife would not listen for a moment to an expedient which did not, could not, include the president himself.

"I merely wished to state the case and to give you a chance to get out and away from the trouble while we could get you out," Lidgerwood said, a little stiffly, then: "It is barely possible that the others may agree with me instead of with you. Will you tell them about it when they come back to the car and send word to my office after you have decided in open council what you wish to do? Only don't let it be very late. A delay of two or three hours may make it impossible for us to get the Nadia over the Desert division."

Mrs. Brewster promised, and the superintendent went upstairs to his office. A glance into Hallock's room in passing showed him the chief clerk's boxlike desk untenanted, and he wondered if Judson would find his man somewhere in the town. He hoped so. It would be better for all concerned if the arrest could be made without too many witnesses. True, Hallock had few friends in the railroad service, at least among those who professed loyalty to the management, but with explosives lying about everywhere underfoot one could not be too careful of matches and fire.

The superintendent had scarcely closed the door upon his entrance into his own room when it was opened again, with McCloskey's hand on the latch. The trainmaster came to report that a careful search of Callahan's files had not disclosed any message to Leckhard; also he added that Dix, who should have come on duty at 3 o'clock, was still absent.

"What do you make out of that?" queried Lidgerwood.

McCloskey's scowl was grotesquely horrible.

"Bullying or bribery," he said shortly. "They've got Dix hid away uptown somewhere. But there was a message, all right, and with your name signed to it. Callahan saw it on Dix's hook this morning before the boy came down. It was in code—your private code. I got Orton a little while ago on the Copah wire and pumped him. He says there was a code message and that Dix sent it. But when I asked him to repeat it back here he said he couldn't—that Mr. Leckhard had taken it with him somewhere down the main line."

Lidgerwood's exclamation was profane. The perversity of things, animate and inanimate, was beginning to wear upon him.

"Go and tell Callahan to keep after Orton until he gets word that Mr. "'We,' you say. Who else besides yourself, Howard?" she asked.

"A little handful of loyal ones."

"Then you will be outnumbered?"

"Six to one here in town if the shopmen go out. They have already threatened to burn the company's

"DO YOU REALLY MEAN THAT THERE IS LIKELY TO BE VIOLENCE?"

buildings if I don't comply with their demands, and I know the temper of the outfit well enough to give it full credit for any violence it promises. Won't you go and persuade the others to consent to run for it, Eleanor? It is simply the height of folly for you to hold the Nadia here. If I could have had ten words with your father this morning before he went out to the mine you would all have been in Copah long ago. Even now if I could get word to him I'm sure he would order the car out at once."

She nodded.

"Perhaps he would; quite likely he would, and he would stay here himself." Then suddenly, "You may send the Nadia back to Copah on one condition—that you go with it."

At first he thought it was a deliberate insult, the cruelest indignity she had ever put upon him. Knowing his weakness, she was good natured enough or solicitous enough to try to get him out of harm's way. Then the steadfast look in her eyes made him uncertain.

"If I thought you could say that realizing what it means"— he began, and then he looked away.

"Well?" she prompted, and the hand slipped from his shoulder.

POWERLESS TO ENFORCE LAW

Exoneration of Wiley Did Not Restore His Authority

INSPECTION BOARD AT ODDS

Agricultural Department Likely to Remain Inactive So Far as Pure Food Law Is Concerned—Early Move by President Is Advocated—Democratic Congressmen Are Giving Much Attention to the Matter

Washington, Sept. 22.—The exoneration of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley by President Taft seems to have carried the impression to the country that Wiley's authority has been restored. This is not the case. Inquiry at the agricultural department reveals that so far as the enforcement of the pure food law is concerned, Wiley is still without authority.

Apparently the department intends to remain inactive so far as the pure food law is concerned until the president makes a move. Wiley, it is pointed out at the department, will remain helpless as long as the present board of food and drug inspection is permitted to exist.

This board still consists of Wiley, McCabe and Dunlap. The board has not had a meeting since the Moss investigating commitee adjourned, and the feeling between the members of the board is so bitter that it will probably not attempt to meet again.

President Taft is receiving some criticism for his failure to deal with this board when he wrote his statement exonerating Wiley. Persons who have the enforcement of the pure food and drugs act at heart are saying that the president ought not to delay action with respect to this board. They say that whatever his intention may be with respect to Secretary Wilson, he ought to deal with the food and drug board at once.

Democratic congressmen who are here are already giving a good deal of attention to plans for reorganizing the machinery for the enforcement of the pure drugs law. The latest suggestion is that congress create a commission to have charge of the enforcement of this law. Such a commission would be composed of either three or five men, with Wiley at its head.

Wicks—"I don't know, but the tradesmen all say that it is smaller than his outgo."

DETROIT RAILWAY EMPLOYES VICTORS

Get Rate Within Half a Cent of Their Demands

Detroit, Sept. 22.—The strike of the Detroit United Railways employes was settled by arbitration. The employes accepted a new wage rate schedule of 23 cents an hour for the first six months; 27½ cents for the next year, and 29½ cents thereafter. The rate was within ½ cent of that originally demanded.

When Judge Phelan, representing the street car employes, submitted the final offer of the company to the men, assembled in a convention hall, it was greeted with cheers, for it was their victory.

Less than fifteen minutes after the agréement was signed, conductors and motormen were hustling to the barns to start the cars. The men were out twenty-four hours.

COACHES ROUNDING OUT TEAM IN GOOD SHAPE

High School Boys Put Through Hard Practice For Tuesday's Game

Everything Points To A Successful Season

The members of the local High school football squad were put through some hard practise yesterday preparatory to the first game of the year, which is scheduled to take place next Tuesday at Merrymount Park with Cambridge Latin school. Captain Johnson and Coach Staff both realize that the boys from the University city are to be formidable opponents and every effort will be used, from now until Tuesday, to round out the Quincy aggregation into the best possible shape for the event.

The Cambridge lads have an exceedingly heavy line average for a High school team, such being estimated at 170 pounds to the man. Coach Staff entertains no fear, however, as regards the Quincy High line. but he does admit that the backfield of the local combination is not as strong as it should be. Larkin, who substituted as quarter in a number of games last year, has not created the sensation it was at first thought he would. His playing has thus far brought forth nothing that would have him classed as a foremost general, yet the coach seems very optimistic concerning his performances and claims that the youngster will show considerable improvement when once he has had a chance to run the team in a few games. This year's team is comprised mainly of new material and this fact in itself renders it very difficult for a quarter back to apply himself with efficiency.

Holmes has showed much progress in the backfield and Finlay also bids fair to hold down a berth. Trask is fast on his feet, but seems to be at a loss when on the defensive side. Bill has shown marked improvement in every scrimmage and it is highly probable that he will be given ample opportunity to show his prowess. "Sam" Prout, has been tried considerably at the quarterback position, and while he is not as heavy as is desired, still he has proved himself to be a master of the game and handles the different plays with ease and accuracy. He is exceptionally fast and this in itself is a strong asset in his favor. There are a number of promising athletes in the school who would make good players in the backfield and Manager White is using every energy to have such latent talent developed.

As regards the line, it is safe to say that Quincy High can cope with the best of the interscholastic teams and compares very favorably with last yer's team in this respect. In Blackmur and "Pete" Chapman, the local team has two most worthy successors to Manning, who last year was selected as an all interscholastic end, and "Butus" Chapman, brother of the present aspirant. Both men are fast and aggressive and have shown great agility and skill in the practice scrimmages. Both can tackle hard, and the only thing to be regreted is that there are no available men to take their places in the event of any injuries being sustained.

Th first contest will give the coach a chance to measure the prospects for the coming season, and the struggle is now being eagerly awaited. Last year, Quincy defeated the Cambridge eleven in the last few moments of the game. Captain Johnson feels confident that his eleven are able to annex a victory and thereby usher in the season under most favorable auspices.

The players indulged in gruelling scrimmages yesterday and lined up as follows:

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Everything is in readiness for the big game of the season, which takes place tomorrow afternoon at Merrymount Park between the Makarias and the Atlantics for the baseball championship of the city. It is to be the second game of the series and as the contest cannot but prove to be a warm one, a record breaking crowd is sure to be on hand at the Ward One diamond.

I saw Manager Keohane of the Atlantics last evening and he said his team will be pronounced the champion of the city tomorrow evening. So sure is he of capturing the honors of supremacy, that arrangements have already been made to observe the occasion in a befitting manner. Yet bigger surprises than this have been sprung, and it would cause no consternation among a number of fans, if the Makaria boys coveted a victory tomorrow, thereby making a rubber game necessary. "Charlie" Ganzel is using every effort to put forth as strong a team as possible and Manager McKenzie feels confident that his ball tossers can take the measure of the Makaria just as easy tomorrow as they did on the Fourth of July

The outcome remains to be seen and with good weather a thousand fans should travel to the Merrymount park diamond to witness the strugle. It certainly will be a game well worth attending and rom present indications gives promise of being one of the best played in local circles

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Quincy Athletic Association was held last evening in the rooms on Temple street Among other things of interest to local sporting bloods, the matter of putting forth a football team was given considerable attention. The manager and captain of the Wollaston A. A. team has been invited to the meting, and it was finally decided that the name Wollaston A. A. would henceforth be discarded and the team would assume the name Quincy A. A.

The members of the team in question were announced a short time ago in this column and Manager Higgins has called for practice tomorrow. Uniforms and other such material necessary for the team will be procured at the expense of the Quincy A. A., and a schedule of games is under completion which will assure local admirers of the game of some exceptionally exciting contests. This seems to be a step well taken and it is one too that should prove of great advantage to the interests of the recently organized amateur association.

The Quincy A A bids fair to become a most potent factor in the athletic development of this city and it would be well for any one who is desirous of becoming affiliated with a flourishing organization, to secure an application blank fro one of members and have his name enrolled among the list. Here is a fine chance and I sincerely hope that as many as possible will avail themselves of the opportunity

A worthy tribute was bestowed upon a worthy player last Wednesday when Walter Lonergan, last year captain of the Quincy "Champs" of the Old Colony league, now with the Boston Americans, when his many Brighton friends presented him with a gold watch as a token of their esteem A number of Quincy fans were present at the event and all acknowledged it to be a case of condign merit

Lonergan has always proved himself a favorite of the fans and Manager Keohane expects to have him at the banquet to be given in the interests of the Atlantic team in the event of the championship of the city going to the Ward Six boys

It was decided at the meeting of the officials held in Boston Thursday, that the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team would not be in evidence this year. No outside teams are to be played for the basket ball situation is to be confined solely to a number of teams, composed of members of the Y. M. C. A.

It is expected that about ten such teams will be formed and prizes amounting to about fifty dolars have alrady been donated for the series. Many basket ball admirers will be sorry to hear that the Y. M. C. A. will not have a regular team this year, for the showing of last year's quintet made greater things to be expected this year. The series as arranged should prove interesting however, for the contests are sure to be no less close and interesting.

"Had" Briggs, who last year played such a fine game for Quincy on the initial sack, is coaching the Chicopee High school football team. Briggs was a great player himself while at Salem High and later when he went to Springfield Tech, he created the same enviable reputation. His many local friends will undoubtedly wish him success in his new field.

A movement has already been started to form a bowling league and a meeting to this effect will be held next Monday evening. Considerable interest has already been caused over the project and the bowling outlook seems most promising at the present time.

LEDGER ARTICLE STIRS UP A "HORNET'S NEST"

Prominent Citizen Claims That There Has Always Been A Unanimous Desire For Depression Of Railroad Tracks Through Quincy

Mr. Editor:

In your issue of the Daily Ledger of Sept. 21st, I noticed an article or editorial, with pronounced head lines, vs.: "Friction over Plans will make Corporation the Winner." The writer further says,—"The great trouble in Quincy, was that it could not agree on plans. etc., etc."

Now Mr. Editor, such expressions and far-fetched excuses, are malicious libels on the acts of our people, and the good name of our city. Although I am not a paid agent or megaphone of our city, would that my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, that my mind lose its balance, and my right hand its cunning, if I neglected or refused at this time to do my duty for my city and its people. As a member of the grade crossing committee, elected in mass meeting at City Hall, and the chairman of the grade crossing committee of the Board of Trade of Quincy, I rise clothed withthe right before the world in behalf of my city and its people and defend, by denying and refuting the above slanderous attack. Never in the history of the city of Quincy was there a public question more thoroughly and harmoniously discussed and argued until there was nothing left but depression of the railroad tracks and save the city. Consequently the plans of depression were unanimously adopted by the city in mass meeting, known as the city plan of depression, and was so presented before the special commission. True, during the hearings before the special commission somebody asked if they could be heard with plans, and the chairman ofthe commission courteously said that he could be, that the commission was here to receive

QUINCY BOY CLAIMS REWARD

Offered For Information That Led to Arrest of C. L. Tucker

MURDER RECALLED

Arthur Woodward, a West Quincy boy is one of the eight claimants for th reward of $3,200 that was offered for the information that led to the arrest and conviction of Charles L. Tucker for the murder of Mabel Page, at Weston, in 1904. All of the eight claimants will be given a hearing this afternoon at Weston by the selectmen. Woodward will be represented at the hearing this afternoon by J. J. McAnarney, who will make a strong fight for the reward.

It was Woodward who found the sheath, in which Tucker had carried the fatal knife and brought it to the attention of the authorities. The arrest followed.

It is alleged that on the day of the murder, after the same had been committed, Tucker road on the wagon seat of Woodward's team at Weston and after he had left the team Woodward found the sheath which had evidently dropped from Tucker's pocket.

He thought nothing of it at the time, but the following morning on seeing Tucker's picture in the papers, in connection with his being questioned in relation to the deed, Woodward recalled the sheath and told his father of the circumstances of its being found. Mr. Woodward senior notified the police and the formal arrest of Tucker followed.

The trial in 1905 was a celebrated one, the case itself being one of the most perplexing in the history of the state. Woodward was a witness at the trial and there is but little doubt that the finding of the sheath was the first real clew that led to the arrest. Tucker was found guilty and paid the penalty for his deed.

The original reward was $500 which was offered by the Selectmen. Subsequently citizens subscribed $2,000 additional making the total amount $2,500. Interest however has now brought the amount up to $3,200.

It is understood that the Selectmen were about to award the money to Woodward and to Chief of Police Patrick J. McAuliffe of Weston, but as others have put in a claim for the reward, the selectmen have decided to give a hearing, which as stated above will be held this afternoon.

FUNERAL OF MRS. HARDWICK.

Edward Norton pastor emeritus of Bethany Congregational church. During the services Mrs. F. J. Moore and Miss Alice G. ALL REPORTS SHOW PROGRESS

HELD ON FRIDAY

A meeting of the Town River Yacht club was held last evening in Stone hall, Quincy Point and was largely attended. In the absence of the commodore, vice-commodore Edgar F. Emery presided. The reports of the various officers were read and progress was noted in every instance.

A number of new members were enrolled and many things conducive to the interests of the yachtsmen were discussed at length.

Considerable attention was given to the matter of pins and pennants and it is expected that all plans with regard to the securing ofhe same will be perfected by the next meeting.

REFUSAL TO STOP COST HIM $50

The next time that Fred E. Coleburn of Commonwealth avenue Boston, passes through the Blue Hills reservation with his automobile and a grey coated officer holds up his hand for him to stop, he will probably do so. Coleburn drove through the reservation Thursday in what the officers believed to be a reckless manner. An officer held up his hand for him to stop but he kept going. The officer secured his number however and this morning Mr. Coleburn appeared in court on two complaints. One for refusing to stop and the other for reckless driving. The court imposed a fine of $50 for refusing to stop and placed the reckless driving case on probation.

ORGANIZATION STARTS ACTIVE WORK AT ONCE

Associated Charities Of Quincy, Inc. Asks For Fund Of $1000 For First Year's Work

Scope Is Far Reaching and of Great Benefit

The Associated Charities of Quincy Incorporated begins its campaign of raising $1,000 at once by the means of a Founder's Subscription which are pledges as follows:

I hereby agree to become a Founder of the Associated Charities of Quincy (Incorporated), pledging myself to pay $25 a year for two years, but this subscription is not to become binding until there is a total pledge of at least $1,000 for the work of the first year.

Signature .....

Address .....

As the first year of any new work is always in a certain sense preparatory and there is need of a longer period to bring about the best results it is hoped that the pledge for two years may be forthcoming.

The Finance committee, with Delcevare King, as chairman is as follows: James D. Howlett, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., Rev. Rufus B. Tobey, Mrs. Theophilus King, Edward Southworth, Mrs. J. W. Sanborn, Miss Mary L. Gavin, Mrs. Frank A. Emery, George W. Abele, Mrs. John F. Welch, Mrs. Walter E. Piper, R. J. Teasdale, Mrs. Thomas Fenno, R. F. Claflin and Mrs. Wilson Marsh.

This committee aims to secure 20 ofthese Founder's subscriptions before Wednesday of the coming week. Nine are already pledged. The hope is to secure pledges for the full amount by Oct. 10. As this work is of such great benefit to the whole city, aiming to furnish a trouble office for anyone in Quincy in need or distress of any kind, and a social worker who will approach those who have need of help in their lives in the spirit of the doctor who seeks to find out the cause of disease, its cure, and its prevention," there should be quick and generous response to the appeal.

S. & H. HUSTLERS' CONTEST.

Boys and girls who are contestants in the S. & H. Hustlers' Watch Contest are warned to be careful about having sufficient postage on their envelopes in which votes are mailed to the Premium Parlor of the Sperry & Hutchinson Co., located at the Quincy Department Store, 1435 Hancock street, Quincy, Mass., to insure their safe and prompt delivery.

Before issuing this warning the Sperry & Hutchinson Co. has paid out several dollars for postage due on letters, rather than to disappoint the contestants by having their votes go to the dead letter office, that is, the number of letters not bearing sufficient postage is increasing, and the Company will be obliged to make it an established rule in the future that letters bearing "postage due stamps" will not be received.

The interest is rapidly growing in this novel Watch Contest, and six watches will be given away, three to the most popular boys and three to the most popular girls. The watches may be seen on exhibition in the windows of the Quincy Department store.

The ballot that is good for five votes can be found each day on the second page of the Quincy Daily Ledger, together with the rules governing the contest.

It is not too late now for a boy or girl to enter this contest and win one of the watches. All that is required is that the contestants be a hustler. Hard work and friends count more than time in the S. & H. Hustlers' Contest. In next Tuesdays paper will be published a list of the standing of contestants.

BRAINTREE VIOLINIST TO ASSIST

The ladies of Bethany church have been fortunate enough to secure, for their open meeting on Wednesday afternoon, the assistance of George Ellsworth, the talented young Braintree violinist. Although scarcely more than a boy, young Ellsworth gives promise of becoming a musician of note, and the Quincy ladies who have enjoyed hearing him at the Cochato club and elsewhere in Braintree will welcome this first opportunity of listening to his renderings in Quincy.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Autumn begins today and it is what you might call a good beginning.

Who is for depressed tracks through Quincy? Now is the time to keep silent. Come forward and show your interest in your city and its civic beauty.

Forty cities are happier today. Postal Savings bank have been established in them.

They called it a governor's conference, but it looked more like a Mother's congress on the care and feeding of infant presidential boomlets.

They are having high price food riots in Austria, the principal effect of which will be that the rioters will pay higher taxes for more police.

It looks as if the Pacific and Indian oceans, from which our rains come, had not got quite as much dried up as some people thought.

If the battle ship Delaware can hit the old ship Texas at nine miles how soon will congress be able to reduce the tariff on wool and woolen goods?

They have stolen the corner stone from the county hospital in San Francisco, and there is a feeling that the corner stone of honest government in that town has also been abstracted.

Scientist Edison says people should not sleep so much. The prospective bachelors of Science in our colleges seem to think so too, particularly after a foot ball victory.

Thirty steamers are now bringing 130,000 tons of sugar to relieve the shortage, but until they get here it will be mighty expensive to take the matinee girl to the theatre.

As they have killed 10 people at an automobile race at Syracuse, we have decided to attend no more of these affairs, unless we can be provided with a seat in some very tall and massive tree.

Some of the New York state ministers wives are forming on organization. They should take a firm position on the payment of their husband's salaries in the form of invitations to pink teas.

The labor troubles on the railroads will probably be settled by advancing wages, imposing higher freight and passenger rates, and satisfying the public by putting a little more gilt in the Pullman cars.

If law were like mathematics, the sentence of a man to eleven months and twenty-nine days in penitentiary for stealing two subway tickets would imply a tremendous sentence for stealing a street railway; but law is not like mathematics.

It is said that despite the many controversies between the common council of Hunnewell, Kansas, and lady mayoress, Mrs. Wilson, that the lady mayoress will eventually win out. She has already got one measure through and has come off triumphant in her determination to put a measure through the council, providing for the repair to the town pump. This important measure passed at the last session, yet it is understood that there were undercurrents of factional opposition that threatened to endanger even that progressive movement.

President Taft's exoneration of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley carried with it to many minds the impression that Wiley's authority has been restored. That is a mistake. Wiley remains a non-entity as far as the enforcement of the Pure Food Act is concerned. As this fact becomes more generally known the popular approval of President Taft's action subsides and evidence accumulates that the people are dissatisfied. His exoneration of Wiley had been discounted. Even if the President contemplated dismissing Wiley at the instance of the high officials who sought his undoing, he might well have hesitated to do so in the face ofthe universal demand for his retention in office. But the President stopped with exoneration and left Wiley as helpless as the shorn and bound Samson in the prison at Gaza. Nothing has been done to date to change the conditions so graphically described before the Moss Committee. The Board of Food and Drug Inspection continues in control of the administration of the Pure Food Act. It still consists of Wiley, McCabe and Dunlap, and it is inconceivable that their relations will be more harmonious because of the failure of the scheme of McCabe and Dunlap to oust Wiley. The latter testified that the vote was so often two to one against him that he generally refrained from voting and the public is inquiring whether there will continue to be a two to one vote in the future whenever a question arises between the interests of the doped-food manufacturers and the interests of the people. Without a thorough house-cleaning at the Department of Agriculture the interests of the people will have profited little by the President's action and the most pertinent question now is whether there is to be a much needed housecleaning and whether it will be undertaken by Secretary Wilson or his successor and how soon. The public demands that President Taft should go further and promptly and effectively unbind Dr. Wiley's hands.

RECIPROCITY.

This is a specimen editorial from a Canadian newspaper: "The people of Canada have no reason to love the United States. In all its dealings with this country the American republic has shown a desire to absorb Canada. It has made war upon us and invaded our country with its armies. It has sought by the adoption of an adverse tariff to destroy out trade and render the absorption of the country easy. The invading armies were driven out of Canada by British and colonial bayonets, and the adverse tariff which was to destroy the trade of the country made it only the more prosperous."

Says the Waltham Free Press:—

It does not suit the purpose of the editor to make an honest statement regarding these wars and it is evident that he presumes on the ignorance and credulity of his readers. The United States armies have invaded Canada, have whipped the combined English and Canadian forces along the Niagara frontier and the Lakes and with a handful of men have penetrated to the walls of Quebec, but those occasions were when the United States was at war with England and Canada as a dependency was a mere incident. The fisheries, one of the biggest sources of wealth Canada owns, in fact the whole eastern provinces themselves were captured from the French by the men and the money of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and England never repaid a dollar of the colonial expense. If the tories of Canada want history they can get a surfeit of it. As to reciprocity eight voters out of ten in the United States do not care the turn of the hand whether the treaty is agreed to or not. It certainly is not worth making any fuss about.

Now that the treaty has been rejected, it may be the best thing all around that it is so. One thing is positively assured and that is, any other negotiations will have to start in Canadian quarters.

RAIDING FRUIT ORCHARDS.

It is customary, when one becomes a grown-up, to look back with a certain degree of pride on one's boyish exploits in the purloining of fruit. The man who has not as a youth raided apple orchards and grape vines right and left feels that he has had a molly coddle boyhood.

Many people take a very good natured attitude about these depredations, and regard it as useless for any one living in a town of any size to hope to raise fruit except at a long distance from human habitations.

This is, however, rather rough on the many people who are becoming interested in good horticulture and who are putting in a lot of work in developing prolific vines and orchards.

Is it a wise plan to allow young America to grow up feeling that he has unlimited license to reap the benefit of some one other person's labor? Will the boy who has no qualms about enjoying luscious fruit that other people have spent time and money to develop, be very careful when he grows up, to render dollar for dollar in the business transactions of the street? We doubt it.

THE CANADIAN ELECTION.

The most remarkable thing about the Canadian campaign just closed has been the feverish waving of the imperial British flag, the dread manifested by a large section of the voters against any fading of the tie with the mother country.

It has been said that England can govern any race but Englishmen.

Australia, for instance, is called the most inpudent and cocksure cub of a democracy that ever told a mother country to mind its own business. But the tie that holds the older Canadians to the fatherland is evidently deeper than that. Even the French priests of Quebec would never consent to the severance ofthat tie, as they regard their church as even more secure under English rule than it might be under independence or annexation.

The paradox of the thing is that the English and the Canadian types differ in many ways. A Canadian girl who married into an English family, once told us that the personality she most despised was that of the English country squire. It is a type that is revered in England, on which the institutions of the country almost seem based. Their leisure allows them to gain many decorative qualities. They devote themselves to unpaid public service with unbounded public spirit. But our friend was brought up in a land where idleness brings social stigma, as it does with us.

Over in the Northwest the immigration from our states has increased 8,000 per cent in 10 years. The Ottawa statesmen view this incoming with timorous fears. The American born farmers and business men read the Chicago, St. Paul, Helena, or Seattle papers, and are probably American at heart. But keen observers note a tendency to adapt themselves to their locality, and they make fun of the swapping of American cigars for British pipes, and a tendency to wear golf stockings.

In a summer hotel a few weeks ago an American girl carelessly brought in from the city the fragmentary report that King George was sick. As there happened to be many Canadians present it was a revelation to see the Northerners throng about the girl with overwhelming questions. In the newspapers they brought over the line, one noted the prominence given to the sailings of mail steamers for England, indicating the close and intimate correspondence with the Mother country. An emotional tie is there which shows up only under the pressure of some fancied danger, real or imaginary, such as has stirred the provinces in this election.

STRAITS POND BRIDGE.

To Editor Ledger:

Under a heading "Political Advertisement" in a recent issue of your paper attention is called to the matter of Straits Pond bridge between the towns of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset. As one of the commission having the matter in charge I will state for information of your readers the following facts. The legislature of 1909, Chapter 482, authorized and directed the County Commissioners of Plymouth and Norfolk counties to rebuild the bridge over the outlet of Straits pond and after hearing by committee and careful consideration placed the probale cost of $20,000 and so reported in the bill. Of this amount of $20,000, 56 2-3 per cent to be paid by Plymouth County, 28 1-3 per cent to be paid by Norfolk County. 15 per cent by Street Railway company.

The two boards met and organized as a joint board with Walter H. Faunce of Plymouth, chairman. The question of how the work should be done was brought up. Norfolk County members advocated a contract job—the Plymouth commission, one of which is a bridge builder of large experience, were in favor of doing the work by the day. As Plymouth county paid double under the act, the Norfolk board yielded totheir judgment. After the work was half completed, the Christmas storm, with a fifteen foot tide sruck it sweeping away dams and making an expense of thousands of dollars. Except for the storm the cost of bridge and approaches would have been very materially within the appropriation allowed by the legislature.

The commissioners of Plymouth and Norfolk Counties who constituted the board having this matter in charge need no defence of mine, they are careful, conservative business men and beyond suspicion. In justice to them I ask you to publish this statement.

AFFAIR PRIVATE

The steam collier Newton, built by the Fore River Ship Building Co. for the New England Coal and Coke Co. will be launched at the yards, Monday noon at 12.30. Unlike the launch of the Rivadavia a few weeks ago the launching will be in the nature of a private one, the guests being confined to friends of the coal and coke company which has sent out invitations.

The launching party will come from Boston on a special train of eight cars, which will be run over the Fore River tracks from East Braintree to the yard. Miss Dorothy Whitley, a senior at Smith college, and a niece of Mayor Charles E. Hatfield of Newton is to be the sponser. This is the fourth of this class of boats built by the Fore River Co. for the New England Coal and Coke Co., the other vessels being the Everett, Malden and Melrose. The Newton however is six feet longer than any one of the other boats of the fleet.

After the launch, the Fore River Co. will entertain the officials of the company and their guests at lunch, at which there will be several addresses. President Bowles will preside at the postprandial exercises and Mayor Shea will extend the welcome of the city to the party.

Among those expected to speak are John L. Richards, president of the Coal & Coke Co., Mayor Hatfield of Newton, Congressman John W. Weeks and Samuel Dixon, president of the New River Coal Co., of McDonald, West Virginia.

Lamb should be small and fat; the leg joints being stiff and the vein in the neck blue denotes freshness. The kidney should be small and the fat white and firm.

Fine, well-fed beef is distinguished by the bright red color of the lean, which should be marbled with fat; by the pinkish whitness of the fat, and the suet being firm and white. When beef is lean, the flesh dark colored, and the fat yellow, it is not good. Old meat has a streak of horn running between the fat and lean of the sirloin and ribs.

CAPE OYSTER PIE.

Line a deep plate with rich paste or use that made as for pies, or made like baking powder biscuit and lay on two rims; fill loosely with broken bread. Cover with paste rolled thicker than usual, and bake till crust is done. Remove top and filling and pour in the creamed Cape oysters. Replace the top crust and serve at once. Cape oysters are worth 35c a pint.

VOYAGE HOME NOT DELAYED.

Miss Edith Randall, who returned from Europe last week, considers herself and party fortunate, in having been able to sail from Naples on schedule time. All through the summer, alarming reports of the cholera in Italy came to the members of the party and several parties changed their route entirely and did not visit Italy. Others were compelled to give up sailing from Italian ports, and sailed from ports farther north. In Switzerland, every city and town was crowded, with travellers who either hurried out of Italy, or refrained from going there at all.

In each city, as the tour progressed, Miss Randall called upon the local Consul, and obtained official and reliable information as to conditions ahead. In this way the various Italian cities were visited safely. In Rome, however, on learning from the Consul, that there had been several hundred cases of cholera in Naples during the past three weeks Miss Randall judged it best to write to the Consul in Naples for advice.

The original plan of travel had included Naples, Pompeii, Amalfi, Sorrento and Capri with the Blue Grotto.

The Consul's letter in reply was most explicit in stating the condition of things. There were 66 cases and 14 deaths, the previous week. The U. S. quarantine regulations as enforced in Naples, required first class passengers (for the U. S.) to be under observation during five days prior to departure. Further, they would be strictly limited intheir walks about the city. The province in which Amalfi is situated was reported as "highly infected," and the American doctors, attached to the consulate, required a detention of five days of all passengers arriving from that district. The party could, however, pass through Naples, directly to the ship. Miss Randall was further advised by the White Star line, that a health certificate would be required from hotels where the party resided for five days prior to sailing.

The consulate doctors in Rome. advised strongly, a personal health certificate as this would prevent any possible detention. Most of the members of the party were anxious to sail on Sept. 2, having important matters awaiting them at home, therefore, they underwent inspection. and the certificate was obtained. Food was taken from Rome and the party drove directly from the station in Naples to the ship "Cretic."

On the homeward voyage the ship called at Madeira, but no one was allowed to land. The ship was quarantined. as coming from an infected port. In New York harbor, also, the "Cretic" was quarantined for twelve hours, while cultures from some of the passenger's throats were taken to the city and examined, for possible infection. Not only did the party escape cholera, but not one person was seasick on either voyage. A most unusual thing.

HOW DOES MERRILL STAND?

Editors of the Ledger:

In this grade crossing question relating to the reconstruction of highways and bridges that will be affected in the solving of this momentous problem, does the record of John F. Merrill commend and qualify him for that important office which at this critical time when the welfare of our city and public safety is at stake a man of the people and for the people, is demanded?

I presume Mr. Merrill will be willing to give an account of his stewardship as chairman of the County Commissioners of Norfolk County and I ask him the following questions, so that the people of Quincy and the County may act intelligently.

Mr. Merrill why did you select such a poor and ill-fitting site for the location of the $100,000 public building the new Court House? You well knew that the new building is practically in the same yard as the new $80,000 Coddington school containing nearly one thousand school children who are obliged to pass and play three to five times a day in and around this Court House location. Did you think it would be an inspiration for the little minds ofthose children to watch and talk about the many kinds of criminals that will be brought to this Court House for generaions to come "As the twig is bent the tree inclines."

Mr. Merrill why did you pay such an exorbitant price for the land, and why did you make three different purchases to get a site before you stopped and now it is not large enough?

Mr. Merrill why did you allow only one architect to prepare and submit plans when there are more than 50 reputable architects in Norfolk County entitled to an opportunity?

Mr. Merrill why did you deny all the quarry owners of Quincy and Weymouth (except one) an opportunity and the right to compete and submit bids for the furnishing of the granite for the new Court House in Quincy?

Mr. Merrill why did you deny the request and petition of the Board of Trade of Weymouth asking the County Commissioners to consider the use of Weymouth seam-face granite in the construction of the County Court House in Quincy in the place of that imitation and artificial material you have adopted called tapestry brick?

By using Weymouth seam face granite in place of the artificial material adopted the county could have saved more than $6,000 besides giving much employment to our granite workers in Quincy Braintree and Weymouth. By your adopting this imitation brick from a far away state, deliberately refusing to consider a local granite at a much less price, haven't you knowingly and deliberately denied the granite worker the right to work and also the quarry owners the right to compete; knowingly and deliberately denying the business men of Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth the right to enjoy in a business way the product ofthe labor of the granite workers if local granite had been adopted?

The Granite National bank advertises to keep our money at home. Did you Mr. Merrill keep the money at home when you allowed over $15,000 for artificial material slip out of Quincy that could and should have been kept at home? Did you help keep our granite workers and families busy and happy?

Mr. Merrill it is up to you to explain to the granite workers, the quarry owners, the business men and the voters of Norfolk County, and let them decide if you are worthy of a reelection. Yours for a square deal.

AVIATOR MEETS TERRIBLE DEATH

Burns Almost to a Crisp as He Falls to Earth

BIG CROWD HAD JEERED HIM

Machine Acted Unsteady and He Refused to Ascend Until Crowd Called Him a Coward—Flame Darts From Engine and Causes Gasolene Tank to Explode—Tragedy on the Fair Grounds In Ohio Town

Dayton, O., Sept. 23.—Forced into the air by jeers by thousands who called him a coward, Frank H. Miller, aged 23, a Toledo aviator, shot into the air at twilight last evening and at the height of 200 feet was burned to death before the eyes of the terrified spectators at the Miami county fair at Troy, north of here.

Miller had circled the race track and was just starting on a spiral glide into a neighboring corn field when something went wrong. He could be seen making a frantic effort to get his machine under control and then suddenly the whirring of the propellers ceased.

The craft dropped like a shot a distance of fifty feet, a tiny blue flame darted from the engine and in an instant the gasolene tank exploded.

The machine was wrecked by the impact and debris was hurled hundreds of feet in all directions. What remained of the machine and its driver were burned almost to a crisp as they dropped rapidly to earth.

It was Miller's second flight of the day and the fifth and last of the week. In a short flight shortly after noon yesterday his machine acted unsteadily and he did not care to go up.

The crowd jeered him yesterday afternoon when he said he would not make a flight and before he went into the air.

"Let her go, I'll be glad when this is over," he shouted to his mechanician.

HUNDREDTH FLYER KILLED

Castellane Falls Three-Quarters of a Mile at a Fair

Elmira, N. Y., Sept. 23.—"Dare Devil" Castellane, a Curtis aviator, fell to instant death at the Mansfield, Pa., fair. He had started in an exhibition flight and when three-quarters of a mile from the ground his machine was seen to careen, turn turtle and fall on a hillside. Castellane was found buried beneath the wreckage of his engine and plane. His wife witnessed the fatality.

Castellane's death marks the 100th fatality in the ranks of the flying men. Fourteen fatal accidents have occurred so far this month.

LAST DAY OF CAMPAIGN

Massachusetts About to Test the New Primary Law

Boston, Sept. 23.—Today is the last day of active campaigning for the primary elections which come next Tuesday for both parties all over the commonwealth. It is to be the first test of the new direct primary.

While the three-cornered fight for governor on the Republican end has not stirred up an amount of interest that had been expected, yet there are indications of a good sized vote.

On the Democratic side the campaign of Thomas L. Hisgen for governor is causing no little interest, western Democrats saying that he will get a good vote in the four western counties, but it is conceded that Governor Foss will win the nomination easily.

FIFTY KILLED IN STORM

Enormous Damage to Property In Vesuvian Region of Italy

Naples, Sept. 23.—A hurricane of great violence and accompanied by a deluge of rain raged over the Vesuvian region, causing a heavy loss of life and enormous damage to property. It is estimated that fifty persons were killed.

Houses were razed by the wind, while others were inundated. Numerous boats in the Bay of Naples are missing and are believed to have been sunk.

It is impossible as yet to estimate the total damage done by the storm, as the telegraph and telephone wires are levelled and roads are blocked.

Six Killed In Powder Explosion

Rome, Sept. 23.—Six persons were killed and sixteen others injured, some of them fatally, in an explosion in a powder factory at Monetchiaro, in Lombardy.

LEDGER STORY

and look into the merits of all plans that would be presented.

Some ofthem had some merit and some of them like the selfish rail road plan (which spells RUIN to our city) were as crazy as a bed bug. Was that article a prelude or forerunner of the laying down act in the lap of the rail road interests, by our city officials? Let us watch out, and see, for "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." Let us patiently wait for the report of the findings of the special commission and then if necessary, "get busy."

When it is admitted by all expert engineers that depression of the rail road tracks through Quincy is the only logical safe and practical solution, of this grade crossing problem at Saville street and Water street, where all parties interested are greatly benefitted, including the rail road, property owners, granite manufactures, and the public at large The city has an insurmountable asset, and good grounds, to appeal to the court, if necessary. The change at Granite street, alone, from the present deplorable condition under the tracks to a wide street with an overhead bridge over the rail road tracks will alone be worth more to the city of Quincy than the 10 per cent of the entire cost to the city of the grade crossing problem in our city, by depression, furthermore by the depression of the rail road tracks, works out most beautifully for the future welfare of our city, which has some day got to be met. If we are wise we must look into the future and prepare for it, for the congestion of Hancock street in the centre of our city is inevitable. Although I have never alluded to it before in public, I will do so now. By the plan of depression, some time in the future there can and will be built a boulevard or state road, directly over the rail road track from sixty to 70 feet wide, running parallel with Hancock street from Adams street bridge to the new overhead bridge at Granite street easily connec ing withthe boulevard coming from Wollaston, continuing from the new Granite street bridge across the meadow to Quincy avenue, at the junction of School street and Elm street, making a continuous state road through Quincy, from Boston to Plymouth, with every tributary street running east and west of the rail road track, connecting with this new proposed boulevard, or state road, built directly over the depressed rail road tracks from Adams street bridge to the new over head Granite street bridge.

A CORROBORATION

Of Interest to Quincy Readers.

For months Quincy citizens have seen in these columns enthusiastic praise of Doan's Kidney Pills by Quincy residents. Would these prominent people recommend a remedy that had not proven reliable? Would they confirm their statements after years had elapsed if personal experience had not shown the remedy to be worthy of endorsement? No stronger proof if merit can be had than cures that have stood the test of time. The following statement should carry conviction to the mind of every Quincy reader.

John Callahan, 55 Prospect Street, Brockton, Mass., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have been greatly benefited by their use. I was annoyed by a lame and aching back and my kidneys did not act regularly. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills, and they gave me entire relief. I am glad to confirm the statement given in their praise by a member of my family in 1908."

Anty Drudge Tells How to Avoid Scalding Children.

Ethel—"Oh, mama! Harold put his hand into the boiling water in the washtub and scalded it just awfully."

Anty Drudge—"Just as I told you. Boiling clothes is dangerous as well as wasteful. If you would use Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, you'd save time, money and hard work and there wouldn't be any danger of the children getting scalded."

Hot weather is bad enough without a hot fire and steaming suds in washing clothes.

There is a better way.

Fels-Naptha soap will cleanse your clothes in cool or lukewarm water, without boiling or hard rubbing, in summer or winter.

It will do the work in less than half the time and make your clothes sweeter, cleaner and whiter.

And the clothes will wear longer.

Think of it!

Why should any woman risk her health and shorten her life by wearing herself out with hard work, and subject herself to discomfort in boiling clothes and rubbing them through hot suds?

Follow easy directions on the red and green wrapper.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Lidgerwood's watchfulness saves his train. The passenger train is wrecked, with loss of life. Lidgerwood suspects Flemister and Hallock.

Lidgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Lidgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

His eyes were coming back to hers. "If I thought you meant that," he repeated, "if I believed that you could despise me so utterly as to think for a moment that I would deliberately turn my back upon my responsibilities here, go away and hunt safety for myself, leaving the men who have stood by me to whatever"—

"You are making it a matter of duty," she interrupted quite gravely. "I suppose that is right and proper. But isn't your first duty to yourself and to those who"— She paused and then went on in the same steady tone: "I have been hearing some things today—some of the things you said I would hear. You are well hated in the Red desert, Howard—hated so fiercely that this quarrel with your men will be almost a personal one. They will kill you if you stay here and let them do it."

"Quite possibly."

"Howard, do you tell me you can stay here and face all this without flinching?"

"Oh, no; I didn't say that!"

"But you are facing it."

He smiled.

"As I told you yesterday, that is one of the things for which I draw my salary. There is another reason why I want you to go away. When the real pinch comes I shall probably disgrace myself and everybody remotely connected with me. I'd a good bit rather be torn into little pieces privately than have you here to be made ashamed—again."

She turned away.

"Tell me in so many words what you think will be done tonight. What are you expecting?"

"I told you a few moments ago in the words of the prayer book—battle and murder and sudden death. A strike has been planned, and it will fail. Five minutes after the first strike abandoned train arrives the town will go mad."

She had come close to him again.

"Mother won't go and leave father; that is settled. You must do the best you can, with us for a handicap. What will you do with us, Howard?"

"I have been thinking about that. The farther you can get away from the shops and the yard, which will be the storm center, the safer you will be. I can have the Nadia set out on the Copperette switch, which is a good half mile below the town, with Van Lew and Jefferis to stand guard"—

"They will both be here with you," she interrupted.

"Then the alternative is to place the car as near as possible to this building, which will be defended. If there is a riot you can all come up here and be out of the way of chance pistol shots at least."

"Ugh!" she shivered. "Is this really civilized America?"

"It's America—without much of the civilization. Now, will you go and tell the others what to expect and send Van Lew to me? I want to tell him just what to do and how to do it while there is time and an undisturbed chance."

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE BOSS MACHINIST.

MISS BREWSTER evidently obeyed her instructions precisely, since Van Lew came almost immediately to tap on the door of the superintendent's private room.

"Miss Eleanor said you wanted to see me," he began when Lidgerwood had admitted him, adding, "I was just about to chase out to see what had become of her."

The frank confession of solicitude was not thrown away upon Lidgerwood, and it cost him an effort to put the athlete on a plane of brotherly equality as a comrade in arms. But he compassed it.

"Yes; I asked her to send you up," he replied, then, "I suppose you know what we are confronting, Mr. Van Lew?"

"Mrs. Brewster told us as soon as we came back from the hills. Is it likely to be serious?"

"Yes. I wish I could have persuaded Mrs. Brewster to order the Nadia out of it. But she has refused to go and leave Mr. Brewster behind."

"I know," said Van Lew. "We have all refused."

"So Miss Brewster has just told me," frowned Lidgerwood. "That being the case, we must make the best of it. How are you fixed for arms in the president's car?"

"I have a hunting rifle, a 44 magazine, and Jefferis has a small armory of revolvers—boylike."

"Good! The defense of the car, if a riot materializes, will fall upon you two. Judge Holcombe can't be counted in. I'll give you all the help I can spare, but you'll have to furnish the brains. I suppose I don't need to tell you not to take any chances?"

Van Lew shook his head and smiled.

"Not while the dear girl whom, God willing, I'm going to marry is a member of our car party. I'm more likely to be overcautious than reckless, Mr. Lidgerwood."

Here, in terms unmistakable, was a deep grave in which to bury any poor phantom of hope which might have survived, but Lidgerwood did not advertise the funeral.

"She is altogether worthy of the most that you can do for her and the best that you can give her, Mr. Van Lew," he said gravely. Then he passed quickly to the more vital matter. "The Nadia will be placed on the short spur track at this end of the building, close in, where you can step from the rear platform of the car to the station platform. I'll try to keep watch for you, but you must also keep watch for yourself. If any firing begins get your people out quietly and bring them up here. Of course none of you will have anything worse than a stray bullet to fear, but the side walls of the Nadia would offer no protection against that."

Van Lew nodded understandingly.

"Call it settled," he said. "Shall I use my own judgment as to the proper moment to make the break, or will you pass us the word?"

Lidgerwood took time to consider. Conditions might arise under which the Crow's Nest would be the most unsafe place in Angels to which to flee for shelter.

"Perhaps you would better sit tight until I give the word," he directed after the reflective pause, then in a lighter vein: "All of these careful prefigurings may be entirely beside the mark, Mr. Van Lew. I hope the event may prove that they were. Don't let the women worry any more than they have to."

"You can trust me for that," laughed the athlete, and he went his way to begin the keeping up of appearances.

At 7 o'clock, just as Lidgerwood was finishing the luncheon which had been sent up to his office from the station kitchen, train 203 pulled in from the east, and a little later Dawson's belated wrecking train trailed up from the west, bringing the "cripples" from the Little Butte disaster. Lidgerwood summoned McCloskey.

"I wish you would go downstairs and see if Gridley came in on 203. If he did bring him and Benson up here, and we'll hold a council of war. If you see Dawson send him home to his mother and sister. He can report to me later if he finds it safe to leave his womankind."

The door of the outer office had barely closed behind McCloskey when that opening into the corridor swung upon its hinges to admit the master mechanic. He was dusty and travel stained, but nothing seemed to stale his genial good humor.

"Well, well, Mr. Lidgerwood! So the hoboes have asked to see your hand at last, have they?" he began sympathetically. "I heard of it over in Copah just in good time to let me catch 203. You're not going to let them make you show down, are you?"

"No," said Lidgerwood.

"That's right. That's precisely the way to stack it up. Of course you know you can count on me. I've got a beautiful lot of pirates over in the shops, but we'll try to hold them level." Then in the same even tone: "They tell me we went into the hole again last night over at Little Butte. Pretty bad?"

"Very bad. Six killed outright and as many more to bury later on, I am told by the Red Butte doctors."

"Heavens and earth! The men are calling it a broken rail. Was it?"

"A loosened rail," corrected Lidgerwood.

The master mechanic's eyes narrowed.

"Natural?" he asked.

"No; artificial."

Gridley swore savagely.

"This thing's got to stop, Lidgerwood! Sift it—sift it to the bottom! Whom do you suspect?"

It was a plain truth, though an unintentionally misleading one, that the superintendent put into his reply.

"I don't suspect any one, Gridley," he began, and he was going on to say that suspicion had grown to certainty when the latch of the door opening from the outer office clicked again and McCloskey came in with Benson. The master mechanic excused himself abruptly when he saw who the trainmaster's follower was.

"I'll go and get something to eat," he said hurriedly, "after which I'll pick up a few men whom we can depend upon and garrison the shops. Send over for me if you need me."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Band Strings up for Bay State's Criminal Population—Savings Bank Insurance Gets Stronghold in Western Massachusetts—"Christian Science Grass" is Hub's Greenest—A Sen-Sen Idyl of Rapid Transit——Monsters that Fed in New England Ten Million Years Ago to be Reproduced in Boston's Franklin Park.

Come to Boston and see the Pteranodon. But come perfectly sober, for if the plans of certain scientists are carried out, there will be, some time in the near future, a weird and fantastic gathering at Franklin Park near the new municipal zoological garden. It is proposed to produce life-like cement images of the monsters that fed on New England's marshes and hills ten million years ago, and place them in Franklin Park, as an unrivalled lesson in the history of evolution. Some of the members of this group would answer to the names of Iguanodons, Diplodocus Carnegiei, Rhinoceros Saurians and Pteranodons, and it would be a sorry day for any gentleman with too much ballast to wander into their domain. Seriously the value of an exhibit like that planned would undeniably be far ahead of the well known, little appreciated dinosaur of the stuffy natural history museums. To find these life-like monsters among the trees and puddingstone ledges or beside small pools, in Franklin park, would be to gain an entirely new conception of the prehistoric conditions in our little corner of the world.

A new kind of stringing up at the Massachusetts state prison. For the first time in the history a real military band concert has been given the inmates. Thirty members of Teel's band gathered on the roof of a shed in the prison yard where about 800 prisoners were waiting impatiently. There followed a program of classic and popular music, including the overture "Poet and Peasant," "Il Trovatore," and other high grade selections, ending with the Star Spangled Banner, at the first notes of which every prisoner removed his cap. Bandmaster Teel said it had seldom been his pleasure to conduct his band before a more enthusiastic and appreciative audience, every criminal a man and a patriot.

Steady progress marks the career of the savings bank life insurance in Massachusetts. This humanitarian enterprise has stretched an arm around Pittsfield as its latest protege, the Berkshire County Savings Bank having become the third institution in the Commonwealth to furnish the required guaranty fund and open an insurance department. The two initial converts to the system at Brockton and Whitman respectively have long been doing an increasingly prospering business in savings bank life insurance and old age annuities, and judging by the number of agencies already established in connection with the Berkshire County Bank the older members of the trio will have to keep busy to keep their record from being outdone by the western competitor.

That must be Christian Science grass," remarked a young woman to her companion as the two passed the attractive park on Huntington avenue, fronting the Christian Science church. The point seemed well taken, for certainly nowhere in Boston is there a stretch of such healthy green as that cultivated and cared for by the Scientists. The little park lies like an unblemished blanket of bright green velvet, broken only by the attractive walks and the darker green of the perfectly groomed young trees. The park commission would have to look pretty sharp to find in its own province an example of such purity and health and vigor as exhibited in the little plot set between city buildings.

A stylishly dressed, chic young girl of the petite, coquettish type to which one does not look for undue industry, attracted considerable attention in a local train on a recent evening. As the train stopped in a suburban station the crowd on the platform beheld this damsel busily sewing on a strip of white and blue material, her attention entirely absorbed in her work, unaware of the gaze of the curious, her fingers fairly flying, and—her fair face marking time with the stitches as she sweetened her task with caramels or gum. Not an eyelash did she flicker until just as the train started, when she paused with a stitch half finished, darted one hand toward the window sill and popped a piece of candy between her lips, resuming her sewing without the loss of more than half a second.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Canadian Premier Who Went Down to Defeat

LAURIER WILL BE MISSED

Liberals Regard His Defeat as Little Short of Calamity

Montreal, Sept. 23.—Canada is confronted by a startling new situation, developed from the fact that reciprocity with the United States has been rejected, that the Laurier government has been defeated and that R. L. Borden will shortly be called upon to form a Conservative ministry.

The Borden party will soon take up the reins of government. That Sir Wilfrid Laurier will allow no technicalities to delay the opening of the Twelfth parliament is certain.

That his striking figure and strong personality will be missed in public affairs is also certain. Several papers which most bitterly attacked the reciprocity proposition have commented graciously upon Laurier as a man and as a large Canadian asset in what he has been in the councils of the colonies.

The Liberal organs describe the premier's defeat as little short of a national calamity.

STOLYPIN'S SLAYER CONDEMNED TO HANG

STEEL STOCKS ARE HAMMERED

New York Market Is Thrown Into Wild Confusiom

COMMON DECLINES TO 53 1-2

New York, Sept. 23.—Amidst scenes of frenzied excitement United States Steel shares were again hammered down on the stock market yesterday, the common and preferred slumping off to quotations which represent a loss of more than $164,100,000 from the prices prevailing two weeks ago.

Of this amount the preferred stock lost more than $39,600,000 and the common more than $124,500,000. The heavy selling was a continuation of the break the day previous, when steel sold off in a wave of demoralization.

Widely circulated reports that the United States Steel corporation was preparing to dissolve, in compliance with the Sherman anti-trust law, or that a dissolution suit was soon to be filed by the federal government, led to a flood of selling orders.

Fearing an immediate dissolution of the steel trust, holders of the stock throughout the country poured in their holdings from all sections until traders were swamped in the deluge of selling orders.

At times brokers had a difficult time finding a market for the blocks of stocks which they held for disposal. It was stated that another element of strong influence was the effect of the defeat of reciprocity in Canada, which resulted in heavy selling of shares of northern railroads, this movement showing a decline as low as four points.

Later big banking interests rallied to the support of the market with buying orders and checked the slump. So cleverly was the rallying movement, with its scattered buying, conducted, that not only were losses recovered, but fractional gains were made.

On its downward movement steel common touched 53½, the lowest level since the 1907 panic. The first block of steel which came out was 45,000 shares at 54 to 55½. This was quickly followed by 1800 shares at 55.

In quick succession small blocks and large were tumbled on the market. Within forty minutes 300,000 shares had been traded in, and not since 1907 had the trading been accompanied by so much excitement.

After the turmoil the market quieted down, and following the rally there was a period of fluctuation. However, prices were confined in a narrow range. There were some sharp upturns in the railroad list.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Considerable improvement wos noticeable in the High school football team yesterday afternoon. Coach Staff put the boys through some hard scrimage work and the backfield was given special attention. The defensive work of the first team was very conspicious and no fewer than four touchdowns were made, the second team failing to show any gains of considerable length.

This was the last hard practice the boys are to indulge in previous to the game Tuesday with Cambridge Latin. Monday's work will be confined solely to signal practise. Findlay displayed great form at full back and repeatedly broke through the opposing lines. Prout is showing up fine at quarter and if he had the weight would undoubtedly be given the call to the position. It is hoped that Larkin will show up to advantage in generalding the team work, for the backfield now gives promise of becoming very efficient.

It is probale that a number of players will be given a chance to perform in the first game and from present prospects, the contest gives every evidence of being a warm one for a starter.

The forward pass penalties for the improper handling or execution of the usame, and conditions regarding the scoring of a safety, were among the important things that occupied the attention of the football officials of the central board, at a meeting held in New York last night.

This year the ball shall always be declared "dead" when a forward pass strikes the ground, whether before or after it has been touched by a player, and in addition the ball shall be put in play at a point in the field where the previous down was made. No penalties can be applied from behind the goal posts, since penalties for illegal kicks and passes must be determined from the place where the ball was in play. Thus it can be readily seen that in some cases the safety will be done away with and the ball will be put on the one yard line where play will be resumed.

If a forward pass be fumbled, there is to be no penalty, the play being simply declared a fumble. A misdirected forward pass will result in the penalty regarding illegal and incompleted forward passes being applied.

Manager Higgins and his South Quincy team wind up their baseball season for the present year today by trying conclusions with the strong Winthrops at Winthrop. T. Galvin, Link Elcock and "Wes" Ganzel will be numbered amon g those in the lineup and the local boys are exceedingly desirous of bringing the season to a close with a victory.

The Fore River Apprentices have issued a challenge to the Colonials of West Quincy, claimants of the amateur championship of the city, to play a series of games for that title. Up to the present time the defi has not been accepted and manager Butler claims that his team has as much right to such honors as have the Colonials, who assumed possession of the title by merely defeating the Station Outing Club in a series of games. Manager Butler will concede that the Colonials are the amateur champions of West Quincy, but he will not allow that they are the amateur champions of the entire city.

Come on, manager McPherson, don't you think this despute can be easily settled?

Now that the Heptasophs have triumphed over the Quincy Council, K. of C., why would it not be a good plan to have them play a series with the Ave Maria Council of the same order? The West Quincy order has a number of prominent ball tossers numbered among its list and it is claimed that they could turn the tables on the "Heps." With such weather as we are having today, favoring us for a few more weeks it does sem as if such a series would prove of especial interest to local fans.

Dwitt Page and C. S. Pinkney of the Montclair Association and M. W. Dewart of the Wollaston Golf club qualified in the second sixteen at the contests held in Manchester, Vermont, yesterday for the Equinox cup. Page and Dewitt played 93, while Pickney made 96. In the first round match, Dewart was defeated by Young of the Ekwanok A. C., 4 up and 2 down. Page was defeated by Jones of the same club as the preceding winner, 3 up and 2 down. Pinkney won over Downe, of the Baltusrol Golf club, 4 up and 3 down.

COLLIER NEWTON IS SUCCESSFULLY LAUNCHED

Fair Sponsor and Party Make Gay Scene as Vessel Glides Into the Water

Some Notable Speeches By Invited Guests

MAYOR SHEA.

CONGRESSMAN WEEKS.

The Steam Collier Newton was successfully launched at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co's. yard at 12.28 o'clock.

Fully eighty per cent completed, the steam collier Newton, the fourth of this class of vessels built by the Fore River Ship Building Co. for the New England Coal & Coke Co., was successfully launched this noon in the presence of a gathering of upwards of five hundred ladies and gentlemen, personal friends and officials of the company. The launch was in the nature of a private one, the invitations having been sent out by the company, for which the vessel was built. It was a pretty scene to look upon, as the handsomely gowned ladies on the launching stand waited, with pent up enthusiasm, for the vessel to begin her trip down the ways toward the water. It was the second launch at the yard within a few weeks and while there was a much larger party at the launch of the Rivadavia, the enthusiasm today was fully as great. The launch went off without a hitch and the steamer looked majestic as she gracefully slid down the ways toward the waiting waters of the river.

The official launching party came by special train, which left Boston at 11 o'clock, and was run over the Fore River Co. private track to the yard, coming to a stop within a few feet of where the Newton, gayly bedecked with flags and bunting, waited the necessary steps that would release her.

As the train came to a stop, President Bowles stepped forward and presented Miss Dorothy Whitley, who was to christen the steamer, with a handsome bouquet of red roses, and then escorted her to the launching stand that had been erected about the bow of the vessel. Miss Whitley was accompanied by her mother and a party of West Newton young ladies who included, Miss Rachel Gilmore, Miss Elsie Harrington, Miss Terese Roguenmore, Miss Louise Walworth, Miss Clara Webster, Miss Marion Whitley, Miss Anna Spencer, Miss Bertha Whitney, Mrs. Spencer Arend and Mrs. Cyrus Schirmer, as guard of honor.

The launching platform itself was also gayly decorated with red, white and blue bunting. Near the bow was a small raised platform for the sponsor so that she might be within easy reach of the bottle of Mumm's Extra Dry champaign with which the vessel was to be christened. This was suspended from the bow of the vessel by a tri colored ribbon, which was later cut up into souvenirs of the occasion.

In the meantime workmen had been busy driving in the wedges which lifted the vessel onto her cradle, and in splitting out the keel blocks. All that now remained was to saw away the sole pieces. President Bowles raised his hand and the next instant the sound of the saws were heard, as they made their way through the six inch plank, the only thing that held the vessel in check. Then there was a cracking sound, as the sole piece was torn assunder and the Newton began to move down the ways. Then it was that Miss Whitley struck the steel bow a blow with the bottle of wine, and as the sparkling liquid ran down the steel sides, exclaimed I christen thee Newton."

Moving slowly at first she fast gathered headway and almost as quick as it takes to tell it the vessel was riding gracefully in the waters of the Fore river. The advent of another vessel to the Fore River fleet was made known to the outside world by prolonged whistling. Not to be outdone by the whistles the launching party gave cheer after cheer, which was taken up by the workmen in the yard. President Bowles called for three cheers for the fair sponsor, which were given with a will and then after congratulating her on the successful manner in which she had fulfilled her part of the launch the official party was escorted to the new boiler shop where Miss Whitley, who is a senior at Smith college and a neice of Mayor Hatfield of Newton, was showered with congratulations.

The lunch was served on a somewhat different plan from usual, inasmuch as the guests were seated at tables. At the head table were:

President F. T. Bowles.
Miss Dorothy Whitley.
James L. Richards, president of the N. E. C. & C. Co.

Other notable guests present at the other tables were:

For Renomination
County Commissioner

JOHN F. MERRILL of Quincy

Four Years Chairman of the board

RESULTS:

County debt reduced by a very large amount.

County tax reduced.

County property in best condition ever known.

Many bridge and highway improvements costing many thousands of universal approval of towns effected.

A District Court Building for Quincy, perfect in material and workmanship.

Much public work under way to be completed during the coming year with which Mr. Merrill is thoroughly familiar.

No private interests to promote.

A united vote of Quincy for Mr. Merrill means a continuance of a business man in a business office, other than that removes the chairmanship certainly and membership of the board probably from Quincy to some other town.

Is a change desirable?

WAS ARREST A MISTAKE?

Claim There Is No Secret About Plans of Submarines

LOOK FOR SENSATIONS

J. Barraja Frauenfelder was released on bail Saturday morning and came to Quincy on the 1.45 train. During the morning, Charles H. Hardwick, his counsel, visited the Cambridge jail with his brother Dr. Hardwick and these two became the bondsmen for Mr. Frauenfelder.

The original amount of the bail was $3,000 but it is understood that the court consented to accept a cash bail of $1,000.

Now that the first excitement of the arrest has subsided, and people have commenced to do a little thinking it seems to be the general opinion that Mr. Frauenfelder has been the victim of someone who has an axe to grind. It has been pointed out that there is nothing remarkably secret about submarines and that the company stands ready to sell one of the boats to anyone who will pay the price. Boats similar to those built for the United States have been built for nearly every foreign government. It is also said that the cuts, or illustrations used in the magazine articles were reproductions and enlargements of similar cuts, that have been published during the past few years in various publications.

It is expected that some interesting things will be developed when the case comes to trial.

RESIDENT OF WOLLASTON WON PRIZE

The hundred dollar prize offered by A. E. Stilwell, president of the American Land and Irrigation Exposition, for the best musical setting to the poem "The Empire State," written by "Desire Stanton," has been awarded to Mrs. G. Marschal-Loepke of Wollaston.

The author of the poem is a New Yorker, but the composer of the music from another state. The judges of the music competition, which was open to the entire musical world, were Franz Kaltenhorn, orchestra leader, Leo Tecktonius, pianist and L. K. Brown, organist. Seventy compositions were submitted under pseudonyms, and when the envelopes were opened it was found that honorable mention had been awarded to Arthur Farwell of New York, and Mrs. Maud McFarren Price, of Colorado Springs.

The poem "The Empire State" won the hundred dollar prize offered last July for the best song on New York State, in competition with 136 other poems. One of the conditions of the competing musical settings was that they should retain the melody of the chorus of "The Red, White and Blue." The winning composition has done this, and the judges characterize it as impressive, dignified, melodious and harmonious. The words and music are to be published by G. Shirmer, New York, who has issued some of the composer's previous works. The song is arranged for a mixed chorus and will be published in this form, but it can be used as a solo, as the treble carries the air. It will receive its premier at the American Land Products Exposition in Madison Square Garden, November third, where it will be interpreted by one of the finest choral organizations in the United States accompanied by orchestra.

DISTURB THE PEACE AT BRAINTREE

Knife thrusts and revolver shots were exchanged by Italians at Braintree Sunday afternoon, but according to the police no one was injured. The weapons were in the hands of Vico Marluzzo and Michele LLafardier. According to the police, the latter called at the Marluzzos house on Pond street but was not welcomed, and told to get out. In an argument which followed it is claimed that Lafardier drew a knife and made an assault on Marluzzo who retaliated by firing three shots at him. A big crowd was attracted and Officer Thayer arrested the two men and locked them up. They were in court this morning one for assault with a loaded revolver and the other for assault with a knife. The cases were continued until later for a hearing.

CELEBRATE WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John M. O'Brien observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage and also the twentieth birthday of their eldest daughter, Emeline, at their home on Furnace Brook Parkway, West Quincy, on Sunday from 3 to 10.

Mr. O'Brien was born in Quincy, April 11, 1862 and is a well known contractor of this city.

Mrs. O'Brien was Catherine J. Harrington and was born in Boston April 17, 1866.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien were married in the church of the Most Precious Blood, in Hyde Park, by the late Richard J. Barry Sept. 24, 1886.

They were assisted in receiving by their four children Emeline, Marguerite, Fred and Francis. Among those present were Mrs. Rachel E. Riley of South Boston, who was bridesmaid, James O'Brien of Milford, who was best man and many others.

At 6 o'clock a collation was served. The table was prettily decorated and in the centre was a beautiful wedding cake. After supper a pleasant evening was spent in singing and piano playing. Many beautiful presents were received and all wished Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien a long life and hoped they would live to celebrate their golden wedding.

AVIATION LOSS $10,000.

The net loss of the Harvard aviation meet held at Squantum this month is estimated at $10,000, and the 15 subscribers who guaranteed $1000 each will be obliged to pay about two-thirds the amount of their guarantee, according to the Boston News Bureau.

The attendance this year was about one-third of that of last year, while the loss sustained is about one-third or one-half of 1910.

"MEN AND RELIGIOUS FORWARD MOVEMENT"

First Meeting Held Sunday Afternoon in the Bethany Church

General Objects And Plans Were Outlined

There was a good attendance of men at the Bethany church, Sunday afternoon, at the meeting in the interest of "The men and religious forward movement," in behalf of the christian life of men and boys. The movement is a practical combination of the forces of America. An attempt of nearly all of the religious organizations, working among men to make the year 1911-1912 a year of special emphasis on christian work, and through campaigns to be held throughout New England and the country at large to reach the 3,000,000 men missing participation in church life. The general plan is to make christian religion a vital topic throughout the country.

Sunday's meeting was a preliminary one in which the general objects and plans were outlined. J. A. Sedgwick presided and the meeting opened with singing led by T. B. Pollard, Madame Beale Borey at the organ, followed by prayer by Rev. L. B. Sears, scripture reading by Rev. C. B. Marshall, of the Washington street congregational church and prayer by Rev. James Matherson of the Water street Presbyterian church.

The main address was by Rev. Clarence A. Vincent of Roxbury on "The significance of the movement." In opening Dr. Vincent said we had the problem of God in the history of the United States. Many times our fathers thought the attempt for liberty was about to close, yet in the fullness of time there opened a way for the men who had been guiding us. The real rights of the world rest with the people. He then briefly alluded to the progress and development that had been made during the past fifteen years for a democratic government, where people shall express themselves and take part in it.

This was the only representative government that can reach the highest character in the people. When we see the churches, men's organizations and temperance societies working to make a country of character, all that is needed is to be alive. We are here to make such a government out of what has been handed down to us. To make the church a force in the centre, we are here to destroy the saloon and everything that makes it hard for men to be good and happy. The movement is to make political, moral and social

The modern county fair crowd kicks if the aeroplanist does not go up in a gale, when you couldn't persuade them to drive Dobbin into town on a dark night.

Delivery of mails by aeroplane is being tried out by Hitchcock, but he will never get an efficient postal service until he trains the men not to carry the letters around intheir pockets.

Prof. Sargent of Harvard says trousers beat a skirt for all kinds of purposes. The Springfield Union says you can't shoo a hen with a pair of trousers, and it is likewise true that you can't hold the cat properly.

Mrs. Taft does the White house marketing herself, which is looked on as a heroic deed. According to modern standards, if she looked after the cooking in the kitchen, she would be entitled to a place among the martyrs.

One of the leading suffragettes remarked to Opie Read that the awful sweat shop conditions that he so vividly describes would not be done away with until women were given the right to vote. Mr. Read replied that in Denver where women have been voting for many years, the sweat shops are the worst in the United States considering the size of the city.

PRISON LABOR.

In bringing the problem of prison labor more clearly before the public mind the national committee on prison labor is performing a much-needed work.

From the leaflets just issued, it is apparent that popular sentiment throughout the nation is undergoing a radical change on this vexed question. Even in some of the southern states where the contract system and the lease system still prevail, demands have been made in party platform for their abolition.

In Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska and Texas party paltforms have urged that the prisoner's net earnings should go to the prisoner's family, if he has one; if not, they should be paid to him on the expiration of his sentence. Twenty-eight governors in their messages last year to legislatures recommended changes in the laws relating to prison labor.

No one suggests the abolition of prison labor, but it is insisted that "labor was not instituted to punish the criminal, but as a means of ameliorating his condition." Gradually the truth is beginning to dawn upon the legislative and the executive mind that the "purely business standpoint" is not the one from which to view so complex a question as that of prison labor, and that the effect upon the prisoner himself and upon society has got to be considered.

AGAINST FREE SEEDS.

The paternal interest of the Congressmen intheir constituents as manifested by the distributing of free vegetable and flower seeds, does not seem to be truly appreciated by the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, which has just held its annual session at Boston.

Strange to say the president of this influential organization, in his program of work for the year, was so ungrateful as to include a campaign for abolition of free seed distribution by Congressmen, and the use of the same money for agricultural development.

The sending around yearly of 40,000,000 packets of free seeds has been one of the most efficient and economical methods of building political fences ever devised by our ingenious solons.

The receipt of such a packet gives the constituent not merely the same sense of pleasure that comes from a mention of his name in the local newspaper, but it adds the feeling that your representative is right on the job and is toiling daily to advance your interests as a property owner and citizen.

So much from the politicians viewpoint. But the tax payer has always been strongly obtuse to the advantages acquired by the half million it costs to prepare and distribute these seeds.

A seed of a useful plant has been truly called nature's jewel casket. In its silent heart is locked a potency of wealth. In the microscopic difference between a good and a poor seed lies difference between agricultural wealth and poverty. If this governmental distribution led the farmers to learn theadvantages of well selected seed, the money would be well spent.

But the men who are acquiring high cereal yields through attention to the choice of seed, don't probably get their information from the government. Now would they, unless the government went into the business of seed farming on a vast scale.

Instead they ally themselves with some good seed producing house, many of which are doing such remarkable work. We know of one such that never sends out a seed unless it has tested 86 per cent of germinations, and the average runs 90 to 95 per cent.

Were all our farmers to use such seed as this, there would not be the pathetic naked spots in our grain fields, which mean half filled barns and high priced bread for the people.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!

One of the longest established business firms in City Square is that of Charles F. Pettengill, the well known jeweler, who has been one of the city's substantial firms since 1876, when he opened a jewelry store in the little building now occupied by the city flower store. From there he removed to larger quarters adjoining the Greenleaf and when the Welch block was built he moved into a still larger store where he is now located.

Born in Brunswick, Me., Feb. 8, 1848, he passed his early youth in his native town coming to East Boston, when ten years of age, where he received his education. His studies completed, he went to Bath, Me., where he was employed by his uncle in the watchmakers business until his eyes gave out. Having a taste for the sea, he shipped for Panama in a coal vessel. The voyage was a rough one, for the vessel was off Cape Horn for forty-five days and being so badly battered that the captain put back to Rio Janeiro where she arrived six months fromthe time the vessel left New York. Here the cargo was sold and the vessel returned reaching home in the spring of 1865. The following summer Mr. Pettengill passed in mackerel fishing and having had sufficient of the sea fever, returned to his first love and entered the employ of the E. Howard Watch Co. Remaining four years he went to the Springfield Watch Co. with whom he remained a year and then returned to the Howard Co. Two years later he entered the jewelry business in East Boston under the firm name of Briggs & Pettengill. This firm was dissolved in 1876 when Mr. Pettengill came to Quincy.

Feb. 8, 1895, on the anniversary of his birth, there was a meeting of the Quincy Yacht club, in what was then known as the Lyceum room at City Hall. It was the annual meeting and when the votes were counted it was found that his many friends had presented him with a birthday present in the shape of an election as Commodore of the club. The contest had been a keen one and when the result was announced there was a great shout and the very rafters shook. He filled the office as Commodore for two years and was one of the most popular the club ever had. Although not a yacht owner, he took a deep interest in yacht racing and in those days he was sure to be in attendance at all local races.

He still retains his membership in the club, which he joined in 1882 being a life member although business responsibilities prevent his taking the active interest he would like to. He is a modest man, one who always retains a friend once made, and to this is due, in a great measure, the success that his business enjoys.

He never had any political ambition but is quite a secret society man, being affiliated with the Masonic fraternity of high degree. He is also a Shriner and a member of the Odd Fellows fraternity.

LAUNCHING OF NEWTON

W. C. Baylies, Samuel Carr, F. E. Snow, Albert Strauss and F. C. Pruyn, directors of the N. E. C. & C. Co.

F. C. Dumaine, treasurer Amoskeg Mills.

D. O. Ives, traffic manager, Chamber of Commerce.

J. J. Bright, director Boston Elevated.

Charles Skentelbery, marine superintendent N. E. C. & C. Co.

State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens.

Capt. D. Aguirre.

The lunch over President Bowles proposed the health of the sponsor and the Newton and then spoke briefly saying in part:

He then in turn introduced the other speakers who were Mayor Shea, President J. L. Richards, Congressman Weeks, Congressman Curley, Mayor Hatfield and others.

The Newton is the fourth of a fleet of steam colliers built by the Fore River Co., for the New England Coal & Coke Co. the others being the Everett, launched July 11, 1907, Malden launched Sept. 10, 1907 and Melrose, launched Nov. 6, 1907. The Newton is practically a duplicate of her sister ships, with the exception of being about six feet longer. Her dimensions are:

Length over all 406 feet 0 inches.
Breadth 54 feet 6 inches.
Depth 31 feet 0 inches.

She has a dead weight carrying capacity of 7,200 tons of cargo coal, together with bunker coal, fresh water and stores all on a mean draft of 23 feet.

Her machinery installation consists of a set of triple expansion, surface condencing engines, having cylinders 25, 41 and 68 inches in diameter with a stroke of 48 inches. These engines are all ready and will be put on board within a few days.

Steam is provided by three single ended Scotch boilers, 14 feet, 2 inches mean diameter and 11 feet 6 inches in length over head. These boilers are now on their way to Quincy and will arrive this week.

On the poop deck in a steel house commodious staterooms have been arranged for the chief engineer and his assistants, together with mess rooms for officers and engineers, a galley, bathrooms and toilet arrangements, also an office for the chief engineer. In the bridge enclosure have been arranged a ship's saloon with guest room, spare room and staterooms for officers. The captain's quarters are located in a steel house on the bridge deck and on top of this the pilot house and chart room have been located. The forward part of the pilot house top has been extended to the side of the ship to form a flying bridge, where an electric searchlight, standard compass and steering station have been provided. The vessel is lighted throughout by electricity supplied by a marine generating set, located in the engine room.

As stated above the vessel is fully eighty percent completed and will be delivered Nov. 21, which is within the nine months named in the contract.

Mayor Shea spoke as follows:

A few weeks ago there was launched from this shipyard the biggest and mightiest of battleships yet constructed. Although built for a foreign power, the planning and construction of this mighty ship was an American enterprise and we in Quincy felt proud in the thought that here in our own city was begun what we all hope will prove to be the movement that will place American shipbuilding in a commanding position among our sister nations of the world.

Today, while the plaudits of all nations are still reechoing throughout the world on our successful achievement in launching the biggest battleship that floats, we are met to again rejoice not only that we have successfully built to the launching point another vessel, but that we have added to the marine registry of our own country another ship that will fly the stars and stripes.

Unfortunately the record of our country in building up its merchant marine is not all that we wish it could be. Our march of progress along the routes of marine commerce has been slow, lamentably slow, but, I rejoice to note within the past few years we have made an earnest start. Along the entire Atlantic seaboard I know of no other company that has done more to increase the commercial shipbuilding trade and place thereon our starry flag than the New England Coal and Coke Company, the owner of this magnificent vessel launched today. Three times before the New England Coal and Coke Company has come to our city on occasions similar to this and has placed upon the high seas three splendid specimens of merchant ships. My only regret is that there are not more business enterprises to follow the splendid example set by this distinctive New England Commercial Company.

At the launching of the Rivadavia I said that I hoped the time would soon come when shipyards in this vicinity would be engaged in building merchant vessels as well as ships of war. Consequently, I am glad to be here today as Mayor of Quincy on an occasion that means much for the commercial development of our country. With the launching of this ship today four splendid cities of the greater Boston district become neighbors upon the highways of the sea. Everett, Malden, Melrose and now Newton are the names selected to carry the flag and the trade also. I hope the time is not far distant when the coal and coke company can see its way clear to build another vessel here and give to it the name of the city which in the last 10 years has built scores of ships for the American merchant marine, scores, also, for the United States Navy, warships for Argentine and Japan and turbine engines for Japan and Italy, a city which has done as much for American shipbuilding, considering the length of time it has been in business, as any city in the country. I hope the next merchant ship built here will be named the Quincy.

My best wishes as Mayor of Quincy are hereby extended to the company which owns this ship and the company which built her and I trust this fleet may be only the beginning of a larger one that will cover the seas of the world with the American merchant marine.

CRUSADE AGAINST NIHILIST PLOTTING

Czar Is Led to Resort to Two Most Drastic Measures

St. Petersburg, Sept. 25.—The most crushing crusade ever inaugurated in Russia against Nihilists and revolutionary plots has been ordered to follow the execution of Dimitry Bogroff, the assassin of Premier Stolypin, who was sentenced to death by court martial.

Realization that his life is in danger from intrigues among the police who are paid to guard him has led Czar Nicholas to a consideration of two drastic measures. The first of these is the campaign to wipe out death plots and the second is a secret ukase ending the reign of the entire third section police. This section has charge of the work of running down spies and revolutionaries and the detection of assassination plots.

Rev. Alfred R. Hussey of Baltimore, Md., occupied the pulpit at the First church Sunday morning and preached an exceedingly interesting sermon. There was a good attendance and the hearers paid his address the closest attention.

HALL PLACE CHURCH.

Rev. T. C. Martin, pastor of the Hall Place M. E. church preached a sermon for men at the morning service on Sunday, in the interests of the "Men and Religion Forward Movement. He took for his text Prov. 8-4 "Unto you, O men, I call."

Rally Day was observed in the Sunday school with an increased attendance. The regular program and study hour were omitted. A special song service was given after which the pastor addressed the school, taking the regular Sunday school lesson of "Daniel in the den of lions" as the basis of his talk. He particularly emphasized the truth of courage, being needed in daily living and then called on members of the school to suggest the different phases of life that required courage. It was a very interesting and helpful address.

ROOSTER MEETS INGLORIOUS END

Sonorous Tones Of Silver Tongued Bird Are Gone Forever

WEIGHED 6 1-2 POUNDS

The rooster which so disturbed the peace and quietude of the residents of Moscow street, Norfolk Downs, that they appealed to the Mayor and Board of Health to quiet him, is no more. He met his death Saturday night at the Police station and on Sunday adorned the dining table of Inspector Goodhue.

Saturday afternoon, Inspector Goodhue went down to interview Mrs. McGuinness in regard to the bird. Previous to this he had received an opinion from the City Solicitor that the city could do nothing in the case. In this interview with Mrs. McGuinness that lady said that she had no desire to annoy her neighbors and if they had gone at it in the right way the affair would have been settled long ago. She was satisfied now that it had been determined that she had a right to keep the bird. As the incident was ended and it had been proven she was right, she desired to present Inspector Goodhue with the bird.

A few minutes later the bird was on its way to the police station where it was killed. It was a handsome Rhode Island Red and weighed 6 1-2 pounds dressed.

Booker Washington Refuses to Ride In "Jim Crow" Car

Denison, Tex., Sept. 25.—Booker T. Washington was given his choice by the Kansas, Missouri and Texas railway either to ride in the compartment reserved for negroes or hire a special car to transport him from Austin to Temple.

The Texas "Jim Crow" law is firmly enforced, so the railroad officials could not afford to be accommodating. Yet to travel in a Texas train in a negro compartment was not to the taste of Washington, so he chartered a special Pullman for the trip, which is to take place Sept. 30. The distance from Austin to Temple is about 200 miles.

GENERAL LAWRENCE DEAD

One of Medford's Foremost Citizens and Prominent In Masonry

Medford, Mass., Sept. 25.—General Samuel C. Lawrence, one of the directors of the Boston and Maine railroad, first mayor of Medford, a thirty-third degree Mason, a Civil war veteran and philanthropist, died at his home here last evening, at the age of 78 years 10 months.

For half an hour after his death all the fire bells of Medford tolled, conveying to the inhabitants the tidings that one of the greatest benefactors of the city and one of its most public spirited citizens had passed away.

He had long been sick with serious kidney trouble.

STRAITS POND BRIDGE.

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger:

A desire to see the principles of the square deal respected in the controversy which is going on between County Commissioner John F. Merrill and the other candidates for the office, impels me to make a statement regarding the building of the Straits Pond Bridge, so-called between Hull on the north and Hingham and Cohasset on the south, legislative authority having been obtained to construct a bridge at the point in question, the cost not to exceed twenty thousand dollars. The Act did not require that the contract be awarded to the lowest bidder, nor that bids be called for. The matter was left to the wise discretion of six men representing certain towns; our County Commissioners being three of them, the other three being the Plymouth County Commissioners.

I, as an expert in such work, was employed to examine the old bridge and approaches thereto and determine whether the old bridge could be repaired. I found it would be unwise and impracticable to repair it and reported accordingly.

It was then decided to build a new bridge with an opening six feet wide, the same as the old one. Hull and other towns demanded that it be made wider and as they had to bear the greater part of the expense their wishes were very properly complied with.

My part of the work was carried on under the directions of an engineer of high standing. The work of the employees under me had my constant supervision and my time slips were submitted daily to the engineer for his approval, by my foreman.

As to the amount of work done, I required of the men a fair day's work and got it. I paid them a fair day's pay for it. I cannot conceive of any contractor doing the work any more cheaply without losing on the job, and very much doubt that any responsible contractor would agree or bid to do it for a smaller sum.

The bridge itself cost about fifteen thousand dollars. The balance of the money expended was for widening the approches at both ends, a thing imperatively required by public convenience.

Norfolk County paid only 28 1-3 percent of the cost of the work. The remainder was paid by the County of Plymouth and the Old Colony Street Railway Company. No suggestion of graft or indiscretion in connection with the work was ever heard from Plymouth County or the Street Railway Company; nor from any other source except one of the candidates for Mr. Merrill's job, on the eve of the caucus.

Citizens of Quincy—Politics is Politics! and due allowance should be made for the heat of a campaign, but before casting your ballot, please remember that insinuation is not proof; that facts are facts; that justice is justice; and DO NOT assume without a shred of evidence that Mr. Merrill and his associates or myself would thrust a dishonest hand into the public treasury.

If there has been one dollar misspent in connection with the Hingham bridge I do not know of it, and I do not believe it.

"MEN AND RELIGIOUS FORWARD MOVEMENT"

life clean, to make a great democracy. If we are to establish these things, represented in good government, we must have men to bring it about, God wants men to train the world up into a power.

The plan is to reach men and boys, defining what it means to be a man. To take up the study of the community In this way we shall make over our country. Rally the men to work for men and boys. Men to work for the community. Men to give the gospel to the community.

If you think by holding meetings and passing resolutions you can clean up a community you will fail. This was what the speaker was afraid of.

James L. Rand of Wollaston spoke on "The call of Christ to the men of this district." He said that there were now eight thousand men at work in this movement. This is the day of big things. We have three million more women and girls in the church than men and boys. We want to get these three million and make such a work that shall be perpetual. He was a representative of a general committee of one hundred. The plan proposed is a general self examination. First in regard to prayer. Second in regard to Bible study. Then the man will get himself in the place where he ought to be.

The general plan to be carried out was for a local committee of five in each church, the chairman to be appointed by the general committee. This committee will take the active part of the whole undertaking. The next step for the local committee is a general meeting, at which the most crying need of the community is to be discussed. Then to make preparations for the coming of the experts next January. The April meeting will be a general summing up of the whole movement. By this time it is hoped that there will have been such an awakening that the movement will be carried on indefinitely and a new era in the life of the church will come.

After the addresses an opportunity was given for a discussion of the plan and the asking of questions.

This is what is to be known as the period of preparation in which the men will be aroused for the grand rally day to be held in every church for the Conservation day, April 28, 1912.

—President Taft will designate Thursday, Nov. 30, as Thanksgiving day this year. It has always been the custom to fix the last Thursday in the month. This year there has been some doubt because November happened to include five instead of four Thursdays. PRIMARIES IN THE BAY STATE

Larger Vote Than Expected Is Now Predicted

A THREE-CORNERED CONTEST

Frothingham, Walker and White, Rival Republicans, All Express Confidence That Nomination For Governor Is as Good as In Hand—Six Thousand Democrats Eat Oxen and Hear Speeches at Boston

Boston, Sept. 25.—The campaigning for the primaries which are to be held tomorrow was really finished Saturday night for all practical purposes.

This morning the voters received in their early mail a large amount of literature aimed to inspire them with the desire to vote and for special candidates.

The most encouraging sign of the hour is that the people are really becoming aroused as to the importance of the primary election and it is now said all predictions may be set at naught and that a very substantial vote will be brought out.

Each of the three candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination claims the nomination, and in statements issued at the close of the campaign each gives his reasons for the faith that is in him.

Lieutenant Governor Frothingham says he bases his confidence of victory on assurances of support received from every town and city in the state. He has urged Republicans throughout the state to attend the primaries in large numbers, and believes that the larger the vote the more overwhelming will be his victory. "I shall surely receive the nomination," he says.

Speaker Walker says he will win because "the rank and file of the party approves of the principles" for which he stands and the methods which he has followed in the campaign. He claims to have spent no money to secure the support of any newspaper or any political worker, and says he is depending entirely on the support of those who are enthusiastic enough to vote and work for him because they believe in the cause he represents. He said:

"I feel sure that I shall receive the nomination. It will mean a new leadership and one which will be true to the ideals of the party."

Norman H. White's appeal, as is that of Walker, is to the people and against what they term the machine. White devoted his time and energies during last week to attacks on Frothingham. He has held him up as the arch enemy of organized labor, as a friend of the liquor interests and the enemy of all that the people want.

"I will not only get the nomination, but I will also defeat Eugene N. Foss at the polls on election day," he says.

The barbecue of the Boston Democracy at Caledonian grove Saturday afternoon was the most successful gathering which the Democratic city committee has conducted for a great many years.

It was not alone the two steers and the four sheep which had originally been scheduled for devouring two weeks ago that were got away with, but dire predictions were made that the same fate awaits the Republican party in this state this fall.

There was a note of optimism running throughout all the speeches of the afternoon and there were more that a dozen. The orators included Mayor Fitzgerald, Governor Foss, Congressman O'Shaunessy of Rhode Island, Assistant Corporation Counsel Malone of New York, Congressmen Curley and Murray and the candidates for the Democratic nomination for the various state offices on the Democratic ticket.

There was likewise an excellent athletic display, in which a number of crack athletes participated. The crowd numbered more than 6000 strong.

GARDNER FOR SENATOR

Maine Farmer to Take Seat Made Vacant by Death of Frye

Augusta, Me., Sept. 25.—The appointment of Obadiah Gardner of Rockland to be United States senator, to complete the unexpired term of the late Senator William P. Frye, was announced by Governor Plaisted. Gardner is state assessor, having been appointed to that office by Plaisted for a term of six years in April.

Obadiah Gardner was born in Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 13, 1852, and lived there during his boyhood. He settled in Rockland thirty-six years ago. His family consists of his wife and one son.

He is the first farmer to enter the senate from Maine, and the present time is the only instance of two Democratic senators from this state since 1851.

He has expressed himself frequently on the stump and in interviews as in favor of direct election of senators, a parcels post and improved highways, and was in favor of the repeal of the constitutional prohibitory law in this state at the recent election.

Enough advance models are here to show the trend of coming fashions, and lend "first aid" to mothers and others interested in new Fall get-ups, or the refurbishing of last year's gowns.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

SKIRT LINES.

Skirts remain scant but are of comfortable width for walking, and the hanging panel that masked their plainness during the Summer is succeeded by various devices in sash effect on the thinner goods, and by bias folds in tucked styles, that break up the skirt in various smart ways and that transform the extremely attenuated lines of last season into styles much more becoming. Soft droopy frills trim many fussy frocks for dress wear, and the waists of these are apt to have crossover bretelles or fichu draperies edged with the same floppy ruffles.

A PRETTY GOWN.

A pretty gown that is going into the trunk of a college girl is of white voile, the gathered skirt trimmed with three five inch ruffles of rose printed silk, put on about three inches apart. A little silk coat of the same forms the bodice. This has a wide collar edged with ruffles and a chemisette of white dotted net. Knife pleated ruffles of the silk and net finish the sleeve at the elbow. The sleeve is not kimono, but is set in to the armhole in the old time way though the wide collar conceals this pretty thoroughly.

USEFUL SILK COATS.

The little freakish silk coats that have been mentioned several times recently promise to be a very popular feature of Fall and Winter modes. They will replace blouses in many tailored suits, and the drop below the waist may be anything from a three inch knife pleating to long sash ends. With cloth tailormades the finish is apt to be in keeping, but for dress wear these coats may be fancy as desired They will lend a smart air to a demure dress, or refurbish most satisfactorily. Brocaded and changeable and surah silks are all liked as well as satins and printed syles.

PLAIDS FOR COATS AND BLOUSES.

Some very smart utility blouses and top coats are shown in striking plaids. Woolen fringes to match are new with these and a touch of velvet or satin in the trimmings or buttons brings out the color scheme.

RAVEN BLUE.

Raven blue, that is very dark and rich looking, is a relief after all the insistent blues of the past season. Grays in many shades to dark gun metal tints are to be much worn, and black and bronze brown remain favorites. Striking contrasts in color in linings continues, though this idea has been terribly overdone.

BIZARRE BEADINGS.

The same vogue remains for beaded effects in Byzantian and Oriental colorings and patterns, while the French knotted embroideries, that closely imitate beads, have lost none of their prestige A dress of black crepe meteor has the narrow skirt slashed to show unexpected bits of drapery at the hips, and is finished with two very wide folds at the knee. The blouse is a modified kimono with rather long armhole from which come two square sleeves in dark and light tones of raspberry chiffon cloth. Bretelles over the shoulder are of pinkish red beads set closely like an Indian head band. A strip of the same concealed somewhat by the draperies goes down one side of the front of the skirt. The sash ends at the side are finished with two long tassels of the pink beads.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Corn in Tomato Cups. Remove the pulp from a half dozen ears tender corn. Season with salt, pepper, and add one beaten egg and one tablespoonful cream to each cupful pulp. Cut a slice from the stem end of a half dozen tomatoes, scoop out some of the pulp with a teaspoon, dust with pepper and salt and fill with the corn mixture. Cover with bread crumbs, dot with bits of butter, lay in a baking tin and bake in a hot oven until the tomato is soft and lightly browned. Serve on rounds of buttered toast.—Emma Paddock Telford.

Pears. The fruit should not be too ripe; pare, halve and core. Make a syrup from one and one-half pints of sugar, with just enough water to dissolve it. Add the grated rind and juice of one lemon and one-fourth pound of Canton ginger. When the syrup is boiling hot add two quarts of the prepared fruit. Cook slowly until perfectly tender when pierced with a straw. Put in pint jars and seal.

Potato Soup. Shred a large onion in in three pints of milk, add two stalks of celery, cut fine, put in double boiler, and let it come to a boil. In the meantime pare and boil six or seven medium sized potatoes; when done, mash thoroughly, beat light and add to the boiling milk, put in a lump of butter equal to two tablespoonfuls when melted, season with pepper and salt, put through a sieve and serve at once.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES — NO SLATE — NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indelinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumord, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty. Bart shoots at Lidgerwood, whose life is saved by Dawson. Benson tells how his bridge timbers were stolen. The gang used the stolen engine.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Lidgerwood's watchfulness saves his train. The passenger train is wrecked, with loss of life. Lidgerwood suspects Flemister and Hallock.

Lidgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Lidgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

Lidgerwood gets a warrant for the arrest of Hallock, charged with murder. Bart attacks Lidgerwood, and Judson again arrests him. Eleanor refuses to leave before the strike begins.

Lidgerwood's friends and Eleanor's party arm themselves against the strikers. Gridley returns from a mysterious absence. Hallock has disappeared.

Benson looked hard at the door which was still quivering under Gridley's outgoing slam. And when the master mechanic's tread was no longer audible in the upper corridor the young engineer turned to the man at the desk to say, "What tickled the boss machinist Lidgerwood?"

"I don't know. Why?"

Benson looked at McCloskey.

"Just as we came in he was standing over you with a look in his eyes as if he were about to murder you and couldn't quite make up his mind as to the simplest way of doing it. Then the look changed to his usual cast iron smile in the flirt of a flea's hind leg—at some joke you were telling. I took it."

Being careful and troubled about many things, Lidgerwood missed the point of Benson's remark; could not remember when he tried just what it was that he had been saying to Gridley when the interruption came. But the matter was easily dismissed. Having his two chief lieutenants before him, the superintendent seized the opportunity to outline the plan of campaign for the night. McCloskey was to stay by the wires, with Callahan to share his watch. Dawson when he should come down was to pick up a few of the loyal enginemen and guard the roundhouse. Benson was to take charge of the yards, keeping his eye on the Nadia. At the first indication of an outbreak he was to pass the word to Van Lew, who would immediately transfer the private car party to the second floor offices in the headquarters building.

"That is all," was Lidgerwood's summing up when he had made his dispositions like a careful commander in chief—"all but one thing. Mac, have you seen anything of Hallock?"

"Not since the middle of the afternoon," was the prompt reply.

"And Judson has not yet reported?"

"No."

"Well, this is for you, Benson—Mac already knows it: Judson is out looking for Hallock. He has a warrant for Hallock's arrest."

Benson's eyes narrowed.

"Then you have found the ringleader at last, have you?" he asked.

"I am sorry to say that there doesn't seem to be any doubt of Hallock's guilt. The arrest will be made quietly. Judson understands that. There is another man that we've got to have, and there is no time just now to go after him."

"Who is the other man?" asked Benson.

"It is Flemister, the man who has the stolen switching engine boxed up in a power house built out of planks sawed from your Gloria bridge timbers."

"I told you so!" exclaimed the young engineer. "By Jove, I'll never forgive you if you don't send him to the rock pile for that, Lidgerwood!"

"I have promised to hang him," said the superintendent soberly—"him and the man who has been working with him."

"And that's Rankin Hallock!" cut in the trainmaster vindictively, and his scowl was grotesquely hideous. "Can you hang them, Mr. Lidgerwood?"

"Yes. Flemister and a man whom Judson has identified as Hallock were the two who ditched 204 at Silver

"I'LL ADD ONE MORE STRAND TO THE ROPE."

Switch last night. The charge in Judson's warrant reads 'train wrecking and murder.'"

The trainmaster smote the desk with his fist.

"I'll add one more strand to the rope—Hallock's rope," he gritted ferociously. "You remember what I told you about that loosened rail that caused the wreck in the Crosswater hills? You said Hallock had gone to Navajo to see Cruikshanks. He did go to Navajo, but he got there just exactly four hours after 202 had gone on past Navajo, and he came on foot, walking down the track from the hills!"

"Where did you get that?" asked Lidgerwood quickly.

"From the agent at Navajo. I wasn't satisfied with the way it shaped up, and I did a little investigating on my own hook."

It was close upon 8 o'clock when the two lieutenants went to their respective posts. It was fully an hour further along and the tense strain of suspense was beginning to tell upon the man who sat thoughtful and alone in the second floor office of the Crow's Nest when Benson ran up to report the situation in the yards.

"Everything quiet so far," was the news he brought. "We've got the Nadia on the east spur, where the folks can slip out and make their getaway if they have to. There are several little squads of the discharged men hanging around, but not many more than usual. The east and west yards are clear, and the three sections of the midnight freight are crewed and ready to pull out when the time comes. The folkses are playing dummy whist in the Nadia, and Gridley is holding the fort at the shops with the toughest looking lot of myrmidons you ever laid your eyes on."

Once again Lidgerwood was making tiny squares on his desk blotter.

"I'm thankful that the news of the strike got to Copah in time to bring Gridley over on 203," he said.

Benson's boyish eyes opened to their widest angle.

"Did he say he came in on two-three?" he asked.

"He did."

"Well, that's odd—devilish odd. I was on that train, and I rambled it from one end to the other, which is a bad habit I have when I'm trying to kill travel time. Gridley isn't a man to be easily overlooked. Reckon he was riding on the brake beams. He was dirty enough to make the guess good. Hello, Fred!"—this to Dawson, who had at that moment let himself in through the deserted outer office. "We were just talking about your boss and wondering how he got here from Copah on two-three without my seeing him."

"He didn't come from Copah," said the draftsman briefly. "He came in with me from the west on the wrecking train. He was in Red Butte, and he had an engine bring him down to Silver Switch, where he caught us just as we were pulling out."

SHE DESCRIBED THE MURDER

Fortune Teller Saw Mabel Page Killed In Vision

SHE NOW CLAIMS REWARD

Others Who Were Connected With the Apprehension of Tucker Seek Recognition From Weston Board of Selectmen—Further Hearing Is Deemed Necessary to Determine Rightful Owner of $3200

Weston, Mass., Sept. 25.—The hearing by the selectmen of Weston over the payment of the reward offered for information as to the murderer of Mabel Page in 1904 resulted in no reward, and was postponed after two more claimants had appeared, raising the number to ten. It was for this murder that Charles L. Tucker was electrocuted in 1906, after two years of stormy trial and the sending of a mammoth petition to Governor Guild. The reward, with interest, amounts to $3200.

The more interesting new claimant was a woman, giving her name as Mary Jane Strumbert, and her occupation as a fortune teller, who declared that she saw the murder in a vision, that she had unravelled many murders and that she had placed the full description of the murderer in the hands of the present chief of police, Patrick J. McAuliffe, thus bringing about the arrest of Tucker.

Chief McAuliffe admitted he had talked with the woman for nearly a whole afternoon, but that he hadn't much faith in her remarks.

Chief of Police Mitchell of Newton declared he had received evidence that led to the arrest of Tucker, previous to anyone else, and that this information was imparted to J. H. Whitney, chief of the district police. Mitchell steadily refused to divulge the name of his informer.

The other late claimant was former Chief of Police Vittum of Weston, whose claim was based on the general work done by him on the case, and his action after the receipt of a letter from Arthur Woodward, another claimant, regarding the finding of the knife sheath under the seat on which Tucker had sat during a ride after the murder.

Arthur Woodward of Quincy said he had found a knife sheath under the seat of his fish cart on which Tucker had ridden on the day of the murder. He showed a receipt for the sheath, given by State Officer Whitney.

Frederick A. Tarbox of Biddeford, Me., chief of Newton police at the time of the murder, testified he had been given a "tip" on Tucker by a newspaper man named Bentley, and had sworn out a search warrant April 9, had searched Tucker's house and was present when Inspector McAuliffe of the Weston police found the broken knife in Tucker's coat pocket.

Inspector Fletcher of the Newton police declared he was first attracted to Tucker by the reputation he had in police circles.

Chief McAuliffe described his finding of the knife during the search of the Tucker house and his subsequent work on the case, basing his claim on the former.

William H. Harvey, a Waltham newspaper man, testified he interviewed Tucker on the night of April 3 and had written the first story connecting Tucker with the case. He caused Joseph B. Emerson, another claimant, to admit that Harvey had told him whom he (Emerson) suspected, and declared he had proved Tucker's whereabouts nearer the Page house on the day of the murder than had any other.

The selectmen refused to take definite action as to the reward, but declared they would soon hold another meeting to hear evidence from other claimants. The reward was originally $500, offered by the town, and $2000 by the citizens of Weston, to which about $700 has been added by the accrued interest of the seven years since it was offered. Each claimant will be present or represented at future hearings.

DIES AT THE AGE OF 112

Selectmen Vouch For West Stockbridge Spinster's Years

West Stockbridge, Mass., Sept. 25.—Miss Mary McCarthy died here, aged 112 years. For more than fifty years she has lived alone in a little house on the outskirts of the town, and during the greater part of that period she was a town charge.

She was a native of Ireland, and came to West Stockbridge longer ago than most of the older residents of the town can remember. The selectmen investigated her case and reached the conclusion that her claim of great age was correct. For the last few weeks she had been attended by a nurse furnished by the town.

MAKARIA LANDS SECOND GAME OF SERIES

Baseball Championship of the City Now Hangs In the Balance

Hard Fought Game On Saturday Before Big Crowd

After four unsuccessful attempts to puncture the effectiveness of "Charlie" Knight, "Rup" Ganzel, the hard hitting Makaria outfielder, son of the far famed "Charlie" Ganzel, the old Boston National league star, came to bat in the last half of the ninth inning last Saturday at Merrymount Park, and by a pretty single to the centre garden enabled Curtis to tally the run that sent Atlantic down to a 2 to 1 defeat. It was the second game of the series for the championship of the city and the anticipations of the Makaria followers were fully realized on this occasion, for they now have the satisfaction of realizing that a rubber game has been necessitated.

The game brought forth one of the largest crowds of the season, and everyone who was present was amply repaid for his attendance, for the contest was, without doubt, one of the closest and most exciting witnessed in local circles this year. Knight and Rice, the Ledger's choice of slab artists for the all star Quincy team, were the opposing twirlers and from start to finish they made the struggle for honors a most gruelling one.

Six hits were registered off Knight, yet two of these were of the scratchy order. "Charlie" himself carried off the honors for the Atlantics, for besides twirling effective ball, he secured the only hits credited to his team mates. "Phil" Rice was in rare form and while he allowed fewer hits than his opposing box artist, still when it is reflected that twelve of the Makaria swatters succumbed by the aerial route, it can safely be said that the twirling honors of the day were about even.

Manning's hit of no avail.

The only hit that was good for extra bases was made by "Bill" Manning, the former Quincy High star athlete. With one out, and one strike and one ball on him, "Bill" caught the next one squarely and sent into out into deep right field. He was just about to round third base, after Murphy had recovered the ball, when Umpire Cunniff informed him that unless he touched second base he would be declared out. Manning started back for second but it was too late as the ball reached there ahead of him, thereby depriving him of the credit of a three base hit.

Rice followed Manning in this same inning and was presented a pass. Curtis was hit by a pitched ball and bingle by Nicoll filled the sacks. With "Rup" Ganzel at the bat, smelting was expected, but the best he could do was to raise a pop fly to first base, thereby retiring his side.

Many star plays.

The game was a most interesting one and while it was not marked by any of the so called spectacular features, was yet replete with a first class article of base ball, furnished by players on both sides. The one play of the sensational variety was contributed by Manning who robbed Fitzgerald off a hit, by a one hand stop of a line drive at short. The ball was travelling at a fast rate, and it looked like a sure hit. Manning was awakened to the situation with full determination and by a remarkable burst of speed stuck out the gloved hand and caught the ball. A perfect throw to first base retired, the runner. The work of "Honey" Curtis in left fielder gave conclusive proof to all present that the doctor ball player is well qualified to captain an all star team of local players. Six put outs are in the column beside his name and both of the Makaria's runs were tallied by him.

"Ted" Keohane again added to the interest of the game, when he pulled down a ball well outside the foul line limit, while runing at an exceedingly fast rate of speed. In the second inning Murphy, the Atlantic's right fielder, and also a well known Boston College player, made one of the best throws to home plate ever executed on a local diamond. Manning who is one of the fastest base runners about, was on second base. Rice hit a nice one to right field and Manning attempted to score. Murphy had recovered the ball quickly and by an accurate throw to home, which went straight into Fitzgerald's hands, cut off a run on the Makaria side.

Eight Makaria men were left on bases during the game while five Atlantic men suffered a similar fate. Rice seemed to have the Atlantic batsmen at his mercy, and the players who were considered in the heavy hitting class were unable to show up to advantage against his effective work.

Makaria secured the first run of the game in the opening inning, on a base on balls a hit by pitcher, a stolen base, two strikeouts and a sacrifice hit. Atlantics secured their only run in the second, when an error, two stolen bases and a poor throw allowed Flynn to cross the plate.

The final game of the series will be played at Merrymount park next Saturday and if the contest is to be anything like that of last week it is safe to say that a record breaking crowd is sure to be in attendance. The summary:

SOUTH QUINCY WINS.

With Comolli on the mound, South Quincy was enabled to apply the "kalsomine" to the strong Winthrop Athletics at Winthrop last Saturday and managed to return home in victory after rolling up four runs. Nor was this all, for besides confining his opponents to the possession of nine goose eggs, the local recruit twirler did not allow his opponents a hit, and only four of the Winthrop players reached first base.

Nickerson, the Lowell New England league player, was in the receiving end for South Quincy and covered himself with glory, securing a single, a double and a triple. "West" Ganzel also did some heavy batting, while "Link" Elcock was robbed of a home run by failing to touch first base.

The fielding of Erickson featured the game. Manager Higgins announces that his team has finished the schedule for the present season, and also says that next season will show him in line with an exceptionally fast aggregation.

MAN INJURED IN FALL OFF HORSE

Albert E. Wendell, a fruit dealer, residing at 1051 Hancock street, was thrown from his horse about 5.30 this morning, and sustained a rather serious injury to the left side of his face. Wendell had just taken the horse from the stable on Hancock street and was riding the animal bareback at the time the accident occurred.

When in front of the First Church, the horse stumbled and Wendell was thrown to the ground. Officer Farrell happened to be in the vicinity at the time and after catching the horse, communicated for the police auto in order to send Wendell to the hospital. In the meantime Wendell had made his way to Dr. Garey's on Hancock street where his wounds were dressed. The patrol auto came, but Wendell was able to go to his home.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Coach Staff will put the members of the local high football team through signal practice this afternoon in preparation for the first game of the season, which takes place tomorrow afternoon at Merrymount park, against Cambridge Latin school. It is expected that a number of the candidates will be given an opportunity to perform in the initial contest although Captain Johnson says that no chances will be taken, that would tend in any way to prevent the local boys from annexing a victory.

The Cambridge boys have one of the best teams in interscholastic circles this year and the game tomorrow promises to be a most interesting one. The student body will turn out in large numbers and from the spirit that has already been stimulated, the season at Quincy High gives promise of being a most successful one.

A number of well known ball tossers connected with the Red Sox and St. Louis Browns, were entertained Sunday at the home of Frank Jeandreau on Manet avenue, Houghs Neck. All the regular members of both teams were present and a very enjoyable afternoon was spent. Mr. Jeandreau is one of the foremost advocates of the national pastime and is widely known through the interest he has displayed from time to time in the Boston team. He is one of the most popular fans at the American league grounds and has frequently entertained the Boston players.

In the early afternoon a dinner was partaken of and the rest of the time was given up to pleasure. Some went boating, while others preferred to enjoy themselves at the Jeandreau homestead. "Buck" O'Brien, the well known pitcher, easily took the lead in the entertaining line and was kept on the go all the time with his songs and jokes. "Tim" Murnane, the well known sporting writer, was also present and gave a fine talk on the history of the game. The members of both teams mingled together in a most enjoyable manner and all acknowledged the affair to have been about the best ever.

Manager Flynn of the Quincy A. A. football team issued the call for candidates last Saturday and light practice was indulged in at Merrymount Park. The team this year will be exceptionally fast and it is expected that the first game will be played against the Orients of East Boston, at the local field, on October seventh. A game had been arranged for next Saturday, but owing to the fact that the "rubber" game between the Atlantics and Makarias is to be played on that date, the game has been cancelled. The following reported for practice last Saturday: Wood, Morton, Tocci, Hunter, Boyle, Gerstel, Dennehy, Cummings, Savage, Rice, Bennett and Hendrickson.

George A. Sullivan, a well known local runner, was a member of the B. A. A. relay team that established a Canadian record for the one mile relay of 3 minutes, 24 3-5 seconds, at the Canadian championship games, held at Montreal, Canada, last Saturday. Sullivan was carded to compete in the 440 yard dash also, but it was deemed best to have him rest for the relay. The contestants in this race were the B. A. A., the Toronto C., Y. M. C. A. and the Montreal A. A. A. Sullivan ran third against his competitors and there was but a distance of about three feet between him and the Toronto star.

The old mark was beaten by four seconds. The local boy was widely congratulated on his return home yesterday for his wonderful performance.

S. H. Lawton, T. M. Claflin, J. S. Churchill and W. T. Kendall all members of the Wollaston Golf club, participated in the open handicap tournament held at the Allston Golf club links at Allston last Saturday. The summary of the first mentioned was 79, 6, 73, of the second, 76, 2, 74, of the third 85, 10, 75, and of the fourth 110, 24, and 86.

FRACAS AT HOUGHS NECK

Serious Stabbing Affair on Sunday Afternoon

ARRESTED MAN ON CAR

Shortly before 6 o'clock Sunday evening, word was received at the police station that there had been a stabbing affray at Houghs Neck. The auto patrol with a load of officers was sent down on the run to investigate. Unfortunately however, when the officers reached Palmer street, a plug blew out and while it was being repaired an auto containing Officer Thorne came up from Houghs Neck. Officer Thorne stated that the man had made his escape. From the discription given Inspector Goodhue recognized him as a man he had seen a few minutes before on a car bound for Quincy. Jumping into the auto, a rapid run was made to overtake it. The police came up to the car near the Coddington school and the officers jumping off arrested the man wanted. He gave his name as William Rogers of Hayward street, Norfolk Downs.

From what can be learned it is claimed that Rogers tried to gain admission into the house of John Chapman, on Sea street, against the protests of the latter. It is said that Mr. Chapman told Elmer Chapman to put the man out and it was while carrying out this order that he received three stab wounds about the shoulder. After doing the stabbing Rogers made his escape, but was captured as told above on an electric car. He was taken back to Houghs Neck where he was identified as the man who had done stabbing. Rogers was locked up for assault with a knife and Chapman was also locked up for drunkenness, after having his wounds dressed by City Physician Hallowell.

In court this morning the men were arraigned asd the case continued until Sept. 27.

PRIMARIES ARE HAVING TEST IN VOTING TODAY

Light Vote Looked For In Direct Nominations of State Officials

Many Voters Object To Declaring Party Designation

Boston, Sept. 26.—Massachusetts, as a whole, is today making her first trial of the new direct nominations law, which its advocates have claimed would wipe out all political machines, enable the people to name their own candidates and eliminate all chances of dickers and other evils which they assert have long characterized the convention system.

It looks as if the joint primaries will be lightly attended, although the machines of both parties have for several weeks been sending out strenuous appeals for a big turnout. Within a few days, however, it has begun to look as if those appeals might be having some effect. Yet, while a landslide may be coming, and while the voters may be preparing to avail themselves of their new privilege of nominating candidates directly, and may have laid their plans to go to the primaries in hordes, it does not look so today.

One reason for this is that many voters object to declaring their party designation, as the new law provides that they must. It looks as if thousands of voters all over the state would stay away from the primaries on that account, contenting themselves with going to the polls on election day and voting any sort of a mixed ticket they choose under the secrecy of the Australian ballot.

In the thirty-three cities and 351 towns in Massachusetts today Republican, Democratic and Democratic Progressive voters will select their candidates for all state and county offices, except the office of presidential elector, and will elect district members of state committees, members of ward and town committees, and delegates to state conventions of political parties.

Today's primaries are joint primaries. Democrats, Democratic Progressives and Republicans will go to the same polling places. Each voter will be enrolled with such party as he desires.

The triangular contest for the Republican gubernatorial nomination between Frothingham, Walker and White has awakened the most interest. Most of the politicians in both parties say that they believe that Frothingham will win. State Auditor White is being opposed by Herbert W. Burr. White looks like an easy winner. Secretary of the Commonwealth Langtry has as his opponent Representative Wood of Cambridge. Langtry is regarded as a sure winner.

On the Democratic side, Foss, as Democrat and Democratic Progressive, is being opposed for the gubernatorial nomination by Thomas L. Hisgen as Democrat. Foss is not worrying over the nomination.

The contests between Frank J. Donahue and Edward O. Shelton for the nomination for secretary of the commonwealth, and that between George W. Anderson and Joseph J. Leonard for the nomination for attorney general, are attracting considerable attention, and the result will be in doubt until the votes are counted.

Apart from the fight for the head of the Republican ticket, public interest centres largely in county, senatorial and representative fights, and it is to these that the friends of direct nominations are looking to pile up the votes at the primaries.

LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM

Politicians Expect Him to Win the Nomination

WANT MORTGAGE SET ASIDE.

Judge Hardy of the superior court dismissed the bill brought by Alice Pierce and Lillian Nott of Braintree, granddaughters of Moses Nott of Scituate, seeking to set aside a third mortgage for $800 upon his property in Scituate held by John S. Richardson and other trustees. The plaintiffs claimed that their grandfather was not of mental capacity to give the mortgage, and that it was given for an illegal consideration. He raised money to help a grandson who had been indicted on a charge of larceny.

BATTLE OF THE BALLOTS

Is Raging Today Throughout the State

LOCAL CONDITIONS

Today the great battle of ballots is being held. There does not seem to be much interest in the primaries, however, and this with the bad weather will doubtless prevent as large a vote as usual. Aside from the contest for state offices there are several local contests that should bring out a good vote.

RUSSELL A. WOOD

One of the principal local contests is that for the nomination of County Commissioner. For this nomination there are three candidates. John F. Merrill who is seeking renomination, Eugene H. Sprague and Louis E. Fly. Of course the vote of Quincy will not settle the nomination, for other towns in the county are having their say on the same question, although the Quincy vote will doubtless cut quite a large figure.

The other local contests are for the nomination for representative to the

ECHOES OF THE LAUNCH

Scheduled Program Carried Out To The Letter

THE BANQUETS

The launch of the steam collier Newton, Monday, was one of the most successful launchings ever held by the Fore River Co. Everything went off in schedule time just like clock work. There was not a hitch of any kind. The hour scheduled was 12.30 and it was just 12.28 when the Newton begun her slide down the ways.

The vessel will also enjoy the distinction of being doubly christened for two bottles of champaign were broken over her bow. One by Miss Whitley when she gave the vessel the name of Newton and one a half hour previous when Vice President Brown accidently broke a bottle of wine over the bow of the vessel. Mr. Brown was engaged in making the neck of the bottle fast to the tri colored ribbon when the high wind blew it against the side of the steel bow and the sparkling liquor ran down her sides.

It is not recorded what Mr. Brown said when the bottle was smashed but it was probably not the same words used later by Miss Whitley. A new bottle was easily obtained, however, so that there was no interruption in the ceremony.

The lunch which was served after the launch in the new boiler shop was most "home like." There was an entire absence of the foot ball tactics like rush that usually characterizes the average launch, for a course dinner was served the guests who were seated about the tables. The lunch over and then came the speaking. The addresses were unusually good and likewise well applauded.

President Bowles in introducing Mayor Hatfield of Newton referred to the fact that there were several more Newtons for which similar vessels could be well named. Not to be outdone Mayor Shea in his remarks suggested that the next vessel should be named for Quincy, as it was in Quincy that the Fore River plant was located and it was in Quincy where so many vessels have been built.

After the lunch President Richards of the New England Coal & Coke Co., told Mayor Shea that his suggestion was a good one and that the next vessel of this type built by the Fore River Co., would be given the same of Quincy. He did not say just when the vessel would be built but the success of this class already built for the coal carrying trade, makes it certain that the time is not far distant when a fifth steam collier bearing the name Quincy will be launched.

Another thing announced by President Bowles during the speaking was that in a few days entirely different sounds would be heard in the building from those today, and that while there would be more launchings at the Fore River at which the ladies would be present there would be no more launch lunches.

Miss Whitley the sponsor made a pretty picture as she occupied a seat of honor at the head table between President Bowles and Congressman Powers. She is a young lady of the brunette type. She wore a becoming white flannel suit with a black straw hat trimmed with lavender ribbon and feather to match.

President James L. Richards in his address said:

"It means much in these days, when one's time is so fully occupied, for

REGULAR MEETING OF CLAN MAC GREGOR

At the regular meeting of Clan MacGregor No. 5, O. S. C., held last evening, a great many plans were discussed whereby the organization could be better advertised than at present. The amusement committee have been authorized to draw up a plan which will be acted on by the Clan later.

The amusement committee were empowered to hire the "Tam O'Shanter" Concert Co. for the New Year's eve entertainment.

The trustees report showed that Clan MacGregor is in a stronger condition, numerically and financially than ever before; they also reported granting the use of the Clan lot at Mount Wollaston cemetery for the interment of a Scotchman who lately died in Quincy, poor and friendless.

It has been noted that the meetings have been largely attended of late, by the younger element in the Clan.

Town River Yacht Club Considers Many Important Matters

MANY PRESENT

A special meeting of the Town River Yacht club was held Monday evening in the boat house at foot of Edison park, owned by Charles Jones. Commodore Eugene R. Stone presided and practically the entire membership was in attendance. The meeting had been called for the express purpose of selecting a site, suitable for the establishment of club quarters.

After due deliberation it was decided to rake the Jones boat house and make it the clubhouse for the recently formed yachting association. Other minor matters were also considered, and steps were taken to have the house placed in the condition desired by the members. The matter of badges and emblems was left for the next meeting scheduled to take place in the newly acquired quarters next Friday.

The prospects for a flourishing organization are now exceptionally bright and it was determined last evening that no stone would be left unturned in order to enable the Quincy association to occupy a conspicuous position in yachting circles.

MRS. ANNIE E. FAXON.

Quincy friends and relatives of Mrs. Annie E. Faxon will be saddened to learn of her sudden death on Monday night at the home of her son John G. Faxon in Fitchburg. She had been spending the summer with him while her daughter Miss Florence R. Faxon, with whom she made her home was making a tour of Europe from which she returned about two weeks ago. Miss Faxon had taken apartments in Boston for the winter where she expected her mother to join her next week and the news of her death was a shock to her. She left for Fitchburg this morning.

Mrs. Faxon has always lived in Quincy being the daughter of the late John Randall and sister of Miss Edith Randall, Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold and Walter Randall. She is survived by four children, John G., Harold, Randall, and Florence R. Faxon. Funeral services will probably be held in Quincy.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The ramming of the steamship Alympic by a British war ship looks like a case of butting in.

The trusts having sowed the wind for twenty years, expect the harvest of whirlwind to be taken care of in about three months.

A new tramp comet is causing alarm, but we are positively opposed to encouraging vagrancy by giving any back door handouts.

Aviator Mamet is planning an aeroplane tour of the world. He should create considerable raw material for the kindling wood trust.

Mr. Taft should learn that a first essential of statesmanship is to claim your own election with absolute certainty a year in advance.

The dispatches state that Mr. Taft is the first president to set foot on the shores of Lake Superior, but as it was getting cold he refrained from going in wading.

The fact that the government is after the kindling wood trust does not justify Father in skipping off to the office without splitting up enough to start the cook stove.

The shoe machinery men have been indicted for alleged restraint of trade, but the political machinery men never having restrained any trades, are still allowed to remain at large.

Riots in Spain, Ireland and Norway, but in the United States we have peace, except that in various cities the militia march up and down the streets thirsting for blood and other drinks.

The brokers make one pot of money boosting the market on rumors that the government will let up on the trusts, and then make another on the fall that comes when Taft says again that they've got to be good.

The Canadians needn't think Uncle Sam is lying awake nights thinking how he can swipe some of their land. He wants no back yard where he has got to shovel a snow path out to the clothes reel six months in the year.

A sane Fourth has brought such good results that it is a pity some such idea could not be brought to bear on reckless boaters and bathers. A total of 328 drownings in New England the past summer is pretty heavy toll. It emphasizes the need of every one learning to swim or their staying on land.

JUDGE GROSSCUPS PHILOSOPHY.

The personality of Judge Peter S. Grosscup, who is likely to retire from the United States circuit bench, has been the subject of passionate debate. Particularly since he reversed the $29,000,000 Standard Oil fine, he has been denounced as the friend of corporations. Yet the "interests" fear him as a radical.

The fact of it is that Judge Grosscup has an original philosophy of his own. One may not agree with him, but certainly he has got his opinions from no particular newspaper, and nobody has hired his brains to plead a private cause.

According to Judge Grosscup, the trouble with the trusts is that we have failed to put the human interest motive at work. Only about forty years ago, he says, the property of the country consisted largely of land. Nearly every one was an original owner of some property that belonged to him, and was under his personal eye.

But now the farmer's boy has gone to the towns, and all he looks for is a better salary in some big corporation. Therefore he must prostrate his ambition and his conscience to the man higher up.

The trouble is not essentially, says the judge, that the wife pays more for her market basket, or that the man does not get the salary he wants. The trouble is that the average American is not being given more of his share in the achievements of his time.

Trying to correct the trusts by lawsuits, according to Judge Grosscup, is just like locking the stable door after the horse is stolen.

Judge Grosscup says that in Germany thirty years ago, there had developed scandals of corporation management much like ours. They were reformed, with the consequence that the modern Socialistic propaganda in Germany is not directed against the great corporations, but against an unjust landed proprietorship.

Judge Grosscup's remedy is to make every corporation get government authority for its existence, to secure government sanction for its capitalization, to submit its methods strictly to government supervision to have some share in the proprietorship, and to punish all violations of corporate trust.

THE COST OF LIVING.

In "The Pilgrim's Scrip" of The American Magazine for September there is an interesting investigation of the cost of living among workingmen. In part it says:—

"After a searching analysis of the family budgets of three hundred and sixteen workingmen's families living in New York, Dr. Chapin says: 'An income under $800 is not enough to permit the maintenance of a normal standard. Whether an income between $800 and $900 can be made to suffice is a question to which our data do not warrant a dogmatic answer. An income of $900 or over probably permits the maintenance of a normal standard, at least so far as the physical man is concerned.'

"Studies in Homestead, Buffalo and Baltimore confirm for these cities the conclusions for New York City. A family can, therefore, maintain efficiency on about $3 a day in the leading eastern cities.

"This statement is interesting, but it can never be truly effective until we learn how many men get $3 per day.

"The most reliable average wage data are furnished by Massachusetts and New Jersey, Michigan, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania. A study of these shows that the average wages of all employees range in the leading industries, from $450 to $600 per year—seldom rising above the latter figure except in industries like petroleum and malt liquors, for which considerable skill is required and in which males only are employed; seldom falling below except in industries like confectionery and paper boxes, which employ a majority of women, and in which the average annual earnings is less than $400.

"In view of all of the evidence, it is fair to say that the adult male wage workers in the industries of that section of the United States lying east of the Rockies and north of the Mason and Dixon line receive a total average annual wage of about $600 that this falls to $500 in some of the industries employing the largest numbers of persons, but rises to $700 or even to $750 in a few highly skilled industries. That the average annual earnings of adult females in the same area is about $350, with a very slight range, in the industries employing large numbers of adult females."

MUCH DAMAGE IN SHORT TIME

Eighteen-Minute Downpour of Rain In Greater Boston

A LOSS OF ABOUT $100,000

Boston, Sept. 26.—An eighteen-minute thunder storm with a downpour of .82 inch, centering in Boston, last night caused one death, inundated and imperilled scores of structures, started many washouts, flooded cellars, brought down telegraph poles, put fire and telephone services out of commission, set fires and wrought devastation estimated to have done damage at close to $100,000. The bulk of the damage was wrought in Greater Boston.

Sprinting across railroad tracks seeking shelter was fatal to Christian Misner, aged 73, on the Boston and Maine tracks in Cambridge. He was struck by an inbound train and thrown a distance of forty feet. By the time he reached a hospital he was dead.

Three large structures in Forest Hills seemed likely to collapse at any moment as a veritable deluge poured down from surrounding hillsides. The damage there alone was estimated at $50,000. The district north of Boston was hard hit, lightning setting fires in Medford and Winchester.

The sewer systems in Greater Boston were unable to cope with the storm and were paralyzed after four or five minutes of the deluge. Catchbasins were stopped up in lowlands, causing pools to rise to heights of three, four and five feet. The unusually high tide hampering the passage of the water out to sea, halted the streams in the sewers and left no outlets.

The storm came at a time when half of Boston was in motion, it being shortly after general closing time. The Elevated trains stopped running for thirty-five minutes. Cars were stalled by great beds of sand.

The Sullivan square terminal seethed with humanity until late in the evening, owing to washouts at the base of the inclines that prevented the cars from passing. At the Forest Hills terminal another crowd anxious to get home waited hour after hour. No such holdups of crowds at Elevated terminals have occurred for years.

It was from 5:52 to 6:10 that the .82 inch fell. After that it rained intermittently until 7:55, the total rainfall reaching 1.05 inches. During the evening the storm passed off into Massachusetts bay.

The storm followed temperature in the 80s and was in part produced by it. A drop of only 7 degrees was all it produced. A heavy wind, exceeding twenty-five miles an hour, blew just preceding the storm.

GIVES BAIL OF $10,000

Storrow Appears to Answer to United Shoe Machinery Indictment

Boston, Sept. 26.—James J. Storrow appeared before Judge Dodge in the United States circuit court and gave $10,000 bail for his appearance in court later to answer against the indictment recently returned against him for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust act in connection with the United Shoe Machinery company.

The indictment charges him with being a party to the formation of the United Shoe Machinery company, which the government charges is an unlawful combination in restraint of trade. He is also charged with being active in the management and control of the company since its inception.

LAUNCHING

business men to take the time necessary to attend a launching, and I want to assure you all, especially you men from the southern coal fields who have come so far, that we appreciate the spirit which prompted you to come, and I hope during your stay with us you will have seen some things that in a measure will pay you for coming.

"I want to confess to you that at the launching of the Everett, which took place in July, 1907, I was not feeling particularly cheerful, not alone on account of your calling upon me to say something on that occasion, but because the question uppermost in my mind was whether the investment of half a million dollars in a new type of boat, such as the Everett, could be made to pay.

"While my immediate business associates and I were sanguine of the ultimate success, some of us, at least, from time to time questioned whether we were right or some of those who had been in the coal business many years longer than we, and who thought we were making a great mistake in building these large boats, which they said would prove to be 'white elephants' on our hands.

"I am pleased to say to you today that our most sanguine expectations have been realized. That others as well as ourselves have found that the type of boat for carrying coal like the Everett, of which the Newton is practically a duplicate, is a success, is demonstrated by the fact that since the Everett was launched, six other ships of like design have been built, three of which have been constructed by others than ourselves.

"In order to utilize a ship of this character and make it pay, one must have satisfactory terminals for the loading and discharging of coal. We have a very large amount of money invested in our terminal at Everett, where we have large pockets and ground storage, traveling bridge, more than 20 miles of railroad track connecting with the steam railroads and 27 feet of water at low tide.

"At the launching of the Everett four years ago, in referring to our Everett terminal, I said we expected to be able to unload one of these ships, carrying over 7000 tons, in not more than 10 hours. At our Everett tremisal we now discharge two of these boats at one time, and our record for unloading one of them is 7 hours and 40 minutes, made March 30 of this year.

"I also said at the launching of the Everett, 'We expect to load these ships in from five to six hours.' The record for loading is five hours, made at Curtis bay on Sept. 21, 1909.

"This type of ship would be unsuccessful unless it could be both loaded and unloaded quickly, for the expense involving interest and depreciation, is more than $400 per day per boat.

"You railroad men now know the great value of these boats to railroad transportation, because of the regularity of the service, and all consumers of coal in this section must realize their value, for they have not only been the means of settling the demurrage question to a large extent, but have equalized and lowered water freights materially, and we do not now see water freights $1 and over during winter months as we did just preceding the advent of these boats.

For the owners, the New England coal and coke company, these ships, with the terminals mentioned, enabled them during the first year of their existence to do the largest coal business is New England, and for the year ending June 30, 1911, the second year of their existence, the New England coal and coke company sold 1,972,000 tons in addition to the sales made by the Federal coal and coke company, the stock of which company is owned by the New England coal and coke company, and which company is now selling at the rate of about 500,000 tons per year.

"The contract for the building of the Newton was let to the Fore River company after competitive bids were received from other shipbuilders, and I think it is a credit to the management of the Fore River company that it is able to secure the class of work it has after the fiercest kind of competition.

"I think we shall all agree that this community is to be congratulated upon having an enterprise located here like the Fore River shipbuilding company, a vast enterprise, employing millions of dollars of capital and giving employment to thousands of high-grade mechanics. Such concerns mean much to any community, but to none more than ours."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

RIGHT WILL PREVAIL.

Editors of Ledger:

On Moscow street, Atlantic all is peace and quiet, and all are very grateful to Officer Goodhue for taking the rooster away. The citizens think however (that contrary to reports that have been circulated around by friends of "poor blathers,") that a true version should be given to the general public which has been interested in the affair. The neighbors went to the owner of the bird in an honorable way, asking if it could not be shut up securely during the midnight and early hours of the morning. Other owners of roosters have done so out of consideration of neighbors. When this was refused the party offered money, but the owner said "he would not give up the rooster for $500. If the neighbors can't sleep, let them get up and walk." It was at this time, it was decided to petition the Board of Health and finally the Mayor. The result has been highly satisfactory; the rooster has been given up and no one had to hand over the $500 either.

AT THE BROCKTON FAIR.

One of the big attractions at the Brockton Fair this Fall will be some real hair raising Chariot and Roman Standing Races. These sports of Ancient Rome will be featured as they never have been in this country before. We have all seen Chariot Races put on by some circus, where the finishes have been drawn fine purposely just to give a race and catch the crowd, but the Chariot and Roman Standing Races that will be held at the Brockton Fair, are for blood and open to the World, and the purses offered are such as should prove attractive to horsemen all over the country.

Entries enough have already been guaranteed to assure the races, and it will surely be some sight when these four horses abreast chariots get into action on the Brockton Fair Track.

This startling feature, with the added attraction of Harry N. Atwood and Lincoln Beachey, the world known aviators, would seem to make up a whole show. However, it is only a small part of the great Brockton Fair, October 3, 4, 5, 6.

general court. On the Republican side there are contests in both districts. In the fifth district the candidates are

COUNCILMAN WILLIAM J. LESLIE

George A. Bolster and Walter E. Piper, while in the sixth district Nathan G. Nickerson and William J. Leslie are seeking the nomination. Which two of the four candidates will win is an open question. Each feels confident that he will be the chosen leader.

On the Democratic ticket there is a contest on the sixth district for the nomination for representative between John R. Duggan and John J. McDevitt. Mr. McDevitt has been employed in Portland, Me., all summer and did not return to Quincy until Sunday night. Since then however he has been on the war path and has held rallies in each of the three wards of the district. The result here is also in doubt.

JOHN F. MERRILL

The voter who attends the caucus today has his choice of being enrolled in either of the three parties, for three tickets have been prepared, Democratic, Democratic Progressive and Republican. To vote the full ticket at least fifteen x will be necessary. In the case of ward committees and in delegates to the state convention where there is no contest the voter instead of marking his x against every nome may mark a x in a little circle at the head of the delegation which means that it counts one for each man.

WALTER E. PIPER

On the Republican tickets there are contests for every office except that of Lieut. Governor, Senator, Treasurer, Attorney General, Registrar of Deeds, Clerk of Court, state delegates and ward committees.

The contests on the Democratic ticket are few and far between, the only contest being for Governor, Secretary, Attorney General, and the Representatives. In wards One, Three, Four, Five and Six, there are no delegates to the state convention and in several of the wards no ward committee has been named.

GEORGE A. BOLSTER

On the Democratic Progressive ticket there are no candidates named for Attorney General, Councillor, Senator, Representative, County Commissioner, Registrar of Deeds, Clerk of Courts, State convention or ward committees.

At today's caucuses the election officers of precinct one in each ward will serve.

Undersigned feels obliged to answer Mr. Sprague's question regarding Kerosene Oil, Mr. Merrill never did O. K. any bill for Kerosene sold by me at price stated. I did, however, sell the Commission one barrel of Kerosene Oil at 8 1-2 cents per gallon.

A I also sold these people quite a lot of Cement, I wish to state that it was delivered and sold in paper bags, and these are not returnable.

This is in defense of my business integrity.

FLURRY IN STOCK MARKET

Investors Uneasy Over Enforcement of the Anti-Trust Law

New York, Sept. 26.—A violent drop in prices on the stock exchange followed another outburst of selling by holders of stock in all parts of this country and Europe. The drop was more general and more precipitate than in any previous time during the decline of the last two months.

United States Steel, which was the storm centre of last week's movement, fell 4⅝ to 51⅞; Reading declined 5 points, Union Pacific 6 points, St. Paul 4 points and Southern and Canadian Pacific fell 3 points. Sales in the first two hours of trading amounted to 621,000 shares.

Uneasiness of investors concerning the enforcement of the anti-trust law was again given generally in Wall street as an explanation of the movement.

FEMININE FANCIES

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day recipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

Cut them and paste in scrap book for reference.

THE UP-TO-DATE KITCHEN.

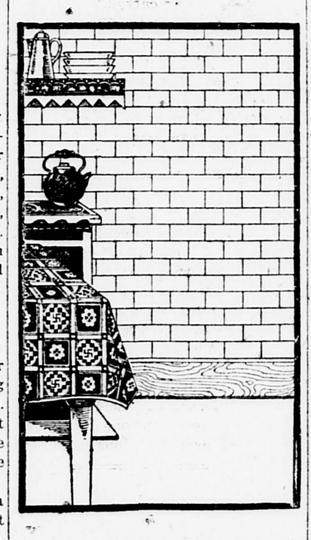

The up-to-date kitchen is as complete and perfect in its appointments as the laboratory of a chemist, and contrasts in almost every particular with what was considered desirable for this type of room a generation ago. Take the matter of space, the old idea was to have a very large room, the modern idea is to have it as compact as consistent with complete fittings, and sanitary arrangement.

THE "KITCHENETTE."

The "Kitchenette," which is getting to be a notable feature of city apartments, is the last word of what can be accomplished in the direction of compact convenience. This is simply a closet or alcove easily shut off from the living room when not in use, that contains every needed appliance for the cooking for a small family, in a space hardly larger than was occupied by an old time kitchen table. It contains a gas or electric stove, sometimes both, running hot and cold water, and a porcelain sink of ample depth. A sliding door at one end gives access to the dumbwaiter that carries away waste and brings up supplies from grocer or butcher while at the opposite end of the Kitchenette is a well arranged refrigerator, cooled by coils of pipes through which frozen brine constantly circulates, preserving an even low temperature more effective than that obtained with ice in the ordinary chest.

SANITARY FITMENTS.

The question of ventilation has been satisfactorily solved. In old time kitchens this depended almost wholly upon the opening of doors and windows and was necessarily for the most part, left to the discretion of the cook, with the result that cooking odors were apt to greet one in the entrance hall of even the most pretentious homes. In modern construction shafts and flues are arranged to automatically carry off cooking odors, and to keep the air pure and sweet as sanitation demands in this centre that ministers to the health of the whole family.

NO LURKING CORNERS.

No cracks or corners are permitted to conceal dirt or lurking germs. Walls and floors are perfectly joined and finished with glazed porcelain tiles, or with the less expensive but equally sanitary substitute, the modern washable wall covering in pretty glazed tile patterns of Delft blue and white, green and white or other colorings. This makes a finish washable as a china dish and as easily kept clean and fresh. Hard Georgia pine, linoleum or oil-cloth is used for floors and the woodwork in doors and window frames is finished in enamelled paint or transparent varnish.

RANGE FITTINGS.

Ranges that combine coal and gas compartments are often used and vary in size according to the size of the kitchen and the demands made upon them. Considerable use is made of the glass so much employed in business buildings that refracts the light, and softens and increases the illumination. The sink is invariably next to the range and has a large window on the left side. Where plain glass is used curtains of dimity or muslin easily laundered are employed.

"Make the cook proud of her kitchen," says a well-known teacher of domestic science "and she will care for it properly and be reluctant to leave it for less attractive surroundings." Where the owner does the cooking it is surely worth while to have this room pretty, convenient, and easy to care for, for as every woman realizes "The kitchen is the very heart of the house."

CONTEST WILL BE INTERESTING

Of all the political contests being closely watched today, there is undoubtedly none that is eliciting greater anxiety, especially from a local standpoint, than that between Assistant Assessor John Duggan and ex-Councilman John J. McDevitt for the Democratic nomination for representative from the Sixth Norfolk district. Friends of both candidates have been working assiduously the past few days, and whenever the upholders of both men get together, there are always sure to ensue some exciting discussions.

Friends of Duggan claim that McDevitt should not have run this year, since he was defeated last year for the same honors. Duggan's supporters assert that the Ward Six candidate has scores of friends, a number of whom are enrolled in the Republican party, and that if he secured the nomination, his election would be almost inevitable. Duggan himself is confident of victory. He claims he will carry Wards Five and Six and obtain an even break in Ward Four with his opponent. He will concede McDevitt by a mere handful of votes in the Atlantic ward.

On the other hand McDevitt's admirers think that he is entitled to the Democratic nomination, owing to the remarkable showing which he made last year against Representative Langeller, who was out then for his third time and who was considered one of the best legislators on Beacon Hill.

The friends of McDevitt claim that the ex-Councilman will do the same thing to Duggan as he did to ex-Representative Coombs last year. McDevitt himself makes no boasts concerning the outcome, but his friends say that if Duggan gets twenty-five votes in West Quincy, he will be doing well.

Some of McDevitt's friends allege that Duggan being a city official is the administration candidate, but Duggan's supporters say that such an assertion carries no weight.

The result of the contest is being keenly watched and is certainly proving most exciting.

WARSHIP TORN TO FRAGMENTS

More Than Three Hundred Lives Lost on Liberte

MEN LOST FROM OTHER SHIPS

Fire In Ammunition Hold of French Vessel Reaches Powder Magazines, Hurling Men High In Air as Culminating Explosion Occurs—Disaster Occurs In Roadstead Off Toulon, Where Great Naval Display Was Recently Witnessed by President and Other Government Officials

Toulon, France, Sept. 26.—An appalling naval disaster attended with enormous loss of life occurred when the battleship Liberte blew up in this harbor.

The death loss is officially estimated at 303 men. The killed include officers and men of the Liberte, and also a large number of those from nearby warships.

The first alarm of fire was followed by four successive explosions of increasing intensity as the fire neared the powder magazines, when at last a deafening explosion literally tore the great warship to pieces and sent her to the bottom a mass of twisted wreckage.

The force of the explosion was so great that huge fissures were opened in the steel armor and frame work of the warship. A piece of armor plate was hurled against the cruiser Republique with great force, damaging her plates.

On the first explosion the men rushed from their quarters and a hundred or more sought safety in plunging overboard. But the great body of men, officers and crew, remained on the ship and were hurled high in the air or in the water as the culminating explosion tore the ship into fragments.

Several small boats which had gone from the other warships to the aid of the Liberte sank when the final explosion occurred. Twenty men were killed and fifty injured on board the Democrati and there were fatalities on the Verite and Republique. The latter was obliged to dock hastily.

At the first explosion the men below, suddenly awakened, tumbled from the cots, and, rushing to the sides of the vessel, were throwing themselves overboard when an order calling them to their stations rang out and held to their deaths those who had not already escaped.

Other Vessels to the Rescue

Nearly every vessel of the squadron lost some men from the parties sent to the aid of the burning battleship. The Verite was moored nearest, being about 225 yards from the Liberte. Eight of the Verite's men were wounded by flying fragments blown from the Liberte or by pieces of bursting shells.

The decks of the Verite were crowded with men who were watching the frightful spectacle and who were targets for the falling debris.

With the last convulsion of the mighty sea fighter, men and wreckage were tossed high in the air and a shower of human limbs, bits of flesh, articles of clothing, pieces of armor plate and splinters of wood fell upon the decks of the Verite and upon the wide circle of the men-of-war and small boats standing by.

There were many vessels in the harbor at the time, including a number of warships, which have been maneuvering here since the first of the month. The first explosion brought a quick response from the nearby men-of-war and from the shore. Dozens of boats put off and picked up survivors and floating bodies.

The fire was discovered at 5 o'clock. At first it did not appear to be serious, but it gained a quick advantage over the squad of sailors sent to extinguish it. The ammunition holds had not been flooded on account of the apparently trifling nature of the blaze.

The force of the explosions was terrific. They shook the vessel fore and aft, each one seeming stronger than that preceding, opening up great fissures in the armor and framework of the vessel.

Anchored In Roadstead

The Liberte was anchored in the roadstead, where she has been since the review of the fleet by President Fallieres on Sept. 4, when the French national executive gazed upon the most powerful fleet that France has ever assembled. Premier Caillaux and his associates in the cabinet, together with many senators and deputies, were present.

Particular significance was attached to the display, as it was made on the very day that France communicated to Germany the terms upon which the republic offered a settlement of the Moroccan dispute with Germany. Formed in two perfect alignments were eighteen battleships, six of them of the "all big gun" type; nine armored cruisers, twenty-five torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers. The fleet was manned by 1700 officers and 26,907 men.

The minister of marine, M. Delcasse, received the members of the press yesterday afternoon and talked with them about the catastrophe.

In considering the possible causes of the explosion, M. Delcasse excluded that of spontaneous combustion of powder, since it had been regularly renewed and the magazines were kept at a moderate temperature.

The German ambassador to France, Her von Schoen, was the first to call at the foreign office and convey the condolences of his government and himself, and Emperor William was the first ruler to send a telegram of sympathy to President Fallieres.

The American ambassador, Mr. Bacon, called at the foreign office and expressed the sympathy of Washington and himself.

Captain Jaures of the Liberte was not on board at the time of the accident, being on shore on official duties. He is a brother of Deputy Juares, the Socialist leader.

One unconfirmed report following the disaster was that the fire had originated from a short circuit in the electrical apparatus in the forward part of the vessel.

The Liberte's regular complement was 795 officers and men. She cost $8,262,180 to build. With the Verite and Justice she represented France in the United States during the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

MANY LOOMS ARE IDLE

Curtailment Continues to Be Heavy In Fall River Mills

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 26.—The curtailment by the mills here continued heavy last week, though fewer mills were on short running time than has been the rule lately. The number of idle looms in plants operating has been little reduced as yet.

Manufacturers do not consider that sufficient improvement has yet been shown in the market to warrant their starting up the looms and other machinery that have been kept in idleness for many months because they could not be operated profitably.

The Fall River Iron Works company is to continue idle this week.

RADICAL CHANGES NOT CONTEMPLATED

No Wholesale Discharges by Boston and Maine Railroad

Boston, Sept. 26.—General Superintendent Lee of the Boston and Maine railroad system declared last night that the officials of the road do not intend to discharge any large number of employes nor take off any trains other than those that are dispensed with every year at the end of the summer season.

It had been reported that the road was to lay off hundreds of employes and make many other radical changes in an effort to effect a wholesale retrenchment. It had also been stated that the passenger receipts had fallen off greatly during the summer months as compared with other years.

Superintendent Lee said that he had heard of no great decrease in the road's earnings nor would several of the other officials admit they knew of any.

MINERS ENTOMBED

Five Hundred Penned In by Fire Finally Saved From Death

Canonsburg, Pa. Sept. 26.—Five hundred coal miners were entombed in the Hazel mine of the Pittsburg and Buffalo Coal company near here by fire and were later rescued from what seemed sure death.

The flames broke out in the main shaft shortly after 11 o'clock, following an explosion. At noon mine officials began to have fears for the worst. The fire gained rapid headway, despite the streams of water which were poured into the pit mouth. Scenes of disorder followed the outbreak of the fire.

The families of the entombed miners gathered at the mouth of the shaft, screaming and wringing their hands in anguish until the men had all been rescued.

CONSTITUTION DELAYED

Law Providing For Vote on New One In Indiana Illegal

Indianapolis, Sept. 26.—The act of the Indiana general assembly of 1911 proposing a new state constitution to be voted on by the people was held to be unconstitutional and void by Judge Remster of the circuit court of this county. The case will be appealed to the Indiana supreme court.

The court holds that the legislative act is unconstitutional because a new constitution must be framed by a constitutional convention and may not originate in the legislature.

The proposed constitution has been bitterly opposed by leaders of the Republican party of the state. Most of the instrument was prepared by Governor Marshall.

WORLD'S SERIES BIGGEST EVER

Great Fight In Both Leagues This Season Awakens Interest.

MACK AND M'GRAW MAY CLASH

In 1905 New York Giants' Leader Scored Easily Over the American League Champions, but It Will Be Different Now.

By TOMMY CLARK.

One baseball prediction can be safely ventured at this time, and that is the world's series of 1911 will surpass in interest any ever played previously. The terrific fights in both big league baseball organizations for the championship have keyed the "fans" up to a sixty horsepower pitch of excitement, and the series of games for the world's title is bound to reap the benefits.

With the New York Giants having a splendid chance to win the National league pennant and the Athletics having the American league bunting almost won, the world's series of 1911 may be a repetition of the contests of 1905, when the New Yorkers and Athletics of Philadelphia had it out. On that occasion the Giants won four of the five games from the Mack men.

There are many who believe the Athletics would defeat the Giants if they again meet this fall. It seems that John McGraw is in command of a team inferior to the one he owned six years ago. On the other hand, the Athletics are generally believed to be stronger than the team that represented the American league in the world's series of 1905.

But few of the men who engaged in the 1905 series would be seen in action this year. None of the Giants, save the pitchers and Arthur Devlin, who is no longer a regular of McGraw's team, are now members of the New York team. Of the old Athletics, Briscoe, Lord, Danny Murphy, Topsy Hartsel, Harry Davis and some of the pitchers remain. Davis and Hartsel are no longer regulars.

Another Giants-Athletic series would bring together those famous veterans, Christopher Mathewson and Chief Charles Bender. They had it out in the former series, Matty winning, 2-0, although Bender had the better of the hit argument, 6-5. Incidentally Bender won the only game of the series from the Giants, defeating Joe McGinnity and Leon Ames, 3-0.

Today McGraw has no man like Roger Bresnahan to do his catching. His outfield will probably hit as hard and is as fast as the old Browne-Mertes-Donlin combination, but the infield is not as air tight. Matty is still pitching winning ball, but is hardly the same wizard that he was six years ago. However, instead of McGinnity the Giants now have Marquard as the next best bet to Big Six.

Bender is probably as good today as he was when he last faced the Giants. Eddie Plank, although a veteran now, still seems to have his old cunning. A two hit game against the Browns recently shows that he is far from through as a big leaguer. Then Mack has John Coombs, Harry Morgan and a flock of juveniles to fall back on.

For the last two seasons the Athletics have figured as real pennant contenders. They won last season and will probably repeat this year.

While Chief Bender was Mack's main reliance last season, the Indian received valuable aid from John Coombs, the Maine iron man, but the New Englander has not had such a successful campaign this season. However, it is probable that he is being nursed along by the wise Cornelius and will do his real work when the world's series battling is on.

But when Coombs fell down Eddie Plank came to life again. He did his share of the work last season, but the real work was left to Bender and Coombs. This season, though, Plank is proving a great aid to the Philadelphians.

ITALY READY TO MOVE

Giving Turkey Further Chance to Reply Concerning Tripoli

Paris, Sept. 26.—A dispatch from Palermo to The Temps says that the Italian fleet, consisting of the battleships Napoli, Garibaldi and Roma, with the armored cruisers and other ships reported ready to move against Tripoli, still remain in the harbor of Palermo.

It has been understood that the fleet had left Syracuse for Tripoli, but its detention at Palermo appears to be the result of a decision on the part of the Italian government to await Turkey's final determination concerning a lease of Tripoli.

The Italian government is moving rapidly and with determination in the matter of an Italian protectorate over Tripoli. Its plans are no longer concealed.

Trackless Trains.

Trackless trains are being experimented with in Yorkshire, England. It is anticipated that the low capital expenditure, which is 20 per cent less than that of a tramway system, will enable many districts not served at present to obtain an efficient service for passenger and freight traffic at a moderate cost.

WITH RAZOR AND KNIFE

Two Young Men Fight Duel on an Elevated Station Platform

Boston, Sept. 26.—Before the startled gaze of scores of panic-stricken men and women, two young men fought a duel with razor and knife on the platform at the Northampton street "L" station.

A fatal ending was prevented only by the quick work of Patrolman Oakes, who rushed up the stairs and grabbed one of the men as he apparently was about to cut the throat of his assailant, who was lying helpless on the platform.

Antonio Pisco, 22, and Augustane Rogers, 24, are the men who were locked up, after having scores of stitches taken in their wounds at the City hospital, charged with assault and battetry on each other with dangerous weapons.

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills,

For Quincy kidney sufferers.

Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Quincy people who have been cured to stay cured.

Mrs. G. McDonald, 276 Water street, Quincy, Mass., says: "When I used Doan's Kidney Pills in 1908 the results were so satisfactory that I publicly recommended the remedy. That statement still holds good. I felt all out of sorts for at least six months and was at a loss to know what ailed me. I had but little energy to attend to my housework and my back was painful and weak. An acquaintance hear me complain and suggested that probably my kidneys were disordered, advising me to take Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so, getting them at Cox's Drug Store, and they soon fixed me up in good shape, making me feel like an entirely different person."

vs.
Loretta B. Crane, Libellant,
Libel for Divorce.

Respectfully represents Loretta B. Crane of Quincy in our County of Norfolk that she was lawfully married to said Herbert N. Crane, recently of said Quincy, now of parts unknown to your libellant in said Quincy, on the eighth day of June A. D. 1908, that they continued to live in said Quincy ever since; that one child has been born to your libellant and libellee, Herbert N. Crane, a minor. That your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations but the said Herbert N. Crane being wholly regardless of the same and being of sufficient ability grossly, wantonly and cruelly refused and neglected to provide suitable maintenance for your libellant: that immediately after said marriage said libellee utterly deserted your libellant, said utter desertion continuing for more than three years next prior to the filing of this libel. Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Herbert N. Crane and that the libellant may have the care and custody of said minor child free from any interference on the part of the libellee. Dated this twenty-eighth day of August A. D. 1911.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By

FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Lidgerwood's watchfulness saves his train. The passenger train is wrecked, with loss of life. Lidgerwood suspects Flemister and Hallock.

Lidgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Lidgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

Lidgerwood gets a warrant for the arrest of Hallock, charged with murder. Bart attacks Lidgerwood, and Judson again arrests him. Eleanor refuses to leave before the strike begins.

Lidgerwood's friends and Eleanor's party arm themselves against the strikers. Gridley returns from a mysterious absence. Hallock has disappeared.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE TERROR.

ENGINEER JOHN JUDSON, disappearing at the moment when the superintendent had sent him back to bully Schleisinger into appointing him constable from the ken of those who were most anxious to hear from him, was late in reporting. But when he finally climbed the stair of the Crow's Nest to tap at Lidgerwood's door he brought the first authentic news from the camp of the enemy.

When McCloskey had come at a push of the call button Lidgerwood snapped the night latch on the corridor door.

"Let us have it, Judson," he said when the trainmaster had dragged his chair into the circle of light described by the green cone shade of the desk lamp. "We have been wondering what had become of you."

Summarized, Judson's story was the report of an intelligent scout. Since he was classed with the discharged men he had been able to find out some of the enemy's moves in the game of coercion. The strikers had transferred their headquarters from the Celestial to Cat Biggs' place, where the committees, jealously safeguarded, were now sitting "in permanence" in the back room.

From the barroom talk Judson had gathered that the strikers knew nothing as yet of McCloskey's plan to keep the trains moving and the wires alive; hence unless the free flowing whisky should precipitate matters there would probably be no open outbreak before midnight. As an offset to this, however, the engineer had overheard enough to convince him that the Copah wire had been tapped; that Dix, the day operator, had been either bribed or intimidated and was now under guard at the strikers' headquarters and that some important message had been intercepted which was, in Judson's phrase, "raising sand" in the camp of the disaffected. This recurrence of the mysterious message, of which no trace could be found in the headquarters record, opened a fresh field of discussion, and it was McCloskey who put his finger upon the only plausible conclusion.

"It is Hallock again," he rasped. "He is the only man who could have used the private code. Dix probably picked out the cipher. He's got a weakness for such things. Hallock's carrying double. He has fixed up some trouble making message or faked one and signed your name to it and then schemed to let it leak out through Dix."

"It's making the trouble, all right," was Judson's comment. "When I left Biggs' a few minutes ago Tryon was calling for volunteers to come down here and steal an engine. From what he said I took it they were aimin' to go over into the desert to tear up the track and stop somebody or something coming this way from Copah, all on account of that make believe message that you didn't send."

Thus far Judson's report had dealt with facts. But there were other things deducible. He insisted that the strength of the insurrection did not lie in the dissatisfied employees of the Red Butte Western or even in the ex-employees; it was rather in the lawless element of the town, which lived and fattened upon the earnings of the railroad men. Moreover, it was certain that some one high in authority in the railroad service was furnishing the brains. There was a chief to whom all the malcontents deferred and who figured in the barroom talk as the "boss" or the "big boss."

"And that same 'big boss' is sitting up yonder in Cat Biggs' back room right now givin' his orders and tellin' 'em what to do," was Judson's crowning guess, and, since Hallock had not been visible since the early afternoon, for the three men sitting under the superintendent's desk lamp Judson's inference stood as a fact assured. It was Hallock who had fomented the trouble; it was Hallock who was now directing it.

The trainmaster returned to his post in the wire office, and Judson was sent back to Biggs' to renew his search for the hidden ringleader. Judson's report was grave enough, but it brought a good hope that the crucial moment might be postponed until many of the men would be too far gone in liquor to take any active part. Lidgerwood took the precautions made advisable by Tryon's threat to steal an engine, sending word to Benson to double his guards on the locomotives in the yard and to Dawson to block the turntable so that none might be taken from the roundhouse.

Afterward he went out to look over the field in person. Everything was quiet, almost suspiciously so. Gridley was found alone in his office at the shops smoking a cigar, with his chair tilted to a comfortable angle and his feet on the desk. His guards, he said, were posted in and around the shops, and he hoped they were not asleep. Thus far there had been little enough to keep them awake.

Lidgerwood, passing out through the door opening upon the electric lighted yard, surprised a man in the act of turning the knob to enter. It was the merest incident, and he would not have remarked it if the door, closing behind Gridley's visitor, had not bisected a violent outburst of profanity, vocalizing itself in the harsh tones of the master mechanic, as thus: "You chuckle headed fool! Haven't you any better sense than to come"—With the impact of a blow Lidgerwood recognized the "chuckle headed fool" of Gridley's malediction was Richard Rumford, the "killer's" younger brother.

Lidgerwood said nothing of this incident to Dawson, whom he found patrolling the roundhouse. Here, as at the shops and in the yard, everything was quiet and orderly. The crews for the three sections of the midnight freight were all out, guarding their trains and engines, and Dawson had only Bradford and the roundhouse night men for company.

"Nothing stirring, Fred?" inquired the superintendent.

"Less than nothing. It's almost too quiet," was the rober reply, and then: "I see you haven't sent the Nadia out. Wouldn't it be a good scheme to get a couple of buckboards and have the women and Judge Holcombe driven to our place on the mesa? The trouble, when it comes, will come this way."

Lidgerwood shook his head.

"My stake in the Nadia is precisely the same size as yours, Fred, and I don't want to risk the buckboard business. We'll do a better thing than that if we have to let the president's party make a run for it. Get your smartest passenger flier out on the table, head it east, and when I send for it rush it over to couple on the Nadia, with Williams for engineer. Has Benson had any trouble in the yard?"

"There has been nobody to make any. Tryon came down a few minutes ago considerably more than half seas over and said he was ready to take his engine and the first section of the east bound midnight, which would have been his regular run. But he went back uptown peaceably when Benson told him he was down and out."

Lidgerwood did not extend his round to include Benson's post at the yard office, which was below the coal chutes. Instead, he went over to the Nadia, thinking pointedly of the two added mysteries—the fact that Gridley had told a deliberate lie to account for his appearance in Angels and the other and more recent fact that the master mechanic was conferring with Rufford's brother, who was not and never had been in his department.

TO FIND JOBS FOR WOMEN.

College Graduates Will Take Up Economic Problem.

NEW WORK WILL START SOON.

Intercollegiate Bureau of Occupations Plans to Help All Specially Equipped Women Whether or Not They Hold College Degrees.

A new organization is to enter the field of practical economics to help women who want to work at professions other than teaching to find the work that wants them. This is not a new or original scheme, but it has certain aspects different from anything that has been tried before. It is the first time that graduates of the women's colleges have made common cause in a plan to help all specially equipped women, whether they do or do not hold college degrees.

Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Cornell, Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar and Wellesley are the alumnae associations whose representatives make up the board of directors of the new bureau. They will employ a paid secretary and assistants. The objects of the bureau will be:

To secure employment for college and other specially equipped women.

To investigate and do all in its power to increase their efficiency in occupations.

To establish close connections with the colleges, especially in advising and informing undergraduates concerning occupations.

To insure in every way a free, wise, choice of occupation.

The bureau will charge a small fee and a percentage of the first month's salary. It aims in time to become self supporting. It will differ from any of the agencies at present in existence under private ownership, as any money which it may eventually earn will be turned back to extend the work of the bureau.

Although calls for teachers will be filled when they come, the bureau will confine its main emphasis and effort upon work other than teaching, as it is considered that the teachers' agencies already in the field are doing efficient work. The bureau of the Women's Educational and Industrial union will not be open for the registration of graduates of high schools, as the vacation committees of the public schools are already caring for them. The women who are not college graduates whose registration will be accepted are architects, lawyers, bacteriologists, doctors, nurses, graduates of schools of music or design, trained journalists, secretaries, socially gifted women who are willing to become companions and women whose experience would equip them for executive positions, institutional management or welfare work. An effort will be made to obtain part time work for those who have a portion of their time occupied.

Arrangements for close co-operation have been made with all of the college appointment bureaus, the Boston bureau and the agencies of the Young Women's Christian association.

While the new bureau is to be located in New York, the promoters hope that in time there will be a chain of bureaus in all of the large cities, conducted by the alumnae of the colleges for the benefit of all women who have trained themselves for any specific line of work.

The chairman of the board of directors is Mary Abby Van Kleeck.

STYLES DANGEROUS TO LIFE AND LIMB

Railroad Finds That Women Persist In Following Them

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—That high heels and hobble skirts are responsible for a large proportion of the injuries sustained by women while getting on and off trains and mounting and descending stairways in stations is the conclusion reached by the Pennsylvania railway claim department after an investigation covering three months, in which seventy-three such cases were recorded.

The injuries range from slight contusions to painful sprains and cuts. Typical of the causes set forth are:

'Heel caught on step of coach and torn off.

"High heels caught while descending stairs; wore hobble skirt."

It is pointed out that the railroad can do nothing to prevent these casualties because "women of all times have followed styles that are dangerous to life and limb."

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES — NO SLATE — NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choices small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

GOOD BOWLING IS EXPECTED

New League Is Formed at the Fore River Yards

PRIZE OFFERED

The movement started a short time ago, to form a bowling league at the Fore River, was successfully carried out Monday evening, in the school rooms at the yard, when some forty promising young bowlers, assembled and started plans pertaining to the advancement of the same. The first business was confined to the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, James E. Neary, Secretary, Frank Callahan, Treasurer, Charles White.

The matter of games was considered at length and it was finally decided to have a three days' bowl each week, starting October 2 and concluding March 21. Various other things occupied the attention of the many present during the remainder of the evening, and from the interest displayed, the bowling season gives promise of being a fine one from every standpoint. The league is to be known as the Fore River bowling league and is to include teams from the Y department, the machine shop, both gallery and floor, the timekeepers, the pattern makers and the apprentices.

A communication was read from the manager of the Granite Bowling alleys, offering a prize, in the event of a league being formed, to the winner of the series. This prize will go to the winning team and the cup offered is estimated to be worth fifty dollars. It is also expected that the Fore River officials will award silver loving cups to the individual point winners. A movement is already under way for the offering of another cup to be known as the newspaper cup.

Each member has contributed one dollar to the furtherance of the project, and the endeavors of the past week to carry out the same, have netted the $75 now in the treasury.

A vote of thanks was given to the donators of prizes, and it was decided to hold a smoke talk next Friday evening, at which time a constitution and by-laws and other rules pertaining to the league will be drawn up.

There are a number of good bowlers at the local ship yards, and many a warm contest may be expected, when once the affair is in the height of its power.

CLAD IN MEN'S GARB

Girls Making Money by Climbing Fir Trees and Picking Cones

Seattle, Sept. 26.—Girls attired in men's clothing are reaping a rich harvest in picking fir cones for the forestry bureau of the United States government, which pays them 90 cents a bushel for the seed boxes, which the government will utilize in reforesting cut-over lands.

Not only have the fair pickers proved they are very nimble with their fingers in plucking the cones from the branches after climbing the giant trees, but have qualified as "woodsmen" by chopping down big trees on the top of which nestled great bunches of the money-producing seed cones.

COBB TEACHES JACKSON.

Napo' Outfielder Using Tiger Star's Famous Fall Away Slide.

They say Ty Cobb is jealous of Joe Jackson, but listen to this: Ty taught Joe his fall away slide and gave him some advice in base running that is said to have improved Joe's work. Joe has combined his own tricks with those Cobb taught him.

JACKSON.

By watching the outfield Joe couldn't quite see how Cobb made his famous slide, so he got up and asked Ty how he did it. Ty not only told Joe, but made a couple of fall away slides with Joe at the base to see how it was done.

Joe caught on in a second. He hadn't been starting his slide soon enough and didn't get as far to one side of the bag as he should have.

Joe is just about Ty's equal at making the fall away slide, and no other player in the American league, if in either of the big leagues, Cobb excepted, is a better slider than the Nap star.

YOUNG PITCHERS HAVE SET PACE

Alexander and Gregg Make Veteran Flingers Look to Laurels.

LATTER KEPT NAPS IN RACE.

Cleveland's Young Southpaw One of Season's Greatest Finds — Phillies' Right Hander the Big Noise In National League.

This season has been replete with surprises in the pitching end of baseball. The peculiarity thus far is the rise from obscurity of a pair of young twirlers barely out of their teens. They have set a pace in the two big leagues.

Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Philadelphia Nationals, known as Alexander the Great, who barely escaped going to the minors in the spring, has the distinction of being the first pitcher in the older organization to win twenty games this season and has worked in and won more contests than any other twirler.

No other man who ever broke into the league, with the exception of Russell Ford of New York, has approached this record. Ford won twenty-six games last season, but Alexander bids fair to surpass that figure by many games before the season is over.

In the American league Van Gregg, a youngster secured by Cleveland from the Pacific coast, who had a fair reputation when he came east, has proved invincible and has the remarkable record of fourteen victories out of the first sixteen games in which he has worked.

Unlike Alexander, however, great things were expected of him when he came to Cleveland, but in their fondest dreams the Forest City club owners never thought that the coast player would deliver the goods as he has done against virtually all of the clubs which faced him. All batters look alike to him.

Alexander of the Phillies came to the team unheralded, an outcast of two major league clubs. Manager Charlie Dooin had about determined to sell the youngster, whom he secured from the Syracuse club of the New York State league for $450 when the latter asked for a chance to pitch against the Athletics in the annual spring series between the National and American league teams of Philadelphia.

Dooin, who was loath to let any of his men go without a fair chance to show, gave him the opportunity, and after Alexander had held the world's champions to two hits Dooin decided that he would keep the state leaguer for at least another month.

Dooin's decision to hold the pitcher has kept the team in the race for the National league flag, for Alexander has won more than one-third of the contests for his team and is such a strong worker that he has asked to work every other day. He is after the record made by Jack Coombs of the Athletics last year, when the latter won thirty-one games and lost nine, and hopes to even better this mark. It is a noteworthy fact that this same pitcher, who is the sensation of the National league, was turned down by Connie Mack, a manager whose mistakes can be counted on the fingers of one hand. He would come in handy now, with the Athletics battling to win the American league pennant again.

Philadelphia is not the only National league team that can boast of a new star. The New York fans have waxed enthusiastic over Rube Marquard, who has at last delivered the goods after three years' trial. The man who for two years had to stand the jeers and witticisms of the fans of the whole circuit has at last shown his form.

Manager McGraw's judgment in paying $11,000 for him has been vindicated. With Rube going along in his present form New York fans are looking for a pennant and a possible world's championship.

While New York fans are enthusing over Marquard, they have not lost sight of the fact that Nap Rucker is pitching the greatest ball of his career for Brooklyn and that he holds the record of twelve consecutive wins to his credit. The work of this pitcher is the more creditable in that he is with a second division club and therefore has to pitch remarkable ball to win his games.

Lew Richie, the genial pitcher of the Cubs, is holding his team in the race by his great work, and Earl Moore, a Philadelphia man, is at his best this season and has been quite a surprise to the fans of the old league.

In Pittsburg "Babe" Adams is again working in great form this season, doing the bulk of the work for the Pirates. Adams is another youngster who sprang into fame in a year by his great work in the world's series against the Detroit team in 1909, when he won the world's championship for the Pittsburg team.

While his work this season has not been as spectacular as that of some of the other pitchers in the league, it is mainly due to his good pitching that the Pirates are fighting for a berth in the first division.

The fans of St. Louis have discovered this season that the Cardinals are harboring three of the best pitchers who ever played in the league. Sallee, Steele and Harmon are the men, and it is their work which helped St. Louis to make a fine showing.

WHEN WE ENGAGED

The services of a professional "ad" man to explain our prices in an interesting way we never dreamed that "IMITATORS" would spring up. BUT IT SHOWS OUR STRENGTH.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The following letter, sent in as a result of the suggestion offered, to the effect that it would be well for the Heptasophs to play a series of games with the Ave Maria Council, K. of C., explains the situation very satisfactorily.

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir:—In answer to the suggestion in Saturday's Ledger, that the Ave Maria Council, K. of C., and the Heptasophs baseball teams play a series of games, I should like to say in answer to the same, that nothing would please the Heptasophs' team more, if it were not so late in the season. At the present time, it would be impossible for the "Heps" to get their team together, as practically every man is working on Saturday afternoon, and thereby would not be able to play. Next year, however, we hope to have a league formed of several lodges and this will give the Ave Maria team a chance to cross bats with the "Heps," if such be the desire of the West Quincy team. This will give Ave Maria Council an opportunity to join the league, but if for any reason the league should not be formed, the Heptasophs are always ready to play the Knights' team or any other lodge team that wishes to play.

Very truly yours,
A. R. MacKay,
67 Hollis avenue.

JACK JOHNSON TO RETURN.

Heavyweight Champion Anxious to Grab Some Loose Change.

John Arthur Johnson is coming back to New York. While this fact will not occasion a holiday, it is important enough to chronicle. The news comes from a good source.

The reason Lil Artha bade us farewell was that there was no lucre in sight. When he sailed for London he had put his mark on a contract with Hugh McIntosh calling for three battles in Australia. This was the best he could do for himself, and he grabbed the opportunity. But a little thing like a contract does not bother Johnson, according to Sam Fitzpatrick, George Little and a few other promoters who had bits under seal and witness.

There are a few men in this country that Johnson could mingle with and grab off some change. Sam Langford would be delighted to spar with him. There are a few white men who would also take a chance. Johnson is training in a mild way to fight Bombardier Wells in England. As soon as he finishes the Britisher with the fearful title he will hasten this way.

DIAMOND TIPS

Hauser, the little shortstop of the St. Louis club, is a great ball player, after the style of Bush of the Detroit Tigers.

Bob Harmon of the St. Louis Cardinals is the poorest relief pitcher in the National league. He has had very bad luck in his rescuing expeditions.

George Jackson, the Boston Nationals' outfielder, was with the St. Louis Browns two seasons ago and set adrift as too crude for the big league.

It is said that Vincent Campbell is being groomed by Manager Clarke of the Pittsburg Pirates for that first base job, which nobody seems able to fill satisfactorily.

WHALE IS RAMMED BY VESSEL IN FOG

Big Fellow Almost Cut In Two by the Rochambeau

New York, Sept. 26.—When off Nantucket, Mass., and running through a fog, the new French line steamship Rochambeau, bound from Havre for this port for the first time, collided with some object which impeded the headway of the vessel.

The engines were stopped and it was discovered that the ship had rammed a giant whale. The steel prow had sunk deep enough in the whale to almost cut the leviathan in two. The water was crimson all about the ship. The carcass of the whale floated for a moment and then sank.

FROTHINGHAM HEADS REPUBLICANS
FOSS NOMINATED BY DEMOCRATS

Republican Nominee Carries Home of His Opponents. Democrats Poll Larger. Vote Which Was the Lightest In Years. Foss Goes Through With Colors Flying

Boston, Sept. 27.—Lieutenant Governor Louis A. Frothingham will be the Republican opponent of Governor Foss at the state election. He won an overwhelming victory yesterday against his two opponents, Speaker Joseph Walker and Representative Norman H. White.

LIEUT.-GOV. FROTHINGHAM.

Governor Foss won easily. The vote of his opponent, Thomas L. Hisgen of Springfield, was very small.

Returns from 135 towns and five cities, including Boston, show the Republican vote to be:

Frothingham	21,216
Walker	8,651
White	5,822

The Democratic vote:

Foss	35,054
Hisgen	2,470

The total vote in Boston was 53,495, divided as follows: Republican:

Frothingham	8,794
Walker	2,449
White	908

The Democratic vote was:

Foss	29,664
Hisgen	1,883

It was the first trial of the new direct nominations law. The vote was very light compared with the vote cast at the state election last year. This was due to some extent to the fact that there was but little interest manifested except in the Republican contest. About 40 percent of the vote of the last state election was cast yesterday.

A Democratic Surprise

The big surprise on the Democratic end was the winning of the Democratic nomination for secretary of state by Frank J. Donahue. Despite the fact that he was opposed by the Democratic organization, which supported Edward O. Skelton, he won a substantial victory, receiving 22,575 votes in Boston as against 4736 for the latter.

On the Republican end the so-called machine ticket won easily. Secretary of State A. P. Langtry defeated his opponent, Representative Russell A. Wood of Cambridge, by a margin of 2 to 1. The lead of State Auditor John E. White over Representative Herbert Burr of Boston was a trifle less.

In the Democratic contest for attorney general George W. Anderson of Boston won an easy victory over ex-Representative Joseph Leonard.

The latest returns in the fifth councillor district showed Walker leading by a close margin.

Barry Wins on Stickers

In the fourth councillor district fight the last returns showed Alexander McGregor leading Charles L. Burrill by a close margin for the Republican nomination. Edward P. Barry of South Boston went into this contest on stickers and captured the Democratic nomination.

Councillor J. S. Cushing was renominated in the second district, winning over W. P. Parker, former senator, by a good margin.

The big fight in the fourth senatorial district for the Democratic nomination for senator was won by ex-Councilman Thomas M. Joyce of Ward 17 against ex-Representative Timothy Callahan of Ward 9. Joyce scored a victory with a majority of 200 votes.

This victory is significant politically in the city of Boston because it brings the Donovan-Kelliher-Doyle combination back into the political arena. This combination backed Joyce in the fight, while Congressman Curley was supporting Callahan.

During the campaign both Kelliher and Curley declared their candidacies for mayor. Kelliher scores in the first round of the fight. The entire strength of the city hall administration was thrown into the contest for Callahan.

GOVERNOR FOSS.

Governor Foss had this comment to make on the result:

"I went to bed when I heard that Frothingham had won his nomination. I am not enough interested to make any comments."

Returns Are Delayed

Returns were delayed by the new direct nomination system and by the fact that in many of the towns evening caucuses were held which did not close until after 10. Considering the newness of it and the enrollment feature, the hitches were not as many as were expected. In most of the cities and towns outside of Boston the impression seemed to be that only about one-half of the usual primary vote was cast, but nothing accurately can be said on that until an actual tabulation has been had.

Interest centered almost entirely in the Republican three-cornered gubernatorial contests. While for the past week it has been commonly predicted that Frothingham would win the nomination, no one attempted to gauge the figure. Indeed that figure is not yet really known. It was the general impression it would be rather close.

Preliminary Estimates Fare Badly

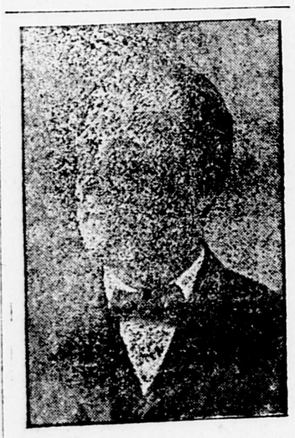

In the general preliminary estimating it was worked out that Frothingham would have Boston by a generous margin and that he would do well in Essex and Bristol counties. Walker was expected to have Norfolk county to himself and to have Springfield and Hampden county and a large number of the towns in Berkshire. White, it was believed, would make a good showing in Boston, carry the Cape and do very well in the manufacturing cities and then make a reasonable showing in the western part of the state.

As it turned out, however, the Frothingham strength upset all the plans. White carried Provincetown, where he made his first entry as a defender of Senator Lodge; he carried Eastham, on the Cape, where he has a summer camp, and Mashpee, but his winnings ended approximately there.

The Walker claims also failed to show where it was expected he would be strongest.

Converts Fail to Turn Out

Frothingham was favored first and last by the organization influence behind him. It discounted the effect of the threatening weather and many other conditions. He started his day certain of the nucleus of organization Republicans who always attend the primaries, no matter what the condition of the weather and whom no restrictions could keep away. The rain did not bother them. The two other candidates were dependent naturally on converts and apparently they did not come out.

ROBERT LUCE.

MERRILL FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

Returns from the towns in Norfolk County show without question that John F. Merrill has been nominated as the candidate for County Commissioner, and as the nomination practically means election he may be counted a sure winner in November. Up to 2 o'clock all but five small towns in the county had been heard from. These towns are Plainville, Bellingham, Stoughton, Avon and Needham. The result of the caucuses without these towns was as follows:

Flye	1,118
Merrill	3,031
Sprague	1,682

It will be seen by these figures that it will be impossible for the five towns unheard from to change the ultimate result.

CITY'S VOTE WAS LARGE

Contests In Various Districts Made Exciting Fight

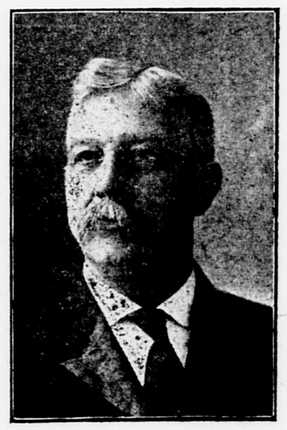

THE DELEGATES

The fact that a total vote of 2409 votes was cast at the caucus, Tuesday, shows that in Quincy, at least, the people are not afraid to record themselves as Democrats or Republicans. Several local contests may have helped to bring out the large vote. It is evident, however, that the voters consider the new primary caucus a good thing.

COUNCILMAN WILLIAM J. LESLIE

One of the principal contests in Quincy was over the nomination of County Commissioner. The contest for this office was a keen one. The friends of Commissioner Merrill rallied to his cause, however, and the grand vote he received showed that he has still got the confidence of the citizens of Quincy. Mr. Merrill's greatest opponent in Quincy was ex-Senator Sprague. Mr. Sprague made a vigorous campaign and was confident up to the last minute that he would carry the city. The result shows that he made a little miscalculation, for Merrill carried every ward in the city with the exception of Ward Five, the home ward of Mr. Sprague. Mr. Flye the third candidate for the nomination did not cut much of a figure in Quincy, receiving but 125 votes. The total vote of the city was Merrill 1027, Sprague 643.

WALTER E. PIPER

The other contests of local interest among the Republicans was for representative both in the fifth and sixth districts. There were some surprises here. In the fifth district, Piper was an easy winner carrying every ward in the district by a handsome majority his grand total being 651 to 308 for Bolster. Both candidates were residents of Ward Three and a very large vote was polled. The ward went more than two to one for Piper.

The contest in the sixth district was a close one, for Leslie only won out by 66 votes. Leslie easily carried Wards Four and Six while Nickerson carried Ward Five. The vote of Nickerson in Wards Four and especially in Ward Six shows that an old score against Nickerson was wiped out. The vote in this ward being 119 for Leslie and 61 for Nickerson.

Ward Five stood by Nickerson although the vote was somewhat close, Nickerson receiving 309 to 290 for Leslie. Both these gentlemen made their hardest fight in their home ward and the result of their work is shown in the remarkably large vote polled at the caucus, the grand total being 631, of which all but about 30 were Republican votes.

For governor the city stood by Frothingham and gave him a handsome plurality over the other two candidates. His total vote was 1119. Walker received 463 and White 173.

About the only contests among the Democrats was for the nomination for Representative from the Sixth district comprising Wards Four, Five and Six. The result was as most people expected. Assistant Assessor Duggan

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

If John L. Sullivan goes to Congress he should present much more striking arguments than those we are accustomed to.

Senator Lorimer is visiting the county fairs, and perhaps his friends will buy him a $100,000 Legislature from the toy balloon man.

As Canada's theory of reciprocity is to get something for nothing with a trading stamp thrown in, Uncle Sam will probably discontinue soliciting her trade.

Columbia University is to establish a library of political information, but an acquaintance with the ward boss would be of more help to the students in securing clerkships.

Although it interferes with study to make those overgrown boy trusts behave, it does not seem to be of any use to go on with the lessons until it is demonstrated that Teacher Sam is in control of the school house.

THE ELECTION.

The small vote yesterday will surprise no one. The lack of popular interest among Republicans in the attack on the customary promotion of the lieutenant governor and the lack of issues against the party machine were as apparent before the voting as now, says the Boston Globe.

Mr. Frothingham carried the primary with as little difficulty as he would have carried a state convention. He had honestly won his title to the nomination by the rules that have long been observed in his party, and the Globe is free to say that the choice of the Republicans could not have fallen on a more honorable and faithful man.

The people of Massachusetts are to be congratulated on the calmness they displayed yesterday on the occasion of the first experiment with the state-wide primary. No riotous scenes are reported and apparently there was no unseemly crowding at the polls. The public simply refused to get excited over the new nominating system or the bellicose contests which were waged for a few places on the state tickets.

The slate submitted by the authorities in each patry seems to have been sufficiently satisfactory to the voters and it went through as easily as in any old-time convention. Had the selections made at headquarters been unacceptable, presumably there would have been a revolt and the primary vote must have been larger. It is fair to say that the slate makers in Massachusetts have generally been prudent and not prone to run counter to the sentiment of the rank and file. The need of direct nominations therefore, was by no means as acute here as in some other states, and as long as our party organizations retain the sanity that has usually marked their nominating councils they will probably have little more trouble with the primary than they had with the convention, which it has displaced in obedience to the irresistible national movement for direct nominations.

BRICKBAT OVER THE FENCE.

This newspaper commented a few days ago on the intense nationalism manifested by the Canadians in the recent campaign. There remains to add a foot-note to history, relative to the anti-American sentiment there displayed.

A recent writer in the English Spectator tells the whole story, when he thus expresses the Canadian attitude:—

"The American idea, and very possibly from their point of view rightly so, is to absorb the whole of the North American continent. On the other hand, the British people of Canada will burn their last cartridge to prevent such forcible absorption."

The Canadians are a fine people. But they slightly exaggerate their own importance. Uncle Sam would not explode a July 4th fire cracker for any Canadian territory that did not bring with it the hearts of the Canadian people as a free gift.

It never occurred to the people who opposed reciprocity on this side of the line to evoke any unneighborly feeling. They fought the treaty merely because they thought it was a bad trade. But the Montreal Star and other newspapers felt it necessary to call us those "impudent and arrogant Americans." When people can't discuss a mere exchange of goods in terms of dollars and cents and relative value, they are not well qualified for the give and take of commercial life.

Canada has been historically a bad loser. The fact that the soft raiment of the American revolutionary Tories was exchanged for a garment of tar and feathers has never been forgotten in these 130 years. And the fact that our soldiers invaded Canada at that time and inthe war of 1812 might well be omitted from the platform of live issues 100 years later. And it is not forgotten that the Canadian commissioners declined to sign the arbitral agreement over the Alaska boundary eight years ago, though as a minority they might be expected to bow to the will of the whole court.

Canada with her superb industrial wealth and substantial future has chosen as she has a perfect right. The hearts of our achieving people, with the opening of the Panama canal, will turn more and more to the southward, and Canada will miss some industrial opportunities.

MRS. ANNIE E. FAXON.

Mrs. Annie E. Faxon of Quincy, died suddenly Monday evening of heart failure at the home of her son, John G. Faxon at Fitchburg, Mass., where she had been spending the summer. Family prayers will be conducted Thursday forenoon at Mr. Faxon's residence and the burial will be in the afternoon in Mt. Wollaston cemetery, this city. In the services at the home of her sister, Mrs. Z. S. Arnold, 38 Coddington street, at 3 P. M., friends and relatives are invited.

Mrs. Faxon was born in Newburyport, Sept. 15, 1842, daughter of the late John C. and Elizabeth L. (Huse) Randall, and was the eldest of their seven children. The family moved to Quincy in 1848 and there in 1863 she married the late William L. Faxon, M. D., surgeon of the 32d Massachusetts regiment and passed the first part of her married life at City Point, Va., where Dr. Faxon was in charge of the hospital camp of the Army of the Potomac. The greater part of her married life was spent in Quincy where she was an active and zealous member of the First Parish church, a long time member of the Quincy Shakespeare club and was an organizer and for many years secretary of the Quincy Village Improvement society whose public work owes much to her energy and the publicity given to and for them by her ready pen. She was identified, until her health began to fail with much that was important and forward in social and philanthropic endeavors in Quincy.

She inherited a well endowed mind which she enriched by broad and studious reading from which she derived vast enjoyment. She was a not infrequent contributor to the public press of Quincy concerning th welfare and progress of causes in which she had a personal share, as well as lending her pen at the request of many who felt her aid would be of service.

Of her family two sisters and a brother live in Quincy while she is also survived by three sons and a daughter.

CITY'S VOTE WAS LARGE

was snowed under. His own ward gave him a majority of 76 but that was more than offset when vote of Ward Four was announced and it was seen that it had stood by McDevitt giving him a majority of over 200, the vote of this ward being McDevitt 238 Duggan 24. The total vote of the district was McDevitt 256, Duggan 123.

In the Fifth district there was no contest for the nomination, Michael T. Sullivan being nominated without an effort. His total vote was 104.

JOHN J. MCDEVITT.

Many of the officers of the Democratic ticket had no names for candidates. The result was that many voters, who possessed a funny bone, filled out these blanks with any name that came into their mind. Quite a few however filled in the name of Rednor P. Coombs as candidate for Senator and if the same thing was done in the towns of the district he will probably be nominated.

JOHN F. MERRILL

The Democratic Progressive ballot was a failure as far as Quincy was concerned, as but two of these ballots was cast in the entire city. One of these was a blank throughout and the second only had one mark and that was against the name of Foss for Governor.

The vote of the city for both the Republican and Democratic ticket for state officers will be found elsewhere tabulated in convenient form, as far as state officers are concerned. In addition to these however state delegates and ward committees were elceted as follows:—

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL
ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size
Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.
First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.
Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.
Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.
Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.
Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.
Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

CATALOG FURNITURE
VS.
KINCAIDE QUALITY
When you buy Furniture, Ranges or Pianos from catalog houses, you are buying a "pig in the bag"; you don't make your selection from the articles themselves but from "highly" colored reading matter and pictures that are overdrawn. Note how they advertise, "don't come to our office to buy—we have no goods to show you." Why? Because you wouldn't take their goods for a gift if you had the opportunity to examine them.
Come here where you can examine your purchase and are assured of satisfaction before investing your money.
We will meet the prices of any catalog house or even do better. If you buy of a catalog house, the goods are liable to damage or become lost. It takes correspondence, stamps and freight on the goods to get them exchanged, to say nothing of the loss of time.
Bring your catalog with you. If we fail to furnish the goods without a reasonable excuse, don't give us your confidence again.
Catalog houses won't trust you; they demand the money in advance with no goods in sight.
Give us a chance to compete by bringing your orders here. We will prove to you, quality considered that we can save you money.

COAL QUESTION COMES UP AT MEETING OF THE SCHOOL BOARD

Representative of the Neponset Coal Company States Reason For Substitution. Resignations of Teachers. Night Schools. Financial Report

The question regarding the quality of coal furnished the Quincy schools came up Tuesday evening at the monthly meeting of the School Committee. Chairman Miller presided and all members of the committee were present. Mr. Finney, president of the Neponset Coal Company, who furnished the coal was also present, to explain his side of the question.

In opening Mr. Finney read from the analysis made for the School Committee of samples of coal taken from the High school. He also read from the analysis made by A. B. Little, the City of Boston expert, of that furnished the City of Boston, which, Mr. Finney said, was taken from the same barge as that furnished some of the schools here. These analyses did not agree and in his remarks Mr. Finney said that both gentlemen were reputable chemists, but he had never known two of them to agree. He then went on to explain what the City of Boston demanded and of the tests which coal furnished these schools had to come up to. He believed that the coal furnished the High school would be found to be better than the so-called Georges Creek big vein coal. Every cargo of coal shipped from Philadelphia is analyzed there and again when it reaches Boston and the two analysis never agree. They vary one and one-half per cent in amount of ash. The Boston schools demand that ash shall not be over a certain per cent and the coal we furnished the City of Boston and the City of Quincy contained less per cent ash than required.

Mr. Burke asked Mr. Finney if he did not agree to furnish Georges Creek big vein coal. Mr. Finney replied yes.

Did you furnish it, asked Mr. Burke.

Mr. Finney in reply said that about 300 tons of this quality was furnished. When he took possession of the Neponset Coal Company there was some 300 tone of coal on the wharf which Mr. Winslow said, was the kind that was furnished the Ctiy of Quincy. This was put into the schools the balance of the contract we put in what is known as the United Coal Company's coal. This is what is furnished the City of Boston and he considered it a better grade of coal than the Georges Creek big vein, as it averaged less per cent of ash. The reason that he sent the United Coal Company's coal was because he belived it better and because he was giving the city more for their money than if Georges Creek had been sent.

Mr. Burke said there is no proof that you furnished the City of Quincy the same coal as that furnished the City of Boston.

Mr. Finney replied, there is but one barge of coal on the wharf and that was furnished both cities.

Mr. Burke asked if he was willing to allow a discount. In answer Mr. Finney said, I did not say that I would make a discount. I am willing that a certain perc ent of the amount of the bill should be held back until you are satisfied that you have got your moneys worth and then I will abide by your decision.

Mr. Finney, however took issue with the expert employed by the school committee and said that it was equally as important to have the sample taken by one capable of doing so, as it was to have the analysis made by an expert. Experts seldom agree, I know that chemists do not agree on the analysis of the same cargo of coal.

In conclusion Mr. Finney said that he hoped that the committee would approve part of his bill, which had been held up, and that he was willing they should reserve a part until the result of the coal in question was determined.

This closed the hearing. After Mr. Finney's departure it was voted that the Finance Committee be authorized to approve the bill of the Neponset Company for the full amount of the hard coal and for all of the soft coal furnished except ten per cent of the amount due for 316 tons of coal in question.

DR. WILEY EXONERATED.

President Taft has exonorated Dr. Wiley of the charge preferred against him. In doing so, he has given official voice to the verdict already rendered by the American press and people. If the attack against Dr. Wiley were a mere personal fight, it could be allowed to rest; but it is a principle, not a man, that is at stake. Dr. Wiley's enemies are opposed to him because he represents a principle—that of protection to the consumer, says The Journal of the American Medical Association. They would be equally antagonistic to any other individual holding the same position and actuated by the same ideas. Of the venomous and harassing tactics of McCabe and the sycophantic attitude of Dunlap in the carefully laid plot to depose Dr. Wiley, the President says nothing—at present. He does indeed hint that the demoralized condition of the Department of Agriculture will call for executive action. If President Taft means that he will, at the earliest convenient opportunity, sever the connection of McCabe and Dunlap with the government, he will find that he is merely expressing the opinion of the American people as to what should be done in this matter. Meanwhile, congratulations are due to the President on the wisdom of his decision, to Dr. Wiley, on being exonorated from the malicious and unfounded charge, and to the people of the United States, because they still have Dr. Wiley to stand between them and the food adulterators.

MEETING OF PRESBYTERY

All Day Session Held on Tuesday In U. P. Church

RESIGNATIONS

The Presbytery of Boston (First U. P. Church) met in the First U. P. church of Quincy yesterday in all day session. Much routine business was transacted. Two resignations were placed before the Presbytery and granted. That of the Rev. Alex Mitchell of First U. P. church Providence, R. I., and that of the Rev. A. P. Reid of Chicopee, Mass. Presbytery very reluctantly consented to grant these resignations, as both were excellent men in their respective fields.

A Presbyterial conference was held in the evening. Rev. Dr. McLennan of Boston read the scriptures and offered prayer. Three good addresses were given. The first by the Rev. Dr. E. C. Simpson of Cambridge on "The church and what it stands for in the community." The second address was given by the Rev. R. M. Sturgeon of Brockton on "The relation of the Sabbath to the church;" and the last was given by the Rev. Dr. W. J. Martin of Fall River, Mass., on "The relation of the home to the church."

These addresses were all very helpful and appreciated by the congregation.

Th choir rendered appropriate music. The ladies of the church provided both dinner and supper in the church for the Presbytery, and received much praise from that body in regard to the way in which they discharged their duties.

ORGANIZATION IS LEGAL

Gary Says That Steel Corporation Will Not Dissolve

New York, Sept. 27.—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, in a statement late last night declared emphatically that no negotiations whatever had taken place between the department of justice and the steel corporation, looking to the dissolution or disintegration of the United States Steel corporation.

"In all its operations the company has scrupulously observed the law and recognized the just rights of its competitors and the consumers of its products," said Gary. "So far as its directors are aware, no complaint has ever been made against it by either of these interests. The directors are advised by its counsel that its existence is not in violation of the Sherman act as interpreted in the recent decisions of the supreme court."

Give Your Washerwoman Fels-Naptha, Says Anty Drudge.

Mrs. Gossiper—"Goodness, but Mrs. Vertrieh must have a lot of work in that big house. I've heard she had four women doing the washing."

Mrs. Cottager—"I have had more than a dozen doing my washing, though only one at a time."

Anty Drudge—"If you bought Fels-Naptha soap, you could keep your washerwoman longer or do the washing yourself. Washing is a small job for any woman if she uses Fels-Naptha in cold or lukewarm water, and lets it take the place of boiling and hard rubbing."

Dirt is the home of germs. You gather them in the dust that settles on your clothes, in the mud of the streets, from soiled car seats and in many other places.

You want to kill these germs in the weekly wash, or they may cause trouble. Fels-Naptha soap is a germicide. With it, boiling is not necessary either to destroy germs or wash the clothes. In cold or lukewarm water, Fels-Naptha makes short work of dirt, and disease germs cannot live in the same tub.

Be sure and use Fels-Naptha soap the Fels-Naptha way—no hot water.

BRIEFS

Massachusetts Foresters Home association is to hold its seventh annual concert and entertainment on Friday evening in St. Rose hall, Worcester street, Boston.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. August V. Johnson of Kendrick avenue are sorry to learn that their son has met with a serious accident to his hand.

A temporary loan of $50,000, maturing Feb. 15th, 1912, has been awarded to F. S. Moseley & Co., at 3.91 per cent discount, plus $1.35 premium.

Misses Mary and Ethel Elcock of 21 Marsh street are expected to arrive on the Cymric Thursday from a three months' visit abroad with their cousin Rev. Mgr. Flynn.

Meetings of the Boston Federation of Young People's Religious Unions will be held at Hyde Park on Nov. 2, at Channing church, Dorchester, on Feb. 25th, and at Quincy on April 28th.

As William C. Caldwell's forty-five party in Stone's hall, 31 games were played in 2 hours. J. Brooks, H. Seldon, T. H. Thayer and T. Allen Wester won 22 games each and four others were tie at 20. In the play-off F. McDade won out.

The fall and winter schedule of passenger train service on New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad will go into effect at midnight Sunday. New timetables showing changes in service will be in the hands of the ticket agents on Friday.

WILL FLY HIGH.

Lincoln Beachey, the aviator, is to try again for the world's altitude record. His next try will be made here in New England if conditions permit, and officials of the Aero Club can be secured for the event.

Beachey stated yesterday that if arrangements could be completed he would make the try for the highest point ever reached in an aeroplane on Oct. 3, 4, 5, 6, where he is scheduled to fly.

A tank capable of holding forty gallons of gasoline is now being made, and it is his intention to climb until this runs out, and then glide to earth. He held the world's record early in the season, when he reached more than 11,700 feet at the Chicago meet, but Garros, the French aviator added nearly 1500 feet to his mark a short time afterward.

Harry Atwood, who will also fly at the fair, is considering a start from Brockton on the coast to coast flight.

REFUSE TO BID ON BATTLESHIPS

President W. A. Post of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. announced on Tuesday that on account of the eight-hour restriction of the recent naval act, his company would not bid for either of the great battleships authorized by congress in March. Mr. Post believed all the private shipbuilding plants would refuse to submit bids for the same reason.

According to Mr. Post, the law authorizing the construction of the battleships provides that if the private builder violates any provision of the eight-hour law, the appropriation shall be withheld. This is the feature to which the local company particularly objects.

Until today it had been understood that the company confidently expected to build at least one of the new ships.

The government may have to build the two battleships at its navy yards if the Newport News and other shipbuilding companies refuse to bid for their construction. Should the other companies follow the course announced by the Newport News concern, congress would be compelled to increase the appropriation of $6,400,000 each it already has made.

THE BROCKTON FAIR.

The thousands of patrons who look forward each year to the coming of the dates of the Big Brockton Fair will be offered a program this year never before by any fair in the country.

In addition to the usual strong program, the management has secured the services of Harry N. Atwood and Lincoln Beachey, two of the most famous aviators of the day, and they will appear every day of the fair in flights and aerial evolutions. Another strong feature this year will be known as "The Sports of Ancient Rome," including two-and four-horse chariot races, and two-horse Roman standing races, for purses amounting to $2,000. Races of this sort have never taken place before in this country, and entries already in guarantee a thrilling spectacle. October 3, 4, 5 and 6, are the dates this year.

FOUR MORE BODIES FOUND

Taken From Petty Officers' Room of the Battleship Maine

Havana, Sept. 27.—Four bodies were found yesterday in the petty officers' room of the Maine. The workmen also uncovered the four rear boilers, which had not moved from their original position.

The recovery of the bodies, which remain unidentified, was made possible by the building of a temporary bulkhead, which cut off the inflow of mud and water from the after part of the wreck.

The engineers expect to make a rapid search of this part of the Maine, which is less shattered than the forward section. It is believed that many bodies will be found.

FEMININE FANCIES

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day recipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

Cut them and paste in scrap book for reference.

HOW TO SIGN NAME.

How a woman should sign her name has been known to puzzle more than one of Eve's daughters. Only when brackets are used may a woman write the prefix "Mrs." or "Miss" to her name when she is signing a communication. If she prefers to use her individual name the signature should read "(Mrs.) Mary Ellen Van Sluyck" or "Mary Ellen Van Sluyck," putting directly beneath it in brackets "(Mrs. Howard Van Sluyck.)"

The latter, that is, both signatures, is the form always to be employed when writing in the first person to social equals who do not know the name. For example, a woman may have occasion to write to another woman about a servant's reference and the one receiving the letter, being a total stranger and perhaps never having heard of the writer, must be treated with the utmost formality, but of course as an equal. Therefore the writer should sign her note as she would to a friend, putting beneath it her married name.

An unmarried woman, having but one name, would sign hers in full, putting Miss in brackets beside it.

I can think of no place, save on a hotel register, or when writing a visiting card, says a writer for the San Diego Union, that a woman signs her name with its prefix, without brackets. When she wishes to use her married name, that is, her husband's, her own must be written in full with the married name beneath the brackets.

CHEESE AS A FOOD.

Cheese contains all the essentials of human food, according to a pamphlet recently issued by the Department of Agriculture. The popular belief that cheese, even when green or unripened, is difficult of digestion, or that unripened cheese, or cheese in any stage of ripening is constipating is not justified. The milk solids in cheese are very digestible and make an almost perfect food. With the addition of rennet and the development of lactic acid in cheese-making, some chemical changes take place; but these do not transform digestible solids in milk into indigestible solids in cheese. The digestive disturbances attributed to peculiarities in the cheese itself are probably due merely to over-eating, or to the custom of eating cheese only at the close of the meal, when one has already had more than enough food.

Skim-milk cheese, when sold as a whole-milk product, is a fraud that is a positive injury to the dairy business; but skim-milk cheese, stated and sold as such, is entitled to consideration by both producer and consumer. It is digestible and has a food value; made to have an agreeable taste it could be sold cheaply to poor people. Cottage cheese is another cheap and palatable product, much of which could be added to the dietary at a great saving in the total cost of food. Indeed, all kinds of cheese, even the very highly flavored and so-called condimental cheeses, have a high food value.

America may learn much from the Continent. Many European people eat largely of cheese, either by itself, or sprinkled on vegetables, or cooked with other food. The Italians have many foods, such as macaroni, with which cheese is mixed. They have cheese grated and constantly at hand as a flavoring, quite as we use pepper and salt. The Swiss eat largely of cheese, which with bread forms the greater part of the dietary of this very healthy people; and those Swiss farmers who have settled in Wisconsin continue to manifest the athletic attainments and the physical endurance of their forbears. The sensible Germans consume large quantities of the cheap, but highly flavored skim-milk cheese. Such cheeses are wholesome, and their flavors are by reason of beneficent microorganisms. The consumption of cheese by the American people should be increased, from the viewpoint both of economy and its superior food value, according to The Journal of the American Medical Association. A pound of cheese has nearly the same food value as two pounds of lean meat or eggs, or the same weight of ham. Not only is it superior in food value, but also it furnishes nitrogen without the increase of uric acid in the system. For this reason it may be eaten by those inclined to gouty affections to whom meat is denied.

ARGENTINA FASHIONS.

Buenos Aires is frequently referred to as a second Paris, but while the city by the Seine continues to set the styles for the wealthy classes in South America, Argentine lavishness in the matter of expensive wearing apparel has evidently reached the stage where the capital of France has been left behind except to the extent that the Parisian purveyors ren ain as much in vogue as ever. South American travelers often remark that there seems to be no limit to the wealth of some of the people with whom they come in contact. If these travelers could address their inquiries to some of the famous Parisian dressmakers, they would learn astonishing facts bearing out their own observations.

That France has profited greatly by this lavishness among the wealthy of Buenos Aires, for instance, seems to be conclusive. But other nations have been made aware of the great market awaiting them in Argentina. Countries that supply the world with its fine furs are especially interested, since in the South American republic there is an enormous demand for pelts of the most expensive kind. It is, besides, nothing unusual for furs to be worn even during the summer months, and the demand from this unexpected quarter may have had a great deal to do with the increase in prices and the scarcity of certain kinds.

Parisians who apparently know of what they speak say that the lavishness of certain South American families exceeds the greatest extravagance known to the United States or Europe. Paris has now made it a task to cater directly to this inviting trade. It is not yet announced that South America is ambitious to set the world an example by its fashions, but there would seem to be but a step from going abroad for the articles that are made exclusively for them, to setting up as arbiters of fashion in Latin America.—Christian Science Monitor.

DRAGGED 1500 FEET

Boston Boy Killed by Car Without Knowledge of Motorman

Boston, Sept. 27.—With his head almost severed and his face and body mangled, the lifeless remains of 6-year-old John Gilson were found between the car tracks on East Fourth street last night, and 1500 feet away, at the corner of K and East Broadway, the little fellow's cap and a shoe were picked up.

It is supposed he was stealing a ride on a car and fell under the forward truck, and was dragged along over the pavement by the wooden guard in front of the wheels, the motorman being ignorant of the child's death.

MASQUERADED AS MAN

Woman Deceived People In Oregon Town For Twenty-Two Years

Albany, Ore., Sept. 27.—Only after she had been ordered committed to the state insane asylum by the Lynn county court was the discovery made that Miss Ray Leonard, 62 years old, an old resident of Lebanon, has for twenty-two years been masquerading as a man.

She came to Lebanon in 1889 with her father, saying that they were from Maine. Both worked as shoemakers, and when the father died eight years ago Ray continued the shop alone.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Lidgerwood's watchfulness saves his train. The passenger train is wrecked, with loss of life. Lidgerwood suspects Flemister and Hallock.

Lidgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Lidgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

Lidgerwood gets a warrant for the arrest of Hallock, charged with murder. Bart attacks Lidgerwood, and Judson again arrests him. Eleanor refuses to leave before the strike begins.

Lidgerwood's friends and Eleanor's party arm themselves against the strikers. Gridley returns from a mysterious absence. Hallock has disappeared.

Under the "umbrella roof" of the Nadia's rear platform the young people of the party were sitting out the early half of the perfect summer night.

Lidgerwood swung himself over the railing and took a chair.

"Has your strike materialized yet?" asked Miss Brewster.

"No; it isn't due until midnight."

"I don't believe there is going to be any."

"Don't you? I wish I might share your incredulity—with reason."

"Confess that you were a little bit overwrought this afternoon when you wanted to send us away. Weren't you?"

"I only hope that the outcome will prove that I was," he rejoined patiently.

"You still believe there will be trouble?"

"Yes."

"Then I'm afraid you are still overwrought," she countered lightly. "Why, the very atmosphere of this beautiful night breathes peace."

Before he could reply a man came up to the platform railing, touched his cap and said, "Is Mr. Lidgerwood here?"

Lidgerwood answered in person, crossing to the railing to hear Judson's latest report, which was given in hoarse whispers. Miss Brewster could distinguish no word of it, but she heard Lidgerwood's reply. "Tell Benson and Dawson and say that the engine I ordered had better be sent up at once."

When Lidgerwood had resumed his chair he was promptly put upon the question rack of Miss Eleanor's curiosity.

"Was that one of your scouts?" she asked.

"Yes."

"Did he come to tell you that there wasn't going to be any strike?"

"No."

"How lucidly communicative you are! Can't you see that I am fairly stifling with curiosity?"

"I'm sorry, but you shall not have the chance to say that I was overwrought twice in the same half day."

"Howard, don't be little and spiteful. I'll eat humble pie and call myself hard names if you insist, only—gracious goodness, is that engine going to smash into our car?"

The anxious query hinged itself upon the approach of a big eight wheeled passenger flier which was thundering down the yard on the track occupied by the Nadia. Within half a car length of collision the air brake hissed, the side rods clanked and chattered, and the shuddering monster rolled gently backward to a touch coupling with the president's car.

Eleanor's hand was on her cousin's arm. "Howard, what does this mean?" she demanded.

"Nothing just at present. It is merely a precaution."

"You are not going to take us away from Angels?"

"Not now—not at all unless your safety demands it." Then he rose and spoke to the others. "I'm sorry to have to shut off your moon vista with that noisy beast, but it may be necessary to move the car later on. Don't get out of touch with the Nadia, any of you, please."

He had vaulted the handrail and was saying good night when Eleanor left her chair and entered the car. He was not greatly surprised to find her waiting for him at the steps of the forward vestibule when he had gone so far on his way to his office.

"One moment," she pleaded. "I'll be good, Howard, and I know that there is danger. Be very careful of yourself, won't you, for my sake?"

He stopped short, and his arms went out to her. Then his self control returned, and his rejoinder was almost bitter.

"Eleanor, you must not! You tempt me past endurance. Go back to Van, to the others, and, whatever happens, don't let any one leave the car."

"I'll do anything you say, only you must tell me where you are going," she insisted.

"Certainly. I am going up to my office, where you found me this afternoon. I shall be there from this on if you wish to send any word. I'll see that you have a messenger. Goodby."

At the top of the corridor stair McCloskey was waiting for him.

"Judson has told you what's due to happen?" queried the trainmaster.

"He told me to look for swift trouble; that somebody had betrayed your strike breaking scheme."

"He says they'll try to keep the eastbound freights from going out."

"That would be a small matter. But we mustn't lose the moral effect of taking the first trick in the game. Are the sections all in line on the long siding?"

"Yes."

"Good. We'll start them a little ahead of time and let them kill back to schedule after they get out on the road. Send Bogard down with their clearance orders and phone Benson at the yard office to couple them up into one train, engine to the caboose in front, and send them out solid. When they have cleared the danger limit they can split up and take the proper time intervals—ten minutes apart."

"Call it done," said the trainmaster, and he went to carry out the order. Two minutes later Bogard, the night relief operator off duty, darted out of the dispatcher's room with the clearance cards for the three sections. Lidgerwood stopped him in midlight.

"One second, Robert. When you have done your errand come back to the president's car, ask for Miss Brewster and say that I sent you. Then stay within call and be ready to do whatever she wants you to do."

Bogard did the first part of his errand swiftly. Synchronized as perfectly as if a single throttle lever controlled them all, the three heavy freight pullers hissed, strained, belched fire, and the long train began to move out.

It was Lidgerwood's challenge to the outlaws, and as if the blasts of the three tearing exhausts had been the signal it was awaiting the strike storm broke with the suddenness and fury of a tropical hurricane. From a hundred hiding places in the car strewn yard men came running, some to swarm thickly upon the moving engines and cabooses, others swinging by the drawheads to cut the air brake hose.

Benson was swept aside and overpowered before he could strike a blow. Bogard, speeding across to take his post beside the Nadia, was struck down before he could get clear of the pouring hornet swarm. Shots were fired; shrill yells arose. Into the midst of the clamor the great siren whistle at the shops boomed out the fire alarm, and almost at the same instant a red glow, capped by a rolling nimbus of sooty oil smoke, rose to beacon the destruction already begun in the shop yards. And while the roar of the siren was still jarring upon the windless night air the electric light circuits were cut, leaving the yards and the Crow's Nest in darkness and the frantic battle for the trains to be lighted only by the moon and the lurid glow of destruction spreading slowly under its black canopy of smoke.

In the Crow's Nest the sudden coup of the strikers had the effect which its originator had doubtless counted upon. It was some minutes after the lights were cut off and the irruption had swept past the captured and disabled trains to the shops before Lidgerwood could get his small garrison together and send it, with McCloskey for its leader, to re-enforce the shop guard, which was presumably fighting desperately for the control of the power plant and the fire pumps.

WILL ENFORCE THE STATE LAW

District Police Investigating Women's Work In Foundries

NO POWER TO PREVENT THEM

Can Work at Any Employment They Choose as Long as Hours of Labor Do Not Exceed Fifty-Six In a Week and Laws as to Sanitation and Ventilation Are Strictly Obeyed

Boston, Sept. 27.—Inspectors of the district police have begun a thorough examination of all foundries and similar establishments in the state, where women are employed, in an effort to ascertain whether any state law in respect to the employment of women is being violated.

Chief Whitney is personally directing the work of inspection, although two of his inspectors visited a plant in Cambridge without awaiting orders from the chief. In discussing the stories printed in newspapers on Sunday and Monday, Whitney said:

"This department has nothing to do with making the law; we endeavor to the best of our ability to enforce such laws as the legislature gives us. There is no law in this state to prevent a woman from working at any sort of labor she may choose; while it is perhaps to be regretted that such is the case, still it is the fact, and this department has no power whatever to force any woman to abandon any particular line of work.

"The law provides that no woman shall be obliged to work more than fifty-six hours a week; it provides also that the conditions surrounding her at her employment shall be proper as to sanitation, and as to ventilation. These provisions of law we are required to enforce, and any information as to their violation we shall be very glad to receive, from whatever source it comes, and if the information is found to be based upon fact, this department will see that such violation ceases. We cannot, however, prosecute any firm merely for employing women, because they have a perfect right to do so if they can find women willing to accept such employment.

"If those who are agitating this matter will furnish me with evidence of the violation of any state law, this office will be delighted to prosecute the offenders. Working women should be given every possible protection, but as I said before, we can secure for them only such protection as is given by the legislature in the laws it passes."

"I leave this country with every difference between the nations settled and I feel that no question can arise which may not be settled amicably. This traditional policy of friendship I shall support with all my heart."

REPRESENTATIVES ASSURE PUBLIC THAT COLD STORAGE MEATS MUST GO.

CANDIDATES WERE ALL IN GOOD FORM. NOMINEES CERTAIN OF ELECTION.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH) QUINCY, MASS., SEPT. 27—The representatives of Berry Brothers Big Department Food Store, City Square talked with many people yesterday on the high cost of living, speaking particularly on cold storage lamb, which has that "old" green taste. The representatives doubly assured the people of the firm's contract with the New England Dressed Meat and Wool Co., who furnish Berry Brothers with lamb killed and dressed at Brighton one day and sold to the public the next day. The argument was sound and the proof positive. Remember the firm who represent wholesome foods.

CAMBRIDGE TEAM TOO SWIFT FOR LOCAL BOYS

Well Seasoned Team From University City Won Game on Tuesday By Score 14-0

Inexperience and inability to cope with the aggressive movements of a well seasoned team, caused a 14 to 0 defeat to Quincy High school at the hands of the Cambridge Latin eleven at Merrymount Park, Tuesday afternoon. It was the first game of the season for both teams and the management of the local eleven had hoped to get away with a victory, for last year the local boys did emerge in triumph from the struggle with the University city lads. The two teams were not evenly matched, however, for nearly every player on the Cantabs was on the team that represented Cambridge Latin, last year, while the local team, with the exception of Captain Johnson, White and Larkin, was an entirely new aggregation in the football line.

First Period.

The visitors scored in the first six minutes of play and rushed the local lads right off their feet. Quincy received the toss and chose the north side of the field, at the same time deciding to take the kickoff. Cambridge kicked to the 15 yard line, where the ball was rushed for a distance of about ten yards. Quincy was held for downs and decided to kick. Findlay was called to punt, and being exceedingly slow, the attempted kick was blocked, thereby alowing the visitors to secure the ball on their own 25 yard line. Successive rushes gained on each occasion by continually driving through the centre of the Quincy line, the Cambridge boys were enabled to push Dee over for the first touchdown of the game. The goal was kicked by Hale, who put the ball cleanly between the goal post.

Quincy regained the ball in the latter part of this period and was at a loss to reap any gains, first down being made but once.

Ball was fumbled twice but Findlay and Bill were successful in getting possession of the pigskin, thereby preventing the visitors from making another touchdown. The period closed with the ball on the visitors 35 yard line.

Second Period.

In the second period the same weakness as was evident on the part of the Quincy boys in the first period, was again noticeable. It was a case of defensive work for them the most of the time, but when a rush was maed it seemed that Quincy High was slow to follow the ball. Considerable punting was done in this period, but was confined to the Quincy side. Steady rushes by the visitors reaped great gains, and in short order, Bradley was over the goal line for the second touchdown of the game. Greene was called to kick and he made a pretty one, considering that the ball was at a very difficult angle. A safety by Larkin in the last part of the period saved Quincy from being scored on again.

Third Period.

In the third period the local boys showed considerable improvement and such was best attested by the fact that Cambridge Latin did no further scoring. Findlay and Holmes did some good rushing, the former netting twenty yards on one occasion. Quincy resorted to punting and the same was done by Cambridge Latin. A series of fumbles was again in evidence and a recovery of one by Smith, undoubtedly saved much trouble. Larkin tried the forward pass. Chapman lost it, but Findlay recovered it. Cambridge failed in an attempt for a field goal. Cambridge was penalized five yards, as a result of holding. Larkin fumbled the ball and Prout was sent in at quarter.

Fourth Period.

The strength of the local boys was seemingly good in the last period, for the best work of the day then became conspicuous. Both sides did some punting and although the ball was in the visitors territory the greater part of the time, still the defensive work of the local players was enough to offset any repeated gains. Chapman and Blackmur performed well on the ends, but the Cambridge boys, seemed to be able to penetrate Quincy line. In the first half of the game, the local line kept at a distance from the ball, and there was not a man on the Quincy High team who was within a yard of it. Coach Staff readily saw what was needed and was quick to take advantage of the situation.

The Quincy line did not show up as well as was expected. Even Captain Johnson, who last year was a tower of strength to the team, failed to show up to advantage. Findlay was the only man in the back field who displayed good form, although Holmes also did well, considering the few times he was given a chance to rush the ball.

The features of the game were a thirty yard run by Bradley, who proved to be the star of the game, and the all round work of Cowen, O'Connor and Coleman. For Quincy, the work of the two ends, and of Andrews and Page was about the best. Hingham High comes as the attraction next Friday and the local boys should experience no difficulty in annexing a victory.

The summary:

LECTURE AT TOWN POINT MEN'S CLUB

The men's club at the Point which last year had a very successful beginning, takes up tonight the first item of a very attractive program, when Henry C. Long of Boston will give his illustrated lecture on the "Development of the Port of Boston." The meeting which will be held in the church corner South and Washington streets, is called for eight o'clock and as it is of a semi public nature a large gathering is expected. Representatives from the Board of Trade and the Granite Manufacturers Association will be present, and any others who are interested in this subject, which is of vital importance to Quincy situated as it is on the water front are invited to be present to hear Mr. Long.

The club meets on the last Wednesday of each month, from September to April inclusive and as will be seen from the program given below, has for the current season a very interesting series of addresses etc., while a very pleasing feature is the social half hour and supper held at the conclusion of each evening's business. A hearty invitation is extended to all men not presently connected with any other club, to join and as the membership fee is but the norminal sum of one dollar per year, a large increase over last years membership of ninety is looked for.

WAS LUCKY ESCAPE

From Serious Injury When Auto Hits Carriage

OCCUPANTS THROWN

While driving to the polling booth at Atlantic, Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Barry of East Squantum street, were thrown from their carriage as a result of it being struck by an automobile that was going in the same direction. The accident occurred on Newbury avenue at a distance of about 200 yards from the voting booth.

Mr. Barry was badly shaken up, while his wife was so seriously injured that Dr. George M. Sheahan was called in attendance. There is a steep incline at the point where the accident occurred, and it is alleged that he head lights on the automobile were out as the machine was approaching Mr. Barry's carriage.

The automobile is said to be owned by a man named Brown, who resides on Farrington street, Wollaston, and was being used for the purpose of conveying voters to the caucus. The carriage was badly damaged and it is almost mirraculous that no fatality resulted.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

While the showing made by the local eleven against Cambridge Latin yesterday was not the sort expected still in justice to the players who represented Quincy High it must be said that they were lined up against an eleven, that is without a peer in interscholastic circles. Every man on the visiting team weighed 160 pounds, and this, together with the experience each man has had, proved a serious drawback to the local lads. For a starter, the showing was not exceptionally bad, although it was far inferior to that made by the local eleven in the first game last year.

The material this year is practically new, and while there is much latent talent that can be developed considerable time will be required before an efficient combination can be rounded out. Coach Staff is fully cognizant of the deficiences of the local boys and he will strive hard the remainder of this week to remedy them.

The next game is with Hingham High, one of the lightest teams to be found, and it is expected that considerable improvement will be noticeable, Friday, as ample opportunity will be afforded to try out various plays.

Larkin seemed to be at a loss yesterday to properly direct his plays and the failure of the backfield to perform in a fitting manner, had a tendency to disparage the entire team. Still the local eleven is by no means a poor one and before the end of the season may be able to give any of them a good battle, if the proper advancement is forthcoming.

Now that the enthusiasm over the poltical caucuses has subsided, the real interest will be stimulated once again this week, for the concluding game of the baseball championship series, between the Makarias and the Atlantics, will be played at Merrymount Park, next Saturday. "Patsy" Duggan and "Skiley" Kelley will be the new additions to the Ward Six team, and suffice it to say that the last contest proved sufficiently just what may be expected at the coming attraction.

MURDERER PLEADS GUILTY TO MANSLAUGHTER

Italian Who Stabbed Joseph Meir Receives A Sentence of From Five to Seven Years

Affair Took Place Last May In South Quincy

Vincenzo Bagerozzo, alias Jimmie Badger, who murdered Joseph Meir at South Quincy May 21, entered a plea of guilty to manslaughter, at the Superior court Wednesday, and was sentenced to not less than five nor more than seven years in prison. Bagerozzo and Meir had been paying attention to the same young lady and on the Sunday afternoon of the murder both had called at her home on Payne street. After leaving the house, a quarrel arose over the girl, during which Bagerozzo drew a knife and plunged it into the breast of Meir. The stabbing took place near the girl's house just at dusk and at the time several persons, including the girl, were near by. After being stabbed Meir staggered toward the house and collapsed on the steps. He died in a few minutes.

Bagerozzo succeeded in getting away, although the police call was sounded as soon as the murder had been reported, to call out all of the available officers. The murderer got out of town however, first going to the house of a friend on Columbus avenue. His friend, after learning what had happened, and seeing blood on the man's clothing drove him out of the house. From here the murderer went to East Boston, where he was captured later in the evening and brought to Quincy. He was indicted for murder in the second degree by the September grand jury, and when the case was calld, Wedsesday, he entered appeal of guilty to manslaughter. Joseph Meir, the murdered man, was a granite manufacturer and operated a small plant on Columbia street, South Quincy, a short distance from where the murder took place.

INTRODUCED AS NEXT MAYOR OF QUINCY

Representative Langelier Receives Fine Ovation at Church Supper in Atlantic

AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

The members of the committee of the "Useful" table for annual fair covered themselves with glory at a supper given in the vestry of the Atlantic Memorial church, on Wednesday evening at 6.30 o'clock.

REV. T. W. DAVISON
Who Introduced Representative Langelier as the next Mayor

Covers were laid for 225, the tables being artistically decorated with a profusion of flowers and autumn foliage.

The menu:

Roast Beef
Mashed Potatoes Peas
Scalloped Tomatoes
Pickled Beef Baked Beans
Olives Pickles
Cream Pie
Apple Pie
Coffee Tea

Mrs. T. B. Borst, formerly of Atlantic had charge of the affair, ably assisted by a committee of the following ladies:—

Mrs. Alfred Jelenik, Mrs. Herbert Gearwar, Mrs. Charles Stecker, Mrs. Charles Safford, Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. Hustead, Mrs. Bane, Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Locke, Mrs. Goyette, Mrs. Bwyer, Miss Elsie Badger.

The evening was pleasantly spent with some excellent speeches and good music. Proceeds of the affair are for the benefit of the organ fund, it being hoped that the new instrument may be installed before the Christmas season.

Among the speakers of the evening was Representative L. F. R. Langelier who was introduced by Rev. T. W. Davison as the next Mayor of Quincy, an introduction that struck a happy chord for it was received with rounds of applause which caused our genial Representative to blush as he arose to reply.

In opening his remarks, he said, I am very much pleased with the compliment paid me by our pastor in his introduction, but it must not be taken too seriously at this particular time. At the same time I would be remiss in my duty if I failed to respond to a call to service, provided conditions were such that I could accept it and give sufficient time to the duties of the office. This declaration was the signal for another outburst of applause.

REPRESENTATIVE LANGELIER
Introduced as the next Mayor

Continuing his remarks Representative Langelier said that this was the first opportunity that he had to meet the people of Alantic and he wished to thank them for the most hearty support which they had given him during the past three years. Speaking of Atlantic and the improvements that were taking place in the village such as a new church and schoolhouse he said that there was a tender feeling in his heart for Atlantic for it was here he came and took one of the fair belles of the village for his helpmate, and he had never regretted the choice he had made. Since that time he had made his home here and had found it an ideal place in which to live.

The frequent interruptions of applause that greeted Representative Langelier during his extemporaneous remarks, showed the high appreciation in which he is held by the people of his own ward.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Sidelinger.
Mr. Amos D. Albee and family.

The committee voted to continue their efforts and get thirty founders before Tuesday of next week. As this cause interests and appeals to all who understand its object this ready response is most gratifying. The amount of $1000 should be raised before Oct. 10th the date set by the committee. Remember it is to secure advice, assistance and cooperation among charitable, philanthropic and social organizations in the city of Quincy, to raise the needy above the need of relief, to prevent begging and imposition and diminish pauperism.

SEQUEL TO ASSAULT CASE LAST SUNDAY

Principal In Fracas At Houghs Neck Receives Sentence of Two Months

Man He Injured Also Goes To Prison

The sequel to the assault case at Houghs Neck, last Sunday, when Elmer Chapman received several stab wounds, was enacted in the district court, this morning, when William Rogers was given a hearing on the complaint for the assault. Chapman was also given a hearing on a complaint for drunkenness. He came into court Wednesday under the influence of liquor and after some talk was arrested and locked up.

From the evidence of the Sunday case, it appeared that both men were intoxicated and could tell but little of what led up to the assault or the assault itself. The principal parties were of the opinion that the cuts received by Chapman were caused by his falling on a pile of lumber. No knife has been found and both parties disclaimed owning any.

After hearing the evidence of Dr. Hallowell, who said that in his opinion the wounds were caused by some sharp instrument, the court thought that Rogers was guilty, although his counsel tried hard to have him out on probation.

Rogers received a sentence of two months in the house of correction for the assault and Chapman one month in the same institution for drunkenness.

SERVICE DISCONTINUED.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

All that the extra session of Congress amounted to was to afford heavy backing to the Washington ball team.

Johnny Canuck will never succeed in the grocery business by kicking his best customer down the back stairs.

If Wall street would only drink the water that it feeds out to the lambs, it would not be so worried about the steel shares.

The trusts must realize that the business world is a public highway on which every one has a right to pass without molestation, and not a fenced in clover field, of which they possess the only gate.

As Miss Canada does not dare talk about a jack-knife trade over the back yard fence for fear of being abducted bodily, either Uncle Sam is a very bold bad man, or she is a very timid little girl.

STOCK MARKET DROP.

Ordinarily the business man pays about as much attention to the shifty oscillations of Wall street as a sane minded traveller does to the whirl of the roulette wheel at Monte Carlo.

At times of course, the wider fluctuation of the market are the shadow of future economic events. Early in 1907, for instance, at a time when our mills were making overtime and our bank clearings were enormous, the stock market's steady drop forecast the panic of the fall of that year.

Again the spectacle of crumbling prices is witnessed, and business men ask each other anxiously what it may all portend. When twelve leading industrials have fallen from an average of 96. to 75, there is disclosed a widespread fear, which of itself constitutes a hazard.

Many a person brings on some serious physical malady simply by worrying lest he acquire it. Similarly the industrial world may become paralyzed merely through fear, regardless whether the fear is rational or not.

The stock market should not be taken too seriously. The purpose of the game is to make prices move, because it is only through fluctuation that the broker can make money. Human hopes and fears are his merchandise. After trying to trade in their hopes and finding no ready sale, he turns with equal alacrity to see who will buy their fears. The power that depresses the market is not so much the judgment of trained financial experts as to real values, as the belief of speculators that people are in a mood to take counsel of their alarms.

As for the danger of another 1907, real panics after all are born in people's hopes rather than their fears. There is some lack of ballast in human life, that leads men when once the skies are fair, to act as if no storm cloud would ever again rise on the horizon. They take on sail that almost upsets their craft under the gentle breezes of fair weather. At the first squall the top heavy thing goes over. But in days like these, with the storm clouds lowering off shore, when we are all sailing under double reefs or bare poles, actually the craft is more sea worthy than under fair but delusive skies.

AS GOLFERS TALK.

On one occasion an old lady was in the same railway compartment as a party of golfers.

"I found fearful trouble this morning," aid one. "At the first I fell right into the middle of a prickly goose bush, and at the second I was stuck up on the top of a tree. I pitched out of bounds into the farmyard at the third, got caught by the wire at the fourth. Stuck fast in a deep hole in the fifth, found myself buried in mud at the sixth. I was lying in a heap of rough flints at the seventh got lost at the eighth and finished up at the bottom of that dirty ditch at the last hole."

"Gracious me!" cried the horrified old lady from her corner of the carriage "and they told me that golf was an old man's game! I'll never let my Edwin play again!"—Tit-Bits.

NIAGARA IMPROVEMENTS.

Governments Join Industries to Beautify the Landscape.—Old Eyesores Marked for Destruction.

A general movement in which the United States, New York state, and Canadian government have joined with industrial concerns at Niagara Falls, is bringing about a decided change in the surroundings of the great cataract. Acting on the recommendation of the governments, the large power companies are decorating the shores with lawns and shrubbery, making miniature parks of their grounds, and designing their buildings to fit in with the national reservation scheme.

In recent years a nest of old factory buildings, on the American side of the gorge just north of the steel arch bridge, has been the chief offense to the eyes of the visitors. These factories used water power on a small scale long before the modern methods of power production were dreamed of, and they were put up purely for utilitarian purposes, with no thought of the effect upon the scenery. Now several of them have been bought out and marked for destruction by one of the power companies, and more are to follow.

The stretch of land on the Canadian side is a reservation called Queen Victoria park. Nothing that landscape architects and gardeners could do to make the place beautiful has been left undone. Through the cooperation of the government and the company which operates on that side of the Falls, the commercial buildings in or near the park have been made to look like art museums or libraries, massive and dignified. The efforts to make them harmonize with the surroundings have been so successful that many tourists do not discover until they step inside that the buildings contain water-gates, turbines, electric generators and business offices.

The only structure that can be seen in the gorge from the American side is one whose walls have been built to resemble the natural rugged cliff. The masonry has weathered now, taking on almost the exact shade of the surrounding rocks so that it is often overlooked unless pointed out by the guides.

Above the Falls this same company has created a separate little park to from the background for its watergate house. The landscape architect has laid out winding driveways and footpaths, and tiny rivers that run under ornamental stone bridges and broaden out into swimming pools. Seats are scattered about under the trees and along the streams. It is estimated that the company has spent $1,000,000 for purposes of beautification alone.

On the American side of the rapids still farther up stream, another company has just bought $13,000 worth of trees and shrubs, of more than twenty varieties, to form a sort of green belt along the water. This is just one step in the work, begun several years ago, of giving the property a park-like appearance. The buildings are of dark gray stone, with simple lines, unobtrusive in the midst of the green area.

The problem presented by the factories to the north of the steel arch bridge, however, was the most difficult of all to solve, because the defacing of the skyline had gone on a long time before the modern companies came into existence, and the village of Niagara Falls had used the place for a general dumping ground. The treatment has had to be correspondingly heroic.

First, the power company whose plant is nearest this point cleaned the gorge of all the debris and garbage, and planted such grasses and trees as had a chance to live. Then, after altering the design of the factories that had been bought out, it went ahead with the principal feature of the scheme—the construction of a rubble—stone cliff 200 feet high and 400 feet long. This is 14 feet thick at the base and costs about $75,000. It conceals the pipes through which the water falls from the top of the precipice to the turbines below.

The whole effect of the joint efforts of the governments and the companies is to minimize the evidences of industry and trade around the Falls. All new construction is prosecuted with an eye to beauty as well as utility, and the old blots on the landscape are being removed as rapidly as possible.

HOT CAMPAIGN IS PREDICTED

Both Sides Plan Early Start In Massachusetts

FOSS IS READY FOR FRAY

Will Lose No Time In Taking Stump—Republican Party Will Be Solidly Behind Frothingham In Contest—Enrollment of the Two Parties as Shown In Primaries—Total of 181,668 Votes Cast

Boston, Sept. 28.—Late yesterday afternoon a motor boat brought into Wood's Hole the last returns of the state primaries from the little town of Gosnold, which is made up of a dozen islands. Frothingham received 9 votes in this town, Walker 2 and Foss 3.

A revision of the vote increased the plurality of Secretary of State Langtry over Russell A. Wood to 38,777. The total vote is: Langtry, 72,393; Wood, 33,616.

Following is the final vote as cast at the state primaries:

Republican

Frothingham	66,118
Walker	27,999
White	18,426

Democratic

Foss	63,032
Hisgen	5,012
Total vote cast	181,668

Governor Foss met his rival at the state house yesterday and greeted him thus:

"My heartiest congratulations, Mr. Frothingham, upon your nomination."

Lieutenant Governor Frothingham responded: "I am sorry that I cannot congratulate you, but my nomination is the worst thing that could have happened to you."

The governor grinned and said: "Well, we will have to fight it out, old boy." They shook hands.

The last returns from the primary contests were not in when the wheels had been set in motion for the big fight for governor between Foss and Frothingham.

Governor Foss held a conference with a number of Democratic leaders throughout the state last night and discussed plans for the campaign. He is prepared to take the stump within a few days.

"I am going to get around among the people and talk to them as I did last year, in every town and city in the state," said he.

Independent nomination papers for the office of governor were taken out late yesterday afternoon by Augustus Seaver, known in labor circles as the editor of the Wage Earner. Seaver stated that his papers would be filed under the designation "Labor." He will be required to secure 1000 signatures to file his papers.

There is no question that the Republican party will be together and solidly behind Frothingham in the coming contest.

Yesterday afternoon Speaker Walker paid a visit to the Republican state committee headquarters and held a long conference with Chairman Hatfield. He announced his intention of going on the stump for Frothingham. Word was also received that White would take the stump if called upon.

Chairman Hatfield said that one of the biggest campaigns in the history of the party in Massachusetts was planned and that a large corps of stump speakers would be put on every platform in the state.

There is not the remotest possibility of any attempt being made in the legislature next year to kill the direct nominations law. Frothingham, Luce, Hatfield and Foss all sent out statements expressing their satisfaction with the first test of the new primary law.

An analysis of the figures of the primaries show that today there are enrolled in the Republican party 112,543 voters as against 68,044 in the Democratic party. The large Republican enrollment is due to the fact that there was a three-cornered contest for governor. The Republican vote came out well in the towns, but the Democrats were stronger in the cities.

Altogether there were 181,668 votes cast, about 45 percent of the total vote of the state. At the state election last year there were 423,525 votes cast. Draper received 194,173 votes and Foss 229,352.

About 55 percent of the voters did not enter the primaries. This was due to some extent to the fact that many did not wish to enroll in either party.

American Horses Win

THE LAST UNSWATTED FLY.

Poor Pet Bessie, and the Sadness of Her Demise

Bessie was the last fly we had. The others had all been poisoned, or tangled to death, or swatted, or we thought they had all gone; but I went over to Brown's and Bessie followed me home. I let her in at the kitchen door, when mamma was not looking, and she hid in the cupboard till supper time.

When papa sat down to supper he looked around him and seemed lonesome, as if he missed some familiar face. I said, "Papa, do you miss some one?" but he merely said "Ho-hum-ho" as if he was tired and everything was wrong, but he didn't like to complain. Papa misses friends that have gone away as keenly as some people would miss their meals.

He helped himself to meat and vegetables, and then he sat with his elbow upon the table, while his mind seemed to ramble over a moderately happy past. He would rally a little once in a while, and make a jolly little dab at his hairless pate, but one could see that his effort to be cheerful was a failure. He ate hardly anything at all, and was about to get up from the table when he suddenly roused with a start and looked and listened in the attitude of glad expectancy as one who should say:

"Hark! Dinna ye hear the slogan far awa'?"

Papa was not mistaken. As I listened I could faintly hear the breezy buzz of tiny wings. Then it happened.

Papa moved close to the table and began gobbling food in the cheery way trat mamma sometimes scolds him for. The complete abandonment of the hungry human animal who has not eaten with satisfaction for three or four days, seized upon him and he ate and ate. The only interruption came when he swung his arms around his head and shooed and swatted, and said: "Drat 'em! I will have their lives! and laughted, and enjoyed himself like a red Indian at a stake party. Bessie joyfully buzzed and bizzed in a circle around his head, or daintily helped herself to the viands on papa's plate. And everything was all right till mamma came in.

I was feeling as fresh as a daisy, though I had been limp and wilted with the heat all day, and I looked up at papa and said: "Papa you naughty man, you shouldn't swear!" And papa said: "Swear? Did your daddy—drat 'em!—did your daddy really—drat 'em! I'll have their skins, their eyes, their teeth, their pesky ornery lives."

He yelled and swatted at Bessie, and knocked the vinegar across the room, and just then mamma came in.

I saw a vindictive light in mamma's eyes as she grasped the situation, but I didn't think dear mamma would do anything very ungentle. I was rudely awakened. Mamma grabbed a feather duster and slashed at Bess and whacked and slammed until the little creature lay lifeless on the floor. I was too angry to cry, but papa dropped a tear, and listlessly put on his hat and started for the office to take up anew the gloomy task of living.

I always thought mamma was tenderhearted, but she ruthlessly killed little Bessie. And Bessie was the last one we had. I never supposed it would be so lonely without flies.—Chicago News

LOCKED IN A ROOM

Children Deserted by Parents Near Death From Starvation

New York, Sept. 28.—In a locked room in an East Side tenement a janitress heard the moans of children. She called a policeman who broke in the door and found two little girls and their baby brother almost unconcious from starvation.

Goldie Kurland, 9 years old, when revived with food, said that she and her 3-year-old sister and the year-old boy had been left locked in the flat since early Monday night, when their parents had a quarrel and left the house.

The children were turned over to the Children's society, which said that the baby would probably die. A police alarm was sent out for John J. Kurland and his wife.

Laurier Man Declared Elected

Three Rivers, Ont., Sept. 28.—The official returns of the recent election show a majority of two for the return to parliament of Jaques Bureau, solicitor general in the Laurier government. A judicial recount will be demanded.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL.

Great interest has been taken in athletics by the student body and never before has such a spirit been stimulated with regard to the welfare ofthose who wear the colors of the local institution. The call has already been made for contributions and the same have already been requitted in a generous manner.

In order to further aid the athletic management, a very interesting and at the same time instructive lecture, illustrated by stereopticon views, will be given next Wednesday afternoon and evening in the school hall. The lecture will be by Mr. Erwin of New York, originator of the famous Erwin lectures, which have already been offered several times in the schools of Boston. The talk is entitled, "From New York, through the sunny south, to the golden gate." It will include many scenes of historic interest and will embrace a wide imparting of knowledge of various points of prominence.

The lecture will take place in the afternoon at four o'clock, in order that the grammar school pupils may have an opportunity to be in attendance, and inthe evening at eight. The price for students will be ten and for adults twenty-five cents.

It is expected that a number of the grammar school teachers will avail themselves of the chance to accompany their respective pupils who are desirous of attending.

There is now a total enrollment of 818 students at the school, the largest in its history. A gain of 56 has been made over last year, and the sophomore class takes the lead in registration.

The members of the fottball squad were all put through a physical test last Monday by physical director Smith. The prospective players were all found to be in a condition suitable for the game and every one of the players successfully passed the test.

The staff of the Golden-Rod has already started active work in preparation of the first number and it is expected that the first edition will excel any output of previous years. Many interesting features have been introduced and every effort will be made to make the local edition one of the foremost school exchanges to be found.

The wood working machines, recently installed in the basement have been tried out to great satisfaction and the teachers of sloyd expect that the students inthis department will turn out some fine work when once they have acquired an accuracy in properly running the machines. Every facility is now to be had in the line of wood work, and some fine specimens of carpentry are now under construction.

ADAMS SCHOOL.

A meeting of the executive committee ofthe parents and teachers' association was held in the school hall Wednesday evening, and plans were formulated for various meetings throughout the year. A list of speakers was drawn up and it is expected that many an interesting talk will be at the disposal of the members of the association and their friends from time to time.

The soccer football team has been putting in some hard practice this week and a strong combination will represent the school.

ATHERTON HOUGH SCHOOL.

The members of the soccer football team have been practising very diligently the past week and the pupils of this school expect to make a fine showing in the league. Henry O'Brien is the captain and Warren Baker is the manager.

CRANCH SCHOOL.

A meeting ofthe executive committee connected with the parents' and teachers' association of the school, was held in the school hall last Tuesday. Practically the same schedule as was adopted by the association of the Adams school, was decided upon. The subjects for discussion will be along the same lines, but a different list of speakers will be determined upon. The list of speakers of both schools, will include those who have been before the public on different occasions and who are well experienced in the matters upon which they have been chosen to speak. The lectures will be well worth attending and the advantages to be derived from them are almost inestimable.

The soccer football team is in line with a strong aggregation and when the schedule of games starts, the pupils of the school expect to see their team mates rank among the foremost.

GRIDLEY BRYANT SCHOOL.

There will be an ice cream sale at the school next Monday evening in the interests of the athletic movements that have been started at the school.

Miss Catherine Dell, who has been confined to her home with illness, has fully recovered. She resumed her duties as teacher Monday.

JOHN HANCOCK SCHOOL.

The members of the soccer football team are exceedingly desirous of playing a series of games with the Coddington school team and if such a series should be arranged, there is sure to be some great interest displayed in grammar school circles with regard to the outcome. The schedule of games has not as yet been adopted but there is bound to be much enthusiasm manifested when once the season is started.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

There is to be an ice cream sale in the school hall next Monday evening in order to defray the expenses of the various athletic enterprises. The event will also be the first project advanced towards the securing of a new piano which is greatly needed.

Two soccer football teams have been formed at the school and both are fast contingencies. The captain of the first team is John Bonafini, while Armenico Colletti will general the second.

The services of Miss Clara Shaw, teacher in the seventh grade, have been necessitated at her home, owing to the illness of her mother and during her absence from the teaching staff, her place will be filled by Miss Alice Sheehy.

Pupils of the Willard school are to hold an ice cream sale at the school on Monday, Oct. 2.

WOODWARD SEMINARY.

A movement has already been advanced among a number of the girls to have the colors of the school worn in different branches by those who seem to possess any athletic. ability. It is expected that a basket ball team will be formed that will be able to cope with any of the girl teams among high school circles.

Miss Gertrude Mullen, formerly of Quincy High, has enrolled among the sophomores.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Gloucester high school has decided to abandon football this year, and all dates have been cancelled. The school has plenty of excellent material for a first-class eleven, but lack of financial support makes football in Gloucester an impossibility. For the past three years the team has been considerably in debt at the end of the season.

S. & H. HUSTLER'S CONTEST.

Hustling still continues in the S. & H. Hustler's Watch Contest, and the votes are arriving is large numbers at the Sperry & Hutchins Company's premium parlor located at the Quincy Department Store. Strange to say the girls seem to be more active in this contest than the boys. Six gold watches will be distributed to the winners. These time-pieces have a long guarantee on them, and will be an honor to the wearer. One boy who was down below the tenth mark on the list brought in a number of coupons today which will place him near the top.

A DISTINCTIVE NUMBER.

Always of unvarying interest, the Saturday, Oct. 7, edition of the Boston Evening Transcript will be read by thousands of persons with gratification and benefit because of the many specially written articles on a variety of interesting subjects which will be printed.

Anyone who has city, suburban, country or seashore realestate, houses or farms anywhere in New England to dispose of will find it advantageous to advertise in this issue of the Boston Transcript, as it will have an exceedingly wide distribution.

Many people who are not regular readers always look in the Transcript when they need a house, apartment, board or room, for they know that the largest lists of the better offerings are printed there as well as "want" advertisements of specially capable business assistants and good servants.

CHILD DROWNED AT N. WEYMOUTH

Playing on Old Pier, Plank Collapses and She Falls Through

BODY RECOVERED

Ellen, the 8 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McCann of Lovell's grove, North Weymouth, was drowned off the old steamboat wharf on the Weymouth side of the Fore River bridge, Wednesday afternoon, and it was not until the services of Hiram W. Phillips, the submarine diver were secured that the body was recovered. The little girl had gone to the old wharf to pick up wood. Many of the planks are old and while walking across them one broke and she fell through into the water and was drowned before aid could reach her.

The Quincy police were telephoned and the auto patrol wagon with grapling irons went down. After an unsuccessful attempt to recover the body with irons, Mr. Phillips who was working near by on a government job went down and recovered the body. It was taken to her home at Lovell's grove.

COLONIAL FAMILIES REUNION.

Dedication of Roger Conant Monument at Salem. Banquet, Ford Hall Boston.

Tuesday, Oct. 3, The American Society of Colonial Families will have general supervision of the unveiling of the Roger Conant monument a Salem, a subscription memorial o the great pioneer, costing $10,000. A least ten thousand people are expected to be in attendance on this event which begins at 11 o'clock, with addresses by the Mayor of Salem, and by Charles M. Conant, while the unveiling will be by Samuel M. Conant

In the afternoon beginning at : o'clock, many family associations, including The Alden Kindred, Bradstreet Association, Chase, Dudley, Conant, Fairbanks, Randall, Manning Smith and other well organized family associations, will meet in Ford hall, and the subsidiary halls in the Ford building, Boston, for the transaction of Association business, followed by a great banquet at 6 o'clock in Ford hall, at which it is expected that at least five hundred prominent representatives of the many famil associations will sit down.

Dean George Hodges of Cambridge President of The American Society of Colonial Families, will preside and make the principal address, followed by Marion Longfellow, the well-known lecturer, niece of the poet, and about a score ofthree minute talks by prominent men and women in a table talk presided over by George B. Gallup, Chairman of the Executive Committee.

The musical features of the evening will be many selections by the famous Boston Quintette, and a brigh playlet will be enacted by young Colonials.

The great underlying idea of The American Society of Colonial Families, which is conducting a series o important reunions and banquets this winter, is bringing together, into one democratic assembly, representatives of the original American Families The character and scope of the suggestion is rich in prophesy of the better and more intimate feeling and association that should be the keynote of all family gatherings.

It is not intended that this Colonia Reunion shall be a mutual admiration society based on an ancestry for which the present families were not responsible, but rather to inspire a feeling of responsibility for high purposes and lofty ends.

Into this reuion there shall come the helpfulness of bright minds clashing with the keener thought of today; historical reminiscences shall be only the background that shall throw out in bold relief the grand structures that have been reared on the basic colonial principles.

The officers of The American Society of Colonial Families are:—President George Hodges, DD., LL. D.; vice presidents, David Starr Jordan, LL. D. Henry Van Dyke, D. D., LL. D., Florence Hunt Libby and Roland Dwight Grant, D. D.; historian, Wilford J Litchfield, M. S.; chairman national board, William A. Randall; chairman executive committee, George B. Gallup; treasurer, Ernest A. Washburn secretary, George A. Smith.

Those who attend this Colonial Reunion should expect to be made to "feel at home." It is advisable to secure banquet tickets at once from either the secretaries of the Family Associations or direct of Mr. George A. Smith, Secretary of Colonial Families, 6 Beacon street, Boston.

INTERESTING LECTURE

At Washington St. Congregational Church

DOCK DEVELOPMENT

Henry C. Long gave an interesting talk before the men's club of the Washington street congregational church Wednesday evening on docks and the development of the dockage of the City of Boston. Mr. Long is an exceedingly interesting speaker. He has made a deep study of the question of public docks and is thoroughly conversant with his subject. His lecture was profusely illustrated with stereopticon views which showed many of the docks of Boston, as well as what other countries have done toward the development of their water fronts. Boston and New England possessed an unsurpassed water front, many countries with inferior advantages had expended millions for their development.

He also spoke of the vast agricultural country about Canada and the famous dock system of Montreal. Boston he said was being handicapped for the lack of decking facilities. Many foreign steamship lines that desired to secure a Boston terminal were unable o do so for the reason that they could not obtain wharfage.

There was a very large attendance at the lecture, several members of the Board of Trade and Granite Manufacturers association being in the audience. After the lecture Mr. Long was tendered a vote of thanks for his exceedingly interesting address.

CHANGE IN TIMETABLE.

An important change in the running time of cars on the line between City Square and Houghs Neck is advertised o go into effect Sunday. Commencing on that date cars will leave City Square for the Neck at 5.15, 5.35, and 6.10 A. M. and then every 10 and 40 minutes past the hour until 11.10 P. M. The last car for the beach leaves at 11.49. This will give the residents of Houghs Neck a late car to the beach every night which is something they have long wanted.

On Sundays, half hour time is maintained throughout the day from 7.40, having the same as on week days until 11.10 P. M. the last car. The first car for the beach Sunday morning leaves at 6.50.

Returning cars leave the beach for City Square at 5.40, 6.05 A. M. and then every 5 and 35 minutes past the hour until 11.35 P. M. The last car for Quincy leaves the beach at 12.10 A. M. midnight. On Sundays the first car for Quincy leaves at 7.20, then 8.05 and then every 5 and 35 minutes past the hour until 11.35 P. M.

Changes are also made in the running time of cars on the lines between North Weymouth and Fort Point, between East Weymouth and Hingham and between Hingham and Nantasket.

OCTOBER MAGAZINES.

Lippincotts. The literary event of the month is doubtless the appearance of a powerful new novel by Amelie Rives (the Princess Troubetzkoy,) published complete in the October Lippincott. Its title is "Hidden House," and the scenes are laid in Virginia, as were those of the author's memorable first success, "The Quick or the Dead," which was also brought out in Lippincott's. It is not too much to expect that this new novel will create furor than did the earlier work, for it cannot be denied that ta the Princess's former brilliancy and charm have been added a depth of feeling, a sudeness of touch, and a keesess of insight into the human heart and its vagaries, which could come only with added maturity. The plot of "Hidden House" is absolutely unique, and in realism, and in ardor, in facination, the story is matchless. It will be interesting to compare its popularity with that of the former work, of which hundreds of thousands of copies have been sold.

The recent substantial increase in size of the magazine affords room for a a greater number of short-stories than heretofore. Those for October are a diversified lot, with plenty of action and a goodly proportion of humor.

"New York is a remarkable city, isn't it? said the proud native.

"Yes, answered the impatient visitor "it's the only town I ever saw where one man with a truck load of barrels could tie up an entire street-car line." —Washington Star.

PRIVATE BLOOM IS MADE LIEUTENANT

Garrard Wanted Him Kept Back Because He Was a Jew

Washington, Sept. 28.—Private Frank Bloom of the field artillery has passed his examination and been commissioned a second lieutenant in the army. This was officially announced at the war department.

Bloom is the soldier that Colonel Garrard, commanding Fort Myer, wrote a confidential report about, saying that because he was a Jew and his father the post tailor at Fort Myer he should not be allowed to become an officer. For this President Taft severely reprimanded Garrard in a public order. Bloom has just finished taking his examination at Fort Leavenworth and received next to the highest rating of any man taking the examination.

French Destroyers In Collision

Toulon, Sept. 28.—The torpedo boat destroyers Trident and Mousqueton collided during the maneuvers of the French navy. Mousqueton was rather badly stove in, but was able to make port. No fatalities were reported.

Texas Candidate For Senator

Austin, Tex., Sept. 28.—Thomas M. Ball, leader of the Prohibitionists in the recent state wide election, will be a candidate to succeed J. W. Bailey in the United States senate.

—Lieut.-Gov. Frothingham is nominated for governor by a tremendous sweep and the republicans, thereby have the strongest of the candidates offered for the place. He is choses by a vote of nearly 67,000, against a total of 47,000 for his competitors, a majority candidate in every sense of the word and a man fitted in the best sense. Mr. Frothingham stood on his record, and the republicans have shown most decisively that they have entire confidence in his judgment, ability and high integrity. Of his steadiness and cool-headedness there can be no possible dispute. His opponents in the campaign for the nomination have had every advantage for a popular contest with the direct primary and the personal equipment each of them had for appealing to the party. There remains no shadow of doubt that the republican voters wanted Mr. Frothingham as a candidate for the governorship. There can likewise be no doubt that this feeling reflects the sentiment of the commonwealth at large. The lieutenant-governor is entered by way of the fairest and freest caucus contest Massachusetts has ever known and we expect to see him win the election as he has the nomination. There is no buncombe, indirection or uncertainty about the attitude of Louis A. Frothingham. — Boston Record.

CAR PLUNGES OFF BRIDGE

Eleven Persons Are Drowned in a Paris Auto-Bus

Paris, Sept. 28.—Eleven persons were drowned and ten others were injured by the overturning of an autobus into the Seine. The accident occurred about 4:30 o'clock, the busiest time of the day.

The auto-bus, with twenty-five passengers, was coming from the Jardin des Plantes in the direction of the opera. It was half way over the Archeveche bridge, leading from the left bank of the river to the island immediately behind the Cathedral of Notre Dame.

In trying to avoid a collision with another omnibus, coming in the opposite direction, the chauffeur gave his steering wheel a sharp turn. The heavy vehicle skidded violently, shot to the sidewalk, snapped the heavy iron railing as if it were a pipe-stem, and dropped into the river. The passengers were carried down, except two or three, who, standing on the rear platform, jumped.

KIDNAPPED BOY FOUND

Police Think Father Paid Heavy Ransom Which Was Demanded

New York, Sept. 28.—Five-year-old Vicent Sabella, son of a wealthy Italian wine merchant, who was kidnapped three months ago, was found wandering in a Brooklyn street yesterday and was taken back to his parents by the police.

The kidnappers had demanded $5000 ransom in a long series of letters, the last of which, received a month ago, contained a small piece of human flesh which was declared to have been clipped from the boy's ear.

The lad declares, however, that he was well treated all the time he was away. He can give no account as to the location of the house where he was detained.

The police believe that the elder Sabella yielded to the kidnappers' demands, although he denies the charge.

STRIKE ORDER HELD UP

Walkout of Railroad Men Had Already Begun at Some Points

Davenport, Ia., Sept. 28.—Telegraphic orders restraining workmen of various railway trades on the Illinois Central and Harriman lines from striking were sent out from Davenport by authority of the unions' international presidents.

According to President O'Connell of the machinists, no strike has been ordered and will not be until after a conference between international officials.

It is understood that various locals on the lines anticipated the strike order and had begun to walk out.

Plants Without Roots.

The "flower of the air" is a curious plant found in China and Japan. It is so called because it appears to have no root and is never fixed to the earth. It twines around a dry tree or sterile rock. Each shoot produces two or three flowers like a lily—white, transparent and odoriferous. It is capable of being transported 600 or 700 miles, and it grows as it travels, suspended on a twig.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

THE LIBERTE EXPLOSION

French Admiral Attributes It to Decomposition of Old Powder

Paris, Sept. 28.—Le Patrie quotes Admiral Marquis, formerly commandant of the Toulon naval station, and now inspector general of materials and member of the superior council of the navy, in an interview, as attributing the explosion on the battleship Liberte to the chemical decomposition of old powder.

So far as he knows, the admiral says, there was no evidence of a fire except from the magazines. The water conduits leading to the magazines were too small in diameter to permit of a quick flooding, he added.

CHAMP CLARK'S TALK ABOUT ANNEXATION

Bryan Hints That It Defeated Reciprocity In Canada

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 28.—In a discussion of the Canadian election in the coming issue of his Commoner, W. J. Bryan says that Champ Clark's declaration in favor of annexation was a very indiscreet utterance for one occupying a position of authority, and hints that it had much to do with the result because of the use made of it.

Mr. Bryan is of the opinion that it was unfortunate anyway that reciprocity was brought forward. First, because it gave the Protectionists of Canada a chance to appeal to anti-American prejudice. Second, because it turned attention away from the real reason for tariff reduction and laid temptation on the idea that a tariff tax hurts the foreign trade instead of the consumer at home.

CONTROVERSY ENDS HAPPILY

Germany Accepts Proposals Concerning Morocco

FRANCE GETS FREE HAND

Kaiser's Government Receives Adequate Safeguards For Her Commercial Ambitions and Acquires New Colonial Domain In French Congo In Addition—Generous Giving and Taking by Both Countries

Paris, Sept. 28.—The German minister of foreign affairs, Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, received the French ambassador to Germany, M. Cambon, at the foreign office in Berlin yesterday afternoon and informed him that Germany accepted the latest French proposals concerning Morocco.

In settling this controversy that has so lon kept Europe on edge war has been averted by a generous giving and taking by both Germany and France. France emerges from the controversy with unlimited political sway there which she coveted. Germany, it is said, receives adequate safeguards for the commercial ambitions for the sake of which she stirred up the entire dispute, and, in addition, acquires a new colonial domain in the French Congo over 150,000 square miles in extent as "compensation" for the renunciation of her political aspirations in Morocco itself.

As late as Sept. 12, when Germany's martial preparations had reached their zenith, there still seemed a chance for war. In the settlement business interests had a greater part than any other consideration.

In the course of the "conversations" between the two representatives of Germany and France, the former government agreed to drop all claims on Morocco in return for certain "compensations."

At present the French Congo extends along the Atlantic shore line from the southern limit of the German Kamerun territory to Lake Chad and the Soudan in the north; on the east, to the Congo state; and on the south, to the borders of the Portuguese state of Angola.

At present Germany has on the west coast of Africa and facing the gulf of Guinea the triangular shaped colony of Kamerun, which touches Lake Chad on the north and is cut off from the Congo by the comparatively narrow strip of French possessions of the Soudan with the establishments near the mouth of the Congo. On the east coast, again, German Southeast Africa extends from the Indian ocean to Lake Tanganyika, there touching the Congo Free State, which stretches in a solid block to the Ubangi river.

ACCUSED OF SHOPLIFTING

Rch Woman Arrested In a New York Department Store

New York, Sept. 28.—Mrs. Frances Walker, said to be the wife of a wealthy resident of a Massachusetts city, was arrested late yesterday and arraigned in court accused of shoplifting. A department store detective alleges he saw Mrs. Walker appropriate several articles of women's wear valued at $21 and slip them into a blouse jacket.

Mrs. Walker, who is a handsome woman and belies her age, which she gave as 42, was released on $520 bail furnished by the manager of a well known hotel, where she was stopping with her husband. Her husband declared that the arrest was "all a mistake." Mrs. Walker's examination was set for Sept. 30.

SAILORS IN GREAT PERIL

Cling to Mast of Vessel Two Days Before Being Rescued

New York, Sept. 28.—Details of the wreck of the three-masted brigantine Stephen G. Hart of New London, whose captain and crew of eight men were rescued at sea, Sept. 21 by the steamer Cactique during a hurricane and taken to Bermuda, were received by wireless last night from the steamer Bermudian, which is bringing the luckless mariners to New York.

According to the message the vessel was a derelict when sighted, and the crew had been clinging two days to the rigging of the foremast, which had survived the force of a gigantic wave, which swept the main and mizzen masts overboard.

BANK ROBBER A SUICIDE

Steals $1000 and Ends Life When Cornered by Pursuers

Salt Lake City, Sept. 28.—A bank robbery, followed by the pursuit of the robber through the streets, and culminating in the robber's suicide, occurred here.

O. W. Harvey, a former employe of a department store, presented a revolver at the head of Joseph E. Boud, paying teller of the Utah Commercial and Savings bank, seized $1000 in bills and rushed into the street.

Soon a crowd was in pursuit. Seeing that he could not escape, Harvey placed the revolver to his head and blew out his brains.

RAISING THE MAINE RECALLS STORY OF PLOT TOLD BY A NAMELESS WITNESS

Only One Permitted to Remain Incognito by Inquiry Board.

Taking Sailors' Bones From Mud Incased Wreck Goes On.

With each new ton of mud pumped from the mystery laden wreck of the United States battleship Maine, down in the harbor of Havana, memories of the historic disaster are revived—memories of strange happenings that preceded and followed the explosion which precipitated the war with Spain in 1898. The public has never lost interest in this greatest puzzle of the half century. If General William H. Bixby, chief of engineers, is correct in his recent guess that the solution of the cause never would be forthcoming, it is safe to say that the unsatisfied curiosity of the generation will be reflected in scores of additional historic dissertations, more or less accurate, upon the dual explosion that sank the warship. General Bixby, by the way, has not said whether his opinion is changed because of more recent indications that a part of the Maine's keel was blown upward by an exterior explosion.

Among the queerest echoes from the naval board inquiry held on a lighthouse tender just after the disaster, none presents a better field for the inquisitive than the story of the nameless witness.

Every other person who testified at that investigation was required to give his name and station and answer detailed questions as to his capability. The nameless witness, who appeared at the fifth day's session on Feb. 25, was permitted by consent of the judges to remain incognito. This entry appears in the minutes of the proceedings:

"A witness then appeared before the court, whose name and address are suppressed by agreement with the witness that his identity should not be revealed, and was sworn by the president, through the interpreter."

The Stranger Interrogated.

Questioning this witness, who apparently was a foreigner, presumably a Spaniard or Cuban, the judge advocate said:

"I have heard that on Tuesday morning you overheard a certain conversation on a ferryboat which referred to the possible sinking of the Maine."

Through the interpreter the witness said that on the morning of the 15th, or about fourteen hours before the explosion, he had been crossing from Havana to Reglas. He noticed a group of Spanish officers—two army men, one of the navy—talking to a stout civilian. One officer said, "That is nearly arranged." The citizen asked, "Will not making explosions in the bay run great risk to the city of Havana?" The officer replied in the negative, adding that the vessel "will sink immediately." Thereupon the citizen seemed overjoyed. "I will take plenty of beer on that occasion," said he.

The witness insisted upon the accuracy of his story, but did not know the names of the officers. One seemed to be a lieutenant; another was of rank at least as high as major and wore a belt indicating that he was on a general's staff. The citizen wore a big diamond ring. Portions of the stenographic minutes are as follows:

"What object did you have in informing the consul general of this conversation?"

How He Happened to Tell.

"He was talking with a friend in the Cafe St. Nicholas after this occurrence," replied the interpreter, summarizing the witness' answer, "and he told him all the conversation he had heard. The friend told him, 'Why don't you go and say something about this to the consulate?' He said he was afraid to say anything about it; that he would get himself into trouble. The friend said, 'I will go and inquire from some of these newspapers and see if there is any danger in it.' The friend went and inquired and said there would be no danger whatever, and he then determined to tell the consul."

"Did you go to the consul at all?"

"No, sir."

"What was the name of the friend you spoke to?"

"He says he will find out the name; that he is one of these friends whom you know without knowing who they are," replied the interpreter. "He will find out the name. He sees him every day."

"Is he a Spaniard?"

"He is a Cuban."

"The witness then withdrew," according to the record, "after being cautioned by the president, through the interpreter, not to converse about matters pertaining to the inquiry and after saying that it was not to his interest to converse with anybody about it."

Many False Trails.

The testimony of the nameless witness was but one of many pointers toward the trails that yielded nothing definite. That the naval court decided the explosion to have been caused by a submarine mine was due to the testimony of experts regarding the vessel's condition prior to the blast, the excellent discipline on board, the careful inspection of the magazines and the safeguards against an internal explosion in either magazines or coal bunkers.

It is generally believed that the outside explosion, if there was one, caused a magazine to burst inside, but prevailing opinion in this country has been consistently in favor of the outside mine theory, though it is admitted that such a mine might have been laid by Cubans as likely as by Spaniards. Perhaps, however, General Bixby is correct in prophesying that "the primary cause will never be learned." He has repeated his belief several times after noting the tangled state of the wreckage as it was gradually exposed inside the elliptical bowl of steel pilings. Yet even the general is not yet in a position to speak finally. The pumping is still incomplete, and the secret may be bared when more of the harbor mud is lifted away from the shattered hulk.

As the chief basis for the exterior mine theory is the opinion of officers who were attached to the Maine, their stories of conditions aboard are being recalled by old navy men, most of whom have read the testimony and reread it many times.

Captain Sigsbee testified that he had never permitted any loose powder to be kept in the magazines and that it was all stowed, so far as he knew, in the usual air tight and water tight cylinders, each containing one charge. He asserted, too, that the coal bunkers adjoining the magazines were well ventilated, had been examined regularly and were connected electrically to the annunciator near his cabin door. His confidence in the safe conditions of the vessel was reflected by the other officers.

Present State of the Wreck.

The latest dispatches from the scene of the wreck seemed to uphold the original belief. In the mass of twisted metal was found recently a curved piece of steel. Engineers say it is probably a portion of the flat keel of the Maine, and Ferguson, the naval constructor in charge of the examination, says that adjacent plates and beams are undoubtedly from the vicinity of the keel.

Practically all the water has been pumped out of the cofferdam, so that the wreck incased only in mud, with dots of remaining water here and there. The bow structure is mostly exposed. Examination of the uncovered plates, beams and ribs has indicated that they belonged to the structure of the double bottom, which is elevated to a height of forty feet above the normal position, apparently adding confirmation to the theory of a tremendous exterior explosion. But General Bixby may yet be right in his forecast. So confused is the wreckage that the indications of a Spanish or Cuban crime are not to be accepted in haste.

The Search For Bodies.

Besides having the object of solving the puzzle of the explosion, the government is raising the Maine in the hope of recovering bodies of sailors who went down with the ship. A few skeletons and loose bones have been found thus far.

Prior to July 20 it was figured that the bones picked out of the wreckage represented four or more bodies. On that day more bones, all fire scorched, were found near the overturned conning tower. The men who died in that vicinity probably were sleeping at the time of the explosion in hammocks suspended from the ceiling of the forward berth deck. This deck was folded back by the blast until its ruins lay over the central superstructure, fifty feet aft of its original position.

On July 22 the bones of six or seven additional bodies were found beneath the wreckage on the central superstructure. They were heaped together, and not one was intact. There, too, are probably the remains of sailors who slept on deck that hot night. The forward part of the ship was heaved up and fell upon them as they lay. Later, when the searchers reach the deeper sections of the vessel, whole skeletons may be found and possibly clothing or trinkets which may give clews to names. Four skeletons were taken on July 24 and another on July 27 from the berth deck. On Aug. 1 were found the bones of Assistant Engineer Merritt, and they were identified by a portion of an officer's cap and uniform and a fountain pen. The other sets of bones were found at the same time. The total finds thus far have been sixteen. About fifty-five bodies are yet to be traced.

The raising has proceeded far enough to show that the Maine's after bulkhead is practically uninjured. The question of building a bulkhead and floating out the stern section is still under discussion, but the engineers hesitate on account of the corroded condition of the deck beams and other structural members not protected by overlying mud. There is no doubt that the removal of the other portions of the ship is only possible by dissection. To finish the work congress will be asked soon to appropriate another $250,000, making the total $900,000. The task will not be completed for months, certainly not before late fall, possibly not until next spring.

IT MUST BE TRUE

Quincy Readers Must Come to That Conclusion.

It is not the telling of a single case in Quincy, but scores of citizens testify. Endorsement by people you know bears the stamp of truth. The following is one of the public statements made in this locality about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb street, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to tell of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. This remedy worked wonders in my case. Lame back and weak kidneys bothered me for ten years and nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Cox's Drug Store. The promptness with which this remedy cured me was astonishing. My strength and energy was restored and my health improved one hundred percent. I shall always endorse Doan's Kidney Pills when I have the opportunity." (Statement given September 2, 1908.)

A LATER ENDORSEMENT.

On August 9, 1911 Mr. Somers was interviewed and he said: "I am only too pleased to verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take this remedy occasionally and it keeps me in good health."

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Ridgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty. Bart shoots at Lidgerwood, whose life is saved by Dawson. Benson tells how his bridge timbers were stolen. The gang used the stolen engine.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Lidgerwood's watchfulness saves his train. The passenger train is wrecked, with loss of life. Lidgerwood suspects Flemister and Hallock.

Lidgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Lidgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

Lidgerwood gets a warrant for the arrest of Hallock, charged with murder. Bart attacks Lidgerwood, and Judson again arrests him. Eleanor refuses to leave before the strike begins.

Lidgerwood's friends and Eleanor's party arm themselves against the strikers. Gridley returns from a mysterious absence. Hallock has disappeared.

Only McCloskey's protest and his own anxiety for the safety of the Nadia's company kept Lidgerwood from leading the little relief column of loyal trainmen and headquarters clerks in person. The lust of battle was in his blood, and for the time the shrinking palsy of physical fear held aloof.

When the sally of the trainmaster and his forlorn hope squad had left the office story of the headquarters building almost deserted it was the force of mere mechanical habit that sent Lidgerwood back to his room to close his desk before going down to order the Nadia out of the zone of immediate danger. There was a chair in his way, and in the darkness and in his haste he stumbled over it. When he recovered himself two men with handkerchief masks over their faces were entering from the corridor, and as he turned at the sound of their footsteps they sprang upon him.

For the first rememberable time in his life Howard Lidgerwood met the challenge of violence joyfully, with every muscle and nerve singing the battle song and a huge willingness to slay or be slain arming him for the hand to hand struggle. Twice he drove the lighter of the two to the wall with well planted blows, and once he got a deadly wrestler's hold on the tall man and would have killed him if the free accomplice had not torn his locked fingers apart by main strength. But it was two against one, and when it was over the conflagration light reddening the southern windows sufficed for the knotting of the piece of hemp lashing with which the two masked garroters were binding their victim in his chair.

Meanwhile the pandemonium raging at the shops was beginning to surge backward into the railway yard. Some one had fired a box car, and the upblaze centered a fresh fury of destruction. Up at the head of the three sectioned freight train a mad mob was cutting the leading locomotive free.

Dawson, crouching in the roundhouse door directly opposite, knew all that Judson could tell him, and he instantly divined the purpose of the engine thieves. They were preparing to send the freight engine eastward on the desert division main line to collide with and wreck whatever coming thing it was that they feared.

The threatened deed wrought itself out before the draftsman could even attempt to prevent it. A man sprang to the footboard of the freed locomotive, jerked the throttle open, stayed at the levers long enough to hook up to the most effective cut-off for speed and jumped for his life.

Dawson was deliberate, but not slow witted. While the abandoned engine was as yet only gathering speed for the eastward dash he was dodging the straggling rioters in the yard, racing purposely for the only available locomotive, ready and headed to chase the runaway—namely, the big eight wheeler coupled to the president's car. He set the switch to the main line as he passed it, but there was no time to uncouple the engine from the private car, even if he had been willing to leave the woman he loved and those with her helpless in the midst of the rioting.

So there was no more than a gasped out word to Williams as he climbed to the cab before the eight wheeler, with the Nadia in tow, shot away from the Crow's Nest platform. And it was not until the car was growling angrily over the yard limit switches that Van Lew burst into the central compartment like a man demented to demand excitedly of the three women who were clinging, terror stricken, to Judge Holcombe:

"Who has seen Miss Eleanor? Where is Miss Eleanor?"

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE CRUCIBLE.

ONLY Miss Brewster herself could have answered the question of her whereabouts at the exact moment of Van Lew's asking. She was left behind, standing aghast in the midst of tumults, on the platform of the Crow's Nest. Terrified, like the others, at the sudden outburst of violence, she had ventured from the car to look for Lidgerwood's messenger, and in the moment of frightened bewilderment the Nadia had been whisked away.

Naturally her first impulse was to fly, and the only refuge that offered was the superintendent's office on the second floor. The stairway door was only a little distance down the platform, and she was presently groping her way up, the light through the upper corridor windows enabling her to go directly to the open door of the superintendent's office. But when she reached the door and looked within the trembling terror returned and held her spellbound, speechless, unable to move or even to cry out.

What she saw fitted itself to nothing real. It was more like a scene clipped from a play. Two masked men were covering with revolvers a third, who was tied helpless in a chair. The captive's face was ghastly and blood stained, and at first she thought he was dead. Then she saw his lips move in curious twitchings that showed his teeth. He seemed to be trying to speak, but the ruffian at his right would not give him leave.

"This is where you pass out, Mr. Lidgerwood," the man was saying threateningly. "You give us your word that you will resign and leave the Red Butte Western for keeps or you'll sit in that chair till somebody comes to take you out and bury you."

"WHILE I'M ALIVE I'LL STAY WITH YOU."

The twitching lips were controlled with what appeared to be an almost superhuman effort, but the words came jerkily.

"What would my word, extorted under such conditions, be worth to you?"

Eleanor could hear in spite of the terror that would not let her cry out or run for help. He was yielding to them, bargaining for his life!

"We'll take it," said the spokesman coolly. "If you break faith with us there are more than two of us who will see to it that you don't live long enough to brag about it. You've had your day, and you've got to go."

"And if I refuse?" Eleanor made sure that the voice was steadier now.

"It's this, here and now," grated the taller man, who had hitherto kept silence, and he cocked his revolver and jammed the muzzle of it against the bleeding temple of the man in the chair.

The captive straightened himself as well as his bonds would let him.

"You—you've let the psychological moment go by, gentlemen. I—I've got my second wind. You may burn and destroy and shoot as you please, but while I'm alive I'll stay with you. Blaze away, if that's what you want to do."

ULTIMATUM TO TURKEY

Must Agree to Italian Occupation of Tripoli or Fight

London, Sept. 28.—A news dispatch from Paris says that Italy has sent an ultimatum to Turkey saying that the latter must agree to an Italian occupation of Tripoli and that unless a reply is received today Italy will immediately proceed with the threatened occupation.

Malta, Sept. 28.—A private message from Tripoli says that Italian warships with an expeditionary force are lying twenty miles off Tripoli and that there is a panic among the Italian residents there, as it is feared that the landing of troops would be the signal for a massacre of Europeans.

The Anglo-Maltese colony in Tripoli sent an appeal to their compatriots. The telegram reads:

"We implore our brethren to appeal to the government to assist us and to come to our help, as the Italian steamers refuse to receive any but persons of their own nationality."

COLONEL GOLDSMITH DEAD

Oldest Grand Army Man Had Almost Reached Century Mark

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 28.—Colonel Edward J. Goldsmith, the oldest Grand Army man in the country, died at the Union hospital here. He was within a few months of 100 years old.

Two weeks ago while calling at the home of a friend he fell down a flight of stairs. He suffered a fracture of the hip, which, in his advanced age, proved fatal.

Colonel Goldsmith served through the Civil war as a private in the Fifteenth Massachusetts, and saw much hard service. He was given the title of colonel with an appointment to the staff of Colonel Van Zandt, department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic.

A son, William J. Goldsmith of Lynn, is the only surviving relative.

WIDOW AND HER SON END LIFE TOGETHER

Jump Into Lake After Man is Arrested on Serious Charge

Brookfield, Mass., Sept. 28.—John G. Lacey, steward of the exclusive Fay club, Fitchburg, due to face trial tomorrow on a serious charge brought by a small boy, and Lacey's widowed mother, Mrs. Mary Lacey of Fitchburg, their wrists strapped together and their clasped hands against their breasts, committed suicide by drowning in Lake Lashaway yesterday afternoon.

A handbag on the lake shore containing ten letters, one of which read: "When you receive this letter, we will be drowned," led boys and men to wade out a short distance, where they found Lacey and his mother dead in ten feet of water.

Medical Examiner Norwood of Spencer said the cases were undoubtedly of suicide to avoid the shame of Lacey's trial.

SENT TO ATLANTA PRISON

Bunch of Postoffice Thieves Disposed of In Granite State

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 28.—George Howard, John Kennedy and Thomas Mates, who have for several years given the police and government officers no end of trouble in postoffice breaks in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, were sentenced in the United States circuit court here to seven years in the federal prison at Atlanta for the robbery of postoffices at Canobie lake and Reed's Ferry on the night of Jan. 27.

Frank White and Arthur Williams, two more of the gang, pleaded guilty to breaking into the Reed's Ferry office on Feb. 10, and were given a sentence of one year each.

RED CROSS IS OFFICIAL

Society the Only One Authorized to Render Aid, Says Taft

Washington, Sept. 28.—The relation of the American National Red Cross to the military arms of the United States was definitely established by President Taft in a proclamation just made public.

It announces that the Red Cross "is the only volunteer society now authorized by this government to render aid to its land and naval forces in time of war." Any other body desiring to render similar assistance could do so, the president said, only through the American National Red Cross.

Ruling Against Foss Experts

Boston, Sept. 28.—Attorney General Swift has decided that Governor Foss had no right to employ experts after the closing of the legislature and that the governor's council may not allow them pay for the work they have done in appearing before committees. The men were hired at $5 an hour.

FLETCHER D. PROCTOR

Former Governor of Vermont Dies After a Long Illness

AFTER ILLNESS OF SIX WEEKS

Ex-Governor Proctor Dies of Heart Failure

WAS POPULAR IN VERMONT

Scion of Distinguished and Rich Family Followed In Father's Footsteps Both In Business and Politics—Head of World's Largest Marble Works—Was Known as a Very Partisan Republican

Rutland, Vt., Sept. 28.—Former Governor Fletcher D. Proctor, head of the largest marble works in the world, died at his home in Proctor after a six weeks' illness of heart trouble.

Fletcher D. Proctor was born in Cavendish, Vt., almost fifty-one years ago, his birthday being Nov. 7, and he was the scion of a distinguished and very rich family. His father was Redfield Proctor, who for many years represented Vermont in the United States senate and was secretary of war. The Proctors were one of the "ruling families" of Vermont and were typical New Englanders.

Fletcher Proctor was educated in the Middlebury high school and Amherst college. He graduated with honor from the latter institution with an A. B. degree in 1891. Seven years later Middlebury college conferred an LL. D. degree on him. When he was 26 years old he married Miss Minnie E. Robinson in Westford, Vt.

Senator Proctor was heavily interested in the quarrying business in Vermont, and his son followed in his father's business footsteps. He became president of the Vermont Marble company, of the Proctor Trust company, the Barney Marble company, and the Clarendon and Pittsfield Railway company, and he had other financial or business interests.

Senator Proctor became the most influential man in Vermont politics, irrespective of parties. His word was law in the Republican organization. His son followed him in politics as he had in business. Fletcher Proctor served in the Vermont house and senate, and was speaker of the former body. In 1906 he was elected governor of the state and served two succeeding terms.

He was a very partisan Republican. He was talked of for United States senator three years ago, but declined to be a candidate. While governor he made the railroad lobby mad by advocating an increased taxation of roads and the abolition of grade crossings.

He made his home in Proctor, Vt., where his fine mansion was within a half mile of the works of the marble company which he directed. He gained great popularity with employes.

New York, Sept. 28.—Walter L. Suydam, whose wife eloped with Frederick Noble, the youthful son of a Brooklyn plumber, was granted an absolute divorce by Justice Clark in the supreme court, Brooklyn, after a trial which lasted only five minutes.

Mrs. Suydam made no defense and was not represented in court. The wronged husband took the witness stand and remained on it less than a minute. He testified only to his marriage to the defendant.

SUGAR PRICES DROP

Big Cut by the Arbuckles Is Met by Other Refiners

New York, Sept. 28.—The severest cut ever made on any one day in the memory of the sugar trade occurred when sugar dropped from 7⅛ to 6¾ cents per pound. The corner in the price of the refined product has been suddenly broken by Arbuckle Bros. This cut in price amounts to about $2.50 per barrel.

John Arbuckle was said to be personally responsible for the reduction. Practically all of the other refiners met the cut at once. It is said that until prices are reduced to the normal other reductions will be made.

Sugar has recently advanced from 5 to 7½ and 8 cents a pound, equalling war prices.

FORTUNES LOST IN STEEL

Sudden Drop In Common and Preferred Wipes Out Small Investors

New York, Sept. 28.—Fortunes of small investors were wiped out in five minutes in Wall street when steel stock, after jumping up 5 points shortly after the opening, suddenly fell 7 points in the common and 8 points in the preferred in an apparently manipulated market.

There was a scramble on the part of the shorts to buy steel when the market opened, but the price leaped so rapidly that many were able to get in only at the top figure of 62 for the common and 116 for the preferred. The decline came with even greater suddenness than the advance.

ATWOOD AND ELY IN COLLISION

Local Man Hit as He Rises From Ground

ELY HURT

While circling around the aviation field at Canton, Ohio, late on Wednesday, aviator Ely plunged to the ground from a hight of 100 feet and struck Atwood's machine on the way down. Ely was cut about the head, but not seriously injured. The front of his machine was badly damaged. Atwood was uninjured. His machine was hardly scratched. The squally wind was responsible for the accident.

Because of the adverse weather conditions, few flights were made. Atwood and Brookins exchanged compliments. Brookins won from Atwood in the two-mile time flight and the tables were turned in the quick starting contest.

It was toward the close of the day"s meet that Ely was injured. He had been circling around about 100 feet from the ground and was making the turn at one end in the dusk when a wind squall struck him and tilted his machine. He pulled on the lever in an effort to right his machine, and he jerked the handle too far. Losing control, he plunged toward the ground.

Just at that moment Atwood was about to rise from the end of the field, and Ely's machine struck Atwood's when the latter had risen a few feet from the ground.

SOME GOOD BOWLING.

Bowling admirers turned out in large numbers Wednesday evening at the Granite street alleys, on the occasion of the second weekly roll off. Bean and G. Erickson, who captured second and third honors, respectivgly, last week, were again victorious, the former this time succeeding in landing the premier honors.

Beans' total for the three strings was 305. Bean, G. Erickson each made the highest single string, 104. G. Erickson, second man, had a total of 263 for three strings. C. White, the third winner had a total of 263 for three strings and 97 for a single string.

An added interest has been taken in the bowling outlook this season ard every roll off seems to bring out more followers:—

Jokai's Joke.

At a banquet held in his honor in Torda, Maurus Jokai was called upon to propose the toast of "The Ladies." He made an excellent speech, during which he continually toyed with the brown curls upon his forehead. Finally he said: "I raise my glass in honor of the gracious ladies of Torda. May they all live until my hair grows gray." His audience drank to the toast, but it was easy to see by the faces of the ladies present that they did not think much of the compliment. Jokai rose again from his seat and took from his head a magnificent brown wig, showing an entirely bald head beneath it. "My hair," he added, "will never grow gray." And the ladies, who had not known of his baldness, were more than pacified.

ANNUAL CUP CELEBRATION

Will Be Held Tonight At the Quincy Yacht Cl

RECEPTION AND BANQUET

The second grand cup celebration, under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club, will be held at the club house tonight and promises to be fully as successful as a similar celebration held last year. From 6.30 to 7 o'clock there will be a reception, during which the club members will have an opportunity to meet ex-Commodore Adams the skipper of the Harpoon, and other skippers of the sonder and cape cat boats. At 7 o'clock an adjournment will be made to the hall, where a banquet will be served. During the banquet the club chorus will render some of its choicest selections. Dinner over, the various cups and penants won by Quincy yachts during the past season will be presented. It is also expected that there will be considerable speech making during the evening.

BRIEFS

Miss Zita Pitts of Hancock street, has accepted a position as cashier at the Thompson Cafe.

A whist party under the auspices of auxiliary 5, A. O. H., will be held tonight at West Quincy.

A regular meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association will be held this evening.

Secretary of State sent 15000 ballots to Quincy for use at the caucuses. As there are only about 5000 voters, the number of ballots sent equalled three of each kind for each voter.

The registrars of voters meet at the Wollaston Hose House tonight to revise the voting lists. Under the City Ordinance the registrars must meet at least once in every ward to revise the voting list and add names.

Clyde T. Cox, the popular Temple street druggist, has returned from Maine after a three weeks' stay. Mr. Cox toured all through the prohibition state in his automobile and has brought back with him many interesting souvenirs of his travels.

A linen shower party was given in honor of Miss Anna Ryden, Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Louise Skinner, 283 Whitwell street, when Miss Ryden was presented many beautiful linen gifts. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable evening passed.

Rednor P. Coombs will probably be the Democratic candidate for Senator from the First Norfolk district as a result of Tuesday's caucuses, as sixty or more from Quincy caused his name to be written on the Democratic ballot. Mr. Coombs ran against Senator Barnes a year ago and carried the city receiving a total vote of 2406 to 2130 for Barnes.

Umpire "Silk" O'Loughlin says more hits are made on bad balls than good ones. "Silk" has seen thousands of hits made and says a big majority were on balls that were too far out, too close or too high or too low to be strikes. Free hitters like Lajole, Jackson, Cobb and Crawford seldom hit good balls. One reason is that they don't get many good ones.

HEAVY HITTING THIS SEASON.

New Records Likely to Be Made In Major Leagues.

MANY EXTRA BASE DRIVES.

Seybold Mark For Home Runs May Be Beaten or Equaled Before Season Closes—Other Batting Feats May Be Overshadowed.

By TOMMY CLARK.

When the baseball season closes in October the fans will probably have new batting records to discuss. Judging from the way the batters in both the American and National leagues are hitting the ball this year, new records are sure to be made. During the present season an unprecedented number of extra base drives have been made. There is every reason to believe that new records will be established for two baggers and three base drives as well as for home runs.

Since there is something magical in the words "home run" naturally the fans throughout the country are interested in the player who manages to get the greatest number of four base drives during the season.

TY COBB, DETROIT'S HEAVY HITTER.

At the present time enthusiasts all over the country are watching the bat work of young Fred Luderus, the Phillies' first baseman, who by his batting early this year became as famous as the noted Cobb or Hans Wagner. Luderus is after the home run record made in 1899 by Buck Freeman of the Washington Nationals. Luderus recently slumped in his batting and was replaced by Bransfield, but Manager Dooin believes on his return he will regain his eye.

"Socks" Seybold holds the American league record for home runs. He established it in 1902. The former Athletic in that year made sixteen.

Luderus' record compared to those made when baseball was in its infancy might be called a joke. The game, however, has changed much since then, especially the batting and pitching. Then, too, batters played a greater part in the game than pitchers.

It is a remarkable feat today for a batter to make two home runs in one game, whereas in olden times two and three were not unusual.

However, it is a fact that one man has made seven homers in a single game. On June 12, 1867, Harry Wright, playing for the Cincinnati club against the Holt club of Newport, Ky., made that number. A year later Lip Pike made six in one contest. As late as 1874 Al Reach, Kleinfelder and Potter earned the distinction of making five in a single contest.

Ping Bodie, another young player who is making good this year in big league company, eclipsed Freeman's record of twenty-five four-base drives. Last year, when the White Sox outfielder played with San Francisco, Bodie made thirty home runs.

Ty Cobb of the Tigers is also striving for a batting record. He is after the one Hugh Duffy set up in 1894, which was .438 for 124 games.

Duffy Lewis of the Red Sox is trying his hardest to beat the record made last year by Nap Lajole for two base drives. Last year Lajole made fifty-one doubles. Lewis has made more than half the number. If he continues his present gait he is confident of beating Lajole's mark.

Lajole also holds the record for the greatest number of triples made during a season. He established it in 1903, when he registered twenty-three for the season. To date Larry Doyle, Cobb and Cree have each passed the fifteen mark.

HERE'S ONE THEY TELL ON JIMMY CALLAHAN.

Here is one they are telling on Jimmy Callahan, the Chicago Americans' outfielder, whose comeback has been one of the wonders of the baseball world:

James was running a semi-professional team in Chicago and controlled a collection of planks and sod called by courtesy a ball park. One dark night a company of park hunting friends who wanted to pull off a benefit game for a wooden legged woman or tin eared orphans, drove up to Jimmy's residence and one of them went up to the door and punched the bell.

It was 1 a. m., and the maid was taking no chances on that door—in Chicago—at that time of night. Sticking her head out of an upper hall window of the Callahan mansion, she saluted the street fleet in the low necked cab with "What's wanted?"

"Is this where Mr. Callahan lives?" called one of the visitors.

"Sure ut be," responded the maid. "Bring 'im in—I'm comin' down t' unlock th' dure."

BOBBY KEEFE HAS NO EXCUSE

When the Cincinnati Pitcher Is Not In Form He Admits It.

Pitcher Bobby Keefe of the Cincinnati Reds is a nonalibi hurler. Bob never has any excuses to make. If he is hit hard he admits that the opposing batsmen had their eye on the ball, although he was dishing up his best stuff. If he is wild he admits it and makes no excuses. In one inning of a game he pitched the other day Keefe gave three men bases on balls and hit one man. The Reds had a pretty good lead, and Griff decided to leave him in and make him fight it out. Bob settled down. After the game some one asked Keefe why he was so wild in that inning.

"You saw why I was wild, didn't you?" answered Bobby in his characteristic fashion. "I couldn't get the ball over." And that was the only alibi Bob had to offer.

RALPH ROSE TO COMPETE.

Great Shot Putter to Get In Shape For Next Olympic.

Desirous of making the next American Olympic team, Ralph Rose, the champion shot putter at the various weights, is coming out of his shell to prepare for the iron sphere event in the 1912 Swedish games. The native son's determination to fight for a place on the big team no doubt will send a thrill into the other shot putters when they learn of this.

Rose holds all kinds of records in the shot put. He established the world's record with a put of 51 feet in San Francisco back in 1909. He won his event in the London Olympic games without the least bit of trouble.

The San Franciscan is credited with 67 feet 7 inches for the eight pound, 57 feet 3 inches for the twelve, 51 feet 6¾ inches for the fourteen, 43 feet 9½ inches for the eighteen, 40 feet 3⅝ inches for the twenty-one and 38 feet 2¾ inches for the twenty-four, besides his world's record put with the sixteen pound.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Quincy High will play its second game of the season tomorrow and the attraction will be the Hingham High eleven. In past years Hingham has not been favored with a high school eleven that could compare favorably with other school teams in the vicinity but this year it seems that there has been a strong nucleus at hand and Hingham will have a good aggregation on the field when play is called at Merrymount park at 3.30 tomorrow afternoon.

Considerable practise has been indulged in by the members of the local eleven, since the defeat of last Tuesday and Coach Staff has lost no time in endeavoring to put the team in the shape desired, to enable it to compete advantageously with combinations of the Cambridge eleven calibre. The lineup will be practically the same although Lewis will be used to a greater extent than last Tuesday. The backfield has also received considerable changes and it is not improbable that many shifts will be made and that young Prout will start in at the position of numeral announcer.

The attendance at the last game was fairly good, considering the condition of the weather prevalent the greater part of the day, but it is hoped that the student body will turn out in large numbers at tomorrow's contest, especially since a former school teacher is managing the work of the visiting eleven.

A number of fans have remarked during the past week that the Atlantics will not have a look in against Makaria next Saturday, as "Stan" Bates will be on the firing line for the "Charlie" Ganzel team. There is no doubt that Bates is about as good a pitcher as one would desire to see, but it is doubtful if he could perform as well as did Rice last Saturday, who allowed the heavy hitting Ward six players but two hits, both of which were made by "Charlie" Knight the former Adams A. A. star. It does seem that the performance of Rice last week was sufficient to warrant his appearance in the box at the final event and it is highly probable that he will start the game next Saturday and that "Stan" Bates will be on hand to go to his aid in cast there is need of succor.

Either Knight or Dickenshire, the Haverhill New England league recruit, will be in the points for Atlantic and with "Patsey" Duggan added to the lineup, the baseball season of the present year will reach a fitting climax next Saturday and the champion team of the city bids fair to be pronounced after a most gruelling struggle. The fans who were present last Saturday know exactly the article of ball that was displayed and they can rest assured that the variety this time will be of an equal order.

Dos't fail to attend the last game of the year, for it certainly will be a contest well worth witnessing.

ENTHUSIASTIC YACHTSMEN ATTEND CUP CELEBRATION

Informal Reception Precedes Banquet Where Presentations Are Made

Bermuda Cup To Be Presented To The Club

Fully two hundred enthusiastic yachtsmen attended the banquet at the Quincy yacht club house Thursday evening at the annual cup night celebration. It was an occasion full of yachting spirit, into which all entered and was one grand good time. In addition to the presentation of the Thomas Fleming Day cup for cat boats the Quincy Yacht club challenge cup and the cups offered by Rear Commodore Crane, for the boys cat boat class, which ornamented the head table, there were dozens of other prizes that had been won by Quincy yachts during the season, it being noticed that Edgar Emery, skipper of the Mudjekeewis carried away the most of them.

At 6.30 there was an informal reception in the smoking room, where Commodore Whittemore welcomed the visitors as well as the members of the Quincy club, and a little after 7 o'clock a march was taken to the hall where the supper was served. Here there were four long tables loaded with things good to eat. The first table was reserved for the invited guests, while at the second was the Quincy yacht club glee club. The choruses of all the popular airs during the evening were under the leadership of Henry W. French.

Among those at the head table were John J. Harland of the South Boston yacht club, Commodore Crosscup of the Wollaston club, Commodore Hinkley of the Squantum club, B. S. Permar of the Boston club, W. L. Carleton of the Corinthian club, T. H. Campbell secretary of the inter-bay club, L. M. Fowle yachting editor of the Globe, John B. Killeen, yachting editor of the Post, John T. Thornton of the Edgewood club of Providence, T. R. Goodwin of the Narraganset Bay association, Hollis Burgess of the Marie L, winner of the Bermuda cup, Benjamin Franklin, Jr., of the Narraganset Bay association, Rear Commodore F. F. Crane, Secretary John O. Hall, Treasurer George S. Morse, Vice Commodore Harry S. Crane, ex-Commodores Fred B. Rice and Herbert W. Robbins, and the various members of the crew of the winning yachts and others. It was expected that Mayor Shea would be present but a cold kept him away. Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston had also promised to be present but was side tracked somewhere.

The menu of the dinner included cold turkey, ham and tongue, escalloped oysters, chicken salad and potato salad, tomatoes, celery, rolls, coffee ice cream and cake. The cool evening air made the yachtsmen's appetites keen and it is hardly necessary to say that they did full justice to the excellent menu.

The dinner over, Commodore Whittemore said that the club thought, that after winning so many cups that it would be a good idea to hold a cup celebration and he was glad to see so many present. The thanks of the club were due to ex-Commodore Adams for

WOLLASTON MEN'S CLUB

Geo. B. Gallup of the Cosmopolitan The Speaker

INSTALLATION

The opening meeting of the Men's club of the Wollaston Methodist church took place Thursday evening with the installation of officers and a speaker on the Men and Religion forward movement as the program.

The ceremony of installation was conducted with all the mock solemnity that the occasion demanded and was under the direction of installing officer A. N. Murray.

With Storer Wiggin as marshal the president elect Eric H Ewertz was led to the platform and catechised as to his history past and present and his fitness for office. The proceedings were interrupted by the appearance of a messenger purporting to be from the wife of the new president instructing that he come home and finish the dishes and let the club run itself.

In his charge to the new president George Taylor president emeritus referred to the honors of office as passing to "Eric the bold" from "George the silent." The inaugural was already prepared by a member of the committee for the president and was read by the latter very much against his will.

To strains of music by Walter Sutermeister, both pathetic and heartrending, Vice President J A. Sedgwick was conducted to the fore. A portion of his duties consisted of the reading of an exceedingly brilliant edition of the Wollaston Herald, the club publication.

A. N. Belcher and H. B. L. Dimmick were respectively installed as secretary and treasurer with fitting ceremonies, the charge to the latter being given by the pastor, Rev Wesley Wiggin.

The speaker of the evening was George B. Gallup, Boston representative of the Cosmopolitan Magazine also a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and kindred organizations. His talk on the Men and Religion forward movement was enlightening and enthusiastic.

This movement said Mr. Gallup, is spreading like wild-fire and is the profoundest religious movement since the crusades.

It is sweeping the business man along with it and is bringing in the red blood of practical life to do the necessary work in the church. It has been founded on scientific lines and has generated enthusiasm, power and energy. In closing the speaker quoted a passage from the Mayflower compact that contained the germ of the idea.

Following the speaker, the audience were entertained by the remarks of Wesley Rhodes a new addition of the club who kept all in laughter with his humorous remarks and pat sayings. Refreshments and a social hour closed the evening.

APPEARED BEFORE BO TON HEALTH BOARD

Mayor Shea and a number of residents from Squantum, as well as residents of Winthrop and Point Shirley appeared before the Board of Health of the City of Boston, Thursday, to protest against the so called Spectacle island nuisance. The odors that come from this island is very offensive, at times, and it is claimed by the petitioners that it is detrimental to sanitation.

Frequently when the wind is just right, the stench at Squantum is sickening and the residents are unanimous in their desire to have the rendering plant discontinued on the island.

After hearing the petitioners, the Board of Health took the matter under advisement.

ELM STREET MAN HAD TUSSLE WITH BURGLAR

Edwin Menhenick Grapples With Man and Loses Grip When Pounded In Face

Robbery Reported on Upland Road

Edward Menhenick, who occupies the old Thomas Boylston Adams house, near the corner of South and Elm streets, had quite a tussle early Thursday evening with a burglar. Mr. Menhenick returned home at 8.30 and entered the house by the rear door. hearing footsteps, he lit the gas and started to investigate, when he found a young man standing in the middle of an adjoining room. He started for the burglar who ran through several rooms in an endeavor to escape. Before the fellow could unfasten a door, however, Mr. Menhenick grappled with him and both landed against a window which was broken. In the tussle which followed both went down and the burglar struck Mr. Menhenick a blow in the face and jambed his finger into his eye. This caused Mr. Menhenick to release his hold somewhat, and the fellow breaking away made his escape through the back door.

The affair was reported to the police and the auto with a squad of officers was sent down. The vicinity of the house was searched but no trace of the burglar could be found. The burglar's cap was found and this may furnish a clew. The police think that the fellow knew that the family were away and that he entered the house through a window in the pantry. Mr. Menhenick says the fellow was a young man with smooth face and dark complexion.

Burglars also entered the residence of Fred Drake on Upland road, between 8 and 11 o'clock, while the family were out for the evening and carried away a few articles of silver from Mrs. Drake's room. Entrance to the house was made by forcing a window. It is thought that the parties were frightened before they had an opportunity to get any quantity of valuables.

Up to this morning the police had no clew as to the identity of the party although they are inclined to think both breaks were made by the same fellow.

CAR JUMPED TRACK AT NORFOLK DOWNS

One of the cars on the Norfolk Downs loop line, left the iron near the corner of Billings road and West Elm avenue, Thursday night. The car was moving slowly at the time and there were eight or ten passengers on board. When the car left the track it ran across the street into the gutter. The passengers were thrown from their seats and there was some excitement for a few minutes. It was reported that William Hanrahan of Houghs Neck and Joseph Steinberg of Warwick street, Norfolk Downs, were bruised. Both men were attended by physicians and then sent home. The accident happened about 10.30. Just what caused the car to jump the track has not been determined.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

A swarm of bees has been seen on Fifth Avenue, New York. They were probably presidential bees just from the governor's conference in Jersey.

Women's hats are to be smaller this year, but the milliners will have some convincing reasons to show that this makes them more expensive.

Senator LaFollette, having begun his autobiography in a magazine, would it be bad taste to ask him if he came by his pompadour by birth or accident?

Mr. Taft admits he is a poor politician. Considering all the places still without a government building, he might as well admit his adminfstration a failure.

Killing off aviators has ceased to be news. People that want the details may find that the local correspondent of the county paper has written a line or two about it.

Aviator Miller went up because the crowd jeered him and was burned in the air, but the management cannot guarantee the public a regular attraction of this kind.

A WARNING.

The warning by the Boston Evening Herald that "parents, school teachers and football captains and coaches owe it to themselves, their charges and the community to see to it that every youngster who plays the game is in good physical trim" should be passed along says the Barre, Vt., Times to every community where the game of football is being played at the present time. Everybody knows by this time that the college game of football is not a sport for a weakling to participate in, nor for anybody who is not in good condition. It ought to be possible that every candidate for a football team be subjected to a physical examination before being admitted to engage in the strenuous sport.

THE TOBACCO TRUST'S PROFITS.

Commissioner of Corporations Herbert Knox Smith has made a report of the finances of the American Tobacco company, showing average earnings of 19 per cent. In the smoking tobacco business earnings of important subsidiaries were 55 per cent in 1908 The common stock of the snuff company, said originally to be all water, paid 27 per cent in 1910.

Even those opposed to government control of such combinations will advise the trusts to read handwriting on the wall that ought to be obvious even to millionaires of the primer class.

If they are wise they will ponder deeply on the decision of the express companies voluntarily to reduce rates. These companies did not make that announcement from pure philanthropy, or a spirit of self sacrificing altruism. It looked good to them as a purely business policy in the long run. And there are others.

We need higher moral standards in industrial service. Most of us grab all we can get, without examining the question whether we are rendering an equivalent service. The Socialist on the street corner with his red flag would probably be the most grinding kind of monopolist if he got the chance. For his standards being materialistic, he would be the least accessible, if in a position of power, to considerations of generous ethics above the power of the dollar.

For right or for wrong, wisely or unwisely, the people will not indefinitely tolerate inordinate profits. They will find legal methods of preventing them. A few years ago everyone was saying that no politician dared touch the great trusts in their arrogance. Now no man is so afraid to go home in the dark as the embattled trust magnate.

Many of the remedies proposed to accomplish these ends are crude, bungling, and unscientific to the last degree. The trusts can spare themselves from the blind fury of public attack, and save the country from an industrial crash, if they will adopt a policy of sweet reasonableness, and determine henceforth to charge only a fair return for their economic service.

If great economies and efficiencies are created by the principle of consolidation, give the common people a share of the saving, Mr. Trust Magnate! It will mean dividends in the long run!

DEMOCRATIC CITY COMMITTEE

Will Hold First Meeting of the Year Next Tuesday

SOME GOOD SPEAKING

The first meeting of the year for the Democratic City Committee will be called to order next Tuesday evening in the rooms of the Quincy Athletic Association, by chairman John D Smith The outlook for a successful year among the Democrats in local circles appears exceptionally bright and every endeavor will be used to aid those who are to carry the banner of the party in various departments. It is expected that a large attendance will be noticeable at the meeting and many interesting features are sure to spring up.

Efforts will be made to form a strong organization throughout the city and it is also expected that the gathering will be addressed by leading Democrats, including Mayor William T. Shea, Michael J. Sullivan and John J. McDevitt, the latter two being candidates for the House of Representatives this fall. Numerous rallies will be held in all parts of the city in the interests of the Democratic aspirants for office and with the Mayor and other prominent local orators taking the stump to espouse the cause of Democracy, political affairs give promise of taking a lively turn before the state elections are drawn to a close.

QUINCY YACHT CLUB

his work with the Harpoon in again winning for the club, the challenge cup. He was the fairest and best skipper in Boston harbor and he very much regretted that he was unable to be present this evening. We are always glad to see him, for we idolize him, as he sets the example for clean sport." He then introduced B. S. Permar of the Boston yacht club, who presented the prizes won at the races held for the cape cat series under the auspices of the Boston club, off Hull, last August. They went to the I. O. U. Dolly III, and the Arawak.

Hollis Burgess, winner of the Bermuda cup, said that he had not received the cup yet, but he expected it in a few days and he proposed to give it to the Quincy club as a perpetual trophy to be raced for on Labor day each year. The cup was accepted by Commodore Whittemore who promised to try hard to retain it and also promised some good prizes in addition for the Labor day race next year.

It was regretted that John D. Peck of the Clara was not present, but he was detained in Providence by the illness of his father. A letter was read from him, however, in which he expressed his thanks for the splendid time given him during the racing week and for the fairness in which the races were conducted.

Mention was also made of the illness of William H. Mears an honorary member of the Quincy club, who was in the hospital at Framingham suffering from injuries received in a street car accident at Holliston.

W. H. Carleton of the Corinthian club had a little to say about the challenge cups and gave a brief history of the several races that had been held for the trophy. He also spoke of the work of the Harpoon and said that it was hard to tell when any club would be able to get the cup away from Charlie Adams although his club would make a "try" next year.

J. T. Thornton, president of the Edgewood club of Providence, said he had a great deal of respect for Massachusetts sailors for they can tell us "what is what." Commodore Peck, he said, was a fine fellow and a good sailor. Last year we said there was a lot of things you know about cat boats we did not know, but we propose to learn them. He said, "we are proud to see Massachusetts yachtsmen at Rhode Island at any time and we will give you a good time." "He had a rattling good time this summer, racing in the 18 foot class, but was sorry that he could not have been is Quincy during the racing week."

T. R. Goodwin of the Narraganset Bay association, told of some of the experiences he had during the past season when he crossed the Atlantic in the Sea Bird. We had a fine time and he wanted to say that across the water there were held many good races, especially at Naples, where there were some good skippers, His party was royally welcomed everywhere they went, and it was an experience he would never forget. He then spoke of the inter-bay association. The first year it went slow. Last year the Iris and Dolly came to Providence and showed us a few things and there was nothing to it for us. He had hoped this year to turn the tables, but had been unable. Next year he wished for better luck. Personally he was interested in the knockabout class.

John H. Harland of the South Boston club told how much he had enjoyed himself. He spoke of the inter-club races during the past few seasons. Eight years ago he said that yachting had "flattened" out. The next year he was put on the regatta committee of the South Boston club and conceived the idea of the inter-bay club association. He then told of the formation of this association and what a success it had been and of the interest and good races held. He was always glad to come to Quincy. He was also glad to see that the club had adopted a 15 foot class. We want to promote yachting among the young men. The past year had been one of the greatest yachting seasons the Quincy club had ever had and he was glad that the Bermuda cup was to be raced for here next year. Is closing he extended an invitation to Quincy boats to come to South Boston at any time and they would be welcome. He also hoped that many boats would take part in the opening races of his club, next season.

Rear Commodore Crane paid a tribute to the boys for the good racing they had held the last season. They had sailed some snappy races and it gave him a great deal of pleasure to see that the cat boat class was to be perpetuated. This is the only true American rigged boat in the world. He then presented the Rear Commodore's cup. The list of prizes will be found below.

T. G. Campbell was glad the past season had been so successful to the Quincy club and hoped it would do even better next year.

Brief remarks were also made by Commodore Crosscup of the Wollaston club, Commodore Hinkley of the Squantum club and ex-Commodore Fred B. Rice of the Quincy club.

The prizes were then presented and were as follows:—

Rear Commodore Crane's cups were awarded to:

First, Kitten—Hayden Crooker.
Second, Alpha—E. T. Whittemore.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

On Monday evening, Oct. 2, the Majestic Theatre will offer for an unlimited engagement one of the most important of its bookings for the entire season, the attraction being Charles Klein's notable drama of absorbisg heart interest, "the Gamblers" which comes to this city following a record run of over 200 performances at Maxine Elliott's Theatre, New York. This play is credited with having made a more lasting impression and created a greater sensation than any theatrical attraction since "The Third Degree" and "The Lion and the Mouse," from the pen of the same author, both of which plays are memorable as the most widely witnessed offerings of this generation. "The Gamblers," both in theme and development, is far off the beaten path pursued by playwrights, and is said to be an absolutely accurate exposition of a certain phase of present-day American life that every class of theatregoer is familiar with and interested in. Wall Street and Fifth Avenue—the mainsprings of finance and fashion—furnish the locale for "The Gamblers," and dishonest banking methods and hypocrisy in high official life provide Mr. Klein with the theme for his narrative. The gamblers in this drama are not exponents of petty games of chance; the stakes they scheme for are the larger pools of Wall Street "high finance."

TREMONT THEATRE.

More than 50,000 theatregoers of Boston and the communities which surround it have seen "Excuse Me" during the six weeks it has been at the Tremont Theatre and the impressive success the Pullman palace car farce has achieved indicates that at least half as many more will gather at the Tremont Street playhouse during the three weeks that the piece has yet to stay in Boston. When he conceived the idea of making a farce out of the incidents that might be expected to punctuate a railroad journey from Chicago to the Pacific Coast, Rupert Hughes hit upon an absolute novelty of tremendous possibilities for humorous exploitation. Those possibilities were seized enthusiastically and when "Excuse Me" was written it did not require the trained intellect of an experienced play reader to grasp it's quality. The fun of it was so apparent that even a humorless dyspeptic could not have failed to realize it. Henry W. Savage produced it with all of the skill and care that characterize all Savage productions and sent it forth firm in the belief that "Excuse Me" would prove to be the farce hit of a decade. Results have endorsed his judgment. No similar production in the last ten years has scored such an immediate and immense success.

SCENE FROM "EXCUSE ME" AT THE TREMONT THEATRE.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Gus Edwards, the celebrated song writer and composer, author of "Sunbonnet Sue," "Goodbye, Little Girl, Goodbye," "Tammany," "Louisiana Lou," and over a hundred other popular hits, will be the principal attraction at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. Last season Mr. Edwards invaded vaudeville with his big Song Revue, carrying a company of thirty-three singers, dancers, and comedians, and eight elaborate scenes. It met with tremendous success in every city on the B. F. Keith circuit, and proved such a drawing card that Mr. Edwards was persuaded to make another tour this season with a new and even more pretentious production. The 1911-1912 edition of The Song Revue, as it is called, surpasses in spectacular beauty and originality ever his great act of last year. For this offering Mr. Edwards has written a number of new songs that are declared by those who have heard them to be the catchiest he has ever turned out. One of them is "My Italian Romeo," sung by Mr. Edwards and thirty Italian boys asd girls in a stage setting representing a village in Southern Italy. Another big novelty is "By the light of the Silvery Moon," introduced in a scene showing a beautiful sylvan lake after nightfall. Mr. Edwards is supported by Lillian Boardman and a company of forty people.

MISSING LINK IN BOSTON.

There is on exhibition at Austin & Stone's museum in Boston, the largest orang-outang ever seen outside of a jungle. He was brought to Boston by the captain of a British steamer and the story of the animal's capture as told by the ship's officers, is a remarkably interesting one. A party of natives, were ascending a river, when rounding a bend in the stream they heard the barking of an orang-outang Proceeding cautiously they soon saw a large fellow dancing wildly about a good sized crocodile, which was making savage rushes at the powerful ape. Suddenly at a favorable moment, the orang-outang leaped in the air, landed on the crocodile's neck and quickly snapped the life cords. Apparently satisfied that he had ended the fighting career of the reptile, the orang-outang pulled a few reeds, ate the soft roots, the while eying the struggles of the crocodile, and then ambled off into the woods, followed at a respectful distance by the natives. Toward evesing, when the ape had gone to sleep, they managed to secure it by means of lassees. On the way across the ocean he became a favorite with the crew and picked up a good tricks and learned to like the food of the human kind. He is nearly five feet tall and weighs more than 200 pounds.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

That the famous Irish Players at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, have scored a phenomenal success is evidenced at every performance when the seating capacity of this beautiful playhouse is severely tested. Not only has the theatregoing public raved over the remarkable genius displayed by this wonderfully clever organization, but the conservative critics of the entire Boston press, unanimously declared them to be the one great dramatic novelty of the decade. For example, the Boston Post said: "The Irish Players scored a tremendous success, when the final curtain ended the wonderfully realistic climax of 'Birthright,' the audience were carried away by their enthusiasm for the artistic simplicity of the Irish Players and applauded for more than five minutes." The Boston Herald said: "These plays were acted with a simplicity, a regard for the effect of the ensemble and a desire to serve the dramatist, that are rarely found on the stage today; these actors remind one of the best traditions of the French school." All the other papers were in accordance with the above. The engagement of the Irish Players is limited and lovers of the real art of acting would do well to pay the Plymouth Theatre a visit before the esgagement ends. The management of the Plymouth Theatre, which by the way is one of the most perfect theatres in Boston, make a special feature of caring for mail orders.

JANE COWL, IN "THE GAMBLERS," at the Majestic Theatre.

NATIONAL THEATRE.

Great crowds still continue to rush to the new National Theatre. This new Boston playhouse, the largest vaudeville theatre in the world, has been declared by the press and the people to be a tremendous success. In the past two weeks the theatre has been full at every performance. The National Theatre is located at 537 Tremont street, near the corner of Berkeley street, and very convenient to out of town patrons. Another big show has been booked for next week. The object of the new theatre is to give the people of Boston and vicinity the best show possible for the lowest possible price. The National-Boston consolidated modern minstrels will be retained another week by popular demand. Hugie Dougherty, Lew Benedict, Eli Stone, Thomas Clifford and Bob Evans are fast becoming great local favorites. New songs, and jokes that have the up to date label on them, will be heard. A burlesque on some well known show will also be given. Other big features are on the bill. The reserved seat plan at the National is very popular.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The first musical production of the season at the Castle Square will be made next Mosday, George Cohan's "Forty Five Minutes from Broadway" having been selected by Mr. Craig. Combining many varieties of dramatic entertainment in a single play, it promises with its music and spectacle, its comedy and chorus to be an exceptional attraction. Best of all, "Forty Five Minutes from Broadway" contains a plot, not a complicated one, but a plot that the spectator will enjoy and laugh over. It has to do with a housemaid and a will, and with New York and New Rochelle, which happens to be "Forty Five Minutes from Broadway," for scene, it will offer a picturesque set of surroundings amid which to place the characters. Critics all over the country have been loud in praise of this piece, and one of them has said of the characters: "From first to last they are at bottom clearly recognizable figures that seemingly have just turned the corner. They have character, and the more when clever players bring them to life." And clever players will bring them to life at the Castle Square. The cast will comprise the full strength of Mr. Craig's company, and to it will be added a large chorus. The orchestra and musical direction will be in charge of Joseph Marr.

CORONATION PICTURES.

The fame and the popularity of the Coronation motion pictures at Tremont Temple are increasing. Their ninth week begins on Monday, and it is especially to be noted that their educational significance is coming to be realized, and that large numbers of children are to be seen in the audiences, especially in the afternoon. Already several large parties of childres from the various schools of greater Boston have taken in charge of their teachers to view the pictures, and the management is making special prices to any who desire to take advantage of them. The color display of Coronation scenes shown twice daily are considered by authorities one of the most remarkable achievements in modern photography, and the success of the pictures at Tremont Temple is a tribute to them. A descriptive lecture is delivered by Eugene Farnsworth, and orchestra music is also made a part of the entertainment.

INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION.

The long heralded New England Industrial and Educational Exposition under the auspices of the Boston Chamber of Commerce opens Monday in the Mechanics building, Boston, for the entire month of October. This great exposition was designed primarily to show not only the people of New England but the entire United States as well, the great resourses and manufacturing industries of this section of the country. Not in any sense is it to be a local affair but in its broadest sense it takes in many of the industries from all of the New England States. Not only individual exhibits are represented, but in many instances the Boards of Trade of many of the cities have put in combination exhibits of a number of the industries of their locality. Not the least interesting item is that many of these exhibits are working or moving ones.

It will be the greatest affair ever held in any one locality of the country and will be, in reality, as far reaching and interesting as any of the international expositions. The object of bringing into closer touch manufactures of New England with its people, is one that is deserving of great support, and it is confidently believed that the attendance will be record breaking. No man, woman or child in New England can afford to miss this opportunity of seeing just what is being accomplished in our industrial structure. The entire building will be replete with novelties and interesting features.

TOWN CLERKS WOULD MAKE CORRECTIONS

Approval of Petition Will Overthrow Maine "Wet" Vote

Augusta, Me., Sept. 29.—Applications for correction in the returns of Limestone, Westfield, Athens and Matinicus plantation which, if finally allowed, would change the "Yes" plurality of 26 as officially tabulated to a plurality of 758 against the repeal of constitutional prohibition in Maine, on which a state election was held on Sept. 11, were made yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the governor and council.

The town clerks of the first three towns named were present in person with the records of their town meetings, but the Matinicus clerk failed to appear, although he was expected.

The governor and council insisted on having the record which was made in open town meeting and which, in each case, proved to be a specimen ballot upon which the town clerk had noted the result of the balloting and from which he wrote the result into his record book after leaving the town meeting. The records were simply examined, but no action was taken.

Yuan Shi-Kai May Become Premier of Chinese Empire

Pekin, Sept. 29.—The premier, Prince Ching, whose resignation before the reassembling of the tsuchens yuan, on Oct. 22, is a foregone conclusion, has recommended to the regent as his successor Yuan Shi-Kai, formerly a grand councillor and member of the board of foreign affairs, as the ablest man available.

If the regent appoints Yuan Shi-Kai to the premiership it will indicate, it is considered here, that the palace is alarmed at the state of affairs throughout the country and is determined to pocket its pride and recall to office a Chinese who holds the confidence of the empire.

DUNCAN PLAYS GOLF AT WOLLASTON

Following the precedent established eleven years ago by his British colleague, Harry Vardon, who secured a medal score of 80, George Duncan, another professional golfer from England, invaded the Wollaston golf links Thursday and made a record of 70 against the former record holder, Michael Brady. In the morning Duncan played with Dr. E. B. Soule against M. J. Brady and R. H. Freeman, secretary of the Massachusetts Golf Association.

Duncan had a score of 75 for the morning round, as did his opponent Brady. It was the first time the English star played on the local links and considering this fact his performance was exceptionally good. The quickness with which he starts the ball is astonishing. In fact Duncan would not take the bother to look at the hole ahead of him, but instead took the word of his caddy with reference to the distance. There was a great wind prevalent Thursday and this also had a tendency to make the performance all the more remarkable. Twice during the morning contests he missed his drive and twice he missed his short puts. He is likewise very clever in getting down upon those under twelve feet.

The morning summary:

Duncan and Dr. Sproule—

Brady .....3 6 4 3 5 5 4 5 3—36—75

In the afternoon Duncan met Brady in an 18 hole match and the Britisher won by 2 to 1, scoring 70 for the round, which is about two strokes lower than the record of Brady for the course. Brady won the first hole in his match by holing a 40 foot putt for 3, Duncan missing a 35 foot putt and taking a 4. Both players got 4 at the second. Things were about even until near the close when Brady topped his shot from the tee, going to the seventeenth Duncan's second shot was 40 feet from the pin which he ran down for three, and the match was ended as Brady took a four. They played the last hole and each took four.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

CONCERT THIS EVENING.

There will be a concert of unusual quality in the Swedish Congregational church on Garfield street this evening. Mr. Gustaf Holmquist, the famous baritone of Chicago, is to furnish the singing and the accomplished pianist, Paul Hultman of Worcester, has been engaged to give the instrumental selections for the occasion.

Mr. Holmquist's rich voice was first recognized by the director of music in the fashionable Plymouth church of Chicago to which he was called. In the oratorio societies of the west he has figured conspicuously as the leading soloist for a number of years, but he first acquired national fame in 1909 when engaged by Damrasch as soloist of the New York Philharmonic society, which toured the United States that year.

During the last year he has studied in Paris under Jean de Reszke, of world-wide reputation.

Among the Swedish people, Mr. Holmquist is known as the leading singer of the Swedish American Elite Choir which toured Sweden a year ago. The praise received from the press critics of that country is of the highest order.

Mr. Hultman is also known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He is the son of the popular gospel singer J. A. Hultman with whom he has given some 300 concerts in America duirng the last three years.

DIVORCE REFUSED.

Judge Quinn has just dismissed the libel of Ethel Parker Norrie in which she asked for a divorce from her husband, John Norrie, on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment, finding that the allegations were not sustained by the evidence. The case was tried at Dedham in the early part of this month, the trial lasting almost three days. Both parties are well known in Wollaston, and the case has aroused a good deal of local interest.

OCTOBER MAGAZINES.

SUBURBAN LIFE.—In Suburban Life for October, those who dwell in the beautiful places just outside the big cities will find particular delight if they have any inside-the-home problems, because the issue is devoted largely to the subject of interiors. "A Simple Home Interior Richly Transformed," "How We Can Have Good Plumbing," "The Choice of Lighting Fixtures," "Mural Painting for Suburban Homes," "Properly Heating the Suburban Home," and "Painting the Home—Inside and Out" are the titles of some of the richly illustrated articles. Mabel Osgood Wright, author of "The Garden of a Commuter's Wife," of "The Birds of My Garden." Margaret Woodward discusses "The Suburban Woman and the Church," and there are many other stories and pictures of gardens and gardening poultry, bees, the household and kindred subjects.

WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION.—The Companion contains the first chapter of a new serial, "The Poor Lady," by Mary E. Wilkins Freeman. It is a story of modern American life and is chiefly concerned with two women—one, an ambitious and unscrupulous wife; the other, fine, high minded and womanly.

In the same number a well-known financial authority writes an article of interest and importance to every woman He describes the snares set by dishonest business concerns to catch women investors, and tells many stories of real life illustrating his points.

Other notable articles are: "Experiments in Spending," "The Girlhood of Madame Schumann-Heink," "The Moving-Picture Show," "Money-Making at Home" and "Women Painters of America."

Splendid fiction is furnished by Juliet Wilbor Tompkins, Julia Truitt Bishop, Ernest Poole and Barr Moser.

On the practical side the October Companion is of special value. It great fashion and household departments are unusually full of useful suggestions and entertaining reading.

POPULAR MECHANICS.—The fact that the United States government recently issued the millionth patent was a matter of pride to both press and public and as such was brutied throughout the land. Nevertheless the number of patents connot astonish for size the person who keeps abreast of the times by reading Popular Mechanics Magazine. Rather, he beholds for every practical device protected by its inventor, the germination of a dozen ideas which are assimilated by the general public for its use Doubtless many of these would not be patentable, but they add their quota to the convenience, comfort and profit of human existence. The patent office represents but a tithe of the restless creative ability of the people. In the October number of Popular Mechanics Magazine there are 265 articles and 264 illustrations. Many of these articles describe new devices, others present new and easier ways of doing old things, and still others discuss the progress of the age and its problems. The dock and harbor facilities to be provided at Panama are described in interesting detail. An article of more than passing interest tells of the "fly swatting" contest conducted at Washington, D. C., in which a 13-year-old boy had 383,400 dead flies to his credit.

The Shop Notes and Amateur Mechanics departments for October contain the usual amount of good material gathered from the workshops of the country, and representing the experience of men of every occupation and craft.

TECHNICAL WORLD.—The following is a list of leading articles in the October Technical World: The Quest of Opportunity by Florence Woolston; Military Maniacs by C. F. Carter; Can Health Come Back? by T. C. O'Donnell; The Pivot of Trade by George H. Cushing; Raising the Maine by Chester Carton; Boys Build with Cement by Roy O. Randall; Light to Advertise Cities by Glenn Marston; Teaching Good Ears to Hear by Albert Grande; Joke that was Worth Millions by Rene Bache; What the Orange Grower Owes Uncle Sam by Robert A. Mack and Popular Science and Mechanics Supplement.

Women's Club Will Hold First Meeting Next Monday

WEDS MINISTER

The first meeting of the year for the Milton Women's Club will be held next Monday afternoon. Instead of two meetings, as heretofore, there will be three each month. The first Monday will be the usual home afternoon, the second will be given over to lectures and the third will be devoted to general discussions.

At the meeting on October 16, Meyer Bloomfield the noted civic worker, will give a discourse on "Immigration."

Considerable gain has been made in the registration of students at the various public schools, yet the number is less than the enrollment of last year.

A number of new voters have been added to the polling lists and a large vote is expected at the coming elections.

The first meeting since last spring, of the Milton Educational Society, will be held in the assembly hall of the High School on the evening of October 25th.

Milton High and Milton Academy clash in a football game, Saturday, and a large crowd of enthusiasts is expected at the game. Milton High lost its first game of the season to Woburn High last Friday, but since then considerable changes have been made in the lineup and a warm game can be looked for on this coming attraction.

The many friends of Miss Ida M. Crowther of Manchester street, were pleased to hear last week that she had been married to Rev. Arthur E. Gregg, pastor of the East Congregational church at East Milton. The couple will reside on Bryant avenue, East Milton.

A regular meeting of the Milton Historical Society will be held at the public library on the afternoon of October 4th.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Mary B. Allen of Newton to Henry S. Shaw, Jr., of Huckley road, Milton.

Miss Gladys Greene of Belcher Circle and Miss Catherine Gordon of Pleasant street, both graduates of Milton High, '10, have entered Simmon's College.

Mrs. Charles Brunt, of Brush Hill road, leaves next week for Europe.

Abel D. Jones of Granite street, has gone to Vermont for a two weeks' stay.

Rev. Henry S. Hunting, Jr., formerly connected with the Evangelical church, has accepted a call to a pastorate in New York.

Miss Agnes Neilson has returned to Philadelphia, after a two weeks' vacation spent with her parents on Granite avenue.

CONGRESSMAN WEEKS ON BANKING LAWS

The works of the monetary commission and its plans for modifying currency and banking laws were discussed before the National association of cotton manufacturers at Manchester, Vt., Thursday night by Congressman John W. Weeks of West Newton, Mass.

Congressman Weeks, who is a member of the commission, declared himself "optimistic enough to hope that the report which the commission will make next winter will be accepted and that the bill accompanying it will become a law.

"Certainly," he said, "there is today no more important question before the public and there cannot be one more important for congress to consider than this It will do more to preserve the stability of our commercial affairs and develop our foreign trade than any similar measure which has been considered since the days of the civil war

"It should be in no sense a political question, for now most men admit that the government has the constitutional right to authorize and use national banks as fiscal agencies, and those who would permit the government to issue circulation direct are comparatively few in number"

Uneeda Biscuit never disappoint!

You have never heard anyone say—"The Uneeda Biscuit in that last package were not as good as usual."

You have never said it yourself.

It is one thing to make soda crackers that are occasionally good.

It is quite another thing to make them so that they are not only always better than all other soda crackers, but always of unvarying goodness.

The name "Uneeda"—stamped on every one of them—means that if a million packages of Uneeda Biscuit were placed before you, you could choose any one of them, confident that every soda cracker in that package would be as good as the best Uneeda Biscuit ever baked.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Ridgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralised railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Ridgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Ridgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Ridgerwood leaps for life. He retains Hallock, who says Ridgerwood will regret this decision.

Trainmaster McCloskey, Ridgerwood and Gridley are called out on a wreck. Gridley tells Ridgerwood he has tackled a hard proposition. Gridley conspires with Flemister.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Ridgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rutford, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Ridgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Ridgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Ridgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Bart shoots at Ridgerwood, whose life is saved by Dawson. Benson tells how his bridge timbers were stolen. The gang used the stolen engine.

Ridgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Ridgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Ridgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Ridgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Ridgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

Flemister invites Ridgerwood to meet him at Little Butte. Spies follow Ridgerwood. Eleanor and her friends wish to accompany Ridgerwood to Little Butte.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Ridgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Ridgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Ridgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

Ridgerwood gets a warrant for the arrest of Hallock, charged with murder. Bart attacks Ridgerwood, and Judson again arrests him. Eleanor refuses to leave before the strike begins.

Ridgerwood's friends and Eleanor's party arm themselves against the strikers. Gridley returns from a mysterious absence. Hallock has disappeared.

The horror stricken watcher at the door covered her face with her hands to shut out the sight of the murder. It was not until Ridgerwood's voice, calm and even toned and taunting, broke the silence that she ventured to look again.

"Well, gentlemen, I'm waiting. Why don't you shoot? You are greater cowards than I have ever been, with all my shiverings and teeth chatterings. Isn't the stake big enough to warrant your last desperate play? I'll make it bigger. You are the two men who broke the rail joint at Silver Switch. Ah, that hits you, doesn't it?"

"Shut up!" growled the tall man, with a frightful imprecation. But the smaller of the two was silent.

Ridgerwood's grin was ghastly, but it was nevertheless a teeth baring of defiance.

"You curs!" he scoffed. "You haven't even the courage of your own necessities! Why don't you pluck up the nerve to shoot and be done with it? I'll make it still more binding upon you. If you don't kill me now while you have the chance, as God is my witness, I'll hang you both for those murders last night at Silver Switch! I know you in spite of your flimsy disguise. I can call you both by name!"

Out in the yard the yellings and shoutings had taken on a new note, and the windows of the upper room were jarring with the thunder of incoming trains. Eleanor Brewster heard the new sounds vaguely—the jangle and clank of the trains, the quick, steady tramp of disciplined men, snapped out words of command, the sudden cessation of the riot clamor and now a shuffling of feet on the stairway behind her.

Still she could not move, still she was speechless and spellbound, but no longer from terror. Her cousin—her lover—how she had misjudged him! He a coward—this man who was holding his two executioners at bay, quelling them, cowing them by the sheer force of the stronger will and of a courage that was infinitely greater than theirs!

The shuffling footsteps came nearer, and once again Ridgerwood straightened himself in his chair, this time with a mighty struggle that broke the knotted cords and freed him.

"I said I could name you, and I will!" he cried, springing to his feet. "You," pointing to the smaller man—"you are Pennington Flemister, and you," wheeling upon the tall man and lowering his voice—"you are Rankin Hallock!"

The light of the fire in the shop yard had died down until its red glow no longer drove the shadows from the corners of the room. Eleanor shrank aside when a dozen men pushed their way into the private office. Then suddenly the electric lights went on, and a gruff voice said: "Drop them guns, you two! The show's over."

It was McCloskey who gave the order, and it was obeyed sullenly. With the clatter of the weapons on the floor the door of the outer office opened with a jerk, and Judson thrust a handcuffed prisoner of his own capturing into the lighted room.

"There he is, Mr. Ridgerwood," snarled the engineer-constable. "I nabbed him over yonder at the fire, working to put it out, just as if he hadn't told his gang to go and set it."

"Hallock!" exclaimed the superintendent, starting as if he had seen a ghost. "How is this? Are there two of you?"

Hallock looked down moodily. "There were two of us who wanted your job, and the other one needed it badly enough to wreck trains and to kill people and to lead a lot of pig headed trainmen and mechanics into a riot to cover his tracks."

Ridgerwood turned quickly. "Unmask those men, McCloskey."

It was the signal for a tumult. The tall man fought desperately to preserve his disguise, but Flemister's mask was torn off in the first rush. Then came a diversion, sudden and fiercely tragic. With a cry of rage that was like the yell of a madman Hallock flung himself upon the mine owner, beating him down with his manacled hands, choking him, grinding him into the dust of the floor, and when the avenger of wrongs was pulled off and dragged to his feet Ridgerwood, looking past the death grapple, saw the figure of a woman swaying at the corridor door—saw the awful horror in her eyes. In the turning of a leaf he had fought his way to her.

"Good heavens, Eleanor!" he gasped. "What are you doing here?" And he faced her about quickly and led her into the corridor lest she should see the distorted features of the victim of Hallock's vengeance.

"I came—they took the car away, and I—I was left behind," she faltered, and then: "Oh, Howard, take me away, hide me somewhere! It's too horrible!"

There was a bull bellow of rage from the room they had just left, and Ridgerwood hurried his companion into the first refuge that offered, which chanced to be the trainmaster's room. Out of the private office and into the corridor came the taller of the two garroters, holding his mask in place as he ran, with McCloskey, Judson and all but one or two of the others in hot pursuit.

Notwithstanding the fugitive gained the stair and fell rather than ran to the bottom. There was the crash of a bursting door, a soldierly command of "Halt!" the crack of a cavalry rifle, and McCloskey came back, wiping his homely face with a bandanna.

"They got him," he said. And then, seeing Eleanor for the first time, his jaw dropped, and he tried to apologize. "Excuse me, Miss Brewster. I didn't have the least idea you were up here."

"Nothing matters now," said Eleanor, pale to the lips. "Come in here and tell us about it. And—and—is mamma safe?"

"She's downstairs in the Nadia with the others, where I supposed you were," McCloskey began, but Ridgerwood heard the feet of those who were carrying Flemister's body from the chamber of horrors, and, quickly shutting the door on sight and sounds, started the trainmaster on the story which must be made to last until the way was clear of things a woman should not see.

JOHNSON TO QUIT RING

Principals and Promoters of London Fight Give It Up

London, Sept. 29.—Champion Jack Johnson, the heavyweight fighter, last evening said that he would retire from the ring after concluding his English music hall engagements.

He gave no reason for his decision to quit the fighting game, but it is believed he feels peeved over the agitation that finally resulted in the calling off of his fight with Bombadier Wells.

The Johnson-Wells championship fight, scheduled for Oct. 2, has been abandoned by principals and promoters, owing to the opposition of the authorities and the larger element of the public.

LOOKING FOR JOHN SMITH

Five Wives and a Detective Seek Trace of Missing Man

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 29.—Five women—and there may be more—are seeking one John Smith, with vengeance in their eyes. They say they were married to him. He has escaped arrest so far because of his name. A detective with a warrant also is looking for Smith.

The wives hail from the Atlantic to St. Louis, and thence to Sabinal, Tex., and date from 1887 to last week.

TOO MANY JOHNSONS

Three Ask Court That Their Names Be Changed

AWFUL COMPLICATIONS

The name of Johnson is probably as good as any other, but there are so many of them in Quincy, and so much confusion exists, that three have applied to the courts to have their names changed.

A larger part of the persons bearing that name are among our Swedish residents and of the 151 Johnsons in the city directory, there are dozens who also have the same.

It is easy to imagine what confusion must occur. It is said that it not infrequently happens that a Johnson having a wife and several children, gets a letter from a fair maiden written in endearing terms Sometimes the letter is received at the home and is opened by the wife before the "old man" gets home. Then when he does come, he is put on the carpet and has a hard time explaining that he is not the Johnson for whom the letter was intended. Then dunning bills meant for one Johnson go to another Johnson and there is general confusion all around.

It was to obviate this confusion in a measure that the three Johnsons have asked the probate court to give them other names that they may get relief from some of the unpleasant situations. All of the three are carpenters.

Two are brothers, living at 66 Cranch street, and were both born in Sweden, one on April 21, 1887, and the other on Aug. 29, 1888. The older bears the name of Gunner, while his brother is called Godfrey. Dattman is the name chosen by the brothers to take the place of Johnson. Gunner asks for a middle name of Henry, so when their petition is finally allowed they will become Gunner Henry Dattman and Godfrey Dattman.

The third Johnson is also a native of Sweden, being born Dec. 13, 1887. His given name is August. There are six August Johnsons, and beside the petitioner there is another August Johnson who is a carpenter. The man who seeks help wants August Henry Morton to be his name.

In their petitions all three say they seek the change "for the reason that there are so many Johnsons resident and carrying on business at Quincy as to lead to serious embarrassment in business matters, letters and checks getting miscarried and mixed."

MOROCCAN DISPUTE OPEN

Germany Makes New Reservations In Her Reply to France

Paris, Sept. 29.—A semi-official statement says that the observations presented by the German government upon the last French proposals for a settlement of the Moroccan affair reached Paris yesterday and that the reply includes new questions and maintains reservations which requires examination.

The announcement of final settlement yesterday was premature.

Why Hisgen's Vote Was Small

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 29.—Thomas L. Hisgen says that the reason he received so small a vote for the Democratic nomination for governor on Tuesday was that he advised his friends to remain away from the polls and they took his advice. He himself didn't vote.

WE ARE PLEASED TO PRESENT YOU A MAP OF YOUR DINNER. STUDY IT

Meat includes the flesh of all animals used for food. Commonly, however, the term meat is applied to the muscular tissue, or lean, with the fat, etc., of three classes of animals, which supply beef, veal, mutton, lamb and pork; poultry, as chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks, etc.; game, including wild fowl and other wild animals, as partridges, grouse, quail, pigeons, rabbits, venison, etc.

The general cuts can be readily located by referring to the figures to the left and picture above.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Considers "Missing Link" In Street Car Line

SUGGESTIONS OFFERED

The West Quincy Improvement association held a regular meeting Thursday evening which was well attended. One of the first matters, was a communication from the Selectmen of Milton relative to the so called missing link in the street railway line between East Milton and Adams street. The selectmen promised to do all they could to further the project.

Rev. Mr. Martin of the Hall Place church gave an informal talk on beautifying the city. He said that where a city was level, it was much more difficult to make the lay out beautiful, but a city like Quincy, with its hills and valleys, it was possible to do so. He believed it would be a grand idea if the ladies could meet with the men and discuss plans looking to that end

Others thought that what West Quincy needed was a better class of residences and two and three flat apartment houses were advocated.

John Evans talked of the advantages to be obtained by advertising the home city and believed that people should talk Quincy when ever an opportunity offered

John D. Smith believed that there should be some program adopted for every meeting which would serve to bring out a larger attendance of residents If people knew there was something entertaining coming up, there was sure to be more present.

Dr. Ash thought it would be a grand idea to try and induce other industries than the granite industry to locate in Quincy.

The subject of a single five cent fare between West Quincy and Milton Lower Mills was also touched upon.

No definite action was taken on any matter however.

WILL NOT WAIT FOR PERMISSION

Italy Officially States That She Will Seize Tripoli

TURKISH ASSENT DEMANDED

Rome, Sept. 29.—The Italian government has notified Turkey of its intention to occupy Tripoli and Cyrene. Economic conditions offered by Turkey at the eleventh hour are rejected by Italy, which announces its purpose to protect its interests and its dignity in its own way, relying no longer on Ottoman promises.

Italy's purpose is set forth in a note addressed by the Italian foreign minister to the Italian charge d'affaires at Constantinople. This note is supposed to have been prepared some time during Tuesday night, but the exact hour of its delivery to the porte is not revealed.

The communication, while leaving no opportunity for negotiations over the fact of occupation, is an ultimatum in that it demands that the Turkish government reply within twenty-four hours declaring that it will not oppose the measures which Italy has adopted to effect the solution of the difficulty which it considers necessary.

In the absence of such a reply Italy will proceed immediately, "with measures destined to assure the occupation." The time limit, it is unofficially said, will expire at noon today.

The minister of foreign affairs has sent the following telegram to the Italian legations at Athens, Belgrade, Cittigno, Sofia and Bucharest, and also to the Italian consulates in the Balkans:

"The constant opposition of Turkey to all legitimate and economic activity on the part of Italians in Tripoli and Cyrene, and the danger which surrounds our nationals at this moment compels the royal government to take grave measures."

Italy Bolsters Up Her Case

Paris, Sept. 29.—The Italian embassy here has authorized the declaration that Italy seeks satisfaction from Turkey for a series of recent incidents. Among these "incidents" are:

The arbitrary arrest of Italian subjects at Constantinople and their imprisonment despite all the Italian government's remonstrances.

The seizure of an Italian bark in the Red sea by a Turkish gunboat.

The abduction of a young Italian girl from her parents by an Ottoman and the refusal of the authorities at Constantinople to compel her release.

The insecurity of Italians at Tripoli.

Italy, the embassy sets forth, demands satisfaction for these affronts and guarantees for the future.

The Turkish ambassador to France, Rifaat Pasha, has declared that Turkey will maintain the integrity of the empire. He says Tripoli is not a colony, but a vital member of the empire.

Powers Will Not Interfere

Constantinople, Sept. 29.—It is officially stated that several small Italian warships are cruising eight miles off Tripoli.

The cabinet renewed its consideration of the situation yesterday. Secrecy was observed as to the deliberations. It was evident, however, that the replies of the powers to Turkey's appeal for intervention had produced the bitterest disappointment.

Although the precise nature of these replies has not been made public, the powers apparently expressed their inability to interfere in the action of the Italian government.

WOLLASTON PEOPLE OBJECT

To Buildings of Coal Co. In Residential Section

WILL HAVE HEARING

Residents of that part of Wollaston near Woodbine street are up in arms over the prospect of coal pockets being built near the street. It is understood that a coal company has purchased the land now occupied as a granite yard, bordering on the railroad, and that it is proposed to erect coal pockets, hay and grain sheds. The people in that vicinity look upon this locality as a residential section and they resent the location of a business concern there.

One of the first moves of the new enterprise was to petition the Board of Health for a permit to erect a stable for ten or more horses. This question came up informally before the Board on Thursday evening. A number of residents appeared in protest against the granting of the permit. After hearing what they had to say the officials said that they would give a public hearing to all parties interested in the matter next Thursday evening.

It was reported that a building permit had been granted for the erection of the necessary buildings. Inspector of Buildings Warren S. Parker said this morning however that no such a permit had been issued. The question had been brought to his attention, however, and he had told the parties, before making formal application for a permit, they had better see what luck they had with the Board of Health in regard to a stable.

The location desired for the new industry is outside of the restricted district.

☞We notice that Berry Brothers have alluded to their lamb contract with the New England Dressed Meat and Wool Company in several of their recent ads. They claim that this lamb is killed especially for them one day and sold to the public the day following. They have evidently proven the truth of their statement if big sales on lamb reports mean anything. It is a pleasure to buy from houses that sell just what they advertise. How distasteful it is to go to any store and be told "We are all out of it but have something just as good for a penny more."

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Local amateur fistic aspirants, will have every opportunity to test their ability, at the coming boxing tournament, to be held in St. Mary's hall on the evening of October 16th, under the auspices of the Quincy Athletic Association. The movement to hold amateur boxing bouts has been under way for some time, and last evening a definite action was taken by the flourishing organization, by whose actively local sporting bloods will now have the chance to witness some interesting bouts.

There are a number of promising boxers in local circles, who can give good accounts of themselves, and it is now hoped that they will come forth and give this lively sport an enthusiastic boom. The project has already met with the approval of the leading sportsmen of the city and with good attractions carded, the exhibitions in the west section of the city should prove to be great drawing cars for hundreds of admirers of the pupilistic art.

The affair has been sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. U. and every participant must be a registered member of the amateur association. Of course outside talent will appear from time to time, yet the local boys should come forth in large numbers and thus add to the success of the different exhibitions.

Entries for this coming occasion may be made to Charles C. McCue 18 West street, West Quincy, or entry blanks may be procured from any member of the association. October 13th has been decided upon as the day on which all entries close.

The Quincy High School eleven should return from Hingham in triumph this evening Considerable changes have been made in the lineup against Hingham High. Blackmur has been taken from ten end and placed at quarter, while Larkin will endeavor to play the right end position. Bill will also be taken from the line and placed in the backfield.

Local fandom will turn out in large numbers at the final game of the series between Atlantic and Makaria, to be played at Merrymount Park tomorrow afternoon. The time for the start is set at 3 o'colck and from then until the last ball is fired, there will be something exciting all the while.

If you are interested in the game of soccer football, or even if you have never seen a game played and are at leisure tomorrow afternoon, go to the Water street grounds, and the chances are that you will hereafter be on the lookout for soccer games. The game tomorrow promises to be fast and interesting and the fact that the McGregors and the Boston Americans are the combatants, is sufficient announcement for those who have ever witnessed a game of this kind.

"Marty" O'Toole, the $25,000 Pittsburg beauty, lasted but three innings against Philadelphia yesterday. Can it be that the former Brockton star has not yet struck his gait?

The latest acquisition to the Brown University squad is A. R. Lien, a native of China, who was tried out at the quarter back postioin. Evidently the game is fast becoming inter-nationalized.

"Rus" Bates, a well known local athlete, is matriculating at the college in Maine, spelled the same as his cognomen and if his performances while here can be taken as any assurances, the local boy should be a great help to the athletic movements at his Alma Mater.

"Glover" Howe, another former Quincy High star, is showing up finely on the Amherst college football team.

MR. JOHNSON'S LECTURE ON HISTORIC QUINCY

Charles H. Johnson was greeted by a large gathering of pupils, teachers and friends Thursday evening at the Quincy Mansion school when he gave his lecture "Historic Quincy." Before beginning his talk he paid a touching tribute to Dr. Horace Mann Willard, founder and principal of the school, whose death a few years ago is mourned by pupils far and near.

Throughout the lecture Mr. Johnson had the closest attention of his audience which seemed to thoroughly appreciate the fine views of Quincy and Mr. Johnson's clear description of the many places of historic interest.

DIRECT PRIMARIES.

The first test of the direct primary for nomination of state officials in Massachusetts does not show any marked desire of "insurgents" in either party to overcome the wishes of the "regulars." Governor Foss wins renomination practically without opposition. Mr. Frothingham gains the right to make the fight for promotion from the post of Lieutenant-Governor without any serious attack by supporters of his "progressive" rivals. In some of the contests for nomination to the minor offices by Democrats there have been reverses that can hardly fail to have beneficial effects.

The number of votes cast throughout the state was large enough to make unlikely any serious effort to move for the law's repeal. Much of the "machine" wing of each party may unlikely any serious effort to move for the law's repeal. Much of the the "machine" wing of each party make like the new method for its potentialities when it is fully untilized, they cannot deny that there has been a fairly satisfactory poll of average public opinion. Not a few citizens, chronic civic drones, were absolutely indifferent. Others declined to vote at the cost of enrolling themselves as Republicans or as Democrats. But neither of these elements, by inaction, fundamentally altered the result. A majority of the candidates named fairly represent the average sentiment of the Massachusetts partizan. The opinion of the non-partizan, independent, balance-of-power faction of the voters will be recorded on election day.—Christian Science Monitor.

WAR IS DECLARED BY ITALY ON OTTOMAN EMPIRE

Turkey Must Yield or Fight. Italy Picked to Win In the Contest

Two Countries In State of War 2.30 P. M. Friday

Rome, Sept. 30.—Italy has declared war on Turkey. The official announcement was made late yesterday afternoon. It declared that the two countries were in a state war beginning at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of Friday, Sept. 29. This is the hour at which the Italian ultimatum to Turkey expired, and followed a session of the cabinet at which the Turkish reply was considered and found unsatisfactory.

Though every indication pointed to this action by the royal government there was always a possibility that the good offices of other governments would be successful in averting hostilities and when the final decision of the cabinet was announced the excitement throughout the city was intense.

Through the earlier hours of the day the papers had issued special editions announcing that the Italian fleet was moving in plain sight of the coast of Tripoli and intimating that war might be declared at any moment.

Turkey Evaded Direct Answer

Minister of Foreign Affairs San Giuliano received the Turkish ambassador yesterday morning and immediately went into conference with his associates in the ministry. It is understood that the Ottoman government completely conceded Italy's economic claims in Tripoli, but evaded a direct answer demanded by this government which had been set forth in its ultimatum that Turkey must say that she would not resist the proposed occupation of Tripoli and Cyrene.

Instead, the porte sent a conciliatory note suggesting further delay. It was known that at the same time Turkey transmitted a note to the powers in which it is assumed that she represented herself as the injured party and by inference at least sought their intervention.

The royal government decided to stand absolutely by its ultimatum of Thursday and in the absence of the reply called for to declare Italy and Turkey in a state of war from the hour that the ultimatum of twenty-four hours expired.

Italy's Declaration of War

Following is the text of the declaration which the Italian charge at Constantinople handed to the porte:

"The Italian embassy, carrying out the orders of the king, has the honor to notify you that the delay accorded by the royal government to the porte, with a view to the realization of certain necessary measures, has expired without a satisfactory reply reaching the Italian government. The lack of this reply only confirms the bad will, or want of power, of which the Turkish government and authorities have given such frequent proof, especially with regard to the rights and interests of Italians in Tripoli and Cyrenica.

"The royal government, consequently, is obliged to safeguard its rights and interests as well as its honor and dignity by all means at its disposal. Events which will follow can only be regarded as the necessary consequence of conduct followed so long by the Turkish authorities.

"The relations of peace and friendship being therefore interrupted between the two countries, Italy considers herself from this moment in a state of war with Turkey. I have, therefore, the honor to make known to your highness that passports will be placed at the disposal of the charge d'affaires at Rome, and I beg your highness to hand passports to the representatives of the royal government.

"Ottoman subjects may continue to reside in Italy without fear of an attack upon their persons, property or affairs."

Hostilities Have Begun

Constantinople, Sept. 30.—The Turkish war ministry, according to late reports, has received a dispatch from the late Turkish military attache at Paris, who has assumed command of the forces at Tripoli, saying that the Italians began to disembark yesterday afternoon, but the Turks succeeded in sinking the first two barges.

It is rumored also that Italian forces have landed both at Tripoli and Benghazi.

The Turkish cabinet has resigned.

Arabs Swear to Resist

Tripoli, Sept. 30.—This city, which is threatened with a hostile occupation, is desolate. Nearly all of the Europeans left Thursday night upon orders from the Italian consul and the streets are deserted except for squads of Turkish soldiers who are enthusiastic over the situation.

The Arabs have held mass meetings in all the mosques and taken a solemn oath of unity and allegiance to the Turkish flag "to the last drop of blood."

The Turkish transport Derna has discharged 2000 tons of ammunition stores and 13,000 Mauser rifles. These have been taken into the interior, 450 camels being used in moving the supplies.

BONE OF CONTENTION

Italy's Interests In Province of Tripoli Are Very Great

The trouble between Turkey and Italy, which culminated in this declaration of war, dates back to 1878, when, with the making of the treaty concluding the Russo-Turkish war, the powers are understood to have agreed to permit Italy a "pacific penetration of Tripoli." Turkey claims that this right has been respected ever since.

Italy has colonized Tripoli until her interests in that African province are very great. She has asserted, however, that her subjects have been mistreated by the Ottoman authority and constantly discriminated against.

When the Franco-German differences regarding Morocco became acute, Italy turned her attention again to Tripoli, set forth that many outrages against her subjects had been perpetrated without redress, assumed a decisive attitude and presently began the mobilization of her army and navy. A few days ago the first squadron of the Italian navy was sent to Tripolitan waters. At the same time Turkey was warned not to send soldiers or munitions of war to Tripoli.

Italy in the meantime brought her army to the Italian coast, where they had been placed on board transports, ready to proceed to Tripoli or other points. A second squadron is destined for Salonica.

Two Nations' Fighting Strength

Italy's army approximates 225,000 men and 14,000 officers, but a far greater number could be put in the field. The Italian navy consists, in vessels commissioned, built or building of 15 battleships, 9 armored cruisers, 17 unarmored cruisers and gun vessels, 36 destroyers, an equal number of first-class torpedo boats and 22 submarines. In the naval force there are approximately 31,000 men.

Turkey has a fighting strength of 9 coast defense ironclads, 5 protected cruisers, 6 torpedo vessels, 1 gunboat, 21 torpedo boat destroyers, 27 torpedo boats and 2 submarines.

As compared with the greater nations this array is a negligible quantity. English and American officers play an important part in Turkish naval affairs. The Ottoman army, as a result of the revolution which re-

CHARTER CLOSED LAST NIGHT

At Meeting of the Town River Yacht Club

THE CLUBHOUSE

A regular meeting of the Town River Yacht club was held at the newly acquired quarters at Edison park, Friday evening. Commodore Eugene R. Stone was in the chair and the attendance was the largest since the organization began.

The charter was closed and a number of new ones were enrolled among the list of charter members. The papers incorporating the association were read and all reports submitted showed great progress. It is expected that the building will be remodelled at once and preparations for the same were started at the meeting. The organization is now in a most flourishing condition and bids fair to become one of the most prominent in yachting circles. The matter of bodges, emblems and other minor details, were discussed at length and it is expected that some definite action regarding it will be reached by the next meeting.

SOUTH STATION ADDITION.

The Boston terminal company has planned a half million-dollar addition to the South station. This will raise the two-story portion on Summer street to the hight of the main five-story building 235 feet and continue on the Dorchester avenue frontage about 180 feet, furnishing about 250 additional offices on the three floors, together with elevators, stairways, etc. The addition will be in harmony with the existing structure.

The Boston & Albany railroad will occupy the third floor and the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad the fourth and fifth floors. Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge, architects of the original structure, are in charge and the work will be carried out under the direction of B. T. Wheeler, chief engineer of the terminal company.

AVIATOR HERE.

Howard W. Gill the aviator was one of the spectators in the district court this morning. He was interested in the case of his brother, Royal W. Gill whose case for manslaughter in causing the death of the Whitcomb boy at Holbrook was supposed to come up.

OPENING GUN IS FIRED IN LOCAL POLITICAL CONTEST

Candidates For Councilman Have Enthusiastic Meeting At Houghs Neck

Inclement Weather Did Not Dampen Ardor

The first political rally of the fall, held in the interests of aspirants to the City Council, was held Friday evening in Pandora Hotel, Houghs Neck, and was largely attended. The voters of that section have always taken the lead in starting the political boom and many a warm argument has been put forth on these occasions. All the members of the City Council had been invited and an invitation to be present had likewise been extended to every prospective candidate. Only the Houghs Neck candidates appeared on the scene, owing probably to the unfavorable weather, but they kept things lively throughout the evening.

James E. Wall, president of the Houghes Neck Associates was elected as the presiding officer of the evening and it was thought that this was the primary move preparatory to urging him to become a democratic candidate for Mayor. Mr. Wall stated that he was a democrat to the core and that while the majority of those present were republicans, he could assure them that any call to a worthy cause would always command his support.

The first speaker introduced was Harry C. Pennington, the Rock Island agitator, who had been hailed as a candidate for the Council. Mr. Pennington declared he was not a candidate but promised his support to the winner of the nomination.

He was followed by Edward P. Powers, who has been in the field since last July and who is at present waging a most active campaign to secure a seat in the hall of our city fathers. Mr. Powers outlined the various improvements needed at the beach and advocated in his remarks a public playground for Ward 1, better police protection, a public bathhouse, better fire protection and a better road leading into the heart of Houghs Neck. He spoke at some length on these various measures and was roundly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks.

The last councilmanic candidate to speak was Charles E. Decker, of Euclid avenue. Mr. Decker's remarks were inspiring and were received with applause. He said that he would not promise anything, of the superhuman order, but, if elected would endeavor to see that Houghs Neck was given the representation that it should have in the City Council Chamber. Continuing he said—"It is ambition to cut some figure as I pass through this life rather than go down to dust at the close, unhonored and unsung, that makes me a candidate."

It was expected that Councilman Ross would be present, for some were desirous of asking him a few questions, but John R. S. was unable to attend.

Others who spoke were ex-Councilmas Michael Walsh, Oliver G. Fosdick Ross Y. Woodbury, Thomas H. Buchan, George T. Jennings, Neil J. Regan, Archie F. Baird, John P. Moses and Walter E. Blanchard.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

First church dome at the present time certainly has a rosy glow.

Mr. Taft says dissipation is frowned on in the colleges. Perhaps that's why it is so popular.

Although many people are starting to cross the country by aeroplane, the germ laden sleeping cars are probably a healthier method of making the journey.

Brockton Fair next week and every one is hoping it will have its usual good weather. Nothing adds to the pleasure of out door fairs like clear skies.

Does yesterday's weather mean that that is the kind that is to be handed out to us for October? Golden October should be pleasant the last Friday in the month notwithstanding.

It having been announced that Texas has gone wet, the people of that honored state will perhaps now retire from the bulletin boards and resume their ordinary occupations.

The old fashioned girl used to put up preserves about now. Mrs. Newlywed is too busy writing papers for the Woman's club about preserving our institutions.

All factions are uniting to welcome President Taft. All differences fade out of patriotic hearts at the inspiring thought of post offices and clerkships.

If Mr. Wickersham has his way, a number of our revered trust magnates will soon have the useful opportunity to acquire the art of caning chairs and other select indoor occupations.

Aviator Rodgers tore into a barbed wire fence the other day, showing that it is going to be quite a problem for the householder to put up fences high and strong enough to be aeroplane proof.

The Maine was blown up from the outside, but was it merely the Spanish method of receiving Uncle Sam's visiting card, or was some Cuban setting the hand's of time's clock along a little?

A hay rack full of people was run over by a train at Neenah, Wis. In our experience as boys on the farm we always kept at a safe distance from the hay wagon as a dangerous vehicle.

It is said that trust reorganization will be fruitless. But having recently saved $27,000,000 on railroad rates, the Consumer feels inclined to give Uncle Sam another job as purchasing agent from the trusts.

Although Mr. Taft was not to blame for Canada's stupidity, yet the fact remains that an entire session of Congress was allowed to pass without accomplishing one thing for the removal of needless taxes.

Houston, Tex., housewives are boycotting sugar on account of high prices. The dispatches fail to state an instance where any of the girls turned down a box of candy. There are ways in which it is cheaper to get married.

TRIAL OF THE PRIMARIES.

In some places it was evident, says the Brockton Enterprise, that the new primary law, while regarded as satisfactory to the mass of those who went to the caucuses, is not wholly popular. At Chicopee they are openly scolding about it. The Chicopee correspondent of the Springfield Republican says: "The voting was light all day, and the campaign leaders attributed the cause to the fact that the voters did not like to declare themselves. There were a number of cases of voters refusing to take a ballot and fill it out when they learned that they must state what party ballot they wanted. In some cases these men returned again to the polling places, but in others they would not return. In ward 3 one man became exceedingly angry on being questioned as to what party ballot he wanted. He vehemently denounced what he called an attempt of the men in charge of the polling place to interfere with his business. Ward 2 had a man who also loudly objcted to being asked questions regarding the ballot that he proposed to cast. He was pacified after the new law had been explained to him."

The primary calls on a man to declare himself in the caucus, but allows him of course, to vote as he pleases when the actual election takes place.

And now the following appeals to Quincy as well as Brockton. From what we hear it was an all night job for those who had the count in charge.

This from Brockton:—"There is another class to whom the primary as conducted in some places does not appeal, while they admit its general usefulness. Where the polls do not close till 9 in the evening it means in some places all-night work for some newspaper men. If it takes till 4 in the morning to get in the returns where the vote was as light comparatively as it was in Brockton at what time would a genuinely big vote be counted in case there was such deep interest in the nominations that thousands came out to vote in place of hundreds? Answer—Nobody can imagine. Why not close the polls in Brockton as in some other places—at 4? If people can get out to vote at regular elections anywhere from 6 A. M. to 4 P. M., why can't they get out to the primaries in similar hours?"

BIBLE QUESTION BOX.

The Daily Ledger today announces a brand new feature, "EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX." We say "brand new" because it is brand new.

We expect much from this new feature in the matter of arousing a genuine interest in the mystical and strange, yet beautiful allegorical pictures of the Jewish Law and prophets of old, and hope also to call forth interesting explanations of many paradoxical statements of the New Testament.

Every person that believes the Bible to be Jehovah's revelation to mankind, setting forth certain rules of righteousness and his promises of rewards for obedience, should, in order to render acceptable obedience, adoration and worship, have an intelligent understanding of the message contained therein. To those of our readers, who, for supposed or real Scriptural reasons, do not believe the Bible to be of Divine inspiration we extend a special invitation to send to our BIBLE QUESTION BOX EDITOR questions on such Scriptures as seem to them to justify their attitude of mind.

The Bible states and Bible teachers believe that "The Truth shall make you free," and all adherents of the Bible should rejoice in the opportunity of shedding their Twentieth Century light of explanation on perplexing questions and Bible problems in order that the truth may prevail.

We believe that "EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX" will, in effect, place the Bible on trial before the tribunal of public opinion, and surely much truth will be brought to light, which must necessarily be for the everlasting welfare of all.

Questions on Scripture texts sent to EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX EDITOR, to be answered, should bear the name and address of the questioner. All such Bible questions received will be answered within sixty days in EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX or by mail. All correspondence will be treated in strictest confidence and a clear distinction will be made in the questions answered publicly or privately. We will publish one question with its answer each day, followed by the question for the following day.

YOUR questions are invited. Send them in early and often.

STEEL vs. WOOD
Your old black walnut desk may be a good looking piece of furniture but it isn't the modern place to keep your valuable papers, your jewelry, or money. It can burn readily, its lock is easy to pick or break, its concealment is insufficient. A steel box in our burglar proof, fire-defying vault will cost you $5 a year (only half the cost of a similar box in Boston). Use one and stop worrying.

HUSTLER'S CONTEST.

The S. & H. Hustler's Watch Contest has not only attracted the attention of the youngsters, but has pointed out to the older folks the beautiful premiums that they can receive by saving the famous S. & H. Green Trading Stamps. This well known stamp company with headquarters at the Quincy Department Store, 1435 Hancock stret, Quincy, Mass., is the place where the ballots are filed. Mothers and fathers of the contestants have brought the votes there and many have spent quite a few minutes looking over the valuable presents that are given free to those who ask for the stamps at the first class stores.

The youngsters continue to hustle. A nine-year-old youngster came to the premium headquarters with 125 votes early today. He stated that a school chum of his was running, and had a good chance to win. He is getting all his friends at the school-house to hustle for his candidate. Get together, boys and girls! There are not many more days left before the contest closes.

YOM KIPPUR STARTS SUNDAY.

The day of atonement, or Yom Kippur, regarded as the most sacred of all the Jewish holidays, begins at sunset Sunday night and terminates Monday night at the same time.

Yom Kippur means that the faithful abstain from either food or drink. Many of the devout spend the entire period within the synagogues. The day of atonement is the tenth of the penitential days which began with the celebration of the new year.

GIRL GOES TO SHERBORN

Case Tried On Closing Day of Sept. Session of Court

OTHER CASE

The September session of the Norfolk superior court wound up its sessions, Friday, when two Quincy cases were disposed of. The first was that of Elizabeth Savoy, who was charged with murder in the first degree, in killing her newly born infant at Quincy, June 30, at her home at Atlantic. The girl, who is but 17 years of age, entered a plea of guilty to the charge of manslaughter and was sent to the reformatory for women at Sherborn by Judge Quinn.

This is the case where the girl gave birth to a child at her home in Atlantic and while in the throes of desperation for fear others in the house would hear the cries of her child, smothered it. The case came to light when Medical Examiner Jones was called to attend the girl when she did not get up to go to work. She will porbably be kept in Sherborn during her minority.

The other Quincy case disposed of was that of Charles H. Reviere who was charged with felonious assault. He was adjudged to be mentally irresponsible and was sent to the state hospital at Taunton.

Not Anty Drudge's Kind of Economy.

Mrs. Frugal—"Look at this box of laundry soap, Anty Drudge. Buying so much, I got it cheap. Isn't that Economy?"

Anty Drudge—"Economy nothing. You've bought yourself a lot of hard work if you use that soap. Fels-Naptha saves hard work, does away with boiling and makes the clothes cleaner. Economy? Well, I guess not."

Don't throw away the wrapper when you buy a cake of Fels-Naptha soap. Pin it up in your kitchen or laundry where you can read plainly the directions printed on the back. They're the whole secret of the easy Fels-Naptha way of washing—the modern way.

It's just as important to follow directions in washing with Fels-Naptha as it is in taking medicine. Used the Fels-Naptha way, Fels-Naptha soap will save you time, trouble, hard work, fuel and money.

Look for the red and green wrapper at your grocer's.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By

FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Lidgerwood, who confesses that he is a coward, becomes superintendent of Red Butte Western, a demoralized railroad. The men derisively call him "Collars and Cuffs."

Gridley, master mechanic, warns Hallock, chief clerk, to "let up" on Flemister, a mine owner. Hallock and Flemister are enemies. Lidgerwood finds discipline very slack.

Lidgerwood's train is wrecked by carelessness, and Lidgerwood leaps for life. He returns rejoicing, who says Lidgerwood will regret this decision.

They plan to force Hallock to help them defraud the railroad. Lidgerwood begins enforcing discipline with an iron hand, but wrecks are of daily occurrence.

He discharges Dick Rumord, a brother of Bart, "the killer." Lidgerwood's life is threatened, but he refuses to go armed. A switch engine is stolen. There are sinister rumors about Hallock.

Lidgerwood orders Hallock to see Flemister and straighten out a defunct building and loan association. Hallock warns Lidgerwood that Bart intends to kill him. McCloskey accuses Hallock of dishonesty.

Another big theft increases suspicion against Hallock and Flemister. Benson believes Flemister has the stolen engine. Gridley confers mysteriously with Judson, a discharged engineer.

Lidgerwood has fired Judson for drunkenness, but Judson offers to shadow Bart. Judson arrests Bart and jails him.

Flemister tells Lidgerwood the building and loans funds were stolen, but that Hallock was not implicated. Lidgerwood and Flemister quarrel. A mysterious woman enters Lidgerwood's car.

She is Hallock's insane wife. Muttering aloud, she upbraids the absent Hallock because he has not killed "that man." Desperadoes wreck another train.

Suspicion again points to Hallock. Judson continues to shadow Bart. President Brewster, his daughter Eleanor and party arrive. Lidgerwood loves Eleanor.

His cowardice a year before estranged her. She learns that he has been shot at and is bravely doing his duty. Her attitude is friendly.

He objects because there is danger from train wreckers. Eleanor ridicules his fears. Judson follows a man he thinks is Hallock to Flemister's mine.

Judson overhears Hallock and Flemister plan to wreck Lidgerwood's train. They are followed by another man resembling Hallock and by Judson.

Judson makes desperate efforts to avert a collision between Lidgerwood's train and a passenger train. Lidgerwood makes love to Eleanor.

Lidgerwood's watchfulness saves his train. The passenger train is wrecked, with loss of life. Lidgerwood suspects Flemister and Hallock.

Lidgerwood learns that the wreckers sought his life. He tells Flemister he will hang them. Dawson suspects Gridley.

The two Hallocks seen by Judson puzzle Lidgerwood. He and McCloskey plan to fight an impending strike. Bart, "the killer," breaks jail.

Lidgerwood gets a warrant for the arrest of Hallock, charged with murder. Bart attacks Lidgerwood, and Judson again arrests him. Eleanor refuses to leave before the strike begins.

Lidgerwood's friends and Eleanor's party arm themselves against the strikers. Gridley returns from a mysterious absence. Hallock has disappeared.

"Who was the tall man?" he asked. "I thought he was Hallock—I called him Hallock."

The trainmaster shook his head. "They're about the same build, but we were all off wrong, Mr. Lidgerwood—way off. It's been Gridley—Gridley and his side partner, Flemister, all along. Gridley was the man who jumped the passenger at Crosswater hills and took up the rail to ditch Clay's freight, with Hallock chasing him and trying to prevent it. Gridley was the man who helped Flemister last night at Silver Switch, with Hallock trying again to stop him and Judson trying to keep tab on Hallock and getting him mixed up with Gridley at every turn, even to mistaking Gridley's voice and his shadow on the window curtain for Hallock's. Gridley was the man who stole the switch engine and ran it over the old Wire Silver spur to the mine to sell it to Flemister for his mine power plant. They've got it boxed up and running there right now. Gridley is the man who has made all this strike trouble, bossing the job to get you out and to get himself in so he could cover up his thieveries. Gridley was the man who put up the job with Bart Rufford to kill you, and Judson mistook his voice for Hallock's that time too. Gridley was"—

"Hold on, Mac," interrupted the superintendent. "How did you learn all this?"

"Part of it through some of his men, who have been coming over to us in the last half hour and giving him away; part of it through Dick Rufford, who was keeping tab on him for the money he could squeeze out of him afterward."

"How did Rufford come to tell you?"

"Why, Bradford—that is—er—the two Ruffords started a little shooting match with Andy, and—m-m—well, Bart passed out for keeps this time, but Dick lived long enough to tell Bradford a few things—for old cowboy times' sake, I suppose. I'll never put it all over any man again as long as I live, Mr. Lidgerwood, after rubbing it into Hallock the way I did when he was doing his level best to help us out. But it's partly his own fault. He wanted to play a lone hand, and he was scheming to get them both into the same frying pan—Gridley and Flemister."

Lidgerwood nodded. "He had a pretty bitter grudge against Flemister."

"The worst a man could have," said McCloskey soberly. Then he added: "I've got a few thousand dollars saved up that says that Rankin Hallock isn't going to hang for what he did in the other room a few minutes ago. I knew it would come to that if the time ever ripened right suddenly, and I tried to find Judson to choke him off. But John got in ahead of me."

Lidgerwood switched the subject abruptly in deference to Eleanor's deep breathing.

"I must take Miss Brewster to her friends. You say the Nadia is back? Who moved it without orders?"

"Yes, she's back, all right, and Dawson is the man who comes in for the blessing. He wanted an engine—needed one right bad—and he couldn't wait to uncouple the car. It was Hallock who sent that message to Mr. Leckhard that we've been hearing so much about, and it was a beg for the loan of a few of Uncle Sam's boys from Fort McCook. Gridley got on to it through Dix, and he also cut us out of Mr. Leckhard's answer telling us that the cavalry boys were on 73. By Gridley's orders the two Ruffords and some others turned an engine loose to run down the road for a head-ender with the freight that was bringing the soldiers. Dawson chased the runaway engine with the coupled up Nadia outfit, caught it just in the nick of time to prevent a collision with 73 and brought it back. He's down in the car now, with one of the young women crying on his neck, and"—

Miss Brewster got up out of her chair, found she could stand without tottering and said: "Howard, I must go back to mamma. She will be perfectly frantic if some one hasn't told her that I am safe. We can go now, can't we, Mr. McCloskey? The trouble is all over, isn't it?"

The trainmaster nodded gravely.

"It's over, all but the paying of the bills. That rifle shot we heard a little spell ago settled it. No, he isn't dead"—this in answer to Lidgerwood's unspoken question—"but it will be a heap better for all concerned if he doesn't get over it. You can go down. Lieutenant Baldwin has posted his men around the shops and the Crow's Nest."

Together they left the shelter of the trainmaster's room and passed down the dark stairs and out upon the platform, where the cavalrymen were mounting guard. There was no word spoken by either until they reached the Nadia's forward vestibule, and then it was Lidgerwood who broke the silence to say, "I have discovered something tonight, Eleanor—I'm not quite all the different kinds of a coward I thought I was."

"Don't tell me!" she said in keen self reproach, and her voice thrilled him like the subtle melody of a passion song. "Howard, dear, I—I'm sitting in sackcloth and ashes. I saw it all with my own eyes, and I could neither run nor scream. Oh, it was splendid! I never dreamed that any man could rise by the sheer power of his will to such a pinnacle of courage. Does that make amends—just a little? And won't you come to breakfast with us in the morning and let me tell you afterward how miserable I've been—how I fairly nagged father into bringing this party out here so that I might have an excuse to to"—

He forgot the fierce strife so lately ended, forgot the double victory he had won.

"But—but Van Lew," he stammered—"he told me that you—that he"—And then he took her in his arms and kissed her, while a young man with a bandaged head—a man who answered to the name of Jack Benson and who was hastening up to get permission to go home to Faith Dawson—turned his back considerately and walked away.

"What were you going to say about Herbert?" she murmured when he let her have breath enough to speak with.

"I was merely going to remark that he can't have you now, not if he were ten thousand times your accepted lover."

She escaped from his arms and ran lightly up the steps of the private car. And from the safe vantage ground of the half opened door she turned and mocked him.

"Silly boy," she said softly. "Can't you read print when it's large enough to shout at all the world? Herbert and Carolyn have been 'announced' for more than three months, and they are to be married when we get back to New York. That's all. Good night, and don't you dare to forget your breakfast engagement!"

THE END.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Lobsterman Take a Buck Deer in Boston Harbor—"Learn to Earn" is Slogan of the Three Million Dollar Wentworth Institute—How They Do It in the big Workshops will be Shown at Industrial Exposition—Equal Suffrage Drama "A Woman's Influence" Makes a Great Hit.

Maine has nothing on Massachusetts is its hunting grounds. When a lobster fisherman captures a buck deer swimming in the main ship channel of the harbor, near Boston Light, there is something to brag about in hunting preserves. The fishermen were so surprised and overcome by the capture, made after a short chase which found the deer so exhausted that it was but slight effort to get him into the boat, that they did not know what to do with the freightened creature. The police were notified and gave the animal a ride in the hurry-up wagon to station house, where it was given the privileges of the stable and large quantities of hay and salt. After a little rest the deer was transported with care to the Blue Hills Reservation and released, disappearing with a toss of his head in the dense woods resembling those of his habitat.

"Learn to earn" continues to be a great watchword in educational Boston. The Hub's newest trade school, the Wentworth Institute, has opened its doors for the first time to admit more than a thousand students. This opening enrolment proves the place which has been waiting for just such an educational school. The late Arioch Wentworth made a bequest of $3,500,000 for the purpose of founding an institution where students might obtain practical instruction enabling them to enter all branches of industrial life, in which they will be prepared to earn their living from the moment of graduation. Those who aspire to responsible positions in mechanical and manufacturing plants will receive a training at the Institute which will fit them for practically any position along these lines. The large registration for the first season is highly gratifying to the trustees, and the enthusiasm of the students over this new opportunity is marked.

Many New Englanders will get a new light on the way things are done nowadays during the big industrial exposition which opens October 2 at the Mechanics Building. It is one thing to go to a fair and gaze interestedly at the results of unseen operations in the mechanical and technical world, but quite another to go and watch the actual processes of manufacture. The enormous task of arranging all the exhibits has kept Huntington Avenue a scene of great activity for the past week, the big truck and teams now being replaced by the throngs of visitors from out of town and in town who make their way to the doors of the big building.

The girls waited impatiently for the whistle which started the first football game of the season at the Stadium, when Harvard met the sturdy boys from Bates College. To be sure, it was only a practice game, so to speak, but, it started the ball rolling. It will be but a few short weeks before the line-up will form for the great events of season. Then, too, we're going to have a chance to see the Carlisle Indians again this year, and that is excuse enough for any amount of impatience and excitement.

The suffragists are having warm times in the old Puritan town. Between the activities attendant upon the primary elections and the meetings at fashionable and rural resorts the entire force of workers for equal suffrage is hard pressed. The performance of the equal suffrage play "A Woman's Influence," given at Jordan Hall on the afternoon of the 25th, was largely attended and produced substantial funds in aid of the suffrage cause in California, for which purpose it was undertaken. In addition to the play there were suffrage songs by Mrs. Ralph B. McDaniel and Floyd Baxter, and readings by Josephine Preston Peabody (Mrs. Lionel Marks) Mrs. Inez Haynes Gillmore, and Whitter Bynner, all well known authors. The Massachusetts township of Sherborn will be the scene of two interesting meetings next week, one at Mrs. Walter Channings estate, Charlecotte Farm, the other at the town hall. The suffragists have been very successful in their summer campaign, as is evidenced at Cohasset, where they were scheduled for one meeting. The one meeting resulted in three more following in rapid succession, and still another to come. These meetings are particularly prized by the Boston association as they succeeded in drawing forth the antis in large numbers and in converting a number of them. The political aspect of the suffrage activities is especially interesting this year, as for the first time it has been made a live issue in the campaigns. One candidate for the legislature who has been for years the leader of his ward holding everything with a sure rein, won his nomination at the recent primaries by a bare 160 votes over a third candidate, the result being largely due to his persistent scuttling away from the suffrage issue and refusing to commit himself either one way or the other. Many previous bearers of his standard who were as keenly opposed to suffrage as he was, became disgusted with his avoidance and evasion of the suffragists who asked him a fair and square question and of the vilifying slurs which he cast on them personally and generally and refused to vote in his favor. Womanward the course of empire takes its sway. Ethel Angier.

GILL CASE POSTPONED

Men Had Narrow Escape From Another Arrest

INQUEST TODAY

The case against Royal W. Gill of Baltimore, for causing the death of Arthur F. Whitcomb, the 12 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Whitcomb, of Holbrook Sept. 2, 1911 and that of Edward W. Carr for operating an automobile without a license were called this morning. District Attorney Katsman, who represents the government asked that the cases be continued until after an inquest was held. This was agreed to by counsel for the defendants and the cases went over until Oct. 14.

Immediately after the continuence of the cases an inquest on the death of the boy was held. The inquest was private and the witnesses were examined separately.

As Gill and Carr were about to leave the court room they were served with a writ of attachments for $10,000 each in a civil suit by Deputy Sheriff Field. Anticipating such a move and to prevent the arrest of the defendants, Philip H. Sullivan who represents the defendants, applied to the court, Friday, for a writ of protection, which would prevent their arrest in case a suit was entered. After a hearing the court granted the request and the writ issued. When served with the papers this morning the defendants were protected from arrest. It was the first time in the history of the Quincy court that such a writ had been issued and but for the writ of protection they would have been put under arrest on the ground that they came from out of the state. In the first statement of the accident, it was said that Gill was driving the car at the time. It now appears, however, that while Gill owned the car it was being operated by his friend Carr. They had been to the aviation meet at Atlantic and were on their way to Providence. As they were going through Holbrook, the Whitcomb boy was running along the street after a coach. Failing to catch it he stopped in the street directly in front of the automobile. The boy dodged from side to side and Mr. Carr who was driving the car, attempted to steer his machine to one side, but was unsuccessful and the boy was struck. He died soon after.

SAYS HE WAS HELD UP BY MASKED MEN

Clerk From Whom $8000 Was Stolen Is Under Arrest

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 30.—During the night the main office of the Canadian Express company here was robbed and between $8000 and $10,000 is missing. One package containing $1000 within easy reach of the robbers was not touched.

At 6 o'clock in the morning a driver, who usually calls at that hour to take packages intended for shipment on an early train, saw that a side door which is ordinarily unfastened was locked. The driver thought the clerk inside, George H. Kennett, was asleep and tried to arouse him by pounding on the door, but failed. Then the driver telephoned to the manager, and that official hurried down, and the two forced open the door. They found Kennett awake, with his hands and feet tied.

Despite the fact that he was awake and was not gagged the clerk had not answered the calls of the driver and the manager. Kennett was arrested. He said that about 3 a. m. he was held up by masked men, who tied and bound him and then got away with the money.

WAR IS DECLARED

sulted in victory for the Young Turks, is now in process of reorganization, and a great deal of modern equipment has been purchased. The total fighting strength is close to a million men and all Mussulmans are liable to military service.

Italy Almost Certain to Win

There is no question that Italy can seize the coast of Tripoli. There should be no reason why she should not be able to conquer the country eventually. Turkey probably has fewer than 50,000 men in Tripoli and as Italy commands the sea she cannot add to this number.

What opposition the Arab population will offer cannot, of course, be accurately estimated. Although Mohammedans, they do not particularly love the Turk. On the other hand they hate the Christians. Italy can pour a large army into Tripoli and may not make the military mistakes of the Abyssinian campaign. Turkey too, may be beset in Europe by risings in Albania and Macedonia and with complications with Greece over Crete.

Indeed, the outlook for Turkey is rather dark, because the powers may not let her work her own will in territory nominally her own. But the Turks are great fighters.

Taft Makes No Comment

Ottumwa, Ia., Sept. 30.—President Taft got his first news of the declaration of war by Italy against Turkey through press dispatches handed to him on his train. He took the deepest interest in the news, and asked for more. No comment of any sort was obtainable from him, however.

TUCKER REWARD HELD UP

Weston Selectmen Want to Hear From Man In California

Weston, Mass., Sept. 30.—No further move looking towards the settlement with the claimants for the reward offered for the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Miss Mabel Page in Weston seven years ago will be made by the Weston selectmen for two or three weeks.

Chairman Cutting says that a chance is to be given Alden R. Kingsbury, who ran the boathouse and who is now in California, to make an affidavit in connection with the case, as this will be done by mail, it is likely to take considerable time.

ROBBERY THE MOTIVE

Police Think Two Berry Pickers Killed Mrs. Umansky

Westfield, Mass., Sept. 30.—Two berry pickers named Antone and Stafan are being sought by the police throughout the western part of the state in connection with the death of Mrs. Rose Umansky, 65 years old, whose body was found in a well on the farm of her son, Paul Umansky, in Granville. An autopsy showed that the woman had been brutally slain by a blow on the head.

The two men stopped Monday night at the Umansky homestead and Mrs. Paul Umansky, the dead woman's daughter-in-law, said she heard them moving about the house that night.

Robbery was the motive, for the woman had from $110 to $125 in her waist. When the body was found the woman's waist was badly torn and there was a large hole in the cloth where she carried the money.

IOSEPH WILSON TO RESIGN

Foreshadows Resignation of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson

Washington, Sept. 30.—Joseph Wilson, son and private secretary of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, announces that he will resign his position at once and enter business life in the west.

His action is taken here to foreshadow the resignation of Secretary Wilson at no distant date, partly on the theory that a man of his age, 76, would not part with an official so close and invaluable to him in every way if it were his purpose to continue in the cabinet indefinitely.

On March 4, 1912, he will have completed a full fifteen years in the cabinet under the presidents, thus breaking all records.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Hingham High was scheduled to play the local High school eleven yesterday but the game was cancelled at the last moment by the Hingham management. Manager White had arranged a game with Dedham High in the early part of the year, to be played next Tuesday at Dedham, but this game has since been cancelled by the management of Dedham High, which deemed it to be the best interests of both teams to call off the game. Manager White will not be without a game Tuesday, for both Hyde Park High and Newton High are desirous of trying conclusions with the local lads. It is probable that Newton High will be taken on and the game played at Newton next Tuesday and Hyde Park High will be carded for a later date.

Coach Staff will put the team through some hard practice Monday preparatory to this game, for Newton High is considered one of the fastest football aggregations in interscholastic circles. Considerable changes will be made in the local lineup and with Blackmur running the team and Larkin at end and Bill at centre, the coach expects to see much improvement, as compared with the showing made against the Cambridge Latin team in the first game of the season.

Frank Bruce will wear the colors of Italian American A. C. in the Brockton Marathon, which is billed for one week from today. The many local admirers of William Hackett regret that the winner of last year's race is not to compete in this coming event and such being the case, Clarence DeMar, the winner of the great Ashland marathon last April, is being looked upon as the likely winner.

Many of the local sporting bloods were inclined to think that the score of 70 made in the golf tournament by Duncan, the English professional, last Thursday, was a record for the Wollaston Golf links. Such is not true, for M. J. Brady, a member of the Wollaston association, has made 66 on a previous occasion and this is the established record for the local links.

DIX HOLDS WHIP HAND

Governor May Nullify Frawley Athletic Bill Without Repeal

Albany, Sept. 30.—Although the legislative leaders have decided not to take any action at this session on the special message received from Governor Dix yesterday, recommending the repeal of the Frawley athletic commission law, friends of the governor say that he has the power to make the law null and void.

It is pointed out that he can demand of State Athletic Commissioners Dixon and O'Neil that they revoke all licenses issued under the new act and refuse to grant any additional certificates. It is also said that the governor can ask the commissioners to tender their resignations, so that there would be no one to administer the law.

WAR SCARE CALMED BY FRENCH PREMIER

He Assures Brokers That No New Dispute Has Arisen

Paris, Sept. 30.—Premier Caillaux received a delegation of brokers who feared the effect on quotations of the pessimistic reports of fresh causes of disputes having arisen between France and Germany over Morocco.

The premier assured his visitors that no new discord with Germany existed, but that simply some questions had arisen as to the phrasing of various points to obtain lucidity and precision.

The cabinet will meet today to consider these questions and "edit" France's rejoinder.

WISE IS PARDONED

Boston Man Who Was In Shadow of Death Chair Is Freed

Albany, Sept. 30.—Edward Wise of Boston, convicted of murder in the first degree in New York in 1899 for the death of a cabdriver named Beasley, and whose sentence to the electric chair was commuted to life imprisonment by Governor Roosevelt, was pardoned by Governor Dix and restored to his full rights of citizenship.

The charge on which Wise was convicted was for killing Beasley with an accomplice named Sweeney. Since the trial evidence has been produced to show it was Sweeney who struck the blow. Sweeney made his escape to Africa after the murder, where he is believed to have died.

BARON NORTHCOTE DEAD

He Welcomed Uncle Sam's Fleet to Australia as Governor General

London, Sept. 30.—Henry S. Northcote, a former governor general of Australia, is dead. He was born in 1846. While in Australia he welcomed the American battleships on their cruise around the world.

Baron Northcote had held many responsible government positions. Since 1880 he represented Exeter in the house of commons in the Conservative interest. He went to Bombay as governor in 1900, and later to Australia.
